THOSE BRIGHT, GOLDEN MANSIONS.

AIR.—"By the side of this deep, rolling river."

We are thinking of bright golden mansions,
Which Jesus has gone to prepare;
And we long to unite with the ransomed,
And enter that world that is fair.
We are weary of this world's sad story,
We are sighing as o'er earth we roam;
O Jesus, appear in thy glory,
And gather thy waiting ones home.

CHORUS.

O we're nearing those bright golden mansions,
In a little while we all shall be there;
And we'll join in the song of the ransomed,
As they enter that world that is fair.

O, behold the bright gates, now they open
To welcome the saints as they come;
And angels are waiting to greet them,
And receive them with joy to their home.
Mine ear catches sweet strains of music,
While all the redeemed I behold,
As they enter that beautiful city,
And walk up those pathways of gold.

On the banks of the pure crystal river
They shall wander together in peace,
Where sickness and death cannot reach them,
And sorrow and sighing shall cease.
There the flowers forever are blooming,
While richest perfume fills the air;
Sweet melody ever is ringing
Throughout all that country so fair.

There's the Savior with glory surrounded,
He's the joy and the light of the place;
And the saints shall reign with him ever,
And enjoy the sweet smiles of his face.
Now we're waiting for Jesus to call us
To those heavenly mansions so fair;
O come quickly, dear Savior, and take us,
For we long, oh, we long to be there.

REPORT OF THE MASS. A. C. CONFERENCE.

The first quarterly session of the Mass. State Conference commenced July 3d, at nine o'clock. Prayer was offered by the President. The usual committee on membership was chosen. After the Constitution had been read, the proper committee reported favorably on the requests of Elders I. Wyman, of North Adams, Rufus Starks, Savoy, and Isaac Blanchard, W. Hawley, to become members of this conference. They were accordingly received. Other preachers present, L. Boutell, G. A. Streeter, E McCulloch, E. Owen.

Churches represented: Savoy, by Brn. Wm. Sherman and A. E. Bliss. Springfield, by A. and M. Bradford. North Adams, by I. Wyman. Plainfield Pond, by R. Starks. Hoosic, N. Y., by E. McCulloch. South Adams and Williamstown, by S. Wheelock.

Voted, That the President act as a committee to furnish the Secretary with the records of the Clerk pro tem., chosen at the annual meeting, and that the same be duly recorded, and a copy furnished for publication in connection with the report of this meeting.

Bro. G. A. Streeter reported three baptized at the recent grove meeting, in Charlton. A door had been opened there both wide and effectual. No particular change in other places visited.

Bro. E. McCulloch reported the church in Hoosic as in a better state. The cause was rising. Much division and subdivision had heretofore existed. Bro. I. Wyman corroborated the statement. Bro. McC. had preached some for the Baptist church in Savoy, near his home. They wished him to do so more, but he had been at the chapel in S. mainly.

The cause in North Adams, as reported by Bro. I. Wyman, has never been so prosperous since 1854. Though some had withdrawn (since he came among them in Jan. last, by the church's request,) yet the truth was gaining ground. Several had been converted, and baptized; a Sunday school had been established, and a good interest was felt. His sympathies and interests were and should be with this people.

The clerk alluded to the state of feeling existing in various sections where he had labored.

Brn. Sherman and Bliss felt that the church in Savoy had been in the crucible, but there was some gold left. They were determined to continue the meetings, and do battle for the right. He had recently united with them. Bro. B. made a most pathetic appeal in favor of cherishing a spirit of forgiveness and christian union. Many were affected to tears. The President was a sort of missionary, now here, now there. He felt that the result of the Charlton meeting had been good, and another will probably be held there in the fall. The preacher should keep an eye single to the glory of God. Should be sometimes deaf in one ear, sometimes in both, to matters where differences were involved. The conference does not propose to legislate for the churches, but simply bring them to cooperate with each other. A dozen men united ought to be more effective than one alone. Adjourned.

Saturday, 4th, 9 A. M. Conference enjoyed a most heavenly season of prayer, led by Eld. Starks, who subsequently reported the church at Plainfield Pond, of which he is pastor. Had been a long time with them. Some of the most firm and reliable brethren to be found there. Was not an unkind thought existing among them to his knowledge. Meetings well attended. Several recent conversions. A number to be baptized next Lord's day. He favored the objects of this conference, wished to be identified with it. Men whose fruits were of a questionable character, universally opposed organization. Bro. Bradford felt there was a lack of interest in Springfield, unwarrantable in persons looking for the Lord. Hoped and prayed there might be an awakening there. The young people's meeting often had much of Jesus in it, still there was quite too much indifference in the church.

Eld. Blanchard, formerly identified with the Christian denomination, had exchanged error for truth, and was laboring with the church in Pownal, Vt. They were looking for Christ. Some thirty or forty had recently been converted there, nine baptized, one old lady seventy years of age. His interests were with the conference.

Bro. Wheelock, who is alone in Williamstown, felt that judicious men might do great good there. The cause in South Adams also demanded the attention of the conference, as all but two or three had removed from there. Hoped both places would be remembered. The usual vote of thanks was passed, and conference adjourned. E. OWEN, Clerk.

P. S. The brethren and friends in Savoy, and vicinity, have manifested that christian care and hospitality which will ever render their memory grateful to us who were their guests. May God bless them abundantly. This has been one of the best conferences ever held in the State. The Spirit of the Lord tarried with us from first to last. E. O.

TRIED AND PROVED.

Many things are offered to the public for genuine that have not been tried and proved. They will not bear inspection. And even in the professed church, many things are offered which will not stand the test. We are counseled to "buy the truth and sell it not." What is truth? Christ, in praying to the Father, says, "Thy word is truth." In the word there are many precious promises, and some of them have been tried and proved. "Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac, . . . accounting that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead, from whence also he received him in figure." Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego, when brought before princes and kings, were tried and proved; and when commanded to fall down and worship the image, were not careful to answer, for they knew that their God was able to deliver. God had tried their faith. Now they were about to prove his promise. O praise our God. He did not leave them. They went through the fiery ordeal, but not alone; the form of the fourth was with them, and they came out without the smell of fire on their garments.

Every child of God must be tried and proved, "for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." It was for faith in the word of God that the fathers suffered. They "died in faith, not having received the promises," but seeing "them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." Many in these days see them very near, but will not embrace them. Some, with Moses, have chosen the people of God as their company, and are willing to suffer, if need be; but the masses had rather believe the lie that the devil told in the garden, than the promises of God. Tell them that "the meek shall inherit the earth," and they will reject it, and the Savior who declared it. They will not search the Scriptures to find the source of life, but rather seek knowledge from demons. My heart has been grieved when I have seen some among us, who are sick, calling upon spiritual doctors, instead of obeying the injunction of James,—"Is any sick? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick; and the Lord shall raise them up." Some have tried the great Physician, and proved him to do just as he says.

Who dare trust in God and his word? It is time we take a bold stand. God help us. The perils thicken; the Life-giver is soon coming; but while he tarries, let us not be "slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises." Let us bring in all our tithes, and prove the Lord. "Wait on the Lord, be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thy heart." This is the counsel of the Lord, and it will stand forever.

FROM SIDNEY TO LUTHER.

DEAR LUTHER:—We have bid farewell to all who knew us, and left the city of St. Louis; for fear that we might suffer harm, the weather was so very warm. Upon the seventeenth of June, at half past three that afternoon, we crossed the Mississippi river, and left the place, perhaps, forever. The steamer soon conveyed us o'er; we took the cars at half past four. Amid the smoke, the dust, and din, the smashers flung the baggage in. They "let it slide" quick as they could, as if it were but common wood. Then soon we felt a sudden shock, the engine on the train had locked. Quickly by power of locomotion, Nahum's chariots were in motion. With all their freight of living souls, the ponderous engine swiftly rolls to Carlinsville; we there intend, by kind request, some time to spend. We there arrived at early ev'n, about the time the clock struck seven. Kind friends were waiting, and had come with team to take us to their home.

THE CHANGE.

I shall not murmur nor complain against the wondrous lightning train. Its great advantages no tongue can tell; for speed and storms it doth excel; but in hot, sultry summer weather, with various classes crammed together; mid smoke, and dust, and cinders flying; sweating, thirsty babies crying; I think you will agree, dear friend, you are glad to reach the journey's end. If you are not, to me 'tis strange; but I was thankful for the change, when I at Carlinsville did land, and met kind friends and grasped their hand; who thanked the Lord that we had come, and with their team conveyed us home. We safely reached our place of rest, just as the sun set in the west. The day had fled, our journey o'er, and thankful for a home once more. Then came the hour of evening prayer; when done, we did to rest repair, grateful to God that we had come one day nearer to our home.

MORNING.

The Lord hath kept me through the night,
Another day dawns on my sight.
Away hath fled night's sable fold,
The east now glows like burnished gold;
And "Chanticleer" his bugle sounds,
That makes the welkin ring around.
The clucking hen, with hungry brood,
Is scratching round to seek them food.
Insects are humming in the breeze,
And birds are warbling in the trees.
The lark springs up on whirring wings,
And as he rises briskly sings.
The little sparrow's grateful throat
Is pouring forth his cheerful note.
While, ever since the dawn of light,
The pretty quail hath sung "Bob White."
But ah! no sound my heart doth move
Like that of yonder turtle dove.
Its pensive strain attracts my ears,
I scarcely can refrain from tears.
Emblem of innocence and love,
My favorite, thou harmless dove.
All nature seems with grateful sound,
To utter praise to God around.
Far as my eyes can view the scene,
The prairie regions clad in green,—
Mementos of those "plagues" of yore,
That grieved old Egypt sad and sore,
When Pharaoh with wicked heart
Forbade God's children to depart,—
The Locusts—this is their great year—
Their dismal moans grate on my ear;
The sun is high, and nearing noon,
The beasts now seek a shady boon,
And restless stamp beneath the trees,
Where flies torment, and bite, and tease.
Alas! through ocean, earth, and air,
The curse is lurking everywhere.
Lord, haste the moment, bring it nigh,
When curse and wrongs and death shall die.

SUNDAY, June 21st.

Another week its race hath run; another Sabbath has begun. This day, O Lord, thine arm make bear, and fill thy children's hearts with prayer. In mercy, Lord, a worm now teach; O warm my heart and help me preach. Dark clouds are gathering in the sky, they may portend a storm is nigh. The hour for worship draweth near; the people now are gathering there. We have now met within the place; O Lord, now show thy smiling face. We've sung and prayed, and preached the word, and all attentively have heard, that Jesus died and rose again, and soon will come on earth to reign. He died for all that all might live; he pleads for all and will forgive. Old time his race hath nearly run; soon will the day of judgment come. In that great day the Lord declares, he then will burn up all the tares. In mercy, Lord, grant that I may be found among the wheat that day.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, June 24th.

Another span of time hath run; I've passed once more a setting sun. There can but few more yet remain, ere Jesus will return again. How quick the moments flit away; on swiftly hastes the LAST great day. The hour for worship now hath come in Bro. Bralley's pilgrim home. There is interest manifest to hear; people have come from far and near. We trust some good was done that night; that some were brought to see some light.

THURSDAY, June 25th.

The time appointed now hath come, when we must leave this pilgrim home; and part with friends who're dear to me,—tried veterans of forty-three. Haste on, old time, speed! speed the day when partings will be done away. For Springfield now we took the train, to seek a pilgrim's home again. At twelve o'clock the train arrives, and found a home with Bro. Wise.

FRIDAY, June 26th.

This afternoon we rode out to see
The famed "Oak Ridge Cemetery."
Nature hath done what it could
For this sepulchral solitude.
I sought the spot where Pity weeps,
The tomb where ABRAHAM LINCOLN sleeps.
My heart was sad, all round was still,
As I walked up the shady hill,
And on the marble tablet read
"TO OUR SACRED DEAD."
There sleeps the martyr; cold in death,
Nor heeds he foes, nor treason's breath.

I then set out to find the grave of one who taught Christ's power to save, when he returns our living head, to change the quick and raise the dead. Upon his tombstone I did see, "MEREDITH HELM, M. D." And there was also on it graven, "WAITING FOR GOD'S SON FROM HEAVEN." Short be his sleep, quick from the skies descend and bid thy saints arise. Haste, make an end of sin and crime, and toll the knell of hoary time. Amen. S. S. BREWER.

For the World's Crisis.

SELF-RIGHTEOUSNESS.

We hear people justifying themselves with words like these: "I do not lie, swear, nor steal. I am good to the poor, and many other things I do which are right; and if we are rewarded according to the deeds done in the body, I shall stand as good a chance as any of them." The Scripture referred to is 2 Cor. 5: 10, and it reads thus: "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done; whether it be good or bad." We notice there are but two classes spoken of, the good and bad. Neither are there but two destinies for the whole of Adam's race. And these two destinies are summed up in the words of the apostle, thus: "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."—Rom. 6: 23. Please read Rom. 2: 6–11. Our God does not punish for the sake of punishing, but destroys the wicked in justice and mercy, to get them out of the way. But some will say this is a dangerous doctrine; it will encourage the sinner to do worse. My reply is, that my mission is not to induce people to be better sinners; but to persuade them to be reconciled to God. Dear reader, we must work. But yet there is no merit in it. We must trust in Jesus for salvation. For says the prophet, "We are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousness are as filthy rags." The apostle Paul said he wished to be found in Christ, "not having" on his "own righteousness, which is of the law"; in other words, by works; "but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith." And certainly, if the great apostle of the Gentiles could not be saved by the righteousness which is of the law, we may expect to stand a poor chance; for he was very jealous of the law.

Again, in expecting to be saved by our works, we ignore the gift of God's dear Son. For it is virtually saying, we would none of your sacrifice; we are able to save ourselves; by our own works will we make reconciliation. O poor blind mortal! The very thoughts of your head are sin. The very acts in which you trust are sinful. Think you that God would have sent his Son into the world to suffer for nought? Nay, my friend, he died for you and me. By "his stripes we are healed."

My dear reader, if you are one of the class of which I have been describing, whether you belong to the church or not, rich or poor, high or low, know assuredly that Jesus Christ is the only name given under heaven, "among men, whereby we must be saved." "Neither is there salvation in any other." Then repent of your sins, which are many; and turn to God "who will abundantly pardon." And while you learn to do the works of God, trust only in Christ for salvation.

North Fryburg, Me. ELISHA JOHNSON.

A NUISANCE.

I mean the practice of sending all over the country whenever a new meeting-house is to be built, asking "material aid" for the same. I would suggest that brethren, before starting a runner on the errand just named, take the thing under prayerful consideration, and assure themselves that they have done all in their power toward erecting for themselves a house of worship. Before they do it, let them ask their consciences in the sight of God, whether or not they have taxed their pocket nerve to its utmost capacity. I fear that this practice is not unfrequently indulged in by brethren who do not know what it is to deny themselves or their families of a single luxury of life. If brethren would give to the fullest extent of their ability, and be content with a house in accordance with their means, the proportions of the evil referred to, would be greatly diminished.

But brethren are frequently unwilling to build such a house because the meeting-houses of their religious neighbors are large and fine. What would be the result, if individuals were to act upon this principle? Every time a man wished to build a dwelling, if he were not able to build one equal in proportions and style to those of his neighbors, he would be running all over town, and sending all over the country, soliciting aid to build a fine house!! I have known calls of this kind to be made by brethren who actually needed and deserved help; but it is not so in a majority of cases, and the practice which is becoming so general should be smartly abridged.—American Christian Review.

Gems.

There is no way for men to discern their names written in the book of Life, but by reading the work of sanctification in their own hearts. I desire no miraculous voice from heaven, no extraordinary signs or unscriptural notices or information in this matter. Lord, let me but find my heart obeying thy calls, my will obediently submitting to thy commands; sin, my burden, and Christ my desire; I never crave a fairer or surer evidence of thy electing love to my soul.

It is by affliction chiefly that the heart of man is purified, and that the thoughts are fixed on a better state. It is seldom that we are otherwise, than by affliction, awakened to a sense of our imbecility, or taught to know how little all our acquisitions can conduce to safety or quiet; and how justly we may ascribe to the superintendence of a higher power those blessings which, in the wantonness of success, we consider as the attainments of our policy or courage.

To every man there are many dark hours, when he feels inclined to abandon his best enterprise; hours when his heart's dearest hopes appear delusive; hours when he feels himself unequal to the burden, when all his aspirations seem worthless. Let no one think that he alone has dark hours. They are the common lot of humanity. They are the touchstone to try whether we are current coin or not.

The earth may shake, the pillars of the world may tremble under us, the countenance of heaven may be appalled, the sun may lose his light, the moon her beauty, and the stars their glory; but concerning the man that trusted in God, he knows in whom he believed; he is not ignorant whose precious blood has been shed for him; he hath a Shepherd, full of kindness, full of care, and full of power.

Some employments may be better than others; but there is no employment so bad as the having none at all. The mind will contract a rust and an unfitness for everything, and a man must either fill up his time with good, or at least innocent business, or it will run to the worst sort of waste—to sin and vice.

There is a greater depravity in not repenting of sin when it has been committed, than in committing it at first. To deny, as Peter did is bad; but not to weep bitterly, as he did, when we have denied, is worse.

Times of general calamity and confusion, have ever been productive of the greatest minds. The purest ore is produced from the hottest furnace, and the brightest thunderbolt is elicited from the darkest storm.

Many in seeking religion, leave not the realm of self-love, and they never rise higher than a piety which is but selfishness intensified. They never know what it is to love Christ or his work.

The christian's life is not an engagement by contract between a master and his servant. It is the union of two hearts—that of the Savior and the saved by the endearing ties of the most intimate love.

What unthankfulness is it to forget our consolations, and to look only on matters of grievance; to think so much upon two or three crosses, as to forget a hundred blessings.

Prosperity and adversity equally try the consistency of the human soul. He who is inspired by real magnanimity will best display it in adversity.

Guilt is that which quells the courage of the bold, ties the tongue of the eloquent, and makes greatness itself sneak and lurk and behave itself poorly.

Lost, somewhere between sunrise and sunset, two golden hours, each set with sixty diamond minutes. No reward is offered, for they are lost forever.

The cross of Christ is the sweetest burden that ever I bore; it is such a burden as wings are to a bird, or as sails to a ship, to carry me forward to my desired haven.

The poor pittance of seventy years is not worth being a villian for. What matters it if your neighbor lies in a splendid tomb? Sleep you in innocence.

If you would keep yourself from strife,
Whilst dwelling neath the sun,
Ne'er let a tattler hear you speak
A word 'gainst any one.

Never purchase love or friendship by gifts—when thus obtained, they are lost as soon as you stop payments.

Praying frequently helps to praying fervently. Be assured it is better to wander in prayer, than to wander from it.

Never indulge in what appears to be a little sin; it will harden the heart and lead to greater.

The passing years drink a portion of the light from our cheeks, as birds that drink at lakes leave their footprints on the margin.

He is the happy man, not whom other men think happy, but who thinks himself to be so.

No man can avoid his own company, so he had best make it as good as possible.

We follow the world in approving others, but we go before it in approving ourselves.

Look upward for the grace needed now, and forward for the rest that remaineth.

The love of God is both the sweetest and strongest emotion that can possess the heart.

Idleness is hard work for those who are not used to it, and dull work for those who are.

CHARITY.

Being somewhat impressed with an obligation resting upon us as christians, professing to carry out in our lives the requirements of the word of God, I thought I would submit a few thoughts for the consideration of the brethren and friends, thinking, perhaps it might be the means of arousing some to a sense of duty in regard to the subject upon which I wish to express my views, which is the subject of Charity.

In the first place, let us consider who are, or should be, primarily the objects of our charity. To determine this, we have only to turn to Gal. 6: 10, which reads as follows: "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men; especially unto them who are of the household of faith." Although this may not have reference to acts of charity alone, yet it would embrace these where they were required. The text, to my mind, conveys the idea that suffering ones, who are truly our brethren and sisters, or of the only great household of faith, should come under our immediate attention. Of course, it is the duty of all to do all they can to alleviate the sufferings of their fellow men; yet, we as christians, have a rule to be governed by in this, as in all other matters relating to our christian walk; and is it not our duty to come under the gospel rule in this thing?

Now, brethren, we are all well aware that there are worthy ones among us, who are really suffering from want and privation; those who are deprived, from various causes, of the means of gaining a comfortable support for their families, so that they are truly in a suffering condition. In view of these things, and the teaching of the Bible on this subject, the question arises, Where shall our charity begin? Should we not, instead of making it our first business to send aid to foreign missions, let our charity begin at home, and so relieve the wants of our brethren and sisters, who stand in need, and are worthy of our assistance? And, secondarily, those of the Lord's stewards, who are blessed with means sufficient, should be willing to send help wherever the cause of Christ can be advanced, and suffering ones relieved by their so doing?

These remarks I have suggested from a sense of my own duty in regard to these things; and hope the friends will carefully search the word on this subject, and then act as duty may seem to dictate. For one, my heart has been pained by seeing and hearing of those among us, who needed assistance, and not being able to do but little in that direction myself, and seeing a backwardness on the part of those who are able, to act well their part in lending a helping hand. John says, "Whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him." Let us consider the subject, and act consistent. Yours in the christian hope, JAS. G. PARKER.

TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF MISS ETTIE DEWEY.

BY MAHALA GOWAN.

The hand of death has reached thy home,
And torn from thy embrace
A lovely one, with blue eyes mild,
And paled her rosy face.

The spoiler came when life was bright
With joy and hope, and bloom,
And dimmed the lustre of her eyes,
Then laid her in the tomb.

Thy watchful care and soothing words—
They guarded well her years;
But now thy tenderness and smiles
Are changed to mournful tears.

May flowers bloom, and soft winds breathe
Upon her grave's green breast,
Until the resurrection's dawn;
There she will sweetly rest.

Then with immortal beauties clothed,
She'll walk the streets of gold
With those whom Jesus' blood made pure,
And chant the joys untold.

THE WORLD UPSIDE DOWN.

Can the world stand in its present fix? Will you please answer this question, Mr. Editor? Stand! brother, it does not stand! it is upside down, topsy-turvey. Every thing is smashed up, never more so. The world, as it is, is wrong, all wrong. Very many ministers, editors and publishers are wrong; parents are wrong; children are wrong, serving the wicked one; and God will punish them. Doctors and lawyers are wrong, judges are wrong, and our city officers. Our whole nation is not only wrong, but corrupt, shockingly. The president of the United States is wrong, and both houses of Congress. Our State legislatures are wrong. Wine-bibbers, fighters, horse-racers, gamblers, pickpockets, and mobocrats in our cities, villages, and everywhere, are wrong. Intemperance in every form is wrong; a monster, devilish! Distilling the poison is wrong, murderous. "Their feet are swift to shed blood."

Tobacco chewing, smoking, snuffing, are wrong, poisonous, dirty, filthy, sottish, indecent, ungentlemanly, beastly, ruinous. Lewdness is wrong, the curse of our land. Witchcraft is wrong, spiritual knocking is wrong, altogether. So are Spiritual*isms*, Mormon*isms*, Unitarian and Universal*isms*. Cheating, lying, defrauding, are wrong. Sabbath breaking, swearing, idling, evil speaking, backbiting, tattling, slandering are wrong, setting the world on fire. Covetousness, which is idolatry, is wrong. Sectarianism is wrong, exceedingly wrong. Infidelity, in every form, is wrong.

Popery is wrong—the mother of harlots, and abominations of the earth. See Rev. 17: 1–7. God shall consume her with the spirit of his mouth. Novel making, novel selling, novel puffing, novel reading, are wrong. The man in the pulpit, or out of it, who pushes these cars of Satan, is wrong, devilish. The theatre, the circus, the ball-room, are wrong, the road to ruin. Their "house is the way to hell, going down to the chamber of death." Following worldly fashions is wrong; feasting to excess, or gluttony, is wrong; nightly revels, all unhallowed associations and secret abominations, masonry and odd fellowship, are wrong. "Destruction and misery are in their ways, and the way of peace have they not known." "There is no fear of God before their eyes." The world stand? who believes it? Did it stand when Noah built the ark, and the rain was upon the earth, forty days and forty nights, and every living substance was destroyed? Did Sodom and Gomorrah stand when God rained upon them brimstone and fire from heaven? and lo, the smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace. Did proud Korah and his troop stand? Did idolatrous, murderous Ahab and Jezebel? Did wicked, blasphemous Belshazzar stand?

"Babylon's great king forgot he was a man—
A helpless man,
Subject to pain, and sin, and death, like others;
But who shall fight against Omnipotence?
Or who has hardened his obdurate heart
Against the Majesty of heaven and prospered?
Let men, let monarchs hear,
Pride was not made for man."

BEGAN TO LAUGH.

A clergyman, at a celebrated watering-place, met a lady who seemed hovering on the brink of the grave. Her cheeks were hollow and wan, her manner listless, her steps languid, and her brow wore the severe contraction so indicative both of mental and physical suffering, so that she was to all observers an object of sincerest pity.

Some years afterward he encountered the same lady, but so bright, and fresh, and youthful, so full of healthful buoyance, and joyous in expression, that he questioned himself if he was not mistaken with regard to identity.

"Is it possible," said he, "that I see before me Mrs. B., who presented such a doleful appearance at the Springs several years ago?"

"The very same."

"And pray tell me, madam, the secret of your cure. By what means did you attain to such cheerfulness and rejuvenation?"

"A very simple remedy," returned she, with a beaming face. "I stopped worrying, and began to laugh; that was all."

OUR LITTLE ONE.

She fell asleep on a bright summer day. The soft winds blew gently o'er her pale brow, lifting the sunny curl that must so soon be hidden from us. The fragrant flowers bloomed in their beauty by the window near her little cot. The birds of summer poured forth their sweet notes, yet falling sadly upon our aching hearts, for our dearest earthly treasure was going down the valley. How the dear one's eyes wistfully gazed upon us as we looked upon the sad, sad scene! We kissed that darling brow, ere the last sigh of mortality was given. But, oh! to think that we must give her up! How could we? Our hearts seemed going after her. But, ah! no tender mother's tireless devotion, nor father's ceaseless love, could stay the destroyer's power. And so she fell asleep. That little voice we heard no more. How lonely were our hearts. We folded up the white robe around her now cold form. We crossed the dear little hands upon her sinless breast, and gently we laid her in the coffin, and bore her to the old church-yard. How hard to lower her down in the cold dark grave, all alone. She had never been from us before; but now we must give her up. How could our hearts be almost broken? Lonely, O, how lonely was our fireside. One dear face was gone forever.

We gazed upon the vacant chair. There lay the little toys once held by her dear hand. Here the little shoe, that never more would be needed by her, and the little garments she would never wear again . . . She sleeps safely now in the care of the good Shepherd. Now more than half a score of years have gone since then. Yet we believe that same little blue-eyed Mary will wake up in the morning —the beautiful morning that will dawn on earth's dark sorrow. Then joyful morning songs will chase away our sighs, and heaven's fadeless flowers forever hide our mourning; for this will be all ended. We shall feel those dear little arms twining lovingly around our necks as in days now passed away, feel the very same little hands clinging to our fingers again. That little curly head will greet our eyes once more. How bright her eyes will beam upon us then! How our hearts will throb with heavenly joy when we gather on the banks of the river with our little one safe forevermore. . . .

Come, poor weeping, lonely, mourning parents. Your little ones will come again from the enemy's land, and live again; they will surely, believe it, it is so. You may see them, and enjoy their presence forever if you choose.

The morning will surely come. The shadows of night begin to flee; its stars seem to fade away, and the light of the coming day begins to dawn over yonder cloud-capped hills of sorrow. The harps of glory are all in tune, and the harpers stand almost ready—yes, quite—to strike hosanna's notes. There are the starry crowns outshining all the gems of earth. There view the palms of victory, more glorious than ever earthly potentate's sceptre of kingly power. There see the great army of the coming King of glory! See them gather around that banner of love! List! can you not almost seem to catch the coming clarion's peal? How its echoes will ring from mountain tops to ocean's deep! And the sleepers, they are coming up from their dusty beds, from the ocean's billows, and down from mountain's summit. Hear the rolling strains of heavenly halleluiahs peal over the land and ocean. Will it be music to your ears? Surely you want to see your dear ones again. Then believe on the Shepherd of the flock, for he will take them from the land of the enemy to his own green pasture, where flows the river of life that will quench the thirst forevermore. J. N. BERRY.

RICHES DO NOT BRING HAPPINESS.

The pursuit of wealth is all-absorbing. If happiness for time and eternity depended upon the possession of riches, men could not seek them with greater avidity. What multitudes there are, who do not scruple to employ any means that promise to bring about the desired result! Yet if there is any one thing in which rich men are agreed, it is in bearing testimony to the fact that wealth does not secure even earthly happiness.

Years ago, we were acquainted with a farmer in Erie county. Beginning with nothing but his strong hands and industrious habits, he had bought farm after farm, until he owned some six or eight hundred acres of valuable land, besides some sixty thousand dollars in the bank, or put out on bond and mortgage. To one who talked with him about his prospects for the future, he frankly said: "When I was poor, I used to work hard all day, and walk, barefoot, three miles to prayer-meeting. Then I was happy. I enjoyed religion. But now I have no desire for religious things. I am all taken up with the world. My only aim is to make money. I am wretched; I know it—I feel it; but I cannot give up the world."

Thus he lived, and thus he died. After his death, contentions arose in the family about the division of the property. Lawsuits followed, which continued for many years. The worst passions were aroused. One has said, the parents lose their souls in acquiring property, and the children lose their souls in spending it."

A neighbor to the person above referred to, himself an old man who had been successful in worldly pursuits,—seeing the bitter feelings engendered by the division of property among children, and the bad use they made of it; and seeing jealousies already springing up among his own children, said he "wished all his property was in such a shape that he could touch a match to it and burn it up." Yet he was a kind-hearted man, and an affectionate father. How much better it is, both for ourselves and our children, that we lay up treasures in Heaven. —Earnest Christian.

PASTORAL QUALIFICATIONS.—A correspondent of the Christian Register says: "When a vacant parish is seeking for a man, the last question is about his piety. Is he eloquent and scholarly and on the right wing in theology? Will he draw a full house and help pay off the parish debt? And in some places it is getting to be an important question, Is he good looking and genteel and young? These are the pre-eminent qualifications; and, if they are just flavored with piety, not too much so, as to remind the people offensively of heaven when he is met in the street, or at a dance, or when they are called upon at home, he is the model man; the best parish and the best pay await him; and at all festivals and anniversaries it is he who sits at the head of the table and is called upon to make the speech.

Happiness is a perfume that one cannot shed over another without a few drops falling on one's self.

POWER OF PRAYER.

A boy in one of our public schools had a very fine pair of gloves stolen from the pocket of his overcoat. He stated the fact to his teacher, and she brought it before the children of the school under her charge. In simple but earnest language she told them that however much they might deceive one another, they could not deceive God, who would surely bring them to account for all their actions. She therefore entreated the boy who had taken the gloves to restore them. She did not wish to cast suspicion upon any of them by instituting a search, but would leave the wrong-doer to the guidance of his own conscience.

There was no response to her entreaty that day, but she took the subject to God in agonizing prayer, when she went home, and the next day appealed to her scholars again, and told them that she would continue praying until the gloves were restored. So deeply interested did she feel in the welfare of the children entrusted to her care, that she could not repress her tears when she addressed them, and they all sympathized with her, because they loved her, and knew by experience that she loved them also. Silently raising her eyes to heaven, she seemed to implore the divine aid. The scholars were quiet; not the slightest movement of hand or foot disturbed the silence, and even their breathing seemed suppressed; when one of the boys, half concealing his face with his hands, confessed that he had taken the gloves, and restored them.

The teacher not only freely forgave him, but kissed him for confessing his fault publicly, when he might have restored the gloves privately. She availed herself of the opportunity to impress upon her pupils the duty of forgiveness. We do not know the young lady's creed, but we have been informed that she prays for the welfare of her pupils and for grace to teach them aright, three times every day.—Traveler.

WHAT IS THE BIBLE LIKE?

1. It is like a large, beautiful tree, that bears sweet fruit for those that are hungry, and affords shelter and shade for pilgrims on their way to the kingdom.

2. It is like a cabinet of jewels and precious stones, which are not only to be looked at and admired, but used and worn.

3. It is like a telescope, which brings distant objects and far-off things of the world to come very near, so that we can see something of their beauty and importance.

4. It is like a treasure-house, a store-house of all sorts of valuables and useful things, and which are to be had without money and without price.

5. It is like a deep, broad, calm, flowery river; the banks of which are green and flowing, where birds sing and lambs play, and dear little children are loving and happy.

My dear, dear children, because I love you I want you to love the Bible. If you attend to it, it will make you, through God's blessing, wise, rich, and happy forever and ever. It is God's book. It is the best book. It is a book for little children.

A WORD TO BOYS.

My young friend, did you ever know—can you call to mind a single case of a person, who having his own way to make in the world, spent his time in the street, in billiard saloons, around hotels, or in any form of dissipation or idleness, to succeed in an eminent degree in any enterprise? Look over your list of friends and acquaintances and note their course. Do you not find upon examination that those who to-day are men of influence and honor were the youths who made the most valuable time, turning it to good account, and on the other hand do you not find those who stood at the corners with a cigar or pipe in their mouths went from bad to worse, from worse to ruin? Sadly must the answer be made—oh, that it were not so—they have failed. Will you not profit by the experience of others? Go not that way. Never be idle. Every moment of your time is a golden one, use it as such; improve the mind; fix your eyes on some noble object; be men. The call is for men, will you not be one of that number who can say—"I am a man."—Ex.

MY FIRST STEP TO RUIN.

"My first step to ruin," exclaimed a wretched youth, as he lay tossing from side to side on the straw bed in one corner of the prison house, "my first step to ruin was going a fishing on the Sabbath. I knew it was wrong; my mother taught me better, my minister taught me better. I didn't think it would come to this. I am undone! I am lost! lost!! lost!!"

Perhaps he said, "It is too pleasant to be cooped up here in church. What harm is there in taking a stroll into the woods? What harm in carrying my fishing tackle and sitting on the bank to fish?"

What harm? Why the harm that God is disobeyed, who says, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." The moment a youth determines to have his own pleasure before God's will, that moment he lets go his rudder, his compass, his chart; nothing but God's Word can guide you safely over the ocean of life. Give that up, and you are bewildered, you are drifting, you will be lost.

AN EVENING INVOCATION.

I come to Thee to-night,
In my lone closet, where no eye may see,
And dare to crave an interview with Thee,
Father of love and light!

Softly the moonbeams shine
On the still branches of the shadowy trees,
While all sweet sounds of evening on the breeze
Steal through the slumbering vine.

Thou gav'st the calm repose
That rests on all,—the air, the birds, the flower,
The human spirit in its weary hour,—
Now at the bright day's close.

'Tis Nature's time for prayer;
The silent praises of the glorious sky,
And the earth's orisons, so profound and high,
To Heaven their breathings bear.

With them my soul would bend
In humble reverence at thy holy throne,
Trusting the merits of thy Son alone
Thy sceptre to extend.

If I this day have striven
With thy blest Spirit, or have bowed the knee
To aught of earth in weak idolatry,
I pray to be forgiven.

If in my heart has been
An unforgiving thought, or word, or look,
Though deep the malice which I scarce could brook,
Wash me from the dark sin.

If I have turned away
From grief or suffering which I might relieve,
Careless the cup of water e'en to give,
Forgive me, Lord, I pray;

And teach me how to feel
My sinful wanderings with a deeper smart,
And more of mercy than of grace impart,
My sinfulness to heal.

Father! my soul would be
Pure as the drops of eve's unsullied dew;
And, as the stars whose nightly course is true,
So would I be to thee.

Not for myself alone
Would I these blessings of thy love implore,
But for each penitent the wide earth o'er,
Whom thou hast called thine own.

And for my heart's best friends,
Whose steadfast kindness, o'er my painful years,
Has watched to soothe afflictions, griefs, and tears,
My warmest prayer ascends.

Should o'er their path decline
The light of gladness, or of hope or health,
Be thou their solace and their joy and wealth,
As they have long been mine.

And now, O Father, take
The heart I cast with humble faith on thee,
And cleanse its depths from each impurity,
For my Redeemer's sake.

ROMANISM IN AMERICA.

ITS PRESENT PHASES AND DESIGNS.

"Take heed that no man deceive you."—Jesus.

This is an oft repeated admonition in the Scriptures, and clearly implies that there is great danger of being deceived; and it does seem to me that there was never a time when there was greater need of heeding that admonition than now. One of the greatest means by which truth is ever trampled in the dust, and error assumes the sceptre of authority, is by deception. It is this that makes Satan "the strong man armed," by which in these last days he is making a desperate struggle against true christianity.

Romanism is the most gigantic, deceptive, antichristian systems ever established in the world. We use the terms "deceptive" and "antichristian," because we are able to fully back up their meaning. By deception she has maintained her authority, deluded her subjects to believe that she alone had the keys of eternal life, thus keeping them, by delusion and ignorance, in subjection to her authority, and boastingly arguing the "unity of the church," as proof that it is the only "true church." But look at the church. As Bishop Burnet remarked, "it is a Babel-building, erected by diligent fraud and aspiring pride upon the plains of drowsy ignorance and easy credulity, and cemented not only by the tears, but by the blood of thousands of innocents." It indeed looks like a lamb, but speaks like a dragon. (Rev. 13: 11.) It is deceptive in its very looks; but in the following article we intend to look at it, and also to hear it speak.

Romanism has made wonderful progress in this country, until even now our religious and civil liberty is in imminent danger; and its progress is attributable measurably to its deceptive character. By a newly-born "Catholic Publication Society" a ("new thing under the sun,") the land is being flooded with Romish tracts, in one of which a writer remarks: "The Catholic church will not stop in her progress until she has converted the world; . . . but she has not denied, and will not deny, her sacred trust and prerogative of catholicity for the sake even of adding whole nations to her fold. Whosoever enters her fold must admit by that act her claim to be the one, undivided, indivisible church of Christ. There can be no 'branches of the Catholic church.'" This is really an important and authoritive declaration, fresh from the Romish press. What does it mean? It might deceive many, but to one who is carefully watching the workings of the system, it will not mislead. Let us look at Romanish declarations briefly.

1. The above named tract positively declares that "the Catholic church will not stop in her progress until she has converted the world,"—what to? To the Catholic church; for the writer declares "there can be no branches of the Catholic church." Then the aim of Romanism is to bring the whole world under its authority. This is a demonstrable fact. This is the only land of any extent where Romanism is making any "progress." And it is most certain that this is the land that Romanism designs bringing under its authority. As proof, we will present some evidence from their own ranks. Dr. Brownson, long the editor of the only literary periodical in this country, devoted to Romish interest, thus speaks:

"It (the Romish church) is now firmly established in this country. Our countrymen (Americans) may be grieved that it is so; but it is useless for them to kick against the decrees of Almighty God. They have had an open field and fair play for Protestantism. Here (in America) Protestantism has had free scope, has reigned without a rival, and proved what she could do, and that her best was evil; for the good she boasts is not hers. A new day is dawning on this land; a new chapter is about to open in our history; and the (Romish) church is to assume her rightful position and influence. Ours (this country) shall become consecrated ground (to Romanism) and here shall be established. Our (American) hills and valleys shall yet echo to the convent bell. No matter who is alarmed, or what leagues are formed, This is to be a Catholic country. And from Maine to Georgia, from the broad Atlantic to the broader Pacific, the clean sacrifice (of the Mass) is to be offered for the quick and the dead."

No one ought to be deceived by this declaration. Their aims are set forth so plainly that it ought to arouse every man who loves Christ, who loves religious liberty, and the country that gave him birth. Rome will make good her boast, if she can.

But now the question arises: what means will they employ to bring about this state of affairs? Will they inaugurate again the bloody days of the inquisition? It will be done by subversion. Let us again listen to the dragonic voice. The Duke of Richmond, once governor of the Canadas, in a speech at Montreal, said: "The government of the United States ought not to stand, and it will not stand; it will be destroyed by subversion, and not by conquest. The plan is this: to send over the surplus population of Europe. They will go over with foreign views and feelings, and in course of time rise up and subvert the government. The church of Rome has a design upon that country! Popery will in time be the established religion of that country. To aid in this, many of the princes and sovereigns of Europe are concurring."

A casual glance at Romanism confirms the truthfulness of the above. See with what untiring zeal they gather the Protestant children into their schools; where they are carefully trained up in the Catholic faith. Thus they are subverting the rising generation to the interests of Romanists. They have so far got control of the civil arm as to control the public monies in their interest. In the meanwhile they keep their real object carefully covered up; so that deception is the great means by which they hope to succeed. "Be not deceived," is the divine admonition. In order to carry out their designs, they are flooding the country with Romish tracts, by the means of which they hope to so popularize their faith, by misrepresentation and falsehood, and to present a fascinating bait that the nominal christians will swallow, and thus be caught with the hook. Says the same tract: "She will continue to draw to herself all the qualities and capacities of life which are in harmony with her spirit; and this accumulated spiritual force will constantly weaken the barriers that divide her from the sympathies of a large part of Christendom, until, at length, she will be acknowledged by all as the only living and true church of Christ."

We think we have already offered enough evidence from a reliable Catholic source to show the designs of Romanism, and its deceptive character. It is time that Protestants awake to a realization of their situation. "It is high time to awake out of sleep."

2. Another point very plainly and positively set forth in their tracts is the unchanged character of Romanism. Many are widely deceived on this point. Some have supposed that the increased light of the past century has essentially changed the character of Romanism. Many have supposed that the cruel, persecuting spirit of the dark ages has given way before the advance of Bible truth and knowledge in the arts and sciences. But this is a sad mistake. This would "break the unity of the church." And a recent Catholic tract declares, "This has not been, and could not be. The church, intended to be one, and to endure until the end of time, could not in its organic structure be really broken at any period of its history, without destroying its title as the one church of Christ. Individuals, communities, even nations, as such, have been broken off from it; but the essential church herself has remained one and unbroken through all its vicissitudes."

If Romanism has changed its real character in any respect from former ages, how can they get out of the dilemma that it was either wrong then, or is wrong now? Romanists are too shrewd to admit this. But the fact is, Romanism is the same to-day that it always has been; the same cruel monster that deluged the land in innocent blood for 1260 years; the same inhuman system, trying to again crowd itself into power. She has been compelled to cease a little from her work of blood; but she did not yield a principle. She would again deluge the land in blood to force obedience to her authority, had she the power. It is estimated that fifty millions have been put to death by that corrupt church, because they loved God's truth, and would not acknowledge or render homage to a blasphemous creed of man's invention.

Says John Fox: "The persecutors of these days strove by various arts to overcome the faith of those who were brought before them. They first tried, by invidious and soothing speeches, and by pretending compassion for their prisoners, to induce them to abandon the cross which they had taken up; these failing, they then began to show the natural malignity and bloodthirstiness of their hearts; their victims were overwhelmned with abuse, and exposed to every species of cruelty and ill-treatment; still the hypocritical whine of compassion was kept up; they tortured the Protestants only to prove their regard for his soul, and brought him to the stake only to make him "conformable"; that is, they merely wished him to give up the exercise of that reason with which his Creator had endowed him, and to adopt, instead of the pure and benevolent principles of the reformed religion, the monstrous, absurd, and blasphemous tenets of Popery; in return for which sacrifice, they graciously promised to allow him to retain a life which no law, but one issuing from the Pandemonium of the prince object of their idolatry—the Pope—could have ever given them authority to take away. This but feebly portrays the heartless, unchangeable character of this system. This is its character to-day, but it has not the power to enforce its authority. What heart does not shudder when it looks upon even the possibility of its obtaining the supremacy in this country. Let Romanism once realize its hopes in this land, and it would blight all it touched.

3. By misapplication of Scripture, by assumption and misrepresentation, Romanists attempt by their tracts to delude the people to embrace the faith of the Catholic church. In trying to prove its divine origin, they very prominently set forth the following proof text in most of their tracts: "And I say unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."—Matt. 16: 18. That passage never can prove anything for the Romanists, unless they can prove that "rock" to mean Rome. Can they do it? They rely upon the succession of Bishops as sufficient proof, but this can never prove the Catholic church to be built upon the "rock," unless they can prove the profession of Peter's faith to remain at the present time in the Pontif at Rome. The true church of Christ is built upon the revelation from God, which is a "rock" upon which all his devoted followers can find a secure refuge from all the wiles of the Evil One. The true church of God is composed of all those who walk as Jesus walked, spotless and pure; who believe his revelation, and faithfully do all his commandments. "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life."—Rev. 22: 14. Christ is the one and the only head of his church, and can be "touched with the feeling of our infirmities."—Heb. 4: 15. He has got the keys of death and hell (Rev. 1: 18); not the Romish church.

Christ never gave the Romish church the commission and command (See Catholic Tract No. 26) to preach the gospel in all the world; and it is a blasphemous assumption to claim that the Catholic church alone has fulfilled that command. I might enumerate hosts of their absurdities, highly polished and designed to deceive, but any mind of ordinary sense ought to readily discern them in the light of Scripture. If in these few lines we shall simply attract your attention to this matter, and put you on your guard, we shall have accomplished all that could be hoped for.

4. Let us look briefly at some of the claims which the Romish church put forth in a tract entitled "The Gospel Church." "She claims the right to speak with authority, and declares that every one, without exception, is bound to listen to and obey her teachings." In accordance with this claim have God's people suffered together "by flame, by sword, by captivity and spoil, many days"; because in the sight of God, and in the love of eternal life, they could not conscientiously admit that claim and submit to that assumed authority. And the Lord helping me, an unworthy child of grace, I will never admit that claim, or submit to that authority.

Reader, resolve rather to obey God, than "obey her teachings"; on the one hand you will obtain eternal life,—on the other eternal death.

5. She sets herself up as "the guardian and teacher of revelation. . . . . Thus she delivers a body of revealed doctrine to be embraced." Reader, can you imagine of a more blasphemous assumption? Look at some of her "doctrines," which she declares "every one, without exception, is bound to listen to and obey." I will give you her own words:

1. "The Catholic church teaches that an authorized ministry, with a legitimate form of words, and the use of water, can wash away the disgrace of the fall from a soul, restore it to perfect beauty and sanctity, and make it a child of God."

2. "She maintains that under similar circumstances, she can change the substance of bread and wine into the body and blood of the living Jesus, the accidents or appearance of bread and wine remaining unchanged. She teaches that as the body is nourished by food, so really is the soul made strong in virtue and holiness by the sacramental presence of Jesus Christ."

3. "She teaches again, that by still another form of words, with a like authority, oil will effect what neither water nor wine can; viz., impart to the soul a suppleness and activity such as shall enable it to elude the grasp of the devil in its last struggle with him at the hour of death."

4. "She claims, moreover, by the laying on the hands of this same authority, to be able instantaneously to invest a man with more dignity than the longest line of royal ancestry can do, and with more power than a monarch's unlimited rule. This two-fold power of forgiving sins and consecrating the Holy Eucharist, as completely distinguishes a priest among men, as the Mother of God was distinguished among women, in being at once Virgin and Mother."

This subject might be greatly extended, but this will be sufficient for the present to show the reader the character of this antichristian system, as well as its aims and pretensions. It is as great a counterfeit as the Devil could invent for the religion of Christ. Deceptive and cunning, it will lead many into the broad way to death. Our only safety in these times is to stand unflinchingly on the word of God, at the risk of eternal life. At a future time we may have occasion to examine other features of the Romish creed, especially the doctrine of the trinity. I believe Romanism to be one of the most dangerous systems of error in existence, and it is our duty to resist its blasphemous claims, and beware lest in submitting to its authority, we receive the mark of the Beast. In a little while, all that have "gotten the victory over the Beast" will "stand on the sea of glass" before the throne of God, and "sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb."—Rev. 15: 2, 3.

WATER BAPTISM.

Baptism of water a command, but no promise now of a baptism of the Holy Spirit, but rather a GIFT of the Holy Spirit.

There seems to be some few who disclaim water baptism altogether. They are well-meaning persons, no doubt, and trying to do good, though they hold this one error, which to me looks surprising, because the point, to my mind, is so very clear; indeed, no subject within the lids of the sacred volume is plainer to my comprehension than water baptism. Perhaps some, like the noble Wm. Penn, may have been associated with those who have carried the subject entirely out of all Bible latitude and longitude, thus causing them to fall into the opposite ditch. But the Scriptures are so plain, the road so perfect on this point, we may, by taking heed thereto, escape either ditch, and walk not doubtfully, but with surety.

Some argue because inspiration claims but one baptism (Eph. 4: 5), that one must be the baptism of the Holy Spirit; and thus take the liberty to boldly assert there is no water baptism. Look here, brother; is there any promise to you and me of a baptism of the Holy Spirit? If you answer in the affirmative, I shall then inquire, where is it to be found? Let us look. John, the forerunner of Christ, announced the idea that Christ would baptize them with the Holy Spirit; and before his crucifixion, Christ confirmed the same idea to his disciples; and after his resurrection he assured them they should be baptized with the Holy Spirit within a few days; or, to use his own language, "Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence"; and charged them to remain at Jerusalem for that purpose, which command they were careful to obey; and the divine record asserts that "the Holy Spirit filled all the house where they were sitting"; thus they must have been immersed or baptized. But these thus baptized by the Holy Spirit were Jewish converts. But subsequently the Lord took occasion to baptize a company of Gentile converts with the Holy Spirit, to convince all that there was neither Jew or Gentile in Christ Jesus, but that he recognized Gentile converts as fellow citizens of the commonwealth of Israel, and that they had an equal right to all the ordinances and immunities of God's house. Acts tenth chap.

It appears that these Gentile converts would have been forbidden water baptism had they not been baptized with the Holy Spirit first. Acts 10: 47. But Peter in rehearsing the matter to the apostles and brethren, which were at Jerusalem, shows that Cornelius and those with him had received the Holy Spirit just as they had at the beginning. Acts 11: 15. Then if Peter and the others at the day of Pentecost were baptized, it follows that Cornelius and those with him were also baptized. Thus we have found a promise, and found its fulfillment. But where, since this time, has any one of Christ's disciples been baptized with the Holy Spirit, or where is the promise of such a baptism? But we find a sweet promise of the gift of the Holy Spirit, and that it is to all, "even as many as the Lord our God shall call," if they will only repent and be baptized. Acts 2: 38, 39. We are taught also that our bodies are the temple of the Holy Spirit, instead of our being immersed in it. It does seem plain that the Holy Spirit was never given by way of baptism only on the day of Pentecost, and subsequently on one occasion to the Gentiles.

If some of our friends, who discard water baptism, had been at the Cesarean meeting, and seen the excellent Cornelius and his associates baptized with the Holy Spirit, would they not have chided Peter when he gave command for them to receive water baptism? Question. If it is necessary for those who have been baptized with the Holy Spirit, to be baptized with water, is it not necessary for us at the present? Does this not look as though it was the Lord's will that his disciples should be baptized with water?

Another point. Where do ministers receive their authority to preach the gospel? Did not Christ give the last commission ever given to man to preach his gospel, after his resurrection, just prior to his ascension? He did. What is embraced in this commission? Ans. The making disciples in any nation, and baptising such disciples, not with the Holy Spirit, but in the name of the Holy Spirit as well as that of Father and Son, and this commission reaches to the end of the world. Now, Bro., if you are called to preach Jesus Christ's gospel, this is your commission. Please notice his high prerogative for thus commissioning men: "And Jesus came, and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen."—Matt. 28: 18-20. And were the apostles obedient to this command? They were. Listen to Peter's preaching soon after receiving this last mandate from his Lord. Notice his instruction to inquiring sinners: "Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Acts 2: 38, 39. How plain that repentance and water baptism are the prerequisites of the gift of the Holy Spirit. Please notice also, that this is not confined to the apostles' day, but "to all afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call"; and as he does yet call people east and west, north and south, this promise stands for all such. And let us all pray that many may be ready to receive this gracious promise at our camp-meeting in Springfield, within a few days. Let any one read carefully the Acts of the Apostles, and also the Epistles, and it will appear quite obvious that all the apostles were in harmony with Peter's teaching.

Where is the account after this of any conversions, and the same converts not baptized? Which of the apostles taught their converts that they must be baptized with the Holy Spirit, but not with water? Can any one show by the Scriptures where water baptism was done away? The command for it is very plain and positive; the examples for it by the apostles are very full and striking. And when men, professedly commissioned to preach, say it is unnecessary, I ask what is their authority for saying thus?

LIFE AND DEATH.

"See, I have set before thee this day life and good, death and evil."—Deut. 30: 15.

At the time this language was uttered, many of the people had turned from the true and living God, and were serving idols instead, just as a great many people do now-a-days. Instead of worshiping God, they worship the world, or the things of the world. The doctrine of election, as taught by some men, is entirely cut off in this passage; for in another place in this same chapter, he says, "I have set before you life and death," thus virtually saying, Take your choice. Have your own way. Serve me and have life, or serve idols and have death. Now the question for us to decide in this day is, Will we worship the true and living God, and thus secure to ourselves true happiness in this life, and life everlasting in the kingdom of God? or whether we will follow the inclinations of an evil heart, and serve Satan while we live here, and then receive "the wages of sin" which "is death"?

That men are left free to choose for themselves, no one can doubt who believes the Scriptures, and has a right understanding of them. Although many pretend to believe in predestination, in this way, that God leads all men, and has chosen a certain class to salvation, and the rest to destruction, and that they are not responsible for what they do. This, indeed, is a curious doctrine, in the face of the plain declarations and truths of God's word. "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve," is the language of Holy Writ. That "many are called and few are chosen," is true; yet it is for no lack on God's part, but it is because the many choose to do evil, and thus lose their title to the inheritance promised to the faithful.

Reader, which side of this question do you stand on to-day? Do you believe God's word? Do you believe the words of Jesus, when he says all those who come "to me I will in no wise cast out"? Jesus has provided life and salvation, and invited all men to accept it and live. His was a whole sacrifice. He died for all men, but it does not follow that all will be saved, because all will not believe on him; all will not comply with the conditions.

All that will, can partake of the water of life freely. Then why will ye refuse and die? Why will ye serve idols, and lose your life and happiness? "Why will ye die, O house of Israel? Come now. The invitation is good. Jesus is waiting. The Spirit says, Come. The judgment is at hand, when it will be too late. "Come, for all things are now ready."

For the World's Crisis.

DO CHRISTIANS EVER DIE?

To advocate the affirmative of this question would be wholly unnecessary, were it not for the fact that some deny the affirmative. In doing this, they virtually contradict the plain testimony of the Scriptures; for we read,—"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."—Rev. 14: 13. And again, we read that "in Adam all die"; and again, that "death hath passed upon all men." To teach that christians "never die," in the face of such declarations, is an unjustifiable contradiction of the word of inspiration. But such contend that this relates to the physical organization, and not to the soul. In this they are either wiser than Solomon, or else their wisdom is foolishness; for he says, "The living know that they shall die; but the dead know not anything;...for the memory of them is forgotten. Also their love and their hatred and their envy is now perished."—Eccl. 9: 5, 6.

Here the attributes of the soul are specified as becoming extinct in death; consequently, to say the body alone dies, and the soul still lives on, is to deny that "their love and their hatred and their envy is now perished"; and that instead of their not knowing anything, they know more than they ever knew before.

If this were so, then death should not have been called sleep, as it is called in the Bible, since a death of that kind would be waking up, instead of a sleep. This cannot be applied to the body; for the body returns to dust, and so in this bears no resemblance to sleep. Sleep is the cessation of consciousness, and consciousness pertains to the soul; the soul must then lose consciousness in death; and so "the dead know not anything."

The notion that christians cannot die, is founded on a misapprehension of certain passages which are presumed to teach this. But to understand any passage of Scripture, it should be understood in harmony with the general testimony of the Scriptures; else the result will be to darken counsel by words without knowledge. To isolate a passage from its connection, as for instance, "whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die," may be to change the truth of God into a lie. To understand this we must take it with the connection. Christ said to Martha, at the resurrection of Lazarus, "Thy brother shall live again. Martha saith unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day. Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."—John 11: 23-26. The declaration that "he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live," clearly refers to a bodily resurrection, as the connection shows; and so, when it is further said, in the same connection, "and whosoever liveth and believeth in me, shall never die," this can only relate to those who live in the resurrection life, and not to the present mortal life.

The phrase "never die" is not literally translated, there being no word in the Greek equivalent to the word "never." The original phrase ou me apothaneeis ton aiona, is more correctly rendered by other translators, "shall not die for ever." To die for ever would be to become eternally dead; and not to die for ever, would be not to die thus eternally; and refers to the resurrection life.

That the dead are unconscious, Christ taught in his argument with the Sadducees. He affimed that "God is not a God of the dead"; when he would be their God if they were conscious; therefore, he taught that they were unconscious. In this he agreed with the Sadducees, and disagreed with the Pharisees. And by this denial of the Pharisaic doctrine of the soul's consciousness after death, he was enabled to disprove the non-resurrection theory of the Sadducees, and thus taught his disciples how to "beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and of the Sadducees." The Pharisees, according to Josephus, held that souls have an immortal vigor in them; while the Sadducees not only believed that the dead were actually dead, but denied their resurrection. To refute their non-resurrection theory, Christ said, "Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the bush, when he called the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob; for he is not a God of the dead, but of the living; for all live unto him."—Luke 20: 37, 38.

When God said to Moses, "I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob," they were dead; and since he is not the God of the dead, he could have no reference to their dead condition, but spoke with reference to their future resurrection life. And the validity of Christ's argument rests solely on the utter unconsciousness of the dead; for if they were conscious, God would be their God; and hence it would not follow that they are to have a resurrection. So the validity of his argument with the Sadducees rests on the unconsciousness of the dead.

THOUGHT.

If we except our sleeping hours, we are ever thinking. Thoughts come and go with the rapidity of the electric flash; and as well may we undertake to chain the hurricane, or reverse the surging tide of the Mississippi, as to stop them. We may designate the channel into which they flow, but to stop them is beyond our power.

Our plans originate in the mind. First comes the thought, then the action; and if the thought is good, the action will be good; while if the thought be evil, the action will be evil also. How important, then, that our thoughts be directed in the right channel. It is our duty, as well as a great and glorious privilege, to honor God in contemplating his goodness and mercy, and in keeping his commandments. Do we, as professed followers of Christ, embrace our duty and privilege in this respect as we should?

Action is a good index to thought. Our Lord declares that "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." From this it is plain that if our thoughts are evil, our lives are evil also; et vice versa. A corrupt fountain can not send forth a pure stream; neither can evil thoughts produce good works. Hence our thoughts must be holy, if we would be holy in life. It is necessary that we stand upon guard constantly, because the Devil has many allurements to lead our thoughts away from goodness and from God. Let us ever be careful to walk in the right path.

The themes of the Bible afford rich food for thought. The field is wide, the themes are inviting, and the promises are precious. No earthly mine of wealth can rival the treasures of God's word. Why should the mind dwell upon earthly topics, when those of the Bible are so much better? Why should man neglect his eternal interests, for the transitory things of this life?

"All flesh is as grass." "We all do fade as a leaf." Man comes into existence, blooms, flourishes, droops and dies. Short is the human race from the cradle to the grave. Yet man is prone to evil; yea, he delights to revel in iniquity; and we behold him following the inclinations of his own will, rather than walking in obedience to the commands of Jehovah. Such has been the case since man's ejection from the garden of Eden. Still, notwithstanding the iniquity of man, notwithstanding his mortality, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

"O, for such love, let rocks and hills
Their lasting silence break;
And all harmonious human tongues
The Savior's praises speak.
Angels, assist our mighty joys,
Strike all your harps of gold;
But, when you raise your highest notes,
His love can ne'er be told!"

Salvation is offered, and man is invited to accept it, and live eternally in the kingdom of God, where ALL is peace and joy forevermore. If the love of God and the glorious promises of the gospel do not induce man to repent, nothing short of physical force will do it. Sinner, would you be saved? The terms of the gospel are easy, and if you are lost, the fault is at your own door.

Man should ask no higher honor than that of being a humble instrument in the hand of God of doing good. We should ever strive to follow the example of our adorable Redeemer, who went about doing good. In all our meditations, our first thought should be, How can I do the most good? But, instead of this, usually the first thought is, How can I make the most money? Self is first in the mind, and self must be accommodated, even if it be at the expense of friends and neighbors. This ought not to be.

If the thoughts of professed Christendom were right in the sight of God, much more would be done to alleviate human suffering than is at the present day. But while thought is absorbed in selfish interest, the pleasure of supplying the wants of a friend, or of a poor neighbor, is entirely forgotten. In the service of mammon, duty is seldom thought of.

What affords more pleasure than the thought of doing right, and having the approval of the blessed Savior? Ah, what can give greater joy? Peace rests with those who know and do their Master's will. Theirs is joy which the world can neither give nor take away. With confidence they look forward, expecting soon to realize the glorious promises which God has given in his sacred word.

A King will soon reign in righteousness. The petty governments of this world must sink to rise no more. Tyranny and oppression must have an end. The kingdoms of this world must become the kingdom of our Lord, and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever. This groaning earth is soon to be redeemed. Sin and death shall soon be utterly and for ever overthrown. Dead saints shall live again. The living righteous shall be changed, and this mortal shall put on immortality. Christ our life will appear, and then shall we appear with him in glory. "So shall we ever be with the Lord." No farewell tear will ever then be shed, no parting of friends, neither sorrow, nor crying, nor pain, nor death; for all tears will then be wiped away. Exultant thought! How it cheers the weary, way-worn pilgrim, as he travels towards the heavenly land. Would you share the glories of the soon coming kingdom? Have your thoughts and lives right, and the promise is yours.

FILIAL LOVE.

What a beautiful virtue is filial love. Coming as it does direct from the heart, and prompted by the noble sentiment of caring and providing for an aged parent, who, past the alotted term of life, is still lingering amid the perils of these days, and still waiting for Jesus to come and take him to that bright world that will know no sorrow.

What a touching sight to see a son or daughter, who is blessed with health, cherish and provide for infirm parents, making their last days happy, and smoothing with loving hands their rugged pathway to the grave, should that be their resting place before the grand consummation of our hope be realized.

Would that this were more universal. Behold the opposite side of the picture. A son or daughter, as the case may be, grows up in the full enjoyment of health, and perhaps they may be favored with wealth. They are selfish and thoughtless, thinking of no one but themselves. Perhaps they may go so far as to buy their infirm parents a little cottage, and think they have done a noble thing; but mark the result. They soon grow careless, seldom or never visiting them. They think that they have done all that the cause of humanity calls for, and do not think anything more about them, until with their neglect they bring down their gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

It is said that during an earthquake in Switzerland, while others were escaping with what wealth they could get, and some were bending wearily beneath their loads of earthly wealth, two brothers were bending under a far different burden, and that burden was their aged parents, whom they had rescued from the fallen ruins, and were carrying to a place of safety. Burden did I say? Nay, it was a task of love. What cared they for wealth, or think of saving it, when their parents needed their helping hand, and nobly was it stretched forth to save them. "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

C. H. Sweet.

Spasmodic Piety.—A quaint writer compares a certain class of professors of religion to sheet-iron stoves heated by shavings. When there is a little reviving in the church, they all at once flame up and become exceedingly warm and zealous. They are ready to chide the pastor and elders for their coldness and want of activity. But, alas! the shavings are soon burned out, and then the heat goes down as it went up. They are never seen in the prayer-room, or more spiritual meetings of the church again, until there is another excitement.

☞ A clergyman once said, "When I come to die, I shall have my greatest grief and greatest joy; my greatest grief that I have done so little for the Lord Jesus, and my greatest joy that the Lord Jesus has done so much for me."

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Aug. 19, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

FAST.

In accordance with our usual custom, we would invite those who are interested in our great National Campmeeting, to be held at Springfield, to observe Friday, Aug. 21st, as a day of fasting and prayer, that it may be the best meeting ever held by those who are looking for the speedy coming of our dear Savior. When we remember the past blessings received from the Lord, we may well feel encouraged to ask in faith for greater things.

THE SPRINGFIELD CAMPMEETING.

Perhaps all may not understand that we are to have a meeting on the ground Sabbath, Aug. 23d. We expect a large number will be present, and perhaps fifty to seventy-five tents will be up at that time. Come if you can.

BAPTISM.—We would remind those who have not been baptized, that there will be a good opportunity offered at the Springfield campmeeting. Let it be improved. Bring a change of clothes for this purpose. Let us obey the Lord in all things, if we expect to be ready to see him when he comes.

LODGING.—Those who are obliged to come to the Springfield campmeeting without tents, will find lodging room in the large tents. We hope to be able to accommodate all who come with board and lodging.

CAMP FURNITURE.

Those who have not attended campmeetings may need a little advice. All should bring their overshoes, umbrellas, overcoats and shawls. You will find them useful, no doubt, during the meeting. Always go prepared for rain. Bring your own bedding. A quilt for each individual will be sufficient. You can put one half under you and cover yourself with the other half. Bring a pillow-case and fill it with straw, or leaves, afrer you get there. Some bring bed-ticks and fill them with straw; but you can fix a pretty good bed in the straw of the tents, without the bed-ticks,—much better than soldiers have. Put a piece of soap, and a towel or two into your bag, a hair-brush and comb.

Each tent's company will need a wash-basin, wooden pail, looking-glass, some nails, hammer, small cord; and if you can bring a crowbar, an inch-and-a-half, or two-inch augur, you will find them convenient in pitching your tent, and for other purposes. Bring a few tacks and matches. Lamps and oil will be furnished on the ground.

There will be extra tent room for those who cannot provide tents; but we hope all who possibly can, will bring them. Wear plain clothing that you will not be afraid of soiling by sitting on the straw. If you wear jewelry—hope you do not—you will do well to leave it at home, as you will be liable to lose it on the camp-ground. Have stout boots or shoes that will be a match for sticks and stubs. Come to work for the Lord, and you will go home rejoicing.

DELEGATES.

All churches that wish to be represented at the annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association, to be held at the Springfield campmeeting, Aug. 25th, should appoint their delegates for that purpose. Every church can send one delegate, and an additional one for every fifty members over the first twenty-five.

The following may answer as a form of certificate for the delegates:—

This is to certify that ——— was duly appointed as delegate to represent the church in ———, at the annual meeting of the A. C. A., to be held at the Springfield campground, Aug. 25th, 1868.

This certificate should be signed by the elders of the church.

As important matters, in which all are interested who love the coming of our Savior, are to come before the Association, it is hoped the churches will be faithful in sending their delegates. All preachers, co-operating with the Association, have a right to vote. Do not appoint them as delegates.

BAPTISMAL ADVICE.

To the young and inexperienced preacher, the following advice relative to baptism may be of some service. We are pleased with what the writer says on the subject. The italics are ours. The article was published in the Examiner and Chronicle. The writer says:—

The candidate being in proper place and position between you and the audience, with hands laid one upon the other in front, you will take those hands in your left hand, and lay your open right hand against the back of the candidate. Don't clutch the collar as though you were going to shake the life out of its owner. There is no need of any clutching or grabbing, or violence in movement of any kind. You can generally stop any agitation you may see in the candidate by your own composure. For a baptismal order of words I suggest—

Upon your profession of death to sin and resurrection to newness of life, of which this ordinance is a symbol, I baptize you in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost.

Be gentle, firm and strong in the act, letting the water no more than cover the face. But be sure and get the face fairly under. Failure in this respect has occasioned vexations. I knew of one case in which on this account the candidate was rebaptized.

Let there be no splashing. . . . You had better give instructions to your candidates beforehand. As the candidate rises, let the church say in concert Amen, and break into a familiar hymn of rejoicing.

APPOINTMENTS FOR NEXT WEEK.—As our paper will go to press earlier than usual next week, on account of the campmeeting, it will be necessary for those wishing to get appointments in, to have them here on Saturday of this week.

MISPLACED.—In some of the copies of the last Crisis, the articles of Brn. D. Cogswell, P. A. Smith, and D. N. Smith, got mixed together when the paper was made up, and the mistake was not discovered till several copies had been struck off by the printer, when the mistake was corrected.

ECUMENICAL COUNCILS.

The Ecumenical Councils are the most important that are held by the church of Rome. The word ecumenical is from the Greek word oikoumenee, meaning the habitable earth. An ecumenical council is a world's council, and is composed of all the bishops in christendom. These councils are never called only on the most important business. Their decisions are final, and their authority superior to the Pope. When once called they are beyond the control of the Pope, and it is not necessary that he should be present. The Roman Catholic church recognize but nineteen ecumenical councils in the christian dispensation. The last one was held at Trent in 1545, three hundred and twenty-three years ago. The next, and probably the last, is appointed to begin at Rome, Dec. 8th, 1869. This will be one of special interest to the whole world. The Pope is very anxious to have all present. He sees that he has come to a critical period in the history of the Catholic power.

The nineteen that have been held, are as follows: "that of Jerusalem, held by the apostles, about A. D. 50; the 1st of Nice, in Bithynia, convened in 325; the 1st of Constantinople, in 381; the 1st of Ephesus, in 431; that of Chalcedon, in 451; the 2nd of Constantinople, in 553; the 3d of Constantinople, in 680; the 2nd of Nice, in 787; the 4th of Canstantinople, in 869; the four councils of Lateran, at Rome, in 1123, 1139, 1179, and 1215; the 1st and 2nd of Lyons, in 1245 and 1274; that of Venice, in Dauphiny, in 1311; that of Constance, in 1414; that of Bazil, in 1431 (till its dissolution by the Pope;) and that of Trent, in 1545."

If time lasts till the next one, it will be an occasion of great interest to the inhabitants of the world.

NOTES, QUERIES, & OBJECTIONS.

18. I forbear to urge the case of the dying thief, as the popular interpretation of this matter is by no means satisfactory. There is another case, however, which I offer as an objection to your views on the state of the dead. When Stephen was braving a storm of malignant persecution, he "looked up steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God." The cruel mob hurried him out of the city; "and they stoned Stephen, calling upon God, and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." Acts 7: 59. Did he not expect that his happy spirit would, at the moment of death, be united with that glorified Jesus whom he saw at God's right hand? If so, was the prayer answered? A. A. PHELPS.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 1868.

"They stoned Stephen." Was it Stephen that they stoned, or only the house [body[in which he lived? Let this point be settled in the mind before we advance. It is certain the word Stephen, and the pronouns he, his, and him, which stand for the word Stephen, all represent the same person, and the one who was stoned. The one who was stoned was the one who "kneeled down," the one who "cried with a loud voice;" the one who "fell asleep;" the one who was "carried . . . to his burial;" and over whom "devout men . . . made great lamentation." This being true, no one else can be properly called Stephen; hence the "spirit" was not Stephen, but something that might be taken from him, and thus cause his death. So long as that remained, he, Stephen, could not die; but his enemies were determined to stone him till he was dead; hence it was necessary that the Lord should take away his spirit, in order that death might end his sufferings.

A glance at a few other passages will make this point plain. Job says, "The spirit of God is in my nostrils." Job 27: 3. What does spirit mean in this passage? We think it means just what it does in Stephen's case,—the breath of life. The same word in the original occurs in Ps. 104: 29, as follows: "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled; thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust." Again, when the Psalmist was speaking of the death of man, he says: "His breath goeth forth, he the [Stephen] renurneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Ps. 146: 4. We have the word used in the same sense in the letter of James: "For as the body without the spirit (Mar. breath) is dead, so faith without works is dead also." James 2: 26.

We claim that the "spirit,' in Stephen's case means the same as spirit in Job 27: 3, and breath in Ps. 104: 29, 146: 4; but that this "breath," or "spirit," was not Stephen, any more than the spirit in Job's nostrils was Job himself. It is not something that lives by itself, as a man, conscious and accountable; but that without which no man, animal or plant can live. It is "the breath of life" corresponding with that which was breathed into Adam's nostrils, causing him to live; which, when taken away by the Giver, causes the death of the man, as in the case of Stephen; who was then a fit subject for "burial" in hades, where he will remain till "the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible; . . . then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, . . . O death, where is thy sting! O grave, [hades,] where is thy victory."—1 Cor. 15: 52, 54, 55.

FARE REDUCED.

The RUTLAND and BURLINGTON and VT. VALLEY R. Roads have reduced the fare of those attending the Springfield Campmeeting. All those who come from the above roads, having paid the regular fare, will be furnished a free return pass by the Secretary of the campmeeting. No arrangements have been made with the Vt. Central; hence the friends in Vermont had better come over the R. and B. Road when they can, as those who come on the Central will be furnished with return passes only on the Mass. and Vt. Valley Roads to Bellows Falls. From So. Vernon, campmeeting tickets must be purchased at the station, which must be endorsed by the Secretary on the ground.

FARE REDUCED.

The Agent of the Kennebeck Steamboat has reduced the fare, so that the friends in Richmond or Bath, Me., can come to Boston and return for $2.50;—from Gardiner, Hallowell and Augusta, for $3.00. All who come will procure a ticket to come and return, and present the same to the Secretary of the campmeeting for his endorsement.

NOW READY.

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"HYMNS OF THE JUBILEE HARP,"

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

By the Advent Chris. Pub. Society.

Among the thousands who sing from "The Jubilee Harp," there are many hundreds, especially the aged, to whose eyes the fine print of the Harp is a great discomfort and inconvenience, and who would gladly welcome an edition of the same excellent hymns, in a convenient form, in large, clear type. The above work is issued especially for them, and we trust they will find it just what they want.

There are hundreds also who sing from the Harp, who never use the notes, and who would therefore be just as well and better pleased with a book containing the same hymns, without the music, at a lower price. This book was got up also especially for them, and will, no doubt, be to all such just the thing they desire.

This edition of "The Hymns" is not, by any means, intended to supercede "The Harp." It is designed as a companion to it; and is so arranged, with references, that hymns given out from the one can be readily found in the other.

The whole has been carefully revised and corrected, and a brief supplement of choice and popular hymns appended. The type-work was done in our own office, and in a style, we trust, not inferior to that of any other.

It is a volume of 576 pages, containing some 850 Hymns and Anthems, substantially bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, at 75 cents, single copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100. Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9.50 per dozen; $75.00 per 100. It is cheaper by far than any similar work that we know of in the market. When sent by mail, 16 cts. additional postage.

"SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED

BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

A Large 12 Mo., with Covers, by M. D. Wellcome.

This is a new and important pamphlet, prepared expressly to meet a want hitherto unsupplied. Among the many works written exposing the evils of SPIRITUALISM, none have been adapted for gratuitous distribution because of size and price. This work is given in a condensed form, and by having a very large edition published, can be furnished at a price to circulate extensively. Notwithstanding its brevity, it shows in a clear and concise manner the source of Spiritualism, its doctrines, corruptions, and unreliability, by the testimony of its own witnesses. Let it be scattered wherever Spiritualism is found.

Price 10 cents single copy; twenty copies for $1.00; $3.50 per one hundred copies. For sale at this office.

NEW TRACTS

Just Issued by the A. C. P. Society.

"THE KINGDOM OF GOD." A valuable tract of 27 pages, by Eld. G. W. Green. Just what is wanted to circulate widely. Price 5 cents single, postage 2 cts.; 50 cents per dozen; $3.00 per one hundred.

"SEED TIME AND HARVEST." Truly "a Tract for the times," containing fourteen pages, by Eld. Geo. Thompson. 3 cents each, postage 2 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.00 per one hundred.

"WHAT SAYS THE GOSPEL?" By Elder S. L. Manley. Two copies for 5 cents, post-paid; 15 cts. per dozen; 50 cts. per one hundred.

"WHAT IS MAN?" A Bible view of his creation, with the meaning of "Soul," "Spirit," and an exposition of the "Rich Man and Lazarus," "Thief on the Cross," and "Souls under the Altar." By Miles Grant.

This is a work of 128 pp., containing four tracts bound together. Every body should have a copy. Price 25 cents postpaid.

"ADVENTISM."

We have just received a full supply of this valuable work. Price in cloth 75 cents, postage 12 cents. Flexible covers 60 cents, postage 12 cents. Paper covers 50 cents, postage 6 cents. In paper covers by the dozen, by express, $4.75.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

MEMPHIS MISSION S. SCHOOL.

Our Mission Sabbath School here should before this have been spoken of, and a report of this part of our work given to the friends of the mission; but the accumulated work of every kind upon my hands, and the weariness of mind, as well as body, when the midnight hour comes (this is the only time one can get to write here), have prevented me from giving to the friends of the mission much which, no doubt, would have been interesting to them. This omission I deeply regret, because I know that much interest in this mission is lost by its not being reported in its weekly or monthly operations and successes. But while I am trying to do the work of three men here, it cannot be expected that I should do that of a fourth.

It would give me great pleasure to furnish the friends of Christ and the mission a continual and full account of the work of the Lord among us in this wicked city; and also our many trials and persecutions, which none but ourselves now know. But this cannot be done without neglecting the immediate and legitimate work of the mission; work which if we do not perform, everything is lost which we came to accomplish and gain. The gospel must be preached; the school must be taught; the sick must be visited, nursed, and provided for; the poor must be helped; the dead must be buried. The Sabbath School and Band of Hope must be superintended and cared for in all their interests and claims. The many meetings of the church must be attended by the pastor, or it is thought there is a lack of interest on his part. All these and many other things must be daily and nightly attended to, or the work falls behind, and a loss is seen and felt at once. At home, the mission is losing by not being regularly reported; but here it is not. There, friends forget us by not having their minds stirred up weekly, or monthly, with the account of our labors, trials and successes. I regret this as much as any one; but must ask all to remember that what I cannot do they should not expect.

Our Sabbath School is one of the most important departments of our work here. Without success in this, I should feel discouraged. This, with the day school, is the entering wedge of the true gospel to this people; and here, consequently, I have felt the greatest interest, and experienced the most anxiety. Like all the rest of our work here, the Sabbath School has been blessed of God; and can we so arrange that this interest may be kept up and sustained, what time remains for us to work, we shall witness greater fruit of our labors.

Two years ago last April, this Sabbath School was first organized. It was the first real work of our mission here, and the real starting point of doing good to this people. This, in connection with the day school, was the germ from which has come souls fitted, as we trust, for the kingdom of Christ. By these schools we get access to this people, who were in darkness and ignorance. By them we have kept the door open for the preaching of the true gospel, in all its length and breadth; until now Christ has a living church in this city. The first year after the organization of this school, the average attendance was about one hundred. The last year it has been double that number. Since the organization of the school, as many as eight hundred persons have belonged to it, and received instruction therein. During the last seven months, I have had printed five hundred cards of membership, all of which have been disposed of by the admission of members to the school; and of late five hundred more have been obtained to meet the demand. These cards, or tickets of membership, expire at the end of every six months, or twenty-six Sabbaths; and are so arranged that they show the attendance of each scholar during that time. The numbers from one to twenty-six are placed in little squares on the upper and lower margin of the card; each number marking a Sabbath. Each Sabbath, when the scholar is present with his card, the figure or number indicating that Sabbath is cut out by the superintendent with a conductor's punch. If the scholar is present every Sabbath for the six months, or the twenty-six Sabbaths numbered upon the card, it will be indicated by the card not having a single figure left upon it. This is called a "clear ticket," and entitles the holder to a present, or whatever the superintendent may have promised those who are thus punctual. Those who join the school after the series, have their tickets checked from that Sabbath on which they join the school. If, for instance, it is the fourth Sabbath of the series, the number or figure four will be cut from the card, and this will show when the scholar joined the school, and received his ticket of membership. If he is punctual until the expiration of the series, every number upon his ticket will be found cut out from the time he joined. This also is called a "clear ticket," and entitles the holder to honors or a present. At whatever number, or Sabbath, the scholar becomes a member, if from that Sabbath his ticket is always present and checked, he or she is reckoned as punctual and deserving of credit as much as though they commenced with the series. If the scholar is sick and cannot be present from that cause, he is allowed to send his ticket to be checked. In the centre of the card is a ruled line, on which the name of the scholar is written by the superintendent; and below it is printed the following: "Is a member of the Advent Mission Sabbath School, North Memphis. I. I. Leslie, Supt."

There is no doubt but that much interest has been felt by the friends at the North in our Sabbath school; but only one brother has manifested this interest. I refer to Bro. Geo. S. Harwood, of Providence, R. I. He has on two occasions shown his deep and strong desire for our prosperity in this department of our work here. He has sent money and books to be offered as prizes in our Sabbath school, as incentives to the study of the Scriptures. The result has been most blessed; and may the Lord abundantly reward him for his efforts in behalf of these poor, outcast and despised children of God. It will be remembered that last winter this dear brother sent me ten dollars to be divided into three prizes; namely, five, three, and two dollars. These to be awarded to the three scholars in our school who should commit to memory and recite the best the greatest number of verses from the Bible in a given time; the money, after being won, to be given by the winners in aid of the building of the chapel. Soon after the prizes were received, it was announced what Bro. Harwood had proposed for the members of the school to do. The proposition was received with great favor, and many were desirous to enter the list for the prizes. Accordingly the next Sabbath was appointed for the commencement of the work. Two months was the time fixed for the trial; but, on account of the cold and stormy weather, which kept many of the scholars at home, two Sabbaths were afterwards added, that all might have an opportunity to recite what they had learned. At the end of the ten weeks the result was obtained and announced to the school, which surprised all. I here give it, and think it will also surprise most of the friends of the mission, and at the same time gladden their hearts; especially when they call to mind the fact that a little more than two years ago, when our mission was established here, hardly one of these scholars knew the alphabet, and few of them had ever been inside a Sunday school. None of them had Bibles or Testaments, nor could they then read a verse in them.

RESULT OF THE TRIAL.

Whole number of scholars who learned verses, 80; number of recitations in the ten Sabbaths, 287; whole number of verses committed, 3,868; average number of verses learned by each scholar, 48; average number of verses recited each Sabbath, 386; the greatest number of verses committed by any one scholar in one week (the 9th), 96; greatest number learned by one scholar in the whole time, 443; the next highest number learned, 428; the next greatest number committed, 360.

CELIA STRONG won the first prize of five dollars, having learned and recited in seven weeks 443 verses from the New Testament, taking for her lessons consecutive chapters in the book of John. She is about forty years old, has learned to read within a short time, and is now a teacher in our Sabbath school. Her complexion is black, there being no tint of European blood in her skin. She is capable of learning anything there is to be learned. She is a member of our church, and exerts a great influence among her people.

The second prize of three dollars was won by a girl fourteen years of age. Her name is ELLEN SULCEY; and, like the first winner, she is of the darkest cast, there being no trace of European blood about her. She is one of our best scholars in the day and Sabbath school; and of late has been appointed a teacher in the latter. She committed to memory 428 verses from the Psalms, commencing with the first, and learning them in their order. This she did in eight weeks, averaging more than fifty-three verses per week.

The third prize of two dollars was won by a young woman about twenty years of age. She, like the others who won, is of entire African descent, without any tinge of another nation about her. She is a member of the day and Sabbath school, and is also one of our best and most promising scholars. She, too, is a teacher in the Sunday school, and a true and devoted christian. Was among the first gathered here out of the darkness by my humble labors, and was baptized and united with the church nearly two years ago. She committed to memory and recited in eight weeks, 360 verses from the book of Matthew, taking, like the other two, the chapters in course. This she did while laboring in a family, and attending to the duties of a servant there.

There are others in the school who deserve mention. Aura Lawrence (nearly white) committed to memory in seven weeks 415 verses from the New Testament. Two weeks after the trial closed, she learned and recited to me one hundred and sixty more, making 575 verses committed to memory in nine weeks. These one hundred and sixty are not included in the 3868, committed by the whole school in the ten weeks.

On the part of the boys, good efforts were made, and with good results. THOMAS BLAND, seventeen years of age, in eight weeks learned 254 verses from different parts of the Bible. SCOTT JONES, fourteen years of age, in the same time committed to memory and recited 222 verses. There were others who did nearly as well. With the money thus won, the winners purchased chairs for the platform and desk in the chapel, which Bro. Harwood and all who will visit the mission may see.

The other prizes since offered and sent by Bro. Harwood are now being striven for by the school, and the result will be reported as soon as the time expires. I would add that both scholars and teachers are grateful to Bro. H. for his efforts to benefit our Mission Sabbath School. God bless him and all who are interested in this great and good work among the ignorant and oppressed. I. I. LESLIE.

HOW TO BE BENEFITTED AT CAMPMEETING.

1. Consider the object.

2. Prepare accordingly, by taking as little baggage as possible, and no clothing to make a show, but good substantial articles, especially for the feet. Those that try to show off are of no use to the meeting nor themselves.

3. Don't get into a hurrying spirit in getting ready; it will follow you through the week.

4. Don't go visiting until your tent is up, and dedicated by prayer.

5. Don't indulge in eating all kinds of trash at all hours in the day; many are made sick by so doing, and lose the meeting. Be temperate. It will be better to fast than feast.

6. Don't run about to find a good meeting until you have had one in your own tent. Devotion in each tent tells on outsiders.

7. Don't peddle news. For the Lord's sake, pick up the wheat. Be quiet. Don't spend your money in the forepart of the meeting, until the expenses of the meeting are fully met. All foreign claims should be left until you pay your own expenses. We have suffered on this account for two or three years.

8. Be careful to get your sleep, and then your nerves will be strong enough to repel scattering influences so prevalent.

These general rules, followed out, will be a benefit to the meeting. These are the experiences of one hundred and forty-nine campmeetings. HIRAM MUNGER.

For the World's Crisis.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

There will necessarily be many new and different arrangements on the new campground. One is, we can not cook meat to sell to tent companies, or families, at this meeting, as formerly. It always was attended with much perplexity, and sometimes dissatisfaction, at our large meetings. Small ones are different. We shall have a meat cart come on the ground, to accommodate all with meats in the morning, separate from the one that supplies the boarding-house. We have also erected a building on the ground, 10 x 12, and put in it two stoves, to accommodate in heating water, cooking meat, and making tea. We furnish wood, and a good well near this building, and that is the best we can do. Those using the stoves must take turns in keeping their fires, or join together and hire some one to do it, as the committees will have their hands full.

We hope this notice and arrangement will be satisfactory. Our arrangements are such that we can not accommodate you in any other way. We shall do the best we can in regard to furnishing milk; perhaps we can get a milk cart for your special accommodation. Knowing these facts, you will be prepared to furnish your own dishes and tools, for we cannot supply you. Tents for strangers, poles, lumber, straw, and nails, we have on the ground. Towels, soap, wash-basins, you must bring, and lamps as far as possible. Oil we shall have for you, and some lamps.

P. S.—No trees must be cut on the ground without consulting the committee. H. M.

TO FRIENDS WEST.

OUR MEETING.

The most important meeting of the year for Western Adventists, is our annual gathering at DeKalb; and the coming meeting will be the most important and interesting one yet held.

1. It will be the largest. Notwithstanding the narrow-minded policy pursued toward us by the Railroad Company, we hope to see from six to eight hundred, if not a thousand persons, residing on the ground during the week. Why not? If the meeting benefits all who attend it, and vastly benefits the general cause, why should not every Adventist desire to be there? and if he can consistently do so, why should he not come? Certainly every Advent christian who can come, should come. God help you all to see it.

2. It will involve more important interests than any previous meeting of the kind in the west. Our operations are growing in magnitude and importance; and the interest of the Association are, if rightly understood, the real interests of every Advent christian of the west and east. Its prosperity is destined to be, as it thus far has been, the measure of the prosperity of the general cause. Its friends are the tried and true brethren who have never been found wanting in the past; whose approbation of any measure would be the highest commendation we could desire for it. It is desirable that these should meet for counsel and consultation, at least once in the year.

3. The Ministerial Conference, unless we are greatly disappointed, will be one of such interest as has never before been held in the body. The call is felt to be timely, and we are sure of a hearty response.

We might mention other points. But enough. We say to Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, Misiouri, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, New York, and all in other States who can do so, come. Come early, stay through the meeting, and God will greatly bless the people who make a covenant with him by sacrifice.

J. V. HIMES, in behalf of the Com.

THE NUMBER THREE.

When the world was created, we find land, water, and sky; sun, moon, and stars. Noah had three sons. Jonah was three days in the whale's belly. Our Savior was three days in the tomb. There were three patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; Abraham entertained three angels. Samuel was called three times. Simon, lovest thou me? was repeated three times. Daniel was thrown into a den with three lions, for praying three times a day. Shadrach, Meshech and Abed-nego were rescued from the flames of the oven. The ten commandments were delivered on the third day. Job had three friends. St. Paul speaks of faith, hope, charity; these three. Those famous dreams of the butler and baker were to come to pass in three days. Elijah prostrated himself three times on the body of the dead child. Samson deceived Delilah three times before she discovered the source of his strength.

The sacred letters on the cross are I. H. S. There are three conditions for man—the earth, heaven, and hell. In mythology were the three oracles, Cerebus with his three heads, Neptune holding his three-toothed staff. The oracles of Delphi cherished with veneration the Tripod, and the nine muses sprang from three. In nature we have male, female, and offspring; morning, noon, and night. Trees group their leaves in threes. There is the three-leaved clover. We have fish, flesh, and fowl. What could be done in mathematics without the aid of the triangle? Witness the power of the wedge. In logic three premises are indispensable.—Boston Herald.

Correspondence.

From Sr. Jane A. Benson.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—It has been a long time since I have heard or seen many of you, and I thought I would put a piece in the paper to let you know that I am still in the field, and looking for Jesus, my elder brother, whom I believe is soon to come. Some three weeks ago last Thursday, I left the land of my nativity for the sunny lands of the South, feeling that the Lord had sent me with the last note of warning to a dying people. At first it seemed hard to leave all that was near and dear, and to go so far; but the voice said, "Go, and I will go with you."

I left New York with money enough to get to Petersburg, Va., as a steerage passenger. It was very rough, but the Lord was with us. We were three in number, and got there safe, and met with my strange brethren and sisters. My first visit was to the Methodist church, to a love-feast. I lifted up my voice and cried, "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him." I had a blessed time. I told them that in a little while the kingdom is coming down to the people of the saints of the Most High. O what shouting. Some laughed, some cried, and some danced like David before the ark. There were two deaf and dumb girls, who had been blest a few days ago. They talked with their hands. If it were possible, they would have flown away. The religion of Jesus Christ has power in it. There were a number that had professed to love Christ, who had never spoken in church in their lives, but they opened their mouths that night.

We did not convert the Elder, for he said it was against the rule to let a woman preach in his church; but I prayed, O Lord, open for us some door, if thou hast sent me here. The Lord heard and answered. A dear sister opened her house. It would hold a hundred and fifty. We went in the name of the Lord. The place was so full we could scarcely stand. Sister was to lead off with a sermon; but old Satan got there first. A brother came in as sister was looking for a hymn, and said, There has been a mistake here. You thought that some sister was to preach to-night. It is not so; she has got nothing to say. So this brother will preach, and we will have a prayer meeting. Sister was going right home, but I said, No; I must say something before I go. And we, through God, gained the victory. They then opened a chapel on Sunday, and sent for me. It would hold some three hundred. I spoke from Rev. 1: 7. The Holy Ghost filled the house.

The people in Pocahontas caught the flame about a mile away. On Tuesday night I spoke there from the book of Jonah, 1: 6, and Matt. 25: 32. The Lord was with us. Some twelve came forward for prayers. The next night I was at Blanford again. Ten came forward for prayers.

O pray for us. The work has commenced. May the Lord carry it on until redemption day. I preached on Wednesday, Thursday, and every night for a week, first in one place, then the other. There has been a great revival in this place, with both saints and sinners. I am much fatigued in body, for we have to walk so much. I have suffered for food to eat; I promised to take a soldier's fare; so, dear friends, pray for me, that my faith fail me not; for he said, "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." I came seeking a bride for my Master, and I am in a big hurry, for I want to see Jesus, and be made like him.

I want to get to Springfield camp, but God only knows whether I shall, for money is very scarce. The will of God be done. My prayer is that it may be the greatest campmeeting ever known for the presence of the Holy Spirit. O God, revive thy work, for Jesus' sake. Amen. JANE A. BENSON.

Pocahontas, Va.

[Those who attended the campmeetings last year at Wilbraham and Alton Bay will recollect this Sr. Benson, a colored woman, who came with Sr. A. Smith. She preached in the large tent at Alton Bay, on Sunday.—ED.]

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—After being out in the country some five weeks, away from the noisy din and extreme heat; and having a change of diet, and of scenes and sights; where, instead of seeing poverty, suffering, sorrow, sickness, death, and families in strife, sin and wickedness, I have seen happy families, happy social circles, happy individuals, kind friends, etc.; I have returned once more, and find that all this great change in life has made a great change in my health. When I left home I was very sick indeed—all run down; and I began to think my work was done, and I should sleep a little while till Jesus comes. I was not able to travel alone. My son went with me as far as Boston. There I found kind friends, and rested a few days, and then went to fill my appointments at Danielsonville and Abington; but felt very bad indeed. I really felt as though I could not live from one day to another. It did really seem that I should die with weakness; that I had held on and worked so long, and had run down so weak and low, that I should never rally; but the Lord is good, and hears prayer. How those poor black children in the mission did pray that the Lord would raise me up to labor. But this was not my desire. I had come to the place where I had no choice in the matter, but that the Lord's will might be done. If it was to stop work, all right; if it was to work on, I was satisfied. The trouble was to know duty. On one side were the prayers and tears and cries of the colored people,—"Don't leave us; we shall fall right back where we were before; for nobody else will do for us as you do"; on the other side was the advice of dear friends and relatives to give it up, before my health was entirely gone. The great and mighty struggle in my own mind was, What is duty? and under this load, and loss of rest, I gave it all into the hands of the Lord, and left home to raise the means to pay the rent, there being about enough coming by letter to keep the table.

While at Danielsonville, the Lord sent a physician and friend, who prescribed for my diseases, which were complicated, and under whose skill and kind treatment, with the blessing of God, I began to amend very slowly at first, but I think surely, and have been improving ever since. I have had good sleep, good food, good air, good company, and good friends; but have not had much rest from preaching. Labor is rest, where there is no care to press us down.

We turn our face homeward from this place (Portsmouth) with many thanks to our friends for their kindness towards us, and to our heavenly Father for his preserving care over us in the past, and feel still to trust him in the future; for we are told, if we are his, our steps shall be ordered by the Lord. We still desire the prayers of God's children, that we may be kept faithful to our trust.

As many have asked me if I was going to bring any of my colored folks to campmeeting this year, and some are anxious that I should, I would just say, it depends altogether on whether I can get the means to bring them or not. I shall have to pay all their expenses if I bring them. And when their fares and board—and some of them to be clothed—are reckoned, all together it will make a large sum, and nobody responsible but Anna.

Now a word to our friends that are interested in our mission work. To save having so many meetings on the ground, which is very hard work, and deprives me of all the social meetings, and from some of the preaching, I have concluded to have my first report of the "Star of Hope Mission" printed in pamphlet form, so that all can get it on the ground, and read for themselves. Of course it is not as full as we would like to have it. Had we the time to spend in writing that we have in working, there would have been much more in it. But we have tried to do the best we could for the first one. Not having the advantages of education which many have, God having called us to the active part of the work, instead of writing, of course there will be many things in our report for the critic's eye, and many remarks may be made by those who know but little of the labor and toils and sacrifices of mission work; but these are among the all things spoken of. Our report can be obtained at either of the campmeetings.

Now a word in reference to the regular subscribers for the rent of our mission house. There were some forty-three names given. About one half of them paid to the first of May. Some of the others paid three or four months and stopped. Some never paid anything, not even their first dollar. Other friends sent money for rent that were not subscribers, which was acknowledged in the Crisis at the time it was sent. There was some subscribed in New York city, and paid at the mission house, that has not been put in the Crisis, and of course it is right their names should come in with the others. Bro. P. Cannon, New York city, two shares, paid to first of May. Bro. H. Campbell, Green Point, two shares, to May. Sister Pearce, New York city, one share, to May. Sister Bellows and daughter, one share each, paid to first of August. Bro. Benj. Young, of Brooklyn, two shares, paid to July. This Bro. has moved away down East. We are very sorry to have him go, as we miss him much. He has been a true friend to the mission, both temporally and spiritually. The last time he and his wife visited our meeting, and told the folks they were going away, it caused many sad hearts. Our people loved them much, and were sorry they must lose two of their best white friends; and as the tears rolled down their dark faces, some one in broken words and sobs said, "May God go with them." A long and loud "Amen, God grant it," came from all parts of the house. Within our own heart we felt sad at parting, as they had been with us from the first in this cellar and garret work; but felt to put it with the all things, and say, God go with them, and bless them. Such is life. One comes and another goes, and friendship's strings are often severed; but we patiently wait till all these partings will be over. Yours in Christ,

Portsmouth, N. H. ANNA E. SMITH.

From Bro. D. D. Reed.

To the saints scattered abroad, greeting: We have been here almost three weeks, and the place is quite stirred up. They say they never saw the Bible so plain before. Four were converted this afternoon. We expect to baptize next Sabbath. There are a number going forward.

Our next place is at Hastings, on the west side of the Mississippi river. Bro. Fassett, Sr. Stone, and Sr. Rowel go with the tent; so you see the Lord has favored the "Pentecostal tent." I expect to follow up the Mississippi until cold weather. These are all new fields. After I get through with my season's work, I think I shall pack up my tent and take it to California, where I can hold meetings the year round, if time should continue.

I am satisfied that we are down at the close of this world's history; so let us double our diligence and take hold of the work with our whole heart. We must get hold of God before we can get hold of the people. Let the cry of all be, "Nearer my God to thee." O how I see the need of that faith that takes God at his word, and says, It must be done. The Lord help us. In hope,

Hudson, Wis., Aug. 7. D. D. REED.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. W. S. CAMPBELL, Beaver Falls, Pa., Aug. 4th, writes:—

"I am for a few days laboring in this part of the field west of the Alleghanies, some thirty miles north and west of Pittsburg, near the Ohio river, in this beautiful town, where we are now called to preach the doctrine of the coming kingdom, and the precious and glorious truth of immortality through Christ alone. There is an interest to hear. We have had meetings out of doors, and in the large brick school-house, well attended, and a spirit of inquiry awakened, which is peculiarly gratifying, and will lead us, as an additional motive, faithfully to proclaim the great gospel position which is required at this time.

We have held meetings in a fine grove, owned by Bro. Mason, who has been faithful to the people here. He is a well known christian from Conn., at whose home I find the Crisis and the Herald of Life, with many other publications, by which we aim to spread the truth.

People are becoming more interested. I feel glad to have the opportunity of speaking in a new place, and in the west again. We shall get into a large hall in New Brighton next Sunday."

BRO. N. W. WADE, Yorkshire, N. Y., July 28th, writes:—

"Bro. Colegrove baptized into death and raised in the likeness of Christ's resurrection six more, to be added to the twenty-two that were baptized here a short time ago. God bless Bro. Colegrove, and also Brn. Wendell, Fenn, Cotton, Newell, and Blain, who so ably seconded him in proclaiming the truth of the gospel as it is in Jesus. Our prayer is that the seed they sow may always bring forth fruit to the glory of God, as it has in Yorkshire, and that they may be able to sow the seed of truth far and wide, unto the coming of our Lord."

BRO. R. H. HINES, Delton, Wis., Aug. 24, writes:—

"Good news from Fairfield, Wis. They are wide awake there. They are looking for a city whose builder and maker is God; and for our Lord to come and reign here on the earth. Last night they had Communion. Forty sat at the table. They are having good meetings. Thirty-five or forty come to evening prayer meetings. Bro. Barnes preaches to them."

BRO. WM. H. SPENCER, Brockport, N. Y., July 30th, writes:—

"We have been in the midst of a revival since last May. Sinners have been converted and backsliders reclaimed. I am happy in the Lord. Praise his name. I hope to meet you soon 'just over there.' I am weak physically, but strong in the Lord. Pray for me."

Obituaries.

From a Mourner.

BRO. GRANT:—In deep affliction we write you. George, our dear son, is no more. He was drowned on Thursday last, while bathing. He ventured out too far into the Mississippi river, and perished before sufficient assistance could be rendered him. His body was recovered from a watery grave and buried from his home, in the cemetery in this city, yesterday. Kind and generous christian friends and neighbors rendered us assistance in burying our dead amid the sympathy of the public at large.

This is a sad stroke of affliction to me, but grace and hope supports us in this hour of our deepest calamity and trial. There are many circumstances connected with it calculated to comfort our bereaved and stricken hearts. George was a good boy in his earlier years; was converted and baptized in his youth, and though since has departed far, very far, from God and a course of rectitude and the christian life, yet, latterly has returned, as we humbly trust, fully, and in time to be saved.

He came on to reside with us the first of July, and had opened before him bright prospects for business. Friends multiplied all around him, being pleased with his genial and happy temper; but a most mysterious providence has removed him from us in the hour of our brightest hopes respecting him. Within one short month we have had the joys of meeting, and the sorrows of being parted by death. Oh, how afflictive! He never seemed so happy as he has since he came on to live with us; and on the day of his death, he said to a friend while at work: "I believe that I have not an enemy on earth."

A few weeks ago he wrote from Sandy Hill, N. Y., where he was living: "O how I would like to hear you preach once more, father. It would seem good to me. I lay the other night and thought, father, what you had done for me, and if I were lost it would be because I ought to be. But I hope that my future life will be a blessing to you. Do try and not think of the past, but let the future bring blessings on your kind head. I never can repay the kindness to you in this life which you have shown to me, and may my future life be a blessing to my kind parents is my prayer."

George has only heard me one Sabbath since his arrival here, as I have been absent from home, and was away at Hudson, Wis., at the time of his death, where I received a telegram from my dear afflicted wife, saying, "George is drowned! return immediately." I returned in time for the funeral, accompanied by Bro. Reed, who assisted us at the funeral, and comforted our bereaved hearts.

Brethren and sisters, pray for us, and that this affliction may be sanctified to our good, while we labor in this far-off land to preach the gospel, and save men from the wrath to come.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 17. Admiral Farragut, accompanied by Mr. Morris, United States Minister, had an interview with the Sultan last week, at which, after an interchange of compliments and good wishes, his Majesty informed the Admiral that the flagship Franklin would be permitted to pass through the Dardanelles to Constantinople, should the Admiral so desire. Gen. Ignatif, the Russian Embassador at Constantinople, last week entertained Admiral Farragut and the officers of his fleet at a grand banquet given at the Russian legation.

SPAIN. The London Times, in an article on Spain, says: "There is more distress throughout the country than at any previous time during the last half century. Entire provinces are even now, in the height of summer, suffering severely and threatened with famine, and the prospects of the revenue collections are proportionally jeopardized. From Old Castille, always regarded as the granary of Spain, thousands, it is said, are flocking to the adjoining provinces in search of labor and food, and the streets of the chief central cities, and even of the capital itself, are crowded with an influx of people imploring aid for themselves and their families. A general opinion seems prevalent that affairs cannot remain in their present condition, 'Hunger,' it is remarked, 'is the most powerful ally of revolutionists; and the people, over-burdened with taxes they cannot pay, and pressed by sheer want, will be readily induced to ascribe their sufferings to the present Government.'"

THE POPE.—The Rome correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette in his letter on the 6th inst, says:—The Pope has been in a state of great excitement. He adopts the most rigorous measures against all who are suspected of liberal views, and is alienating and even banishing his best friends. He seems to be laboring under a sort of mania, which not only keeps up a panic in his household, but causes uneasiness to his physicians. Among those who have lately fallen under his displeasure is Monsignor Riccardi, Archbishop of Turin. I have already informed you that this prelate, on the occasion of the marriage of Prince Humbart, announced at Turin a plenary indulgence in honor of that event, and that indulgence was repudiated in the Giornali d Roma. The Pope has followed up the step by summoning the Archbishop to Rome to answer for his conduct, and we shall perhaps have another reaction. The Holy Father is determined to free himself from all association with the marriage of the Hereditary Prince of Italy.

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL.—At the secret printing office in the Quirinal Palace, in Rome, says the correspondent of the London Post, the printers are putting in type the programme of matters to be treated of in the council, according to the decisions of the six congregations of prelates engaged in drawing up the propositions. As the different parts of this programme are printed they are sent off to the Catholic bishops to give them time to study the subjects before coming to Rome to vote upon them.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL CAMPMEETING will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the new camp-ground, beautifully located, about one and a quarter miles from the R. R. Depot, on land of C. W. Chapin, Esq., known as "Chapin's Grove," commencing Monday, August 24th, and continue one week.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the new and commodious boarding house on the ground. Board 85 cents per day. Breakfast, or supper, 35 cents each. Dinner at 50 cents, excepting Sunday, Aug. 30th, when it will be 75 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad is reduced one third, which will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices, between Boston and Worcester at Grantville, Holliston, Natic, Westboro, Milford, and Southville; beyond Worcester, at the usual stations. On the New Haven and Hartford R. R., fare is reduced one third; tickets to be obtained at New Haven, Meriden, Berlin, Hartford, and Windsor Locks. On the Conn. R. R., fare is reduced one third from So. Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from Aug. 20th to Sept. 1st, must be called for at the ticket offices; and they must also be signed by the Secretary at the campmeeting. Remember this.

On the Mass. and Vt. R. Road, persons will purchase regular tickets at the offices for Greenfield, and then get their tickets on the Conn. R. R. for Springfield. All that come on this road from Brattleboro, Vernon, Fitchburg, Athol, etc., having purchased the usual ticket, will have a free return pass, on application to the Secretary.

On the Worcester and Nashua R. R., and Concord R. Road,—friends from Concord, Manchester, and Nashua, N. H., Groton Junction, and Clinton, will purchase regular tickets at the stations for Worcester, at which place they will purchase tickets for Springfield; and free return passes from Worcester will be furnished them by the Secretary on the ground.

On the Providence and Worcester R. R., campmeeting tickets at one third discount can be obtained at the depot in Providence, good from Aug. 20th to Sept. 1st. Call for campmeeting tickets.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have FREE RETURN PASSES by application to the Secretary, on the camp-ground.

Friends coming from New York can come and return for $4.50 by taking the boat at New Haven, and thence by cars to Springfield. The boat which leaves New York at 3.15 P. M., connects with the train at the steamboat wharf at New Haven. The other boat, which leaves New York at 11 o'clock P. M., reaches New Haven in time for the early morning train; but passengers will have to go across the city by horse cars to the depot of the Hartford and New Haven R. R. Tickets for the Rail Road to the campmeeting will be sold on the steamboats. Passengers buying through tickets, will be furnished with a return ticket, which will be good only when endorsed by the Secretary of the camp-ground.

Levi Collins has been engaged by the committee to convey passengers from the R. R. depot to the camp-ground for 10 cents each. Trunks 10 cents each; small trunk and valises, 5 cts. each. Please go in Collins' carriages.

It is so arranged that the friends who wish to go from Springfield to Alton Bay, at the close of the Springfield meeting, can take the cars at Worcester, and go to the Alton Bay campmeeting and return to Worcester for one fare.

Cars leave the Boston and Albany depot, Boston, at 5, 7, and 8½ A. M.; and at 2½, 4½, and 8½ P. M.

Notice.

Danielsonville to Springfield excursion tickets on the Norwich and Worcester R. R., from Danielsonville to Worcester and return, can be had at Danielsonville, Ct., at $1.50 each. After Saturday, Aug. 22d, inquire at Post Office, and until then of H. F. CARPENTER.

F. U. M. Association.

The F. U. M. Association will hold their first session of the fourth annual meeting at the Springfield camp-ground, Mass., Aug. 26th, at half past eight A. M., in the New York State Mission Tent. It is hoped that all interested, actively or sympathetically, will endeavor to be present. Come with praying hearts and open hands, that we may carry during the cold winter, which will soon be upon us, both life to the perishing, and bread to the hungry. For the Association,

E. S. JENNINGS, President.
A. E. SMITH, Vice President.
M. MCKINSTRY, Secretary.
E. HOBBS, Assist. Secretary.

Notice.

Brn. Munger and Ladd have a few small family tents in their possession to rent or sell; some six feet square, and some 8×8, three feet walls. Rent from two to three dollars. They expect more soon, some larger.

Maine Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting held at Pittsfield, Me., on Bro. John Drew's land, where it was held last year, commencing Monday, Sept. 7th, 1868. The Maine Mission Tent is expected to be at the meeting. A general invitation is extended to the ministers of the word to be present, with single eyes and wise hearts, that we may glorify God and win souls to Christ. Preachers coming from Alton Bay will please do what they can for us in bringing tents, etc. Saints and sinners are invited to come from every quarter, and praise and pray and find salvation. The camp-ground is two and a half miles south from Pittsfield station, on the bank of the Sabastacook river. Stages will run from the station to the ground. Brethren should make a special effort to bring tents and all camping necessities. There will be a boarding tent, and horse-keeping on the ground. For the brethren, F. A. BAKER.
JEREMIAH CARR.

Maine Mission Tent.

At the urgent request of the tent committee, Bro. I. C. Wellcome has decided to take charge of the tent early in September. Bro. Libby cannot well go longer, being ill, and needing rest. Those who want tent meetings, will write to Bro. Wellcome. And let all who can, aid the Mission Tent enterprise. Prayers, funds, and other tokens of interest, are needed.

For the Committee, R. R. YORK.

Basket Meeting.

The Lord willing, a basket meeting will be held on Tunk Hill, Coventry, R. I., one mile from Kent's Village, August 23d, commencing at nine o'clock, to hold all day. Will Brn. Devereaux, Collins, and others, be with us to help speak the truth? Come one, come all that can.

In behalf of the Brn., GEO. A. GOLE.

Notice.

There will be a campmeeting prayer-meeting at Star of Hope Mission, Friday evening, Aug. 21st. We want all who are in the twelve o'clock covenant of secret prayer, to remember that night of prayer. ANNA E. SMITH.

Notice.

The tent meeting at Hampton, N. H., will continue over next Sunday. Good interest.

D. M. LEAVITT.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL CAMPMEETING will be held at Alton Bay, N. H., commencing Sunday, August 30th, and hold through the week, and over the following Lord's day. Ample provisions will be made for board and horse keeping. Board at 80 cents per day. Breakfast and supper, 30 cents each; dinner 50 cents; horse-keeping at 75 cents per day, hay and grain. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Arrangements have been made with the Rail Road and Steam Boat companies, as follows:

Boston and Maine R. R. Trains leave Boston for the meeting at 7.30 A. M., 12 M., and 3 P. M. Half fare from Lawrence. Purchase regular tickets at Boston for Lawrence, and campmeeting tickets at South Lawrence and all intermediate stations for Alton Bay.

Portland, Saco, and Portsmouth R. R. Trains leave Portland at 8.40 A. M. and 2.30 P. M. Two thirds fare from Portland to Dover, and half fare from Dover to Alton Bay. Purchase campmeeting tickets at Portland and all intermediate stations.

Grand Trunk R. R. Purchase campmeeting tickets at the various stations for Portland and return, stating that you want them good for ten days. Fare about two thirds.

Portland and Kennebec R. R. Tickets from Skowhegan and all intermediate stations to Portland. Free return passes furnished on the campground.

Boston, Concord, and Montreal R. R. Trains leave Concord at 10.30 A. M. and 3.25 P. M. for the Wiers. Trains leave Littleton for the Wiers at 9 A. M. Each train connecting at the Wiers with boat direct to Alton Bay. An extra boat will be furnished on the Lake, which will give us much better accommodations than we have been able to secure in past years.

Concord and Lawrence R. R. Trains leave Concord at 7.30 A. M. and 3.30 P. M. for New Market Junction and Alton Bay. Trains leave Portsmouth at 8 A. M. for New Market Junction. A baggage car will be run from Portsmouth to Alton Bay without change on Monday, Aug. 31st; also from Concord Saturday, Aug. 29th. Half fare on the Concord Road.

Worcester and Nashua R. R. Trains leave Worcester at 6.30 and 11.15 A. M., via. Nashua and Concord for the Wiers. Purchase campmeeting tickets at Worcester and all intermediate stations. Half fare. A car will be furnished from Worcester (probably from Springfield) on Monday, and Tuesday, also, if sufficient number to fill it, expressly for campmeeting passengers, and will run to the Lake (Wiers) without change, thence by safe and desirable boat to the meeting, giving a beautiful Lake ride of twenty-five miles, which makes this route very pleasant and desirable.

J. G. SMITH, J. COUCH, D. CHURCHILL, C. HALEY, T. W. PIPER, C. S. EMERSON, C. GOODRICH, Committee.

Fare to Alton Bay Camp-Ground.

All that go on the Portland and Kennebec R. R. will purchase their tickets at the station they start from to Dover, and receive tickets on the ground to return home free. And all going on the Androscoggin R. R. will purchase tickets for Brunswick, and from Brunswick to Dover, and will receive tickets on the ground to return free. Tickets good from Aug. 29th to Sept. 8th, 1848.

It will also leave Alton for Melvin Village Monday, Sept. 7th, at 10 A. M. Fare 37 cents each way. T. W. PIPER.

Notice.

Some are inquiring about tents to rent at Alton Bay Campmeeting. All who wish to hire tents there, please write to R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass., and tents can be taken from there to Alton Bay. J. COUCH.

Prof. C. F. Hudson's Library.

We are informed that the choice and valuable library of the late Prof. C. F. Hudson, which contains much to interest the student of the Bible, and a number of rare and valuable books on the themes of life and immortality, is now ready for sale. And as many of his friends have desired to obtain some of the books because of their own intrinsic value, and also as mementoes of him, it has been thought best that the books be carried to the Springfield campmeeting, that there may be a public opportunity for all who desire to obtain them.

Notice.

The New York State Mission Tent will be erected on the National Camp-ground, Springfield, by Saturday, Aug. 22nd, where all who may desire can be accommodated with lodging, at least to the amount of five or six hundred. J. WENDELL.

Notice.

Providence permitting, there will be a two or three days meeting at the Advent Christian Chapel, in the town of Thorold, P. O. (Canada West), to commence on Thursday, Sept. 3d, 1868, at 7 P. M., and continue over Sunday, as the brethren may arrange. Elder C. W. Low and the subscriber, and perhaps others, are expected to be present to administer the word. Let there be a general rally to this meeting from Canada, and also New York.

For the Brn., C. F. SWEET.

P. S. Bro. Bank will be at Suspension Bridge, Thursday noon, to convey a load of passengers to the meeting. C. F. S.

A General Ministeral Conference in the Great West.

We desire the attention of the Advent Christian Ministers of the various Western States on a matter of no little importance. If we are not proclaiming cunningly devised fables in announcing the immediate coming of the Messiah to reign on earth, we need to engage more vigorously and harmoniously in the great proclamation.

That we may consult together, and devise means conducive to this end, we take the responsibility to appoint and call a General Conference of Ministers, to meet at DeKalb, Ill., in connection with the campmeeting to be held there, the first week in September.

As there is not time for the various conferences to select delegates (which should have been done, if this call had been made at an earlier date,) we invite all Advent Christian ministers in good standing in the various conferences to come. We invite you to come from Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Virginia, Michigan, Ohio, Tennessee, New York, and Ontario. Let every church help their minister to come. Provide him with the necessary means. It will do him good, and you too. Our action gives character to the body. Let us act for God and for our coming King, and act while we may.

J. V. HIMES.
WM. SHELDON.

Notice.

The fourth annual meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at De Kalb, Ill., in connection with the General Campmeeting for 1868. The first formal meeting of the Association will convene on Wednesday, Sept. 2d, at 10 A. M., at which time the usual reports will be presented. Members who wish to vote by proxy may do so by notifying the Secretary, stating the name of the person chosen as proxy. But no person can act as a proxy who is not a member of the Association.

WM. L. HIMES, Secretary.

Maine Central Quar. Conference.

The next session of this conference will be held at the Town House in Rome, commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 17th, and continue over the Lord's day. Brethren and sisters are invited to attend and unite in the worship of the Lord, and the work of saving souls. Let us meet in the spirit of our Master. WM. I. WRIGHT, Sec.

Notice.

The seventh annual gathering of the people of God in Darien, Genesee Co., N. Y., will commence Friday evening, Sept. 11th, and continue over the following Sabbath. It is also the quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of New York. Our tent will be here. Particulars hereafter. B. C. SIMONDS.

Quarterly Meeting.

A quarterly meeting will be held at Norwalk, Ohio, commencing Saturday, Sept. 6th, at 2 o'clock P. M., to continue over the Lord's day. The friends of the cause of truth in the vicinity are invited to attend. Bro. G. W. Stetson will please change his appointment from North Fairfield to this place.

In behalf of the church at Norwalk,
P. ALLING, Clerk.

Tent Meeting at Saratoga Springs.

The New York State Tent will be hoisted on Circular Street, a little south of the Empire Spring, on Tuesday, Sept. 3d, when the meeting will commence. Brethren and sisters around are invited. Come with teams if you can, so that you can go two or three miles to board and lodge. We hope to see a good work here. We hope to see brethren from Sandy Hill here, to sing and pray, and help forward the meeting. J. L. KNAPP.

General Union Campmeeting.

There will be a general union campmeeting held in the Sap Grove, belonging to Col. R. J. Sanborn, known in that vicinity as the Deerfield Camp-Ground, near the line between Candia and Deerfield, N. H., commencing Wednesday, Sept. 9th, to hold eight days. We hope brethren and sisters, who love Jesus and his appearing, and are desirous of laboring for Christ, will come to this meeting. We think this will be a good field for labor. Those coming by R. R. will stop at Candia Depot, N. H. Teams for passengers and baggage will connect with the train. It is expected the fare on the R. R. will be reduced to half price. Particulars hereafter. Let those who can, bring tents. For those who cannot, tents will be furnished.

An invitation is extended to the various ministers and churches in the vicinity to come and unite with us, and labor for the salvation of the perishing. The campmeeting committee consists of Enoch Morril, John M. Quimby, James N. Bachelder, Asa P. Moulton, and Albert Quimby. Board will be furnished on the ground at reasonable prices. Preaching brethren will be cared for. H. L. Hastings, John Couch, S. W. Thurber, J. G. Smith, J. G. Hook, and others, are expected to be present and preach the word.

ENOCH MORRILL, for the Committee.

Notice.

The brethren who wish to correspond with the church at Knowlesville, Orleans Co., N. Y., will address Philip Thurtle as Secretary, instead of J. S. Maynard, as heretofore. J. S. MAYNARD.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

PERFECT US IN LOVE.

Teach us thy will, O God, we pray,
O lead us in the heavenly way;
The Holy Spirit now impart,
To comfort each believing heart.

Help us the truth to understand,
To practice what thou dost command;
From sin and bondage set us free,
O grant us perfect liberty.

Help us the truth to speak in love,
To live on earth this world above;
O let thy glories round us shine,
And perfect us in love divine.

Thus day by day help us to walk,
And of thy power and glory talk;
Till Jesus comes may we be free,
Then dwell with him eternally.

THE STATE AND HOPE OF MAN IN DEATH.

"If a man die, shall he live again."—JOB 14: 14.

BY D. S. BATCHELOR.

This question was proposed by Job, the perfect man of Uz, at a time when he was so overwhelmed with affliction that life seemed a burden. "My soul," he exclaims, "is weary of my life." 10: 1.

Wearied with this life, his thoughts were directed to a contemplation of man's future state. He desired to attain a clear idea of the state and hope of man in death. Job's afflictions, in God's providence, became the occasion of drawing out, by the pen of inspiration, some plain truths concerning this important and interesting subject.

In pursuing this subject let us first consider the state of man in death, as taught in our text and its context: and secondly show that the resurrection alone is the hope of those who are dead.

I. CONSIDER THE STATE OF MAN IN DEATH.

There are two prominent views entertained by professing christians, concerning this matter. The one is that death is not a reality, but only a change from one mode of life to another, and therefore that the dead are conscious, intensely so. The other is that death is a reality, an utter end of conscious existence, so long as it continues.

The latter we suppose to be the truth, and the truth of our text and its context; which position we attempt to sustain by presenting the following considerations:

1. The question proposed is not, "If a man die, does he still live?" but "If a man die, shall he live again?"

Now, had Job believed death to be a state of consciousness, would he not have been likely to have mentioned it here? This is now usually held up by believers in it, with greater prominence even than the resurrection. If, on a funeral occasion, comfort is presented to the mourners, death is commonly mentioned before the resurrection; and too often the latter is overlooked.

From the fact, then, that Job inquires, not concerning a state of consciousness in death, but rather whether the dead should live again, we conclude that he believed death to be a reality, a cessation of conscious life.

2. The illustrations used in the preceding context strongly sustain this view.

"For there is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease, though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die in the ground; yet through the scent of water it will bud, and bring forth boughs like a plant." The tree may be cut down, and be burned in the fire, yet, in the tender branches which grow up from its roots it may be continued. But man's destruction in death is more complete than this. "But man dieth, and wasteth away" (see Pick's Concordance), "Yea, man wasteth away, and where is he?" Is there hope that, in some way, his life will be still continued? Nay; more completely than the tree that is cut down, he perishes.

"As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up, so man lieth down, and riseth not till the heavens be no more; they shall not awake, nor be raised not of their sleep." Imagine, if possible, the water evaporated, till the bed of the ocean is left dry; the sea no more exists. True, the waters that once rolled unceasingly in its rocky bed exist in the form of vapor, but the ocean is no more. Is the figure strong? Yet it is drawn by the pen of inspiration as a fit emblem of man in death. The elements of which the man was composed are not annihilated, but man, as man, exists no longer. "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." The component parts, which, in their composite state, formed the man, by dissolution, return to the state in which they existed before they were combined to form a man. Neither dust nor spirit was a conscious being before united, nor are they, either of them, after being separated at death. The living power, the vitality or breath of life being withdrawn, man returns to dust.

3. Death is here termed a sleep: "Till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep."

There is a very strange construction sometimes put upon this and similar passages, as that the sleep referred to the body, and not to the "immortal soul," which man is supposed to possess. The absurdity of this idea is manifest, when we consider for a moment, that sleep does not so much affect the body as the mind. During natural sleep the blood circulates, the digestive process goes on, and the lungs respire, but the mental action is suspended, and sound sleep is a state of unconsciousness. By one in a deep sleep, time and passing events are not heeded. In a troubled sleep, approaching wakefulness, men dream, and such sleep does not refresh the wearied system. To admit, then, that death is properly termed a sleep (which all must admit who regard the Bible as God's word,) and yet affirm that the dead are intensely conscious is a plain contradiction. If the dead sleep, they are not conscious, or if the dead are conscious they do not sleep. God says they sleep, therefore whoever affirms that they are conscious contradicts God. Let them do this who dare!

Viewing death as a state of unconscious repose from the sorrows of life, the weary sufferer, worn out by the afflictions laid upon him, desired to be hidden "in the grave, to be kept secret till God's wrath was past," when affliction shall be no more the portion of the people of God.

Job says not one word, he gives not an intimation of an expectation of going to enjoy the bliss of heaven when he died; his entire thought is fixed on that sheol, "where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest. There the prisoners rest together, they hear not the voice of the oppressor. The small and the great are there, and the servant is free from his master."

It may be regarded as not a very inviting prospect to think of lying down in the grave, to make one's bed in darkness, "to say to corruption, Thou art my father, to the worm, Thou art my mother and sister." And truly, death is not lovely, nor is it in the nature of man to love death, in itself considered. But, if we consider the circumstances of Job, at the time that he thus longed for repose in the dust, we shall not be surprised at his choice; nor will it seem strange that he chose "strangling rather than life." His children, his servants, and his cattle had been destroyed; "from the sole of his foot unto his crown," he was covered with sore boils; his wife had turned against him, advising him to "curse God" and die, and his three friends had become his tormentors. Is it then a strange affair that a man, in such a case, having no hope of obtaining relief, should be willing to sleep in the grave, that he might "be at rest?"

Yet, with all his sorrows, Job was not willing to die unless he might have a hope beyond the grave. To lie eternally unconscious, he could not endure. He was willing to sleep, but not an eternal sleep.

Is there, then, hope for man in death? Shall the deep sleep be ever broken? If a man die, shall he live again? There is hope; death is not an eternal sleep; the dead shall live again.

II. THE RESURRECTION IS MAN'S HOPE IN DEATH.

1. Death being a reality, a state of unconsciousness, a sleep, there can be no hope for those who are dead, but that of a resurrection from death. The question, then, is not, "If a man die, does he still live?" but "If a man die, shall he live again?" And as if the blessed assurance was that instant impressed upon his mind, Job responds, "All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change comes. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee, thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands."

The resurrection of that which has lost its identity, may seem to man to be impossible, but with God all things are possible. Should the waters fail from the sea, and the flood become dry, yet God could again condense the vapor, and cause old ocean once more to roar in its pride. So, if man is decomposed in death, God, who made Adam from dust at first, can cause the several parts to unite again and become a living person, conscious of its own identity with that person that died and mouldered back to dust. If any doubt, we can only reply, "Ye therefore do greatly err, not knowing the Scriptures nor the power of God."

In chapter 19, Job more fully declares his hope. As if in vision, he saw eternal realities pass before him, he exclaims: "Oh that they were printed in a book! That they were graven with an iron pen, and lead in the rock forever! For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth, and though after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold and not another, though my reins be consumed within me."

2. The time of the resurrection is fixed. Men may not know, but God, in the counsels of his own will, has appointed the time when the long night of death shall end in eternal day; when the saints shall wake from their long sleep to perfect and blessed consciousness. "All the days of my appointed time," said Job, "will I wait, till my change come."

Does it seem gloomy to think of so long time elapsing, and the saints still asleep, not having received the promise? Remember that they are not conscious of their unconsciousness. To them the passing of time is nothing, and when they awake, the moments of death and resurrection will be to them as two successive moments; of the intermediate time they have no remembrance.

To the living it seems more satisfactory to know that their pious friends are safely lodged in the tomb till the morn of resurrection, than to entertain a necessarily vague and undefined idea of their dead friends in some strange mode of existence, with ghostly forms in some far-off region of the universe, or, perhaps, wandering around them, beholding the sin and misery existing in this world among those still living in the flesh. And most intolerable is the thought, of those who have died impenitent, suffering unremitting and undescribable woe, and living in shivering anticipation of a worse fate, to be endured after the judgment day!

How superstition vanishes, like the early dew before the rising sun, when once this truth is recognized, that the dead sleep, until the time appointed by God, when they will arise again!

3. The resurrection is to occur at the advent of the Lord. "Thou shalt call and I will answer thee." "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first." Thus perfectly does the teaching of Job, who lived contemporary with Moses, or nearly so, harmonize with that of the enlightened apostle of the Gentiles, after Christ had brought life and immortality actually to light through the gospel.

The coming of our Lord, then, to raise the dead, is the only hope for man beyond this life. To that time Job looked; to that great event Christ and his apostles directed the eye of the church. Till he comes, death will reign over the sleeping saints, and mortality will be the condition of God's waiting ones; till the time appointed comes, when the long sleep of the pious dead shall be broken, this mortal put on immortality, and death be swallowed up in victory.

What wonder, then, that the church of Christ, in every age, has longed for the advent of her Lord!

How strange that any who profess his name should fail to long for his appearing!

How wrong is any theory which turns the mind away from that blessed hope!

Oh, Savior, quickly come. Amen.

SELF-CONTROL.—It is a great advantage to keep quiet, gracefully and naturally. Self-control is the best evidence of a cultivated intellect and a clear conscience. It is a great pleasure to meet those who wisely listen and observe—who review what is said without prejudice, and with or without advice commit no errors. Nothing is so difficult to do—nothing so rarely done.

THE DORCAS MISSION.

This article presents the final report of our receipts and expenditures, from July 1st to the 23d. Receipts. By express, a barrel of clothing from friends in Portsmouth, express paid, and 80 cts. in money. By mail, from R. B. Dockum, $1.00; Sr. Dockum, for personal use, $5.00; E. T. Haskell, $2.00; G. H. B., 50 cts.; "a friend" in Worcester, $1.00; from Philadelphians, for the mission, $7.00; for personal use, $6.66.

Sales at the Home. Sewing machine, $40.00; three bedsteads, $8.00; rag carpet, $8.00; curtains, $6 00; soup plates and platter, $2.50; tubs, $3 80; husk mattress and pillows, sheets and pillow cases, $20.30; white bedspreads, etc., $15.00; ladder steps, $3.50; sundries (which include knives and forks, tin cups and plates, cups and saucers, plates, pots, kettles, baking pans, etc., etc.), $31.60.

Expenditures. Paid our last matron, Sr. Robertson, $20.00; Sr. Helginson, $5.00; Sr. Valle, $4.50; coal, 72 cts.; hall rent for June, $6.00; gas bill for quarter ending June 24th, $7.69; to July 18th, $1.06; express bills, $5.75; traveling expenses, $3.00; repairs, $26.63; pay of the cook in full, $25.35; stationery, stamps, etc., $1.00; donations to the poor, $5.00; food (many meals given to the poor around us), $43.90; sundries, $4.38. Total amount of receipts, $162.66. Expenditures, $159.98. Included in the receipts are $6.75, which I got from the sale of a few of my books.

Donations of the mission. Gave Sr. Bussier a husk mattress and pillows, an alarm clock, a washstand, and several other articles. Gave Sr. Helginson a husk mattress and pillows, a pair of flat-irons, etc. Gave Sr. Reeves a pair of sheets, a spread, a pair of flat-irons, etc. Gave Sr. Valle a white spread, a quilt, a pair of sheets, etc., etc.

For my own use I have kept the quilt made by Sr. Matthewson's S. School class, the album quilt and comfortable made for me by the Portsmouth church, a quilt made for me by Letitia, one of our mission girls, a blanket, and a pillow and a pair of pillow cases made for me by Sr. R. To worthy colored families were given twenty-two quilts and comfortables, knives and forks, iron, tin, and wooden spoons, tin cups and plates, cups and saucers, soup and dinner plates, pitchers, bowls, earthern pots, baking and frying pans, meat dishes, pots, kettles, coal-hods, pokers, kindling wood, coal, empty barrels, various kinds of medicines, and a score of other things.

The Home Children. All the orphans under our care have been supplied with excellent homes. Little Minnie, whom I agreed to care for so long as I remained in Philadelphia, is now living with her uncle in Allentown Pa. The fatherless children whom we cared for during the hard winter and spring, have returned to their own homes, where, now when work is easily obtained by their parents, they can be clothed and fed.

Our mission work in P. is closed. I have spent three years and a half in that field amongst the most wretched, criminal, and poverty-stricken people. From the beginning to the last hour of the work God has blessed me abundantly. He has always kept us free from debt, so that we had no back bills to pay. And in conclusion, I thank the Lord that he has so greatly blessed me. He has kept me from "the pestilence that walketh in darkness, and the destruction that wasteth at noonday," as I have day after day, and year after year labored in filthy courts, alleys, and streets, in the pestilential cellars, garrets, tenement rooms, sheds, shanties, etc., that hold the inhabitants thereof. He has granted me the means to hire halls and tenement houses; to distribute upwards of one hundred and fifty barrels of clothing, hats, caps, shoes, stockings, etc., etc., etc; to help hundreds of the sick and needy; to give scores of the right kind of surprise parties to the worthy and needy poor; to gather hundreds of children into the S. School, to tell them of the speedy coming of the Great Emancipator; to gather hundreds in all of children, men and women into day and evening schools, to instruct and elevate them; to feed and clothe, and lodge over one hundred fatherless, motherless, and orphan children, in the little Wanderer's Home; to give ten gospel feasts to hundreds (in all) of poor, maimed, halt, and blind, men, women and children; to lead many, both old and young, to Jesus Christ; to preach the coming of Christ in cellars, in a policy office, in houses of ill fame, in rum shops, in private houses, in halls, and in churches, and on the streets: and to keep me from a thousand snares, temptations, and perils.

We return our hearty thanks to everybody who has in any way helped us in our work. We may not always have done as our friends desired, though we have heard no complaints, but we have done the best we could. Now may heaven's choicest blessings rest upon all our people unto the end. At present, I am traveling, visiting a few places, seeking to regain my health and strength. The Lord is blessing. About the middle of September, I expect to make New York city my home, and from there go out into various parts of New York and other States to preach the Word; and I also expect to lend a helping hand at the Star-of-Hope-Mission. Pray for me. Your aff. brother in Christ. F. H. BURBANK.

For the World's Crisis.

VOTING FOR WAR.

It is no less truly done, whether directly or indirectly. The great mass do it indirectly, by voting for such rulers as possess the war principle, and will order a draft when their views of expediency dictate. Soldiers are raised for the express purpose of butchering their real or supposed enemies. Voting for men of war principles is voting for war, as surely as principle inclines to practice. Whatever political party prevails, it will rely upon military force, because this is the element of all war government. And all its deadly agencies and weapons of mortal combat, sanctioned by its constitution, are passed over into the hands of the newly elected ruler. But the judicious, consistent christian, the true follower of the "Prince of peace," should not take any part whatever in political strife, because the present corrupt state of the world is incompatible with the teachings of Christ, or sound morality. He will regard the law of his God above all human laws or governments. These will be held in subordination. He can neither kill his fellow men himself, nor vote for one who will, nor send another to do it for him.

We can not join hands with the wicked in their crimes and be guiltless. And surely, murdering our fellow men is a crime of the deepest dye. It matters not whether a Cain, a Herod, or a polluted government, tells us to do so; or whether we do it ourselves alone; if the cruel, horrid, wicked deed be done, it is a violation of God's law. How can we be consistent to vote another into a position, giving him the authority to commit crimes we think it wrong to commit ourselves? Christ never set the example of human butchery, nor left the precept of voting, or taking part in political strife; but condemned the principle upon which every war government is founded; teaching his followers to do as he had done; to follow in his steps; to "resist not evil"; to love their enemies; and "recompense to no man evil for evil"; to "follow peace with all men." If we do this, we can never follow war with any party whatever, or vote to sustain a war government, nor fellowship a war church. The only way we have any scriptural authority, or example of Christ, in supporting government, is the paying of taxes, and other things which do not conflict with his law. We are to follow his example, "who when he was reviled, reviled not again." If we go beyond his instructions, and vote in political affairs, willingly using our influence to uphold laws contrary to his gospel, we prove that we are not of Christ, whatever our profession. We know of no greater sin than killing our fellow beings. Voting for a war government is the main element from which wars become legalized and perpetuated by standing armies. The very element of the whole system rests upon the supposed efficiency of deadly weapons; therefore incompatible with christianity; for this rests upon the power and wisdom of God to protect.

The idea of voting for a war government, and the corresponding practice of destroying human life and property, have their origin with the fountain of all evil, very foreign indeed from "the wisdom that is from above," and like Christ. For professed christians to engage in deliberate human butchery is truly horrible; a work alone befitting the demons; yet upon this point a most awful stupidity prevails with the great host of the nominal church of almost every known sect. It is a matter of astonishment how they can profess anything better than the world, when they are so truly conformed to its popular vices and crimes, and love to follow them so well. We urge it as important, that all the friends of Jesus should come out from among them, and unite solely on the doctrine of Christ.

CREEDS.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been wondering what was the use of creeds. I do not find any such thing as "creeds," or "articles of faith," separate from the Scriptures, in the time of the apostles; why is it that men cannot take the plain word of God as the "man of their counsel" now, as well as in olden times? I am sure it is just as true now as eighteen hundred years ago. Can it be men cannot trust the word of God, and think to form some better way? I think the best creed that ever was formed was formed a little more than eighteen hundred years ago, in the apostles days, when our Savior was on earth. I would rather have that creed than all the creeds men can devise, for I think that is the only one that will stand "in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by his Son Jesus Christ;" and I desire to have something that will stand in that day, and something to comfort me on the road, as I journey along through this vale of tears. O I would like to see all who profess to be the followers of our Savior take the Bible as their guide, and throw away their creeds. I think they would do better than to follow that which man has fixed up. God has given us rules by which to regulate our conduct, and what do we want of anything more? Are not God's rules better than any man can devise? I think they are. Then let us follow them, for Christ says "if ye love me keep my commandments," not keep the commandments of men; and by this shall we know if we love him, if we keep his commandments.

I should like to know what your opinion is on the subject. Is it right or wrong to have creeds other than the Bible? Please give your opinion on the question. Hoping we may meet in the coming kingdom, I am your Bro. searching after truth. H. J. BENEDICT.

NEED OF CAUTION.

"Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall."—1 COR. 10: 12.

Dear Brethren and Sisters of the Crisis, the preceding verses of this chapter were "written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come," and we shall do well that we take heed thereunto, for surely we are living near the end of the gospel dispensation, if we can understand our Bibles. Please turn and read from the first to the 12th verses, and may the Lord help us even if we think we stand, to take heed lest we fall. My mind has recently been called to this subject, while looking over our ranks, and seeing the slain witnesses by the wayside, just upon the borders of the promised inheritance. I am ready to cry out from my inmost soul, How are the mighty fallen. While I look, I wonder; and then I inquire why is it so? and what is the cause? God's people are poor, weak mortals at the best; always have been, and still are. We have no strength to stand, only as we stand in God. He alone is able to keep us, and present us faultless before the throne. When we think we are something, then we are nothing. When we think we have strength to stand without him, we should take heed lest we fall. "When I am weak, then am I strong," said the experienced apostle. Thus some of us have truly learned.

When we look at the fallen ones, we can see they are the talented ones. Have they been exalted in their own estimation, or by the people, that they have been left to themselves, and thus have fallen? Will others follow in the same track?

I once had a view of my pilgrimage to Mt. Zion. At the time, I seemed to view myself upon the top of the hill, looking over on to the promised land; and as I gazed with delight, I looked down the path from whence I had traveled, and I saw some that were part way up the hill, others still lower down, while at the bottom of the hill I saw some struggling for life, trying to climb the rugged hill. As I looked, I inquired, How can I help those weary travelers struggling to climb the hill Difficulty, weeping and sighing, groaning and crying, upward looking as if asking for help? I am too high above to help them. Go down where they are, and lift up the struggling, fainting ones. I found myself at the bottom of the hill by their side, weeping over them, telling them to look upward to Jesus, casting all their burdens upon him, for he careth for them. This imparted fresh courage to the fainting ones, and Jesus took them by the hand and led them onward to the mount of rejoicing for a season. In this way we can help each other on the pilgrim journey; but if we were permitted to stand in an elevated position, above the weaker ones, how could we comfort and support them? How long can we tarry there ere we should get exalted in our own estimation, or some other, and find to our sorrow we are fallen? "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted"; but he that "exalteth himself shall be abased."

For eight years in the past, I have been a pilgrim and stranger more than ever before. I have traveled among my brethren and sisters from place to place, and still am sounding the alarm as God has called me. I have ever felt my own weakness and insufficiency. I expect, if ever I am exalted, it will be by my Savior when he calls his people to sit with him in his throne; and that will be because we trust in him. And now may the Lord help us that think we stand, to take heed lest we fall; for he is coming soon to redeem his waiting ones. A. MUSSEY TRIPP.

Newark, N. J.

NOT ROOM ENOUGH.

"Mr. Charles Voysey, a learned Englishman, in a recent theological work, says, if the bodies of all men were to be raised like Christ's, and restored as they were before corruption, there would not only be no standing room on the earth for them, but they would form a closely packed mass thousands of times larger than the earth itself.'"

I cut the above paragraph from a recent journal, and have noticed that every few months, or years, a similar article, more or less preposterous, goes the rounds of the papers; and have seen them repeatedly answered and their fallacy exposed, but still they appear. Mr. Voysey may be a very learned man, and he may have written the above article, but its assertions are no proof of his learning, certainly, and as certainly it proves his thoughtlessness. There is nothing in which we exaggerate more than in estimates and assertions where numbers and figures are concerned. How easy it would be to upset the paragraph alluded to above by saying, "no body can contain more than its own bulk." And yet all the dead are buried in the earth, and still there is room for more; and if raised from the dead our bodies would be no larger than before, or occupy any larger space; how then can it be said "they would form a closely packed mass thousands of times larger than the earth itself?" Let us look for a moment at the world we live upon. The latest calculations make it 25,020 miles in circumference; call it 25,000 for convenience sake; multiply this by 8000, the mean diameter, and we have 200,000,000 (two hun- millions) square miles; multiply by 1333 and we have 266,600,000,000 (266 billion 600 million) cubic miles, and yet according to Mr. Voysey, all the dead, if raised, would form a closely packed mass thousands of times larger than this stupendous bulk.

Let us look at this subject in another light. Taking the commonly received chronology, it is about 5868 years since the birth of Adam, and the earth is probably as populous to-day as it ever was, and contains about 1,000,000,000 (one thousand million) people, all of whom are supposed to die every thirty-three years, or three generations of men are buried every century. We will call it six thousand years for convenience again since the birth of Adam. Now assuming three generations to the century, the present rate, but greatly more than the average, if we take into account the long lines of the antediluvians, and we have one hundred and eighty generations who have lived and died; and allowing each generation to have been as populous as the present, which is again being more than liberal, and we find but 180,000,000,000 (one hundred and eighty thousand million) as all that have been born since the first man Adam walked the earth, and these, so far from making a mass thousands of times larger than the earth, could be made to stand upon the soil of the little State of Massachusetts. This State contains about 7500 square miles, which reduced to acres gives us 4,860,000; reduced to square feet we have 209,088,000,000; dividing this last by 180,000,000, the whole number born into the world, and we have about $1\frac{1}{8}$ feet to each, an abundance of room, if we take into account the fact, that the vast majority, fully two-thirds, died in childhood, and who of course would require much less standing room than adults.

The mistake made in computing the human race lies in the fact that we are apt to forget that the deaths keep pace almost literally with the births; for instance, it is calculated that one dies every second of time. This amounts to 60 a minute, 3600 an hour, 86,400 a day, and for 365 days, or a year, 31,536,000; with the 6000 years of time already conceded, we have 189,216,000,000, dropping the odd 9,216,000,000, which we may readily do, considering, as we have before, the great age of the antediluvians, and we have the number already found for births. I might greatly enlarge upon this interesting subject, but the article is already sufficiently extended, at least for the present, my main object being to show that while speculations of the enormous multitude of the human race may be interesting, facts are very apt to demolish them.—Boston Journal.

MORE ABOUT THE "WICKEDEST MAN IN NEW YORK."—"Burleigh," of the Boston Journal, confirms the account given by Oliver Dyer, in the last number of Packard's Monthly, of "the wickedest man in New York," which was published a few days since, "Burleigh" writes:

"I visited the establishment the other day with some friends of John Allen, the most noted keeper of a dance house that there is in New York. He prides himself on keeping the model dance house of the city. He is one of the most intelligent and notorious of his class. His building stands like a palace amid the rookeries of lower New York. His parents were religious, and he was educated for the ministry. For a time he was a student in the Union Theological Seminary in New York. His brother is a minister and his nephew he is educating himself for the ministry. He began his course in New York poor, and is now said to be worth $100,000. His place is crowded every night. His bar, which runs the entire length of the building, an immense concern, is insufficient to supply the demands of the thirsty crowd who patronize this establishment. No charge is made for admission, but every one who enters is expected to drink and treat some female of the establishment. If parties don't dance they are ordered to clear out. Between each dance all the parties on the floor are expected to go up and drink at the expense of the men. The women are of the lowest order, nearly all of them foreigners. They wear flashy costumes, scarlet and other gray colors, short dresses, red-topped boots, with bells affixed to the ankles. They are kept hard at dancing from eight o'clock till twelve, and when they are all jaded and fatigued, or lag, they are kept to their work by shouts, imprecations and torrents of invectives, curses, and often blows, from their task master. In the centre of the group Allen stands—a tall, slim, wiry fellow of about fifty, sharp, keen—the master spirit that controls the establishment, now shouting to his girls, collaring an intruder and throwing him into the street, or at the top of his voice reading a passage from the Bible which always lies by his side. Tracts are lying around, and leading religious newspapers can be seen and read if any of the company have a taste that way. He is very proud to have in his establishment a visitor who is a minister or a christian. He will argue with him by the hour, intermingling his obscene and peculiar phraseology by which his establishment is kept up. He is perfectly willing that any man should pray in his establishment, sing revival or Sunday School hymns, or make an exhortation. If you can reform or convert any in his establishment, you are welcome to do so. He contributes largely to benevolent causes, both religious and humane. He acknowledges that he went into his business to make money, and that he has got what he started for. Boys, men, boatmen captains from the rivers—countrymen—old women of sixty and girls not twelve, crowd his place, together with not a few who go to see the sights and partake of the rude fun of the place."

WRITING COMPOSITIONS.

Nearly all children have a great dislike for writing compositions. They had rather be whipped soundly and sent to bed without their supper, or stand on the floor two hours holding a nail down, or not go out doors to play for a week, rather than to "write a composition to be read in school." They will talk for hours about their plays, and their schoolmates, and their studies; and if they are away from home on a visit, they will write to mother about what good times they are having, about the ride they had on old Charlie's back, and the bird's nest they found on a bush in the garden, and how cousin Nellie's cat will jump through a hoop, and has got three cunning little kittens, and how Rover will roll over and "speak" when they tell him to; but when the time comes for them to write a composition, they sit down with a scowl on the face, and a hateful, rebellious, discouraged feeling in the heart; and after biting their pen-holder, and marking on the desk, and now and then writing a few words in two or three hours, they bring forth a sheet of paper with about fifteen lines written on one page, which sounds no more like their merry talk than drumming on a tin pan sounds like a bell.

They have an idea that a composition must be something like a sermon or a book, only not so long. Now this is a mistake. A composition is, or should be, simply written talk. Children do not talk like a book or a sermon, and cannot write like one; and if, when composition day comes, they would sit down and write just what they would say to a friend, tell about the visit they had with cousin Mary, or what they saw while coming to school, or how they learned to play croquet, they would write more interesting compositions, and enjoy writing them too.

I once read of a little boy who, when the teacher told the scholars that they must each write a composition, felt so badly about it that he cried until he was sick. The teacher talked pleasantly and kindly to him, but told him he must write something.

"O I can't," cried the poor fellow.

"But you can think," can you not?" asked the teacher.

"Yes, I can think," said the boy.

"And you can write. Now you go out doors, and the first thing you see that interests you, write down what it is, where it came from, what it is good for, and what will become of it. That will make a composition."

"O I can do that," the boy said, laughing.

So he went out and sat down on the grass behind the barn, and in a few minutes he carried the paper to the teacher, with this written on it:

"Mr. Finny had a turnip,
And it grew behind the barn;
And it grew, and it grew,
And it ne'er did any harm.
And it grew, and it grew,
Till it could grow no taller;
Then Mr. Finney pulled it up,
And put it in the cellar.
And it lay, and it lay,
Till it began to rot;
Then his daughter Susie washed it,
And put it in the pot.
And it boiled, and it boiled,
As long as it was able,
Then his daughter Lizzie took it up
And put it on the table.
Mr. Finny and his wife,
They both sat down to sup;
And they ate, and they ate,
Till they ate the turnip up.

Afterwards this boy wrote a great many pieces, and became, before he died, one of the best and greatest writers in the world.

AUNT SARAH.

TIME ENOUGH.

"Fred, you must clean your boots before you go to school," said Mrs. Lawrence to her son.

"I know it, mother; but it's time enough," replied Fred, who sat reading a story-book.

Presently the lady spoke again. "Fred, have you looked over your grammar-lesson this morning? It is too difficult to learn in a hurry."

"Well, I almost learnt it last night: it's time enough: I want to finish this chapter," answered Fred.

"Oh, my son!" said Mrs. Lawrence, "I wish you would overcome that habit of putting off necessary duties."

Fred closed the story-book reluctantly, and took his grammar, wishing that his mother would not "bother him so; he knew he had time enough."

Presently Mrs. Lawrence left the room, feeling very much troubled about Fred's bad habit, and wishing that he could be induced to break it off before he became a man. Knowing that God only could give him the strength and disposition to do so, she went to her own room, and, kneeling down, prayed to this effect.

That day, a gentleman visited the school; and, after listening with apparent pleasure to various exercises by the scholars, the principal requested him to talk to the boys a little while. He did so, and interested them very much by relating some anecdotes of his own school-life. One of these incidents was the means, by God's blessing, of curing Fred's habit. It seemed to Fred that the gentleman must have known what his bad habit was, or he could not have said anything so suited to his case. The gentleman said, that one day he was stopped in the street by a very shabby-looking man, who, after calling him by name, and asking if he did not remember Henry Brown, begged him to lend him some money.

"I remember Henry Brown very well," replied the gentleman. "Can it be possible you are he, wishing to borrow five dollars?"

"Yes, I am," answered the man in a despairing, sorrowful tone.

"What has brought you to this condition? Your prospects on leaving school were as bright as mine."

"Time enough has brought me here," replied he. "I was always putting off necessary business by saying that. Now I am old, the habit is fixed, and I cannot break myself of it. If you do not lend me five dollars, I shall have to go to the poor-house, or starve."

"Boys," continued the gentleman, time enough ruined that man's life. Take care that it does not ruin yours."

SIN FOUND OUT.

HALLOA! Bill Hartwell is a famous batter. He had just given the ball a tremendous blow, and was running full speed, when he stubbed his toe and fell. The boys gathered round him; and I wish you could have seen their looks of surprise and indignation. He got no pity from any quarter; only just such words as must have filled him with shame and confusion.

Why? There is no harm in stubbing one's toe, is there? No, no. But when Bill fell, out fell a watch from his bosom or pocket, or wherever he had hid it. And was it not his watch? No. George Arnold, one of the older scholars, had, a little while before, lost his watch; and it had not gone without an extra pair of hands. Who took it? was the question. Bill Hartwell made more fuss about finding the thief than anybody else, and at last fastened suspicion so strongly on one of the little boys, Freddie Howe, that everybody called him the thief. Poor Freddie Howe had a tough time of it. It was in vain he declared his innocence. The story, somehow or other, got going, and could not be stopped—for a lie, at first, runs faster than truth; and the consequence was, Freddie had a great many bad things said to him, which hurt his feelings so he did not dare show his face on the play-ground; and yet Bill Hartwell, who set the story going, was a proud, boastful, selfish, cruel boy, whom nobody liked or believed in.

The old saying is, "Murder will out;" which means that if a person is guilty, the smallest thing may bring his guilt to light. There are swift witnesses all along his path, ready, when least expected, to testify against him, which was now the case. Bill just stubbed his toe and fell as boys do. Out jumped George Arnold's watch, and there it lay, right side up, on the ground, pointing him to every boy who saw it as the real thief, and the meanest thief that could be; for he not only robbed George Arnold of his watch, but he tried to rob poor Freddie Howe of what is worth infinitely more than any watch that was ever made—his good name.

Freddie was vindicated before the whole school, and Bill Hartwell disgraced, as he deserved to be.

It is very hard to hide our sins. Deceiving is a dangerous and dark road to travel. Satan will be sure to try to lead you into it. But if you go, there is certain disgrace at the end of it.—Ex.

THE SUNDAY STONE.

In one of the English coal-mines there is a constant formation of limestone, caused by the trickling of water through the rocks. This water contains a great many particles of lime, which are deposited in the mine; and as the water passes off, these become hard, and form the limestone. This stone would always be white, like marble, were it not that men are working in the mine: and, as the black dust rises from the coal, it mixes with the soft lime; and in that way a black stone is formed.

Now, in the night, when there is no coal-dust rising, the stone is white; then again, the next day, when the miners are at work, another black layer is formed; and so on alternately, black and white, through the week, until Sunday comes. Then, if the miners keep holy the Sabbath, a much larger layer of white stone will be formed than before. There will be the white stone of Saturday night, and the whole of Sunday; so that, every seventh day, the white layer will be about three times as thick as any of the others. But, if they work on the Sabbath, they see it marked against them in the stone. Hence the miners call it "the Sunday stone."

Perhaps many who now break the Sabbath would try to spend it better if there were a "Sunday stone" where they could see their unkept Sabbaths with their black marks.

But God needs no such record on earth to know how all our Sabbaths are spent. His record is kept above. All our Sabbath deeds are written there, and we shall see them at the last.

Be very careful to keep your Sabbath pure and white, and not allow the dust of worldliness and sin to tarnish the purity of the blessed day.

"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

WATCH.

"Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching."

'Tis the last watch we're keeping,
O, Christian, awake!
Slumber not, lest the morning
Thy dreams should o'ertake.
O watch for the day-star, and hail its first beam;
E'en now yon horizon grows bright with its gleam.

'Tis the last storm that gathers,
All wildly and dark,
O'er the rough billows tossing
Our frail, trembling bark.
The last sighs and tears are now heaving the breast,
We're nearing the haven—the mansions of rest.

Our last tears we're weeping—
Grief's fount will soon dry;
God's own hand will wipe out
All tears from each eye.
Temptations and trials will soon all be past,
O faint not, worn pilgrim, thou'rt bearing thy last.

Our last prayers are rising
To heaven's high throne,
For mercy imploring,
Ere mercy is gone.
Soon we'll change these sad pleadings for rapturous song,
And on Mount Zion shout with the angelic throng.

'Tis the last watch we're keeping,
O, let us awake!
Nor slumber, lest morning
Our dreams should o'ertake;
But watch for the day-star, and hail its first beam,
For now yon horizon grows bright with its gleam.

IS DEATH A PUNISHMENT?

"And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal."—Matt. 25: 46.

There may be various deaths mentioned in the Scriptures; but let us take death, as we find it in the Bible in relation to the end of man, and see if we can come to any conclusion as to whether it is a punishment sufficient to answer the demands of the words of Jesus that we have just quoted.

The whole human family are subject to death, which is designated as the first, or Adamic death; and then to those whose names are not written in the book of life, it is said they "were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death." But on the nature of these deaths there is a great controversy. Of the first death poets have sung,—

"Death is the gate to endless joy";

while of the second death it is said, It is a state of conscious suffering in fire to all eternity. But the Scriptures do not teach this in relation to either, plain enough for me to believe it; while I find so much evidence to show that death is an "extinction of life," and that "the dead know not anything."

Regarding death thus, we come again to the subject, Is death a punishment? "Let us reason together." Look at the laws of nations—The greatest punishment that can be imposed upon man, for the transgression of the laws, is DEATH. For different crimes there are different punishments. For some petty offense, a man may be fined a few dollars, or sent to jail a few months; and as the offense is increased, so is the punishment. For great offences he is sentenced to a number of years, or for life, in the State's Prison, or banished from friends and society to some foreign land, perhaps on some desolate island; but when he has gone so far that these are not severe enough, they resort to the greatest punishment, which is to take his life. This was the penalty which was attached to God's law, which he gave to our first parents. They transgressed his law, and died,—were deprived of life. God saw the world all going down to death, and he pitied them, for he knew the value of life, and gave his Son to die for them, that such as would keep his laws should be ransomed from death, and have eternal life; but still the penalty for sin is death; for we read, "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." And again, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."

Perhaps the reader may be ready to say that there is no punishment, after the agonies of death are o'er, if the dead are unconscious. Let me ask you if it is any pleasure to live? Are you willing to die now, if you knew that you would "be as though you had not been"? O no; life, if it is filled up with care, sickness and sorrow, is too good to give up now. Then it would be a punishment to deprive you of it, would it not? And if this life is of so much importance, of what value must eternal life be, which is far from sin, sickness, sorrow, cares, and death?

Think of it for a moment. Behold before you eternal life in the paradise of God, where you can eat of the fruit of the garden, and have that enjoyment which cannot be surpassed, to which your enjoyment here is but as a drop to a plentiful shower; and, upon the other hand eternal death, is not that death a punishment? while you are in the embrace of that, are you not being punished? But if, after a while, you should be ransomed from that death, and permitted to have life with its pleasures, then, your punishment would have ceased.

The righteous and the wicked die the first death alike; but the righteous at the resurrection can look back and exclaim, "O death, where is thy sting?" It is past. They have been ransomed, and have eternal life given to them. But what a fearful day to the wicked. They must suffer "the second death."

Reader, shall we be numbered with those who have a "part in the first resurrection"? for of them it is written, "On such the second death hath no power." The Lord is merciful, slow to anger, and delighteth not in the death of the wicked. Our Savior has set us an example, that we may come into favor with God; and not only so, but in all things he made known the will of his Father. And if all the punishment there is in death is merely in dying, then we find Christ contradicting himself; for in raising the dead to life, he did not do that which he pretended to do; for, at the grave of Lazarus, we behold him weeping over his; death and he did a favor to Lazarus, and not only to him, but his sisters, and raised him to life again; and in so doing glorified his Father in heaven. But was it a favor to Lazarus, or a glory to God, if the agonies of death were a punishment, to raise him to life? Certainly not. For he has given him life that he may be punished again by dying. Be this far from our blessed Savior.

You will admit, I think, with me, that Jesus did these deeds in love, and raised the dead, not that they might be tortured again in dying, but that they might have the blessing of life.

This, dear reader, is the God we believe in. He delights not to torture; but on account of sin, man received the doom that was pronounced upon sinners, and then he has given them the privilege of obeying his will, and entering into eternal life; but if they still disobey and reject the Savior that he has offered, they must suffer the penalty of sin, and die "the second death," from which there will be no redemption. That is eternal punishment. Dear reader, which class are you among? those that are bound for life or those bound for death? JOHN RIDLEY.

THE FEAST OF THE PASSOVER.

The people of Israel had many feasts;—weekly, as the Sabbath (Ex. 13: 6); monthly, as the new moon (Num. 28: 11); yearly, as the passover (Ex. 34: 25); also of the feast of trumpets, of pentecost, atonement, tabernacles, harvest, etc. The true signification of a feast is, a solemn time for God's service. It is an emblem of joy and gladness. As observed by the Jews, they were no doubt seasons for social enjoyment, and recounting the vicissitudes of the past; and were not observed with the strict ceremony that were many other of their religious services.

I think our modern annual feasts—the campmeetings—may be considered by us in some measure what the feasts were to the people of Israel. We are during the year burdened with the cares and trials of life; and a week of rest for body and mind is essential for restoring their vigor and strength. The mind needs rest as well as the body; but it is often taxed or burdened at the campmeeting more than at any other time in the year. We consider two sermons on the Sabbath sufficient for the week ordinarily; but just think of having twenty or more in one week; and so varied in their doctrines that much skill and thought are necessary to arrange and locate them.

But the point I wish to make in this article and to come to it at once is, more devotional exercises, and not so much preaching, at the campmeetings. When people observe a feast, there are no long speeches, or orations; it is not a fit place to burden the mind with those things; but that it may rest and be refreshed. If we should ask the people, as a whole, who attend the campmeeting, what part of it they enjoy most, the reply would be, The social meetings; and these are to the mind what nutritious food is to the body; but how often do we find a vacuum there, after listening to a long, tedious sermon, which interests no one but the speaker; but how often do we see a cheerful countenance and a full soul after enjoying a love-feast.

And now, to conclude, I wish to say, that if one whole day was given up to devotional exercises, such as love-feasts, class-meetings, prayer-meetings, etc., it would be the memorable day of the campmeeting.

The Lord give wisdom and guidance to his people, that they may serve him in his own appointed way. D. N. SMITH.

For the World's Crisis.

"BE NOT AFRAID."

No more encouraging sentence ever fell upon the ear of timid, fearing mortals. "Be not afraid!" Who says this? It is Jesus, the attentive friend of all who trust him. It savors much of authority for it comes from the highest delegated authority in existence. Should we not obey it? By diligence we ought to show our love for our dearest friends, and most just of lawgivers; for all power is given unto him in heaven and earth.

We are a good deal like Peter when he attempted to walk on the waters of the sea of Galilee to meet his Master. Many heed his command, "Come." Many heed his admonishing voice, "Be not afraid." But soon the boisterous waves of the world roll up around them, doubt comes into their hearts, confidence in their Preserver flees, and they begin to sink. In this condition they will be eternally lost unless they instantly throw themselves on the saving power of Jesus, and like Peter cry, "Save, Lord." We should keep our eyes on Christ. Friends may leave us, foes despicably use us, and the wicked deride, but "fear not." As long as Peter kept his eyes upon Christ, and implicitly trusted him, he could walk on the tempestuous waves of Galilee as well as his Master; but as soon as he lost sight of Jesus, and began to look at the awful waves that surrounded him doubt came in, he found that he could not walk in his own strength, and he began to sink. True courage does not consist in confidence in ourselves, but that unwavering confidence in Him who has all power; and the sooner we learn this lesson, the better it will be for us.

Christ often, as it would seem, places his people where they can practically see their own weakness, where they can see their dependence upon him for continuous aid, or in our own strength we will sink. He permits trials to come; and when we feel about sinking under our burden, he says "be not afraid," and will reach out his hand to lift us up. We know ours is a tempestuous voyage, and that we are now in the perils of the last days. Many are sinking amid the surging waves of iniquity, through which we are passing; but his voice rings out, clear and sweet," Be not afraid." The haven of rest is at hand. Tears are soon to be all wiped away. Weary hearts are to be relieved of their burdens, and all who stand the voyage share the "fullness of joy" of God's presence eternally at home.

"Then cheer up, then cheer up,
All ye wanderers here;
Take courage, all ye pilgrims,
You have no cause to fear.
The promised land is broad enough
For all of us who roam,
Canaan sure is broad enough
To give us all a home."

For the World's Crisis.

IS IT RIGHT?

Is it right for the followers of the meek and lowly Savior to use carnal weapons? "Lord, shall we smite with the sword?"—Luke 22: 49. Those who followed the Savior, when they saw the multitude was about to take him, having a sword which the Savior had previously commanded them to buy (Luke 22: 36), naturally supposed that the time had come when they ought to use it. In ver. 50 we read, "And one of them smote the servant of the high priest, and cut off his right ear." When he had committed this deed, the Savior reproved him, and said, "Put up again thy sword into his place, for all they who take the sword shall perish with the sword." The reader will discover that the Savior not only condemned the one who smote off the servant's ear, but all who use the sword; for he says, All they who use the sword shall perish with it.

But some persons who take the opposite side might ask, Why did the Savior command his disciples to get a sword? (See Luke 22: 36.) "But now, he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip; and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment and buy one." If it were not right for christians to use carnal weapons, why did Jesus command them to buy one sword? Why not command them to buy as many swords as would supply the whole company? Why did he only allow one? His disciples said unto him in v. 38, "Behold, here are two swords." Hear the Savior's reply: "And he said unto them, It is enough." Now the reader can see plainly that if the Savior designed the sword for his defense, or of his disciples, he naturally would have them all supplied. For what purpose, then, did the Savior command them to buy one sword? Doubtless he knew beforehand that the Jews would come to take him, in the manner they did, and that he intended that one of his followers should have a sword, that when they approached him, he would use it; then he would be able to condemn not only him, but all who use it. See Matt. 26: 52. "Then said Jesus unto him, Put up again thy sword into his place; for all they that take the sword, shall perish with the sword." Jesus thus condemned all who use the sword. This ought to satisfy all Christendom that the followers of the meek and lowly Savior have no right to use carnal weapons in defense of earthly governments, or for any other cause.

The apostle Paul says, in his letter to the Corinthians (2 Cor. 10: 4), "For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal." Thus you discover that the Christians are not associated with those who use carnal weapons. Jesus says, in John 16: 26, "My kingdom is not of this world. If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight." Though christians are living in the world, yet they are not of it; but are hated by those who are of the world. Read John 15: 19,—"If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you."

But the reader may suppose, as many do, notwithstanding the evidence already presented to show that war is antichristian, that the followers of the Savior have a right to use carnal weapons in defense of governments, because the Jews did. Read Paul's letter to the Romans, 6: 14;—"For ye are not under the law, but under grace." It is plain, then, according to Paul's letter, that the Jews were permitted to use carnal weapons, because they were under the law; but christians can not use them, because they are under grace. The Savior contrasts the difference between the Jewish dispensation and the dispensation of grace, in his sermon on the Mount. Matt. 5: 38, 39,—"Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth. But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil." You discover, then, that under the Jewish dispensation they were permitted to resist evil; but now Jesus tells them to resist not evil, and he sets the same example himself. Read 1 Pet. 2: 23,—"Who when he was reviled, reviled not again." Christians should follow his steps. Read 1 Pet. 2: 21. "Because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that we should follow his steps." Surely, then, as Christ is the christian's example, and he did not resist evil, neither can the christian resist evil under any circumstance. Those who embraced the christian religion in the Apostolic age, even down into the third century, took Jesus as their example; they would neither fight, vote, belong to worldly societies, or accept of any public office. Read Milman's Gibbon's History of Rome, vol. 1, p. 551–2:

"The Christians were not less averse to the business than to the pleasures of this world. The defense of our persons and property they knew not how to reconcile with the patient doctrine which enjoined an unlimited forgiveness of past injuries, and commanded them to invite the repetition of fresh insults. Their simplicity was offended by the use of oaths, by the pomp of magistracy, and by the active contention of public life; nor could their humane ignorance be convinced that it was lawful on any occasion to shed the blood of our fellow creatures, either by the sword of justice, or by that of war; even though their criminal or hostile attempts should threaten the peace and safety of the whole community. It was acknowledged that, under a less perfect law, the powers of the Jewish constitution had been exercised, with the approbation of heaven, by inspired prophets and by anointed kings. The Christians felt and confessed that such institutions might be necessary for the present system of the world, and they cheerfully submitted to the authority of their Pagan governors. But while they inculcated the maxims of passive obedience, they refused to take any active part in the civil administration or the military defense of the empire. Some indulgence might, perhaps, be allowed to those persons who, before their conversion, were already engaged in such violent and sanguinary occupations; but it was impossible that the Christians, without renouncing a more sacred duty, could assume the character of soldiers, of magistrates, or of princes. This indolent, or even criminal disregard to the public welfare, exposed them to the contempt and reproaches of the Pagans."

Read also Gibbon's Roman History, vol. 3: "The humble Christians were sent into the world as sheep among wolves, and since they were not permitted to employ force, even in defense of their religion, they should be still more criminal if they were tempted to shed the blood of their fellow creatures in disputing the vain privilege or the sordid possession of this transitory life. Faithful to the doctrine of the apostle who, in the reign of Nero, had preached the duty of unconditional submission, the Christians of the three first centuries preserved their conscience pure and innocent of the guilt of secret conspiracy, or open rebellion; while they experienced the rigor of persecution, they were never provoked to meet their tyrants in the field."—p. 249.

Thus the reader can see plainly, according to Gibbon's testimony of the primitive Christians, that they would not use carnal weapons, and that they were not of this world; as Jesus said, "I have chosen you out of the world." Dear reader, are you a Christian? Can you endorse this truism? If not, allow me to present to you the fruit of the Spirit: "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance."—Gal. 5: 22, 23. I ask, Does the soldier possess those fruits? Followers of the meek and lowly Savior, let me admonish you, as the Lord did backsliding Israel: "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein."—Jer. 6: 16. "WHO'LL STAND UP FOR JESUS?"

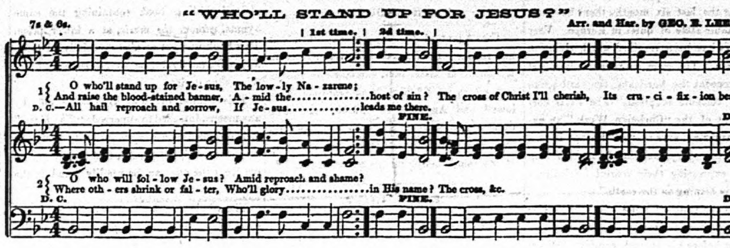
7s & 6s. Arr. and Har. by GEO. B. LEE.



Though fierce may rage the battle,
And wild the storm may blow;
Though friends may go forever,
Who will with Jesus go?—CHO.

Though foes shall madly gather,
And devils rage and roar;
Who'll choose the fiery furnace
With Jesus evermore?—CHO.

My all to Christ I've given,
My talents, time, and voice;
Myself, my reputation—

WEEPING JEREMIAHS.

O that there were more of them, more that felt like groaning and weeping because so many that profess to believe the Bible is a revelation from God to a fallen race, act so inconsistent with such a belief. O for more that feel pained and sickened because so many are more willing to grieve God, their best friend, than to lose a little of the friendship of their neighbors; more to sigh because the light that is in them is oftener under a bushel than on a candlestick; and those that should be like a city set on a hill, that cannot be hid, do not so much as have their conversation seasoned with salt. O for more that feel like Lot, vexed with the filthy conversation of those around them. Alas! that so many seem to love it, and seek such society, when the word says, come out from among them. O for more to pray "thy kingdom come," that God would rend the heavens and come down, and clean the earth, and give it to a clean people, then the wicked would cease from troubling, and the weary would be at rest.

O that there were more that felt the real value of such a hope as ours. How comforting, when kind fathers, loving mothers, and darling children, are laid beneath the sod, to greet us no more, to feel that there is to be a resurrection of the dead. Well might the apostle tell us to "comfort one another with these words": "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall ever be with the Lord." How cheering to know that when dust returns to dust again, it is not the last of them; and to know that the same Lord lives to-day and notices every sparrow's fall; and when we raise our cry to him, we come to a friend of the friendless, the widow's God and portion. How sweet to know this hope is not all fancy work, but is built upon a rock, even the promise and oath of God; and when the winds of trial blow, and we tremble in the blast, it is then we prove the truth that the trying of our faith is "more precious than of gold," for it is then we dig for the foundation again, and find that the stones are all there.

FLOWERS.

Life among the flowers is life in the sunshine. They who live among flowers, and cultivate them knowingly, think of them and paradise as inseparably connected, will have not only their earthly but spiritual pathway strewn with flowers. Then they will read Cant. 2: 1–2 with continual delight. I heard my pastor say he always had hope of a family that cultivated flowers. I would not live in the woods mantled from the sun, but among the flowers.

There is something virtuous in flowers—a kind of spiritual life. They tend to fill the heart with elevated and devout affections. As soon as the king of the seasons gives way to the queen of the year, then the plants awake, open their eyes, and blossom. The sentiment is as beautiful as true, "that the smile of infancy, the singing of birds, and the beauty of flowers, seem to have undergone no change in the paradisiacal fall." The grandest work of man bears no comparison with the meanest flower. The bird that soars the nearest heaven, and sings the sweetest, makes her nest among the flowers. The little child instinctively reaches down to pick the fragrant blossom.

Children, present your teacher often with flowers; she will thank you in word and in deed. Let your pastor's desk be the recipient of a nosegay occasionally; it will gladden his heart. I have been led to think, in flights of the imagination, that this earth is a great book in which angels write, and that flower beds are their manuscripts, and that the scattering flowers are their hieroglyphics, urging us to a new and higher life—a spiritual existence; not incorporeal, but spiritual, as God is spiritual, good, and holy.

Brothers, don't find any excuse for not cultivating your sister's flower pot or your own. Be kind to the "little ones," attentive to the singing of birds, and careful of flowers; love and obey Jesus, and when earth shall have been restored to its Eden state, then you may "walk and not faint" on nature's immortal carpet, the warp of which will be filled with amaranthine flowers of a heavenly beauty.

NEW THINGS.

We all like new things, such as new clothes, new shoes, new houses, new books, new pictures, and new sights. And we like new things sometimes because they are better than the old ones ever were. But all cannot have new things, they cost too much money, and so they have to put up with the old ones. I will tell you of some new things which you can all have. They are worth more than money, but all can have them free. Here are some of them.

1. The Lord's mercies. "It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not. They are new every morning; great is thy faithfulness."—Lam. 3: 22, 23. How thankful should we be for such mercies, which come to us fresh and new every day. Our life, health, reason, food, clothes, sunshine, rain, air, and all good things that we enjoy, are always new.

2. A new heart, and a new spirit. "A new heart also will I give unto you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statues, and ye shall keep my judgments and do them." Ezek. 36: 26, 27.

Every sinner needs a new heart and a new spirit; just as much as these Israelites, and we may all have it. We may be renewed in the spirit of our minds. We may be transformed by the renewing of our minds. If we will pray as David did, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me," (Ps. 51: 10,) God will hear our prayers, and we shall have joy instead of sorrow, love instead of hate, and shall love to do right as well as ever we loved to do wrong, because God has made our hearts and our spirits new.

3. A new creature. "Therefore if any man be in Christ he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold all things are become new. 2 Cor. 5: 17. So we are told to "put off the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts, and be renewed in the spirit of your minds; and that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." Eph. 4: 22–24. So we are to put away lying, and stealing, anger, and lust, for these are the works of the old man, and we are to put on truth, and love, and peace, and purity, and righteousness, and so not be the vile, wicked sinners we have been, but each turn over a new leaf, when we become new creatures. God will make us new all through, if we will only give up all to him, to do and suffer all his righteous will.

4. A new body. "Our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." Phil. 2: 20.

These poor old feeble crazy frames shall be changed to immortality in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye; or if we be dead and turned to dust, we shall rise up in glory when Jesus comes at the last great day. Now we are made new inside; then we shall be new all through, spirit, and soul and body.

5. A new earth. "Behold I create new heavens and a new earth." Isa. 65: 17. We according to his promise look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. 1 Pet. 3: 13. The meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace. Ps. 37: 11; Matt. 5: 5. That will be a good world; there will be no sin, sorrow, pain, or death there. Let us seek a home there.

6. A New Jerusalem. "I, John, saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, adorned as a bride prepared for her husband." Rev. 2: 21. What a blessed city that will be, and all the redeemed shall dwell there.

7. All things. "Behold I make all things new. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things." Rev. 21: 5–7.

What blessed new things these are. We may have new mercies, a new heart, become new creatures, new men, have new bodies, a a new earth, a New Jerusalem, and all things new. May the Lord prepare us to receive all these things.—H. L. Hastings.

WORDS.

Who can estimate the power of words? A stone thrown into the water sinks instantly, but the water disturbed by it breaks, and ripples, and the waves roll back further and further, until every drop of water in the lake is agitated; and long after the stone is settled, and is at rest, the water moves and cannot rest. And thus it it with a word. Long after the speaker has forgotten it, it may agitate feelings, stir deep emotions, and move currents of thought and action which will extend to the furthest shores of time.

One word may lift up a bowed down, stricken heart, by pointing it to Him who "hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows"; who guides our every step, and sits "as a refiner and purifier of silver," and chastens those he loves, that they may be purged from all dross, and purified from all sin. One word may awaken the thoughtless, careless, reckless worldling to think upon his awful responsibility, the nearness of eternity, the judgment but a little in the future, when all will be summoned before God to give account of how they have used the talent he gave them.

A word may lead the wanton wanderer, sick of sin, burdened with condemnation, disgraced by vice, forsaken by friends, lonely in heart, sick in body, weary in mind, and lost in the cold, dark, dreary wilderness of iniquity, to see the love and mercy of Him who with yearning sorrow says, "Turn ye, turn ye, . . . why will ye die!" and out of his never-changing love proclaims, "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon."—Isa. 1: 18, 55: 7. One word may raise the maddened soul, on the verge of distraction, to sweet peace and trust in Christ; or reveal to the discouraged one, sunk in the dark bog of despair, the glorious light of a perfect Redeemer. "A word spoken in due season, how good it is!"

But the word that saves a nation could also destroy it. The candle on the tower, shedding light over the dark waters, revealing the dangerous rocks, and guiding the vessel to the harbor of safety, thus saving scores of lives, if applied to a bunch of straw might burn down a city, and make desolate hundreds of homes. A careless word, thoughtlessly spoken, may sink into a tender heart, and rankle there, and sink deeper, and grow, and gnaw, until it eats the life away. The whole course of life has been changed, and persons driven from virtue's path into the broad road that leads to eternal death, by words forgotten by the speaker almost before they were spoken. Good resolutions have been burned up, serious reflections cut to pieces, sweet dispositions soured, noble hearts blasted, tender hearts crushed, and countless souls eternally ruined, by—words.

By our words we may cheer the sorrowful, lift up the bowed-down, comfort the brokenhearted, restrain the headlong, call home the wandering, and elevate and make happy the life of our fellow beings; or by them we may discourage the hopeful, chill the warm-hearted, add burdens to the cast down, cause pain, and grief, and anger, and hatred, and malice; stir up all the evil passions of man's nature, and spread gloom and misery all around.

Since their influence is so great, how careful we should be of the use we make of them; how watchful and prayerful, lest by them we offend and cause to stumble, and thus destroy him for whom Christ died. "Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter any thing before God; for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth; therefore let thy words be few."—Eccl. 5: 2. "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body. Behold we put bits in the horses' mouths, that they may obey us; and we turn about their whole body. Behold also the ships, which though they be so great, ... yet are turned about by a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth. Even so the tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth!"—James 3: 2–5.

For the World's Crisis.

IS THE EARTH LARGE ENOUGH FOR The "Inheritance of the Saints?"

The objection is often raised to the doctrine that "the meek shall inherit the earth," on the ground that the dead are now buried three deep all over the earth, and if they were to be raised from the dead there would not be room enough for them to stand, much less to inherit. Is this a valid objection?

The following question and answer is taken from the New York Observer:—"If all the human race, from the creation to the present day were buried side by side, how many square miles would they cover?

Answer. The population of the globe at the present time (1862) is estimated at 900,000,000. It is also estimated that the entire population of the globe, existing at any one time, passes away three times in every century. As the present population of the earth has increased from a single pair, created about sixty centuries ago, one half of the present population might be taken as a fair estimate of the average number who have passed away during each of the 180 periods, or thirds of centuries during which the earth may have been inhabited; which would give 8,100,000,000 for the whole number who have lived on the earth. Allowing an average of three square feet for the burial of each person, on the supposition that one half die in infancy, and they would cover 24,300,000,000 of square feet of earth; dividing this by 27,878,400, the number of square feet in a square mile, and we have less than 872 square miles, and which would afford sufficient room to bury side by side all who have been buried in the dust of the earth—all of whom would not suffice to cover the little State of Rhode Island.

This estimate shows how widely those persons draw on their imaginations, who affirm that not a foot of earth exists on the globe that has not served as the burial place of man; or who deny the possibility of the resurrection of the body, on the pretence that the earth would not afford room for the inhabitants to stand."

Again the same objection is raised to "the dead small and great" standing before God in judgment. Taking the above figures, and allowing six thousand years to have passed away since the creation of man, and allowing at all ages of the world the same number of inhabitants, and allowing three generations to each century, and then allowing each person two square feet to stand upon, and all that are now alive and all that have ever lived could stand within eighty-one miles of any given point.

Again, look at the fact that there is to be "no more sea," and the "whole earth shall be filled with the glory of God," and see how "few" there are that will be saved compared to the masses; and surely as we sometimes very truthfully sing,

"Canaan sure is large enough
To give us all a home."

These objections, like all other infidel objections, fall to the ground when tested by the truth; and the Bible still [illegible] the attack like Gibraltar attacked by a boy with a potato pop gun. What God has spoken he will perform. [illegible]

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Boston, Wednesday, Aug. 26, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

NO PAPER NEXT WEEK.

As our clerks and compositors have been most faithful for the past year, and have had no chance to rest, we have concluded to give them an opportunity to attend with us the great National Campmeeting at Springfield, or to rest elsewhere, as they may choose. In consequence of our large free list to the poor, it is proposed, if there is no objection, that the paying subscribers give the cost of next week's paper to the poor, by receiving only twenty-five copies for this volume.

LOOKING FOR JESUS.

People often ask why are you looking for the coming of Jesus within a short period? There are those who think it very strange that any should be expecting the second coming of Christ in this generation. They even wonder if such persons can be in their right minds; and conclude that they must be hair-brained fanatics at the best. We think that those who feel thus have but a faint idea of what the prophets have spoken. It cannot be that they have carefully studied the prophecies and compared them with the history of the past; for if they had, we think they would come to the same conclusion as have some ten thousand ministers in England, that we are now living in the last generation of the present dispensation. A large number on this continent have come to the same conclusion; indeed, a large number of the most devoted in all the evangelical churches are becoming satisfied that we are in the last days.

When inquired of for the reasons of such a hope, they are abundant and reliable. We can only glance at them in this article.

The prophet Daniel was instructed to say there would four great kingdoms arise, and that at the end of the fourth would "the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed."—Dan. 2: 44. Daniel goes on to say that the first kingdom was the Babylonian, the second would be the Medo-Persian, the third the Grecian, and then describes the fourth so minutely, that there is no room for doubt that he meant the Roman. He informs us the fourth kingdom should be divided into ten parts; and that three of the ten should be "plucked up by the roots;" and then the horn, or kingdom, that should occupy their place, should "wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws; and they [the times and laws] shall be given into his hands until a time and times and the dividing of time. But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion to consume and to destroy it unto the end."—Dan. 7: 8, 25, 26.

These prophetic scriptures are now matters of history. No one who is familiar with the records of the past, will deny that the first three kingdoms named have arisen and fallen. The fourth empire, the Roman, began with Augustus Cæsar, B. C. 31. In the fifth and sixth centuries it was broken into the ten parts as declared by the prophet. A little later, the three horns were "plucked up by the roots," and the horn with "eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things," took their territory. Then commenced the terrible and blood-thirsty work of Rome in its Papal form. Century after century the blood of the martyrs flowed, and the "times and laws" were in the hands of the "little horn," till the close of the "time and times and the dividing of time." Next is to come the kingdom of God, that "shall stand for ever."

Now where are we in this great panorama of the world's history? Since 1859 the "dominion" of the "little horn" has been taken away, and the whole civilized world is watching for its final overthrow, when the power of the "little horn" will come to a perpetual end. But with the end of that power begins the kingdom of God "which shall never be destroyed." We are most certainly near the day when Jesus will come in all his glory to raise the dead and give immortality to the faithful.

BE PATIENT.

"Never fret about what you can't help." Bear it patiently, and the load will not be half as heavy, for the burden created by getting out of patience is much the hardest to bear. Be calm, quiet. The storm will be over in a little while. "Let patience have her perfect work." Patience produces peace.

Let every one adopt this rule: "Never fret about what you can't help." Where is the profit? When we fret we always lose our peace. We can't lose our peace unless we grieve away the Holy Spirit. Then it follows that fretting will make one a backslider, and fill him with remorse. Satan will do his best to make us fret, and get out of patience, because he is sure to gain the advantage of us if he can succeed in this direction. "Cease from anger and forsake wrath; fret not thyself in any wise to do evil."—Ps. 37: 8.

If things do not go to suit you, be thankful they are no worse. Do not murmur.

MY ARTICLE.

"Why is not my article in the paper?" One of the heavy burdens of an editor is to bear the complaints made by his contributors because their articles are not published immediately, or perhaps not at all. If they knew all the facts they would feel much less inclined to censure. It should be remembered that when the paper is full, we cannot put in any more. If we sent out several blank columns, then those who do not see their contributions inserted, might well say, "Why is not my article in the paper?" "But you put in some pieces no better than mine, and I don't think they were as good." That may be true. But some of those may have been waiting six months or a year for a chance. "Why did you not put them in earlier?" For the same reason that yours was not in sooner, for want of room, not because it was rejected.

Suppose we receive a dozen articles to-day. We have already selected what we design to put in the next paper. But in this last package are some articles that must go in immediately, or they will be out of season. Then we must leave out some that we designed to put in, that have been waiting for weeks to make our readers a visit. This same thing continues to happen week after week, until a large pile of articles, just as good as those that are inserted, lie upon our desk, for want of room. Now it follows that many of the writers of these are grieved because their communications do not appear; and, perhaps, conclude to write no more. Dear Brn. and Srs., we have done the best we could. We do not know how to do any better. Please have mercy.

There are many articles received that would be good at any time; while others must go in at once, if at all. The latter are frequently crowded out, and have to be laid away; while the former are still waiting for an opportunity.

MEETING IN CAMBRIDGPORT.

The tent-meeting at Cambridgeport has been one of much interest, and well attended by an intelligent class of hearers. The truth was well received, and an earnest cry was made for more. Some thought they had more Bible truth during the meeting than they had heard before in twenty years. We trust some will be saved in the coming kingdom in consquence of those meetings.

NOTES, QUERIES, & OBJECTIONS.

19. Turn to Eccl. 12: 7.—"Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Does the whole man sink into an unconscious state at death? What, then, is the meaning of this passage? Is it in harmony with the character of God or the dignity of the Bible to use such language as this, when it is only intended to state that the "breath" escapes the body? A. A. PHELPS.
Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 1868.

Our answer to the foregoing inquiry will be similar to the one last week, relative to the death of Stephen. In the account of the creation of man, we read as follows: "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Gen. 2: 7.

Would any one claim that "the breath of life" was the real man? Certainly not. Of what use was that "breath of life?" There is but one object specified in the Bible, and that is to cause the man to live. Then what would cause his death? Taking it away. In harmony with this, we read, "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled; thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust."—Ps. 104: 29. The giving of "the breath of life" caused them to live; and taking it away produces death. This "breath of life" is not an organized being that thinks, and wills, and reasons, and is accountable; but vitalized air, without which all must die.

Says the Psalmist, when speaking of man's death, "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."—Ps. 146: 4. Here it is again most plainly stated, that taking away the breath causes death. But the word ruach, rendered "breath" in Psalms 104: 29, and 146: 4, is the same word in the original that is rendered "spirit" in Eccl. 12: 7. It is used again in the same sense in Job 27: 3, as follows: "The spirit of God is in my nostrils." When this spirit returns to "God who gave it," the man dies, and "in that very day his thoughts perish." This looks reasonable, and in harmony with common sense.

These scriptures show very plainly that there is one "spirit" in a man's "nostrils," called "the breath of life," which is taken away at death. As God gave it, it came from him; and when he takes it away, it is said to return to him. But we can find no proof in the Bible that any other spirit leaves man at death. If there was another, then there would be two spirits that leave man when he dies. With this view, we find Eccl. 12: 7 in complete harmony with the Bible account of the creation of man, and all the records of death recorded in the Scriptures. We do not think it possible to harmonise the Bible with any other position. In Gen. 3: 19, we find the Lord talking to the first man as follows: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." How could the fact be more plainly expressed that man returns to dust when he dies; and that the one who returns "unto the ground" is the one to whom the Lord speaks, and consequently the accountable being whom he formed of the dust of the ground. It appears very absurd to suppose that there is an immaterial something that leaves man when he dies, that is of itself another man, that came down from God to live in the man he created upon the earth. If we accept the simple statements in the word of the Lord, it seems very plain; but when we attempt to prove that "the spirit"—"the breath of life"—that is taken from man when he dies, is the real man whom God created in the garden of Eden, it throws the Bible into confusion, and fills it with incomprehensible mysteries, besides doing violence to reason, philosophy, facts and common sense.

THE STATE OF EUROPE.

During the last six months there has been a remarkable state of quiet in Europe. Very little news has been received worth giving to our readers. The calm, however, is like that which precedes the hurricane, the earthquake and the volcanic eruption. The Paris correspondent of the "Christian Work," an excellent magazine, says:—"All Europe is in a fever of expectancy, and men's hearts are on all sides expressing their fearful forebodings of what is coming on the earth."

Such is the state of mind that our Savior said should characterize the people in the last days, just before his second coming. When we look over the signs of the times, as indicated in the moral, political, financial and social world, and then turn to the prophetic Scriptures, we see no room to doubt that we are living in the last days of the present dispensation; and that soon the King of glory will appear to set up his everlasting kingdom. Are we all ready?

AN HONEST CONFESSION.

Like Luther, when he began to investigate things at Rome, and found all there was not in harmony with the Scriptures; so now, many are beginning to see that something is wrong in popular Protestantism; and the more they compare its theology with the Bible, the more fully are they satisfied that it has made a wide departure from what was taught by Jesus and the apostles.

In the August and September numbers of the Prophetic Times, an able monthly, published in Philadelphia, edited by Dr. J. A. Seiss and others, we find the following interesting communication:

"It is only a few months since I first became aware of the fact that there was a journal or paper of any kind published by believers in the nearness of the Second Advent. It seems by the merest accident that I came across your journal in the house of a friend, or, perhaps, I might say it was providential, for language cannot express the gratitude I owe to God and to yourselves for the light it has shed upon my pathway; for though trained and educated in the —— church, I know no more about the second coming of Christ and his reign on the earth than a heathen in the jungles of India knows of the story of the cross. And when I now read my Bible in the light of the teachings of your journal, I am astonished that I should have read my Bible so much, and yet understand it so little.

In our church and Sabbath-school the prophecies and Revelation are almost a forbidden subject. The great cry is that we cannot understand them; that they are all mystery, and do not concern us. It seems to me like impeaching the wisdom of God to say that he would give us a book containing his will, and in it instruct us to search the Scriptures, and at the same time intend that a great portion of it should never be understood by us.

In the last year I have heard two of the best ministers in our conference say they believed that the Savior would come the second time soon, and establish his reign on the earth; but say they would not dare to preach it, as it would be called heresy. It is passing strange to me how any one can feel that they have a call from God to preach his gospel, and then dare not preach any more of it than some ecclesiastical body will permit, acknowledging a higher authority than God!"

FREE MASONRY.

If any wish to read some pointed articles on the tendency of Free Masonry, they will find them in "The American Anti Masonic and Biblical Review," a monthly, published at New Berne, N. C., and edited by Dr. John T. Walsh. Price $1.50 a year. It is said to be the only periodical of the kind in the world. Bro. Walsh has taken hold of the subject with much boldness and earnestness.

PLANCHETTE.

What is the Planchette? It is an instrument invented in France some twelve years ago, by means of which the demons make communications to those who consult the familiar spirits, more readily than in the common way by rapping on tables, chairs, etc. The following extract from a paper concerning the Planchette was furnished us by a correspondent:

"This mysterious instrument, of French origin, will, under the hands of most persons, answer questions propounded to it, without any voluntary action on the part of the operators. The Paris correspondent of the London Times states that the Emperor Napoleon implicitly believes in the supernatural power of this wonderful instrument, and consults it on all great questions."

We clipped the following from the Banner of Light, the leading Spiritualist paper in this country:—

The idea has become prevalent that no one except Spiritualists use the planchette. This is a mistake. Hundreds buy the instrument who are not Spiritualists, and never have been. The planchette is sold by dealers who are church members, and they recommend it, without probably being aware of its spiritual significance. The price that has been asked for it was exorbitant, but has been reduced of late."

We look upon the planchette as a cunning device of Satan to induce people to consult his demons. By means of this instrument, he purposes to make the consultation with the spirits a popular amusement for fashionable parlors, and among all classes; and thus familiarise the people with these demoniacal manifestations.

We would say more, but for an interesting article on this subject in another column, from Bro. Colegrove, a Baptist minister.

FARE REDUCED.

The RUTLAND and BURLINGTON and VT. VALLEY R. Roads have reduced the fare of those attending the Springfield Campmeeting. All those who come from the above roads, having paid the regular fare, will be furnished a free return pass by the Secretary of the campmeeting. No arrangements have been made with the Vt. Central; hence the friends in Vermont had better come over the R. and B. Road when they can, as those who come on the Central will be furnished with return passes only on the Mass. and Vt. Valley Roads to Bellows Falls. From So. Vernon, campmeeting tickets must be purchased at the station, which must be endorsed by the Secretary on the ground.

FARE REDUCED.

The Agent of the Kennebeck Steamboat has reduced the fare, so that the friends in Richmond or Bath, Me., can come to Boston and return for $2.50;—from Gardiner, Hallowell and Augusta, for $3.00. All who come will procure a ticket to come and return, and present the same to the Secretary of the campmeeting for his endorsement.

THE TRINITY.

BRO. GRANT:—I believe you do not accept the orthodox doctrine of the Trinity. Please state briefly, either by letter, or through the Crisis, your views of this doctrine, and oblige. I am still holding on to the glorious hope, although I stand alone in the faith here. I preached a sermon on the second advent, in the M. E. church here, a short time since, which has occasioned considerable comment. My motto is, speak the truth "though the heavens fall." H. W. DANN.

We do not feel backward in answering our Bro. in Christ relative to the doctrine of the "Trinity," hence we feel warranted to decide it is not a Bible doctrine. Three cannot be one, and one cannot be three. A father cannot be his own son, nor a son his own father. We have only to state such views to see their absurdity. "How readest thou?" "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God."—John 5: 5. At the time Jesus was baptized, and at the transfiguration, the Father said, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." "He that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son."

Says John, after speaking of facts connected with Jesus, "These are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God." John 20: 30.

Let us believe the "record." Bro. Dann, we admire your motto.

OUR POSITION.

The following is from the pen of Bro. Edwin Burnham. It is copied from an old paper, and is specially applicable to the present time:

"Rolling years bring their changes. Several years ago thousands of people lifted up their eyes to heaven in expectation of the speedy appearing of the sign of the 'Son of man.' The vision tarried. Many have turned away from the promised joy of the event to seek vanities. We cannot go away. To whom, to what shall we go? We have opened our mouth unto God, and our solemn vows must be fulfilled. The world affords us no substitute for our blessed hope. We believe, and therefore we must speak and act in the preparation for the kingdom of God. We are dreaming no idle dream. The great day of the Almighty is almost upon us. It is our work to proclaim this fearful truth to an apostate church, and unbelieving world. This work must be done. We must do it or perish! The echoes of our Master's voice are in our souls. No apology will be taken if our duty is not done. Jehovah shakes the bright sword of slaughter over the nation. He calls on us to proclaim this among the Gentiles. Shall we turn away to minor questions? Shall we be harping about tastes, individual notions, personal policy or other trifles? God help us! 'Blessed is that servant' who gives 'meat in due season.'

Now is our time of effort. It is the last hour. O ye hosts of God, now for the charge. Forward! Let us not stop to talk with the vain talkers. Let us not stop to mend the breech in our reputation made by some ungainly croaker. We are embattled for God. Two kinds of blood are concerned—'the blood of the covenant,' and the 'blood of souls.' Eternity opens before us with all of its glories or dire reflections. Shall we stand at our post? Shall we cease all strife and contention on unimportant questions, and attend to our high calling? Shall we act brotherly? Shall we put away all evil speaking, selfishness, and prepare to meet our God? It is time for general reformation.

The great matter in which we are now interested is more than theory—more than talk. O the judgment, the judgment! God of mercy, pity us and fit us for it. Who of us shall stand? It is almost here. I am not writing fiction. Jesus is coming. Let us put on the wedding garments. Let us haste to be ready.

O backbiter, slanderer, false-accuser, evil-speaker, man or woman of strife, backslider, cold professor, sinner, the Judge is upon you! Your race of iniquity is almost run. Your evil thoughts will be revealed. Your bitter words will pierce your own soul. Your vile acts will shame your shrinking spirit. What will you say? How will you turn when the Mighty One shall drive his flaming chariot in the heavens to redeem his elect and thunder damnation on his foes?

Now is the purity and patience of the saints. Now is the hour of triple strife—strife of heaven, earth and hell. Now is the fourth and last watch. Spirit of the everlasting God, come upon us. Mighty One, Eternal, hold us in thine hand. The perils come thicker and faster. On the right and on the left our numbers fall. Some, too, are gathered with us. 'When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?'"

A QUESTION IN ESCHATOLOGY.

Dr. Joseph A. Seiss, Editor of the Prophetic Times," has just issued a work of sixty-nine octavo pp., with the above heading. The object of the work is to show that there will be no millennium before the second personal coming of Christ. The Dr. has handled the subject in an able manner, and most clearly proved his position. All who are not satisfied on this subject should get the above named work. Address Box 2245 Philadelphia, Pa.

OMISSION.—In my notice of our Mission Sabbath School, in last week's Crisis, the name of the young woman who won the third prize was by mistake omitted. Her name is Esther Taylor. I. I. LESLIE.

NOW READY.
NEW HYMN BOOK.
"HYMNS OF THE JUBILEE HARP," WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

By the Advent Chris. Pub. Society.

Among the thousands who sing from "The Jubilee Harp," there are many hundreds, especially the aged, to whose eyes the fine print of the Harp is a great discomfort and inconvenience, and who would gladly welcome an edition of the same excellent hymns, in a convenient form, in large, clear type. The above work is issued especially for them, and we trust they will find it just what they want.

There are hundreds also who sing from the Harp, who never use the notes, and who would therefore be just as well and better pleased with a book containing the same hymns, without the music, at a lower price. This book was got up also especially for them, and will, no doubt, be to all such just the thing they desire.

This edition of "The Hymns" is not, by any means, intended to supercede "The Harp." It is designed as a companion to it; and is so arranged, with references, that hymns given out from the one can be readily found in the other.

The whole has been carefully revised and corrected, and a brief supplement of choice and popular hymns appended. The type-work was done in our own office, and in a style, we trust, not inferior to that of any other.

It is a volume of 576 pages, containing some 850 Hymns and Anthems, substantially bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, at 75 cents, single copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100. Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9.50 per dozen; $75.00 per 100. It is cheaper by far than any similar work that we know of in the market. When sent by mail, 16 cts. additional postage.

"Historic Echoes of the Voice of God."
AN EXPOSITION OF THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF DANIEL.

BY ELDER J. COUCH.

This is a neat and attractive pamphlet, of 64 pages, just issued from the office of the Advent Christian Publication Society. It comes from the press too late for an extended notice from us this week; but others who have read it in manuscript, speak of it as "one of the most valuable and important tracts on prophecy which has been issued among us for many years, and one well calculated to confound, if not convince, the unbelief of the skeptic, and confirm the faith of the believer.

"It shows, by pointed and convincing extracts from history, the wonderful fulfillment of the predictions of the 11th chapter of Daniel; and, consequently, that the events of the 12th chapter,—the standing up of Michael, the coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead,—are the next events to be expected. It is written in a clear, vigorous style, and contains many passages of singular beauty and eloquence, and closes with a thrilling appeal to the unbeliever and the sinner to be ready for the things that are coming on the earth."

It is just the thing to put into the hands of your unbelieving friends and neighbors. Let it have a wide circulation. A supply will be on hand at the Springfield Campmeeting, and also at Alton Bay.

For sale at this office. Price, 15 cents single copy; $1.50 per dozen; $10.00 per one hundred.

"SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED
BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

A Large 12 Mo., with Covers, by M. D. Wellcome.

This is a new and important pamphlet, prepared expressly to meet a want hitherto unsupplied. Among the many works written exposing the evils of SPIRITUALISM, none have been adapted for gratuitous distribution because of size and price. This work is given in a condensed form, and by having a very large edition published, can be furnished at a price to circulate extensively. Notwithstanding its brevity, it shows in a clear and concise manner the source of Spiritualism, its doctrines, corruptions, and unreliability, by the testimony of its own witnesses. Let it be scattered wherever Spiritualism is found.

Price 10 cents single copy; twenty copies for $1.00; $3.50 per one hundred copies. For sale at this office.

We have published five thousand copies of "Spiritualism Condemned," so that they might be widely scattered. We furnish them by the hundred without profit. At the Campmeeting you can obtain them without extra cost. Will you not procure them and scatter them wherever you go, and thus have them in circulation for good? A word to the wise is sufficient. M. D. WELLCOME.

NEW TRACTS
Just Issued by the A. C. P. Society.

"THE KINGDOM OF GOD." A valuable tract of 27 pages, by Eld. G. W. Green. Just what is wanted to circulate widely. Price 5 cents single, postage 2 cts.; 50 cents per dozen; $3.00 per one hundred.

"SEED TIME AND HARVEST." Truly "a Tract for the times," containing fourteen pages, by Eld. Geo. Thompson. 3 cents each, postage 2 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.00 per one hundred.

"WHAT SAYS THE GOSPEL?" By Elder S. L. Manley. Two copies for 5 cents, post-paid; 15 cts. per dozen; 50 cts. per one hundred.

"WHAT IS MAN?" A Bible view of his creation, with the meaning of "Soul," "Spirit," and an exposition of the "Rich Man and Lazarus," "Great Gulf," and "Souls under the Altar." By Miles Grant.

This is a work of 128 pp., containing four tracts bound together. Every body should have a copy. Price 25 cents postpaid.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

HOW TO BE BENEFITTED AT CAMPMEETING.

1. Consider the object.

2. Prepare accordingly, by taking as little baggage as possible, and no clothing to make a show, but good substantial articles, especially for the feet. Those that try to show off are of no use to the meeting nor themselves.

3. Don't get into a hurrying spirit in getting ready; it will follow you through the week.

4. Don't go visiting until your tent is up, and dedicated by prayer.

5. Don't indulge in eating all kinds of trash at all hours in the day; many are made sick by so doing, and lose the meeting. Be temperate. It will be better to fast than feast.

6. Don't run about to find a good meeting until you have had one in your own tent. Devotion in each tent tells on outsiders.

7. Don't peddle news. For the Lord's sake, pick up the wheat. Be quiet. Don't spend your money in the forepart of the meeting, until the expenses of the meeting are fully met. All foreign claims should be left until you pay your own expenses. We have suffered on this account for two or three years.

8. Be careful to get your sleep, and then your nerves will be strong enough to repel scattering influences so prevalent.

These general rules, followed out, will be a benefit to the meeting. These are the experiences of one hundred and forty-nine campmeetings. HIRAM MUNGER.

THE PRODIGAL.

He's returned! Returned? Certainly; and he said something which caused the deepest emotions of sympathy and love. And his acts were quite in keeping with his words. All the family were not apprised of it at the time, but Father knew the very moment when he came to himself, and saw his own wretchedness and poverty, and made up his mind to return and throw himself upon the broad wave of his Father's mercy. And oh, what tender sensibilities at that moment exercised the paternal heart.

But his great plan of justice demands that the poor penitent should put forth an effort for himself. But did the tender-hearted Father wait for the poor, weak culprit to make this long journey unassisted? Nay, verily. But when he saw his penitence, his honest, candid reasoning; taking the fault entirely upon himself (as he should), no hard words of censure for those who understood his sin, but, I have brought it all upon myself, etc.; Father seeing all this loses no time. He does not employ the ordinary means of reaching him, but is represented as running. So speedy is his manner of traveling, the repentant prodigal had not time to get far on his journey ere they met.

And such a meeting! The Father did not, to preserve his great dignity, meet him with a kind of stoical propriety because he had dishonored the family; but with child-like sympathy and love runs and falls on his neck, and kisses him, not once, but, as Dr. Adam Clarke says, "The import of the Greek here is, and kissed him again and again."

And will not other wanderers return, when they realize this is the way the Father feels towards a returning prodigal? Blessed be his name, his true family are in full sympathy with him, have the same blessed spirit. They are so thankful the lost one is saved, and so glad are they of his company and labors, they, like the Father, only wait to hear the sin confessed, and one declaration of unworthiness; it is enough. No eye of suspicion is suffered to rest upon him. Now his dire habiliments of rags must give place to the best robe; leave nothing to distress or remind him of the sorrowful past, but give him the best of everything, and above all aid him by your sympathy and prayers to do a mightier work for God than ever. He desires to redeem the time; help him to influence others to return NOW, while there is enough and to spare, for soon the great store-house of salvation will be closed forever.

I know that the newly reclaimed wanderer, with all his zeal and ardor, cannot constrain the prodigal to return to his Father's house, until his sensibilities are sufficiently awakened to feel his lost and undone condition. He must realize his poverty and wretchedness ere he can be prevailed upon to return. It requires a mighty effort. Pride steps up and says, The dignity of your manhood will ever trail in the dust, if you relent. And Satan, who is intent upon the destruction of all, whispers thus in your ear: If the family would only be more lenient, and do their duty, and take more pains in seeking my welfare, I should take more courage. One thing is certain, Satan likes to have you place the culpability on others instead of nobly confessing, I am the one.

Look here! The Father did not take a horse and carriage and go into the far country seeking the house of sinful mirth and pleasure, and coerce him to return with him ere he saw his poverty and disgrace. The fact is, he knew there was a Father's house, for he had often supped there, and regaled himself upon those celestial bounties, and delighted himself in the abundance of peace. And he knew it might be enjoyed again if he would only HUMBLE himself to repentance.

O, who will longer suffer pride or self-will to deter them from returning, and thus imperil their eternal welfare! O, come! Father and all his true family wait with open arms to embrace and promote you, and then in a few days we will join in singing the eternal song of redemption, casting our crowns at the feet of Him who died to save us.

NEW YORK STATE TENT MATTERS.

In the Crisis of Aug. 12th, the above heading was over an article from the pen of Bro. D. Cogswell, involving the personal interests of myself and others. On account of the misplacing of type, connecting three articles; viz., Brn. P. A. Smith's, D. N. Smith's, and D. Cogswell's, a person not familiar with the facts might find difficulty in placing the proper matter to each relative author. I would first suggest that the designed facts may be most readily obtained by connecting the expression "Well done," in the fortieth line of the article signed D. N. Smith, in fourth column of second page, with the expression, "thou good and faithful servant," in the thirty-sixth line of the article signed D. Cogswell, in the first column of the third page.

Now to the point. No doubt some will be surprised to see the appeal for help to run the New York State tent, when they think of the large collections taken for the benefit of the brethren who go with it; yet it is easy to demonstrate the fact that our tent-meetings are not self-sustaining; and when the expenses are taken out of a large collection, even, the surplus does not go far towards sustaining a family at home. A tent-meeting, to be successful, must be accompanied with good talent, and men of strong physical endurance; and but few such men are ready to run their chances in a tent enterprise. There are some, however; and there are none that are doing more for the cause at large than the faithful few with the tents. Our field of labor is principally where but few at the outset sympathize with us; so that we have to prepare the field for the crop, and wait for the harvest, before we can get much remuneration. All these fruits are sure in time; but we have no right to expect them in undue time; so that to make tent-meetings in new fields practical, it becomes necessary for the old veterans to help bear the burden, which we are sure they will be happy to do when they see we have need, and learn the fact that glorious results follow the tent-meetings.

There is no possible way to get the truth before so many people, in so short a time, as with a tent. All classes feel at liberty to come and go at option; and the word falls on much good ground, which will in due time yield fruit to the glory of God.

The New York State Tent is blessed with the faithful labors of Bro. Edward Cotton, as tent-master, who gives his time to this object with no remuneration, save board; as he has no one but himself to provide for, and is so circumstanced that he can thus do. May the good Lord so direct his servants and stewards, that the tents shall still go to bless others before the Master comes to reckon with all. They must be sustained, and will be. I do believe that means so efficient in gathering men into the fold of Christ, as are the mission tents, will be kept in the field. I am ready still to sacrifice to this end. WM. A. FENN.

THE MAINE TENT MISSION.

Dear Brn. in Maine:—It is known to you that we have a tent in this State to move from place to place, and in which to preach "the gospel of the kingdom" to thousands who are not reached by other labors. It performs real mission work, and needs the prayers and some of the money of those who love the truth and wish to save souls. It has been in the field two months this season, and in new places, under the charge of Bro. Libby, with what success we cannot now tell. He wished to leave it to other hands, and, at the request of the committee, I once more take charge of it, hoping the Lord will be with us and bless the effort.

We shall, the Lord willing, pitch the tent in Pittsfield, for a meeting to commence Sunday, Sept. 6, and through the campmeeting the following week; and then go to other places already engaged, as the Lord may indicate. Two preachers, with the tent, can usually accomplish as much as ten preachers ordinarily. It is an enterprise that you should sustain. Jesus is soon coming. Souls are perishing. Let us rally and do all we can to save souls. I. C. WELLCOME.

FOR DISTRIBUTION.

We have on hand a supply of back numbers of the "Glad Tidings," which ought to be distributed, and thus help the cause of truth, and help us in time of need. They will do good wherever scattered, whether among unconverted, or church members of other denominations. We will send them for less than cost to those who will engage in the work of distribution. Sent post paid at the rate of 75 cents per dozen. Each number contains thirty-two octavo pages of choice matter. WM. H. SPENCER.

For the World's Crisis.

The Young Pilgrim for Sept. 1st.

The reading matter and illustrations in this number will both please and profit the young pilgrim reader. The great theme of most of the articles and stories is Jesus,—the dying Jesus, the coming of Jesus, the kingdom of Jesus, love to Jesus, praying to Jesus, speaking for Jesus, working for Jesus, living for Jesus. It is full of Jesus, and full of good instruction for the young. Two thousand extra copies are printed to scatter freely. Send for a copy to show to your friends. New subscribers can commence with the July or October numbers. The following is the table of contents:

Behold, the Bridegroom cometh! The coming kingdom; The two resurrections (Bible questions); Are you in real earnest? Do you love Jesus? No word for Jesus? Jesus died for me! Live for Jesus! Begin today! (with a cut); Obeying orders (with a cut); Evil communications corrupt good manners—story of the two parrots (with a beautiful cut); The book of thanks; Be kind to your mother; Pulling weeds; The rumseller—what he contributes to society. The Pledge, (with a cut); Be personal, to your scholars, etc. etc.

GOOD ADVICE.

The following excellent advice was given by Bro. Wm. Miller, of Low Hampton, N. Y. Though he is now dead, let him speak. His words are weighty, and deserve a certain remembrance. He says:—

"When we write a letter to a brother to complain of some of his opinions, let us consider of it three days before we write: pray God nine times to direct us, before we take up the pen; read it in the room of our brother three times before we send it; seal it only when we love him for being God-like; send it when we would delight to be the bearer, and while it is going, think with what tears of joy he will devour the contents; and remember not to forget to pay postage. And when we write to Advent papers, be very sure you have doubled the caution, and I will warrant all good men will read your communications with pleasure, and the devil will be insolvent for want of capital."

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. S. Strain.

Bro. Grant:—Though a stranger in the flesh to you, yet I trust we are not strangers by that tie which binds those together who look for the speedy coming of Christ. I am one of those hated ones, my brother; but am willing to endure all things for the truth's sake.

I have been a minister of the Des Moines Iowa Christian Conference for five years; but, like Apollos, needed instruction in the way of truth. But at length I fell in company with Bro. Jonathan Simmons of this city, who put the Crisis in my hands; and though both of us are identified with another body of christians than those you represent, yet we sought together after truth. I owe much to good Bro. Simmons, who is a man full of love and good works.

I would also mention Bro. White, who takes the Voice of the West, as one who looks for our Lord's coming, and others, whose names I have not space to mention, who are full of hope, and tired of cold formality.

I have before me a work entitled "What is Man?" by Miles Grant, of which I would speak, though I have only read it partly through; yet I most cordially agree with the author, and thank God that it ever came to my hands; which was on this wise: A few evenings since, a man, blind and disfigured, called at our place of business, and tried to sell a few books; among them was "Key of Truth," by the peddler himself; Stories of Africa, and "What is Man?" by M. Grant. Having seen a notice of the last named, in the Crisis, I purchased it, and "Key of Truth." A few words in conversation revealed the facts to the blind pilgrim that we, too, looked for a new heaven and earth, wherein the good shall dwell eternally; and it seemed to rejoice his poor soul, and refresh us. Give me the blind man's submissive spirit. May God bless him with a crown of glory, at his coming, is my prayer. Brethren, pray for us. Yours in hope of the speedy coming of Christ,

John S. Strain.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

Bro. Grant:—I have many letters from our brethren, and others, asking many questions about Florida, the climate, and business of different kinds; and how one can get a living, or secure a home cheap; and how much it costs to come; and what route would be best to take; and what diseases Northern men are exposed to; and if a Northern person's life would be safe here among people which have been in rebellion; and what is the price of lands; and how large are the farms, and what kind of crops they raise here, and what kind of market, and the price of articles to subsist on; and whether they could purchase household articles here, or must bring them with them. I have had to write four letters a day sometimes. Some send a postage stamp, and some seem to think a preacher out in Florida must be rich,—of course he is prospectively. But can they tell how to purchase paper, and envelopes, and stamps, and his own clothes, and support a family at home, and preach for nothing, without the promise of one cent from any individual on earth? If they can solve that problem, then they will take the hint, that saying "God bless you," that "I am interested in that glorious work in Florida," and "hope you will have good success," will not pay all of the bills. They are very cheering, so far as they go.

Permit me then, Bro. Grant, to publish in the Crisis an answer to some of the questions, and this may save some others the trouble and expense of writing to obtain such information.

I would acknowledge the receipt of $6.00 from Bro. and Sr. A. A. Havens, of Plato, Lorain Co., Ohio, who expect to move here next fall; and also 25 cents from two others, who have written to me, for which they have my thanks.

It costs thirty dollars to come to Jacksonville from New York, first cabin passage; and I think fifteen dollars in the steerage. You can ship to Charleston, S. C., and change on to the boats City Point and Dictator, and come direct to this place; or you can come to Savannah from New York, and take the same boats, or the cars at Savannah, for the same price; but have it stated on your ticket. It takes about four days from New York. Bring no luggage but what you can pack into trunks.

You can purchase almost any thing here that you wish. Your stuff will bring something at home. If you bring it, the transportation may cost more than it is worth. Rents are high in the centre of the city; but you can purchase a lot very cheap, and put up a house that you can live in very cheap. Lumber is only $16.00 per thousand feet, and you can live in it without plastering, the weather is so mild in the winter. If you want a farm, you can get Government land for just the expense of taking it up,—about $8.00 for one hundred and sixty acres; or you can purchase improved farms very cheap, according to their location and goodness of the soil. There is a chance for all kinds of business, to a certain extent, as anywhere else. As there is expected a great rush from the North next fall, of course, as the people increase, the demand will increase; also for every kind of business; but a person needs to bring money with him, because money is scarce, and that is the reason the present is the best time to select a place. Lots, houses and farms are being taken up fast, and of course the prices must increase.

A man could take up land and make a fortune here by just raising sweet potatoes and shipping them north. The Board of Trade is making great efforts to get steamers to run direct from here to New York, so that a great business will be carried on in raising all kinds of vegetables. Some have already commenced preparing their lands for that purpose. With a little fertilizing, the land will produce abundantly, and the products carried to New York, about the time that they plant in the spring at the North, will bring a great price. Sugar, and the splendid Florida syrup, can be manufactured to any extent also.

A man in health, who could not get a living here one third easier than at the North, ought to report himself at some institution, where they have overseers to keep them to work. People are no more exposed to diseases here than at the North, but they are of a different kind, and they would not be so bad as they are here, if they were careful; for most all who become sick here are so by exposure. Chills and fevers are the most common, and some other kinds of fevers; but as a whole, it is healthier here in the summer than at the North; and in the winter there is hardly any sickness. For some reason, not known, it has been more sickly seventy miles west of here, around Lake City, than it has ever been before. So far as the boat is concerned, I had rather live here in the summer than at the North. The mercury in the hottest weather ranges from 92° to 97°. Every afternoon we have the advantage of a sea breeze, which counteracts the heat; and the evenings, nights and mornings are most delightful.

Northern people are as safe here, so far as I can discern, as any where, if they will not meddle with politics, and let the past suffice; and not begin to glory in the downfall of the southern people in having to give up their "institution." They do not like that; and who would? Is not human nature about the same the world over? A person does not like to be pounded after he says "enough."

A person that is subject to the liver complaint had not better come to Florida; but persons in the first stages of consumption, or who have the asthma, will be very likely to find it to their advantage.

You can raise here apples, peaches, plums, pomegranates, oranges, lemons, grapes, figs, bananas, all kinds of berries, pea nuts, and flowers of all kinds. You can have a summer garden, and also a winter garden, and vegetables the year round. The oak shade trees and the orange trees have their green leaves on all winter. The oak leaf only leaves the tree when the new one puts out in the spring, the first of March. The soil is sandy, very easy to work. The people in the country are unlearned, and have hardly any schools. They have some here, and in Lake City. There is room for more good school teachers. Yours in the blessed hope,

P. A. Smith.

From Bro. P. B. Manning.

Dear Brn. in Christ:—I seat myself to drop a few lines to inform you of my situation. Well, I am still a great sufferer. O how I long to see Jesus, and be made like him. I have no home in this world, but I am in hopes that I shall have a good one soon. Glory be to God for his goodness to me. Now I should be glad to meet with the dear saints of God at the campmeeting in Springfield, but I am not able to attend. I do hope that the brethren and sisters will look to God in my behalf. Dear Brn., it does make me feel bad to think that I cannot get any better; but I rejoice in God that he is raising some of the dear saints. I do believe that if the brethren will follow the words of James, that God will give me better health than I have had for a number of years. O my God, do have mercy on me at this time, and forgive me all my sins.

Beloved, we are in strange times. Let us heed what Paul says, in 2 Tim. 4: 1,—"I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom, Preach the word; be instant in season; out of season; reprove, rebuke, with all long-suffering and doctrine; for the time will come when (or has come, I do believe) they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."

O my dear brethren and sisters, are all of the children ready to meet the Lord, if Jesus should come this year? Do get ready to meet Jesus. I see many of the dear saints are not in the place that they have been. O I do pity them when I find they are getting into this wicked world at such a rate.

Dear brethren, we are down almost to the judgment. O how many there are that will cry Lord, Lord, open to me; but Jesus will say, I never knew you; depart, ye cursed. O what a time it will be. Your brother in Christ,

B. P. Manning.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

Bro. Grant:—Please permit us to acknowledge through the Crisis the receipt of anonymous letters containing money, as follows: June 8th, from Brattleboro, Vt., $1.00; June 12th, from Lowell, Mass., $1.00; June 16th, from Concord, N. H., $5.00; July 15th, from Alton, N. H., $1.00. Surely the Lord will abundantly reward and bless all who have ministered to us in our need. Pray for us that we may grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord. Gratefully your Bro. and Sr.,

A MOTHER'S RECORD.

In New Britain, Ct., on the morning of May 31st, our beloved daughter, Maria Louisa, after many months of suffering, fell asleep in Jesus, at the age of twenty-three years, six months.

It is a sad duty for a mother to perform to record the death of a child. Yet such is mine. Our little circle, so long unbroken, has been invaded by an enemy, and our eldest child, and only daughter, our greatest earthly comfort and blessing, has fallen by his hand. Only those whose hearts have been stricken by the same affliction, and who have tasted of the same bitter cup, know how great is our sorrow and loneliness.

But the pale sleeper, sweetly resting amid the flowers on the hill, almost within sight of our windows, knows nothing of her mother's suffering during these dreary weeks that have passed since we laid her away in her place of rest. Praise God, for her there is no more suffering, sorrow, nor tears. Forever safe and forever saved, sleeping in Jesus. And "them who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." This thought and this blessed hope alone can dry our tears and bring a healing balm to our wounded hearts.

She was baptized at Wilbraham some five years ago, and has ever maintained a christian life and conversation.

The last months of her life were precious seasons, never to be forgotten; seasons in which she freely expressed all the feelings of her heart to me; and when we often together in prayer poured out our heart's desire to Him who is the refuge and strength of his people, she would often say, "What should I do now, if it were not for my hope, and if I could not trust in the Lord!" The evidence of her own acceptance with the Lord was very bright and clear, amounting to a surety. This she freely expressed to all she saw.

Her funeral was attended on Tuesday afternoon, June 2nd. The Baptist church kindly opened their house of worship for us, and it was filled with sympathizing friends and interested listeners. At her own request, Bro. Rufus Wendell preached from 1 Thess. 4: 18-18. Many who were unacquainted with our views heard them presented for the first time. The blessed hope of the gospel, the hope of life by a resurrection from the dead, through Jesus our precious Life-giver, at his appearing, was held forth in its beauty and in power, to the comfort of mourning hearts, and a trust that God may thereby be glorified. Bro. W. S. Campbell and the Baptist minister also assisted in the exercises of the occasion.

Since my daughter's death, in looking over her diary for 1867, I find for the last day of the year, after speaking of the year, with all its changes, trials, etc., when turning her mind to the future, she says: "We know not what is before us, and should be thankful that we do not. The hand that writes these lines may be silent and cold in the dark grave before another year shall close; but if Jesus himself will be my guide, I shall walk through the valley in peace. . . . O my Father, help me to be able to pray from my heart, "Thy will, not mine be done. Prepare us for all that awaits us in the future and save us at last."

The Lord grant that the many who knew our child, and all who read these lines, may be able to say, as she did, "whether I live or die, wake or sleep, I know I am the Lord's, and I am safe."

Spencer. Died in Scituate, June 28th, 1868, Bro. Wm. W. Spencer, in the sixty-fourth year of his age.

Bro. Spencer was converted nearly thirty years ago, and commenced preaching the word as he understood it about twenty years ago. He was a very zealous, consistent christian. About fifteen years since, he listened to a discourse by Bro. E. Bellows on the soon coming of Christ, and its adherent truths, which caused him to search the word more closely; and he soon became convinced it was the doctrine of the Bible, and embraced it, and remained a strong advocate of the same to the last. Funeral services by the writer. Text, Ps. 37: 37.

Bachelder. Died in Lancaster, N. H., Aug. 6th, 1868, John J. Bachelder, aged thirty-nine years.

He was awakened in 1854 by the cry: "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" and gave his heart to God, that he might be fully prepared for a better kingdom; but for some time past he had lost some of the ardor of his first love. Quite recently he gave himself anew to God, and assured his sorrowing friends that he expected to awake again in the likeness of Christ. Services by Rev. Mr. Hitchcock.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

War Rumors in Europe.—In an article occupying seven and a half columns of La Liberte, M. E. de Girardin exhibits the present situation of France, and concludes by indicating a declaration of war against Prussia as the necessary preliminary to a general disarmament:

"It is impossible, he urges, that France can disarm in the presence of an aggressive power like Prussia, and it is equally impossible that France can continue to endure the burdens which a situation of armed peace imposes on her. He imagines a letter from the Emperor to his Minister of Foreign Affairs, requiring him to ask Prussia to call a Convention to discuss the state of Europe, and in case of non-compliance, he puts into the mouth of the Emperor, 'an address to the French nation,' which would be equivalent to a declaration of war against Prussia.

A Berlin correspondent writes:—On all sides there are assurances and declarations of peace; and yet, strange as it may seem, there is nothing but apprehensions of war in all diplomatic and military circles. I have had opportunity of being convinced of this several times lately, and the declarations of Marshal Niel and of M. Routher have put the climax to these apprehensions.

DOMESTIC.

Assassinations in Texas.—The Austin (Texas) Republican says that Hon. A. O. Cooley, the only loyal member of the State Senate of 1866, was shot while standing at the door of his house in Fredericksburg on the 10th inst., by a rebel assassin from Fayette county. Wound probably mortal. A letter has also been received stating that Wheelock H. Upton, a son of Judge Upton, of Refugio county, one of the most sterling Union men in Western Texas, was taken out by a mob of men, the first part of July, and hung. Mr. Upton was a man of character, and no cause is known for his assassination, except the fact that he was well known for his loyalty.

The Illinois Cattle Disease Fatal to Human Life.—The Troy Times says fatal results from the Illinois cattle disease have not been limited to animals alone in that locality:

"A young man named Abram Smith, employed by Abram G. Wands, who also lost two cows by the disease, skinned one of the cows that died on Wednesday last. His hands and arms were somewhat scratched by berry bushes, and in this manner the poisonous matter or virus was innoculated into his arm. The limb began to swell and pain him very much. He consulted a physician, but his condition rapidly grew worse, and on Saturday resulted in his death. A sister of the deceased, who attended him in his last illness, kissed him after his death, and was also infected by the disease. It is thought she cannot recover. These facts show that caution should be used, not only in preventing the spread of the contagion, but in touching the deceased animals.

The Crops of 1868.—New York, Aug. 13.—Full details of the crop reports from all parts of the country are printed. The wheat crop is larger than last year in West Virginia, Indiana, Ohio, Missouri, Kansas, Utah, Colorado, Montano, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut and New Hampshire, and the quality is excellent. In Georgia, South Carolina, Alabama, and Texas, the reports are not so good, the yield being indifferent. In Louisiana, Arkansas, Kentucky, Mississippi, Maryland, South Western Virginia, Central Tennessee, North Carolina, Delaware, and Vermont, the crop is an average one.

Oats—In Kentucky, Tennessee, West California, Indiana, Missouri, Kansas, Ohio, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa, Vermont, New York and Illinois, especially in the latter States, the yield is large, while in Louisiana, Mississippi, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina and the Southern States it will not be more than an average crop. The rains lately have injured the crops in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and Maine. The barley crop will be an average one.

Corn—This crop is very large and the quality remarkably good. The yield this year will be fully one-third more than last year. This is especially so in the Southern States.

More than an average crop of hay will be realized. In Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Indiana, Ohio, Delaware and Maryland the yield is very large and excellent.

Reports about cotton are very encouraging, and fully an average yield is expected. In parts of Florida the caterpillar is doing damage.

Sugar promises well, but very little is planted.

Fruits are almost a total failure, especially in the Middle States. The peach crop will not be half what it was last year. In the extreme South it looks better. In New York apples look better than almost anywhere else.

The potatoto crop is generally large and good.

Heavy mildew and lice have killed the hops in Pennsylvania.

☞ A striking illustration of the force of a mother's love for her child has recently been exhibited in Iowa. The circumstances are reported in noticing the pardon, by Governor Merrill, of a woman, Catharine Mc. Ardle, who had been sentenced four years ago to the State Penitentiary for life. She confessed to the murder of her husband and was sentenced to be hanged, but her sentence was commuted by Gov. Stone. It was afterward found that she was entirely innocent, and that her son was the guilty person. To save him from the gallows she had avowed that she was guilty of the crime.

Items.

☞ The Chinese do everything in exact opposition to other nations. They wear heels on the toes of their boots, label their books on the front of the leaves, print them in perpendicular columns, wear white for mourning, and have short names in proportion to their rank. In Europe, royal personages are seldom content with less than half a dozen names; while in China, mandarins of the first class, and the Emperor himself, have disyllabic appellations, leaving to portions and servants cognomens as long and involved as those of American Indians.

☞ By act of Congress approved July 27, 1868, weekly newspapers, properly folded and addressed, when sent to regular subscribers, in the county where printed and published, are not subject to any charge when delivered by the office nearest the office of publication, but such papers, when delivered by letter carriers, are chargeable with postage at the rate of five cents per quarter, and such postage must be prepaid for a term of not less than one quarter or more than a year.

☞ By the end of the present year, Utah is expected to contain a Mormon population of eighty thousand. Salt Lake city alone is said to have a population of twenty thousand. In the Territory there are eighty-six thriving towns and cities, nearly one hundred post offices, one hundred churches, one hundred and twenty school houses, three theatres, with grist mills, saw mills, woolen mills, and most branches of mechanical industry in abundance.

☞ In Chicago the open air religious meetings held on Sunday evenings have degenerated into a series of wrangling disputes between Methodists, Spiritualists, Rationalists and others, as a result of a challenge issued by some of the speakers or an open discussion. Of course large crowds are attracted, and the most extreme sentiments find response in cheers from portions of the crowd.

☞ One of the most wonderful cities in the world is Bankok, the capitol of Siam. On either side of the wide, majestic stream, moored in regular streets and alleys, extending as far as the eye can reach, are upwards of seventy thousand neat little houses floating on a compact raft of bamboos, and the whole intermediate space of the river is one dense mass of ships, junks, and boats of every conceivable shape, color and size.

☞ The roses in the gardens of the Shakers at New Lebanon, N. Y., attract great attention from their luxuriant foliage and fine bloom. The "brother" in charge says that his success in the cultivation is to be attributed to the free use of salt as a top dressing for the soil of the beds. The salt kills rose insects of every kind, and improves the health and vigor of the plants.

☞ Isaac Foster of North Andover has in his possession apples which were gathered upon his place in 1866, 1867 and 1868. The first are fair eating, the second better and the third best. The first are fair eating, the second better and the third best. The oldest are in a very good state of preservation.

☞ The Kingdom of Italy presents a fearful catalogue of crime for the year 1866. There were in that year 8,157 murders, 588 suicides, 9 deaths by duelling, and 6 deaths by capital punishment. Number of escaped criminals 517 refractory to the conscription 3,969, deserters 1, 150 or in all 5,536 living by pillage of the inhabitants.

☞ To get rid of mosquitoes, take of gum camphor a piece almost one-third the size of an egg, evaporate it by placing it in a tin vessel and holding it over a lamp or candle, taking care it does not ignite. The smoke will soon fill the room and expel the mosquitoes.

☞ The Ku-Klux of Tennessee continue their pastime of beating and shooting freedmen, driving them from their homes, and burning their school houses. The poor creatures are driven by scores to take refuge in the large towns and cities to escape the bloody rage of those outlaws and ruffians.

☞ Elder Knapp, speaking of long prayers, once said: "When Peter endeavoring to walk upon the water to meet his master, and was about sinking, had his supplication been as long as the introduction to one of our modern prayers, before he got through it he would have been 50 feet under water."

☞ Pithole City, that once lively place in the Pennsylvania oil region, where every drill struck oil, has pretty much faded out and gone back to its native wilderness. The Chase House, which cost $80,000, is being taken down and removed to Pleasantville.

☞ An engineer named Kelly, on the Hudson River railroad, has invented an attachment to a locomotive which carries the sparks as they emerge from the smoke stack, and conducts them to the ground beneath the locomotive. It is in use on the Hudson River railroad.

☞ The Rock Island Union publishes the following: A young man named Bailey was recently bitten by a rattlesnake while binding in a wheat field. A young lady sucked the wound until the arrival of a physician, when proper remedies were applied, and Bailey's life saved.

☞ The famous French musket, Chassepot, is found to be defective when compared with the newly invented Wilson rifle. It is said that the French Government has decided to give up the first weapon to replace it by the latter, a change which will involve an expenditure of 180,000,000 francs.

☞ Several hundred families, styling themselves "Friends of Jerusalem," are going to leave Wurtemburg in August next and settle in Palestine. They base their creed on certain chapters of Jeremiah.

☞ Morals at Saratoga are so bad that a French gentleman of prominence, and accustomed to the licentiousness of the Imperial Capital, says it is no place for ladies.

☞ William B. Astor of New York is reported to be worth one hundred and twenty millions of dollars. He pays a tax on one-half of that sum and his real estate is worth double its assessed value.

☞ Twelve policemen have been either killed or wounded in New York the present month by desperadoes, most of whom are likely to escape punishment through the corruption of New York courts.

☞ Castile soap alone should be used to wash oil-cloths with. Soap containing an excess of soda or potash injures the surface and destroys the oil-cloth ultimately.

☞ It is recently reported in England that Dr. Pusey, and also Dr. Hamilton, Bishop of Salisbury, have each joined the Catholic Communion, thus quitting the twilight of Anglican Ritualism.

☞ The Ku-Klux make no half way jobs. A Tennessee paper says when they go out to visit a house for the purpose of killing, they bring spades and picks along to bury the corpse.

☞ The tobacco plant is said to be the greatest robber of the soil that grows, a ton of tobacco exhausting the soil as much as fourteen tons of wheat and fifteen of corn.

☞ There are at present seventeen lines of steamers, making 1322 voyages per annum, between England and America.

☞ It is said that more murders have been followed by the suicides of perpetrators this year, in the United States, than for any ten years before.

☞ Forty-four locomotives for the Union Pacific Railway have already passed through Chicago, and twenty-eight more are to arrive.

☞ The fish are dying in great numbers in Rock river, Wisconsin, owing, it is said, to the extreme heat of the past few weeks.

☞ Mrs. Stowe, in her letters from Europe, attributes the premature decay of teeth in America to the baneful effect of caustic alkalies in bread.

☞ The harvest for 1868 is announced as being bad in several provinces of the Russian Empire.

☞ Prince Napoleon employs six cooks, and spends $20,000 a year on his table.

☞ The 'Moniteur' says, the French Atlantic cable will be finished by August, 1869.

☞ The German population of New York city is estimated at 250,000.

☞ Turkey has lost 40,000 men in Crete.

☞ Wisconsin has fifteen thousand acres in hops.

☞ When you are an anvil, endure like an anvil; when you are a hammer, strike like a hammer.

☞ Buy what you do not want, and you will sell what you cannot spare.

☞ If you wish to be well served, serve yourself.

☞ A good heart conquers ill-fortune.

☞ He preaches well who lives well.

☞ To mad words lend deaf ears.

☞ To refuse and to delay giving is all the same.

☞ Against God's wrath no house is strong.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a General Campmeeting will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the new camp-ground, beautifully located, about one and a quarter miles from the R. R. Depot, on land of C. W. Chapin, Esq., known as "Chapin's Grove," commencing Monday, August 24th, and continue one week.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the new and commodious boarding house on the ground. Board 85 cents per day. Breakfast, or supper, 35 cents each. Dinner at 50 cents, excepting Sunday, Aug. 30th, when it will be 75 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad is reduced one third, which will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices, between Boston and Worcester at Grantville, Holliston, Natic, Westboro, Milford, and Southville; beyond Worcester, at the usual stations. On the New Haven and Hartford R. R., fare is reduced one third; tickets to be obtained at New Haven, Meriden, Berlin, Hartford, and Windsor Locks. On the Conn. R. R., fare is reduced one third from So. Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from Aug. 20th to Sept. 1st, must be called for at the ticket offices; and they must also be signed by the Secretary at the campmeeting. Remember this.

On the Mass. and Vt. R. Road, persons will purchase regular tickets at the offices for Greenfield, and then get their tickets on the Conn. R. R. for Springfield. All that come on this road from Brattleboro, Vernon, Fitchburg, Athol, etc., having purchased the usual ticket, will have a free return pass, on application to the Secretary.

On the Worcester and Nashua R. R., and Concord R. Road,—friends from Concord, Manchester, and Nashua, N. H., Groton Junction, and Clinton, will purchase regular tickets at the stations for Worcester, at which place they will purchase tickets for Springfield; and free return passes from Worcester will be furnished them by the Secretary on the ground.

On the Providence and Worcester R. R., campmeeting tickets at one third discount can be obtained at the depot in Providence, good from Aug. 20th to Sept. 1st. Call for campmeeting tickets.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have free return passes by application to the Secretary, on the camp-ground.

Friends coming from New York can come and return for $4.50 by taking the boat at New Haven, and thence by cars to Springfield. The boat which leaves New York at 3.15 P. M., connects with the train at the steamboat wharf at New Haven. The other boat, which leaves New York at 11 o'clock P. M., reaches New Haven in time for the early morning train; but passengers will have to go across the city by horse cars to the depot of the Hartford and New Haven R. R. Tickets for the Rail Road to the campmeeting will be sold on the steamboats. Passengers buying through tickets, will be furnished with a return ticket, which will be good only when endorsed by the Secretary of the camp-ground.

Levi Collins has been engaged by the committee to convey passengers from the R. R. depot to the camp-ground for 10 cents each. Trunks 10 cents each; small trunk and valises, 5 cts. each. Please go in Collins' carriages.

It is so arranged that the friends who wish to go from Springfield to Alton Bay, at the close of the Springfield meeting, can take the cars at Worcester, and go to the Alton Bay campmeeting and return to Worcester for one fare.

Cars leave the Boston and Albany depot, Boston, at 5, 7, and 8½ A. M.; and at 2½, 4½, and 8½ P. M.

Notice.

Danielsonville to Springfield excursion tickets on the Norwich and Worcester R. R., from Danielsonville to Worcester and return, can be had at Danielsonville, Ct., at $1.50 each. After Saturday, Aug. 22d, inquire at Post Office, and until then of H. F. Carpenter.

Advent Christian Association.

The ninth annual meeting of this Society will be held at Springfield, Mass., commencing Tuesday, August 25th, 1868, at 4 o'clock P. M.

"The members of this Society shall consist of all pastors and evangelists, co-operating with the Society, and of delegates from churches also co-operating, and of all officers of this Association. Each church shall be allowed one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members."—Constitution, Art. IV.

H. F. Carpenter, Clerk.

Amer. Adv. Mission Society.

The annual meeting of the American Advent Mission Society will be held at Springfield, on the National Advent Camp-ground, commencing Wednesday, Aug. 26th, at 4 o'clock P. M.

A. W. Sibley, Secretary.

P. S. Members of, and delegates to, the Advent Christian Association, are members of the A. A. Mission Society. A. W. S.

F. U. M. Association.

The F. U. M. Association will hold their first session of the fourth annual meeting at the Springfield camp-ground, Mass., Aug. 26th, at half past eight A. M., in the New York State Mission Tent. It is hoped that all interested, actively or sympathetically, will endeavor to be present. Come with praying hearts and open hands, that we may carry during the cold winter, which will soon be upon us, both life to the perishing, and bread to the hungry. For the Association,

E. S. Jennings, President.
A. E. Smith, Vice President.
M. McKinstry, Secretary.
E. Hobbs, Assist. Secretary.

Prof. C. F. Hudson's Library.

We are informed that the choice and valuable library of the late Prof. C. F. Hudson, which contains much to interest the student of the Bible, and a number of rare and valuable books on the themes of life and immortality, is now ready for sale. And as many of his friends have desired to obtain some of the books because of their own intrinsic value, and also as mementoes of him, it has been thought best that the books be carried to the Springfield campmeeting, that there may be a public opportunity for all who desire to obtain them.

Maine Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting held at Pittsfield, Me., on Bro. John Drew's land, where it was held last year, commencing Monday, Sept. 7th, 1868. The Maine Mission Tent is expected to be at the meeting. A general invitation is extended to the ministers of the word to be present, with single eyes and wise hearts, that we may glorify God and win souls to Christ. Preachers coming from Alton Bay will please do what they can for us in bringing tents, etc. Saints and sinners are invited to come from every quarter, and praise and pray and find salvation. The camp-ground is two and a half miles south from Pittsfield station, on the bank of the Sabastacook river. Stages will run from the station to the ground. Brethren should make a special effort to bring tents and all camping necessities. There will be a boarding tent, and horse-keeping on the ground. For the brethren,

P. A. Baker.
Jeremiah Carr.

Notice.

Providence permitting, the Advent Mission Tent, owned by Brn. Kingsbury, Stone, Ford, and others, will go from Springfield to the Alton Bay meeting, and from there to the Deerfield campmeeting, which closes Sept. 17th. If there is any place near Deerfield, or between that and Boston, where the tent is wanted to hold a meeting, brethren will please inform me at Alton or Deerfield, while the meetings are in session.

Enoch Morrill.

Notice.

There will be a meeting of Adventists at Glen Rock Grove, near Usquepaugh, R. I., Sabbath, Aug. 30th. Eld. J. T. Dixon and others will be present to preach the word. Services in the A. M. and P. M.

To my Brethren and Friends.

Having removed from Yarmouth to Portland, I shall be pleased to have you call on me, at the store of Bro. S. B. Gowell, 149 Middle Street.

R. R. York.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a General Campmeeting will be held at Alton Bay, N. H., commencing Sunday, August 30th, and hold through the week, and over the following Lord's day. Ample provisions will be made for board and horse keeping. Board at 80 cents per day. Breakfast and supper, 30 cents each; dinner 50 cents; horse-keeping at 75 cents per day, hay and grain. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Arrangements have been made with the Rail Road and Steam Boat companies, as follows:

Boston and Maine R. R. Trains leave Boston for the meeting at 7.30 A. M., 12 M., and 3 P. M. Half fare from Lawrence. Purchase regular tickets at Boston for Lawrence, and campmeeting tickets at South Lawrence and all intermediate stations for Alton Bay.

Portland, Saco, and Portsmouth R. R. Trains leave Portland at 8.40 A. M. and 2.30 P. M. Two thirds fare from Portland to Dover, and half fare from Dover to Alton Bay. Purchase campmeeting tickets at Portland and all intermediate stations.

Grand Trunk R. R. Purchase campmeeting tickets at the various stations for Portland and return, stating that you want them good for ten days. Fare about two thirds.

Portland and Kennebec R. R. Tickets from Skowhegan and all intermediate stations to Portland. Free return passes furnished on the camp-ground.

Boston, Concord, and Montreal R. R. Trains leave Concord at 10.30 A. M. and 3.25 P. M. for the Wiers. Trains leave Littleton for the Wiers at 9 A. M. Each train connecting at the Wiers with boat direct to Alton Bay. An extra boat will be furnished on the Lake, which will give us much better accommodations than we have been able to secure in past years.

Concord and Lawrence R. R. Trains leave Concord at 7.30 A. M. and 3.30 P. M. for New Market Junction and Alton Bay. Trains leave Portsmouth at 8 A. M. for New Market Junction. A baggage car will be run from Portsmouth to Alton Bay without change on Monday, Aug. 31st; also from Concord Saturday, Aug. 29th. Half fare on the Concord Road.

Worcester and Nashua R. R. Trains leave Worcester at 6.30 and 11.15 A. M., via. Nashua and Concord for the Wiers. Purchase campmeeting tickets at Worcester and all intermediate stations. Half fare. A car will be furnished from Worcester (probably from Springfield) on Monday, and Tuesday, also, if sufficient number to fill it, expressly for campmeeting passengers, and will run to the Lake (Wiers) without change, thence by safe and desirable boat to the meeting, giving a beautiful Lake ride of twenty-five miles, which makes this route very pleasant and desirable.

Fare to Alton Bay Camp-Ground.

All that go on the Portland and Kennebec R. R. will purchase their tickets at the station they start from to Dover, and receive tickets on the ground to return home free. And all going on the Androscoggin R. R. will purchase tickets for Brunswick, and from Brunswick to Dover, and will receive tickets on the ground to return free. Tickets good from Aug. 29th to Sept. 8th, 1848.

Jesse Partridge.

Notice.

The Steamer Naugatuck will run from Melvin Village to the Alton Bay meeting, as follows: Leave Melvin Village Tuesday, Sept. 1st, at 7 o'clock A. M. Bay at 7.20. Tuftonborough Neck, 7.45. Arrive at Alton about 9 A. M. Returning, will leave Alton for Melvin Village at the close of the afternoon service; running thus each day through the meeting. It will also leave Alton for Melvin Village Monday, Sept. 7th, at 10 A. M. Fare 37 cents each way.

T. W. Piper.

Notice.

Some are inquiring about tents to rent at Alton Bay Campmeeting. All who wish to hire tents there, please write to R. E. Ladd, Springfield, Mass., and tents can be taken from there to Alton Bay.

A General Ministerial Conference in the Great West.

We desire the attention of the Advent Christian Ministers of the various Western States on a matter of no little importance. If we are not proclaiming cunningly devised fables in announcing the immediate coming of the Messiah to reign on earth, we need to engage more vigorously and harmoniously in the great proclamation.

That we may consult together, and devise means conducive to this end, we take the responsibility to appoint and call a General Conference of Ministers, to meet at DeKalb, Ill., in connection with the campmeeting to be held there, the first week in September.

As there is not time for the various conferences to select delegates (which should have been done, if this call had been made at an earlier date,) we invite all Advent Christian ministers in good standing in the various conferences to come. We invite you to come from Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Virginia, Michigan, Ohio, Tennessee, New York, and Ontario. Let every church help their minister to come. Provide him with the necessary means. It will do him good, and you too. Our action gives character to the body. Let us act for God and for our coming King, and act while we may.

J. V. Himes.
Wm. Sheldon.

Notice.

The fourth annual meeting of the Western Advent Christian Publishing Association will be held at De Kalb, Ill., in connection with the General Campmeeting for 1868. The first formal meeting of the Association will convene on Wednesday, Sept. 2d, at 10 A. M., at which time the usual reports will be presented. Members who wish to vote by proxy may do so by notifying the Secretary, stating the name of the person chosen as proxy. But no person can act as a proxy who is not a member of the Association.

Wm. L. Himes, Secretary.

Notice.

Providence permitting, there will be a two or three days meeting at the Advent Christian Chapel, in the town of Thorold, P. O. (Canada West), to commence on Thursday, Sept. 3d, 1868, at 7 P. M., and continue over Sunday, as the brethren may arrange. Elder C. W. Low and the subscriber, and perhaps others, are expected to be present to administer the word. Let there be a general rally to this meeting from Canada, and also New York. For the Brn.,

C. F. Sweet.

P. S. Bro. Bank will be at Suspension Bridge, Thursday noon, to convey a load of passengers to the meeting. C. F. S.

Maine Central Quar. Conference.

The next session of this conference will be held at the Town House in Rome, commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 17th, and continue over the Lord's day. Brethren and sisters are invited to attend and unite in the worship of the Lord, and the work of saving souls. Let us meet in the spirit of our Master.

Wm. I. Wright, Sec.

Quarterly Meeting.

A quarterly meeting will be held at Norwalk, Ohio, commencing Saturday, Sept. 6th, at 2 o'clock P. M., to continue over the Lord's day. The friends of the cause of truth in the vicinity are invited to attend. Bro. G. W. Stetson will please change his appointment from North Fairfield to this place. In behalf of the church at Norwalk,

P. Alling, Clerk.

Notice.

The seventh annual gathering of the people of God in Darien, Genesee Co., N. Y., will commence Friday evening, Sept. 11th, and continue over the following Sabbath. It is also the quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of New York. Our tent will be here. Particulars hereafter.

B. C. Simonds.

Maine Mission Tent.

At the urgent request of the tent committee, Bro. I. C. Wellcome has decided to take charge of the tent early in September. Bro. Libby cannot well go longer, being ill, and needing rest. Those who want tent meetings, will write to Bro. Wellcome. And let all who can, aid the Mission Tent enterprise. Prayers, funds, and other tokens of interest, are needed.

For the Committee, R. R. York.

Tent Meeting at Saratoga Springs.

The New York State Tent will be hoisted on Circular Street, a little south of the Empire Spring, on Tuesday, Sept. 3d, when the meeting will commence. Brethren and sisters abroad are invited. Come with teams if you can, so that you can go two or three miles to board and lodge. We hope to see a good work here. We hope to see brethren from Sandy Hill here, to sing, and pray, and help forward the meeting.

NO NIGHT.

"There shall be no night there."

No night of sorrow shall be there,
All griefs, all sighs are o'er,
No bleeding heart, no tear-dimmed eyes
On that celestial shore;
God with his gentle hand of love
Shall wipe all tears away,
And in his presence we shall joy,
Secure in cloudless day.

No night of sin can enter there,
Like Jesus we shall be,
For we shall see him as he is,
And holy be as he;
No wandering thoughts, no anxious cares
Shall agitate our breast,
No sin shall mar our services
In yonder land of rest.

No night of ignorance is there,
We'll know as we are known,
And through a blest eternity
Rejoice before the throne;
No clouds shall e'er o'ershadow us;
Faith shall be changed to sight,
All gloomy doubts and fears dispelled
In that fair land of light.

No night of suffering is there,
No weariness, no pain,
The ransomed in that better land
Shall ne'er be sick again;
No aching head, no fevered brow
Shall weigh our bodies down,
For in Immanuel's happy land
All sickness is unknown.

No night of parting shall be there,
Our loved are gone before,
We'll meet them in that better land,
And meet to part no more;
To be forever with the Lord,
Our griefs, our trials o'er,
No tearful eye, no sad farewell
On yonder radiant shore.

No night of death can enter there
To close our peaceful rest,
No tender ties are severed
In the mansions of the blest;
Once in our happy, longed-for home,
We are safe forevermore,
For ah! no night can enter
On that celestial shore.

THOUGHTS ON A FEW THINGS.

PLANCHETTE.

This is the new instrument for "writing mediums," and, as some of your readers may know, is a piece of wood, thin and heart-shaped, as large as one's hand (though they are of different sizes,) moving on wheels, and perforated at the pointed end, for the insertion of a pencil passing down perpendicularly to the paper underneath. The operator's fingers rest lightly on the instrument, which, in reply to a question, begins to move, without any effort of the medium, rapidly writing out the reply. Only a small number of persons, however, comparatively, can thus manipulate. I do not know whether this instrument, which is said to be of European origin, is at all like that with which the gentleman in Philadelphia, mentioned by Bro. Grant, [It is not.—ED.] was occupied a year or two since. It is very simple, and doubtless destined to be distributed and used to a great extent, unless soon, with all the works of the wicked, destroyed by the King's return.

I saw an article written by Rev. Samuel Duffield, of Great Britain, I think, who attributes the phenomena of this implement to electrical or nervo-electrical energy, averring that the writing in every case is but a transcript of ideas in the operator's mind.* This I unhesitatingly deny; and not only so, but earnestly insist that it is but one of those perilous oversights of the truth, of which all should carefully beware. I do not doubt that the nervous energy of the person is enlisted, and also, perhaps, necessary to the writing function; and it is also probable that the mental state does more or less modify the replies, in some instances. But let it be distinctly understood, and constantly borne in mind, that the manifestations and answers to interrogatories, which this instrument elicits, are demoniac. Such, at least, is the decided and declared opinion of your correspondent, and I will proceed to mention facts in confirmation.

First. The young friend who wrote with it in my presence—(it was brought to me for examination. I did not go to see it)—an artless girl of fourteen, whose father purchased the instrument as a curiosity and means of amusement, stated to me positively that in many cases the replies were altogether different from what was passing in her mind. To be specific, she asked "planchette" to write some poetry. This it directly proceeded to do, though a little more slowly than usual. I am sorry that I have not the specimens at hand, for they were certainly singular. The girl said she was thinking then of "Bingen on the Rhine," altogether unlike the poetry produced. Again, when interrogated in reference to the history of an article of table-ware, which had been secretly injured and repaired, "planchette" stated that it was a while since carried to a certain shop by the servant girl for repair, and the expense defrayed by her. Now, on inquiry at the place designated, this answer proved correct, both as to the place, the person, the cost, and I think also the time. No one in the family had any knowledge of the affair whatever; the servant girl herself, I think, having previously left.

"Planchette" was also asked the cost of repair to a garment belonging to Mr. S., the girl's father, of which she knew nothing, and the answer was correct. If it be said that it is sheer deception on the part of the writing medium, I answer, I do not believe a word of it. The girl I feel assured is incapable of it. Although every approach to converse with such a device should as a rule be positively deprecated, yet it is possible that it might be the duty of God-fearing men to test it by the Bible, and for the sake of detecting and exposing its true nature, we are commanded to "try the spirits," and yet let every one beware of any act of interrogation even, except in the name of Jesus Christ and for the truth's sake. We repeat, it is an unguarded and dangerous position to assume, as some of the watchmen and teachers do, that this is wholly and merely a novel phase of electrical evolution. No. Mark it as another phase of demonism. Stamp it as another proof of the advancing tide of wickedness, a sign of the end of the age! Let me ask these apologists or expositors of this modern "curiosity," who resort to science for a solution of this mystery, let me ask them directly and distinctly one question. Why is this instrument invariably averse to the Bible? Such is the characteristic of the one I have seen. And if in any case there be found an exception, depend upon it there is a disguise of the uniform and intense hostility which is felt by the demon-world to the book of God. O, it is no exaggeration to say, nor is it fanaticism to feel, that we are advancing along through wonders which signify the imminence of that conflict when Jesus shall smite the demons, and demolish every fabric of their false and foul pretenses. Now, under the shield of that cunning fallacy and falsehood, "immortality of the soul," they disguise their deep artifice and real character. Very convenient for them, in this momentous hour, is the sophistry which almost all christendom has swallowed. Very convenient that the old deception has so many and valiant champions among the learned doctors of divinity, as well as through the whole rank and file of hearers. But a great rending must be near. Babylon nods over an earthquake, and woe to all who are Babylonish in that day.

I have recently read a very able discourse by Eld. J. R. Graves, of Memphis, Tennessee. It is a thorough exposition of Spiritualism alias Demonism. The brother predicts that very soon the demons will communicate audibly, or vocally? I should not wonder at it. We have come to the hour of supernaturalisms.' But the death of all demon-wonders will be the blessed wonder, and the supernatural glory of that sublime event, the coming of our Lord in glory and power.

Sardinia, N. Y. CLINTON COLEGROVE.

* Possibly the writer included the bystanders with the operator. But I am confident this does not mend the matter. The demon agency is still unequivocal.

WHAT ARE WE COMING TO?

BRO. GRANT:—As I am looking very anxiously for the "sign of the Son of man" in the heavens, my heart almost faints within me to see with what kind of theoretical religious theology we are surrounded. Just look at this for a moment. Here is part of a conversation which passed between a Baptist preacher, a graduate of the Rochester University, and myself. He wanted to know the main points wherein we differed from other denominations, to which I replied on this wise:

First, the second and personal coming of Christ in the clouds of heaven. Second, the sleep of the dead. Third, the restitution of our physical organisms, giving our friends and children back to us again, just as literal as they were before the hand of death was laid upon them. Fourthly, that we are wholly dependent upon Christ for immortality and eternal life. Fifthly, the earth is to be restored and brought back to its Edenic state, and made the future home of the saints, when the glory of God will fill the earth, as the waters fill the sea; and the saints will possess it for an everlasting possession, to go no more out for ever.

To which he replied, on this wise: "Ah, I see that you are quite materialistic in your views. I hope that you do not think that your soul dies with the body, do you?"

O yes, I replied, we believe all that constitutes us men and women goes back to dust again, from whence we were taken, leaving us wholly dependent upon Christ for a resurrection life from the dead.

"Why, no," he said, "the soul is immortal and cannot die." We inquired of him, What is an immortal soul, as you understand it? To which he replied by saying, "If you can tell me what it is that looks through those eyes of yours, then you can grasp my idea of the soul." My answer was, that it was I myself, of the earth earthy. He said, "No, it is God; your soul is a part of God, and consequently cannot die." I then inquired what part of man it was that rebelled and broke God's law? the body or the soul? He said, "The soul of course, it being the seat of all knowledge." I then asked what part of man Christ died to save? and he said, "The soul, as the house it lived in could not be responsible for any thing which it could not do of itself."

I then told him that he must admit that Christ died to save the soul, which was a part of his Father, which is immortal, and could not die. He said, "Stop, you want me to say too much." He then said, "In fact we may trace every thing to its first origin, and find that they all originated in and of God himself, and that God fills immensity, and consequently is in every thing; in every grain of sand, in every blade of grass; and as some say, and I think sometimes very truthfully, too, that 'God is every thing, and every thing is God.'"

So we parted. My prayer is daily, Lord, give me the true light. Your Bro. in hope of soon seeing the redeemed.

MISSOURI Q. M.

The Missouri Conference held its third regular Q. M. at Advent-Christian Hall, corner of Fifth and Biddle-streets, on Saturday and Sunday, July 25–6, which was an occasion of unusual interest in a religious point of view, and also one of great profit to all whose opportunity it was to participate. The churches were represented as usual.

The delegates from Cahokia, Ill., report favorably; yet we hear it still truly said, "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few." Brn. Waite and Jackson, licentiates, report that they have been doing service for the Lord as evangelists in different fields of labor, with (as we know) much acceptance.

In view of the unprecedented warm weather of late, and also in accordance with a general custom, it has been deemed expedient to close the most of our schools for vacation. The Lowell school, taught by Sr. Vaughan, is at present the only one in operation in connection with our mission. This school numbers upwards of forty-five scholars, and is in a prosperous condition, and will be continued with only a slight interruption all summer. While Sr. Vaughan attends faithfully to her charge as regards the children, she never neglects the adults of her neighborhood, whom she visits at their homes, reading and explaining the Bible to them. While thus employed in her missionary work, she often finds several families convened, attentively listening to her reading and instruction.

All business matters of local or general interest were transacted with dispatch, order, and perfect harmony.

Eld. Flagg submitted the following amendatory article, relating to the granting of licenses, which was unanimously adopted:

Article 1. Any persons wishing to preach the Gospel, and believing themselves to have been called of God for that work, may receive from this conference a certificate of recommendation and license for the work of the ministry, subject to the following conditions:

(1.) They must be members in good fellowship and in good standing with some Advent Christian Church of this Conference.

(2.) Application must first be made to the church of which they are members for a certificate, showing that they are in good fellowship with their church, always ready to work in prayer, conference, and other religious meetings; of which they are punctual attendants; always of a ready and willing mind to work in the Lord's service, and at peace with all the church. Also showing that they are living in strict accordance with their religious profession.

(3) The foregoing certificate contained in Article II, if given by the church of whom the applicant is a member, shall also have the approval and signature of the pastor of said church.

(4) No person shall receive a preacher's license from this conference who is in the habit of using as a beverage any kind of intoxicating drinks.

(5) Any person holding a preacher's license from this conference, who is living in violation of these rules, shall, upon the request of the Conference Board, give up their license.

On motion of Eld. Macon, it was unanimously

Resolved, That Elds. H. K. Flagg and Commodore Decatur be appointed as delegates to represent this conference at the Springfield (Mass.) National Campmeeting, to which we send them with the greetings of the west, commissioned as the bearers of our sentiments of love and gratitude to all of our eastern friends who have individually and collectively, under God, done so much for us; they being much beloved, and highly esteemed among us, in all their relations; hence, they are hereby commended to the christian love and favorable consideration of all our friends who may be there assembled, or with whomsoever they may elsewhere meet in their journeyings eastward.

Eld. Decatur, representing the interests of the colored people of this conference, submitted the following preamble and resolution, which were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, God hath in these "last times" sent out his servants into the "highways and hedges," whereby the poor Freedmen, and others of our race equally destitute of the knowledge of God and the message of the coming kingdom, have had of late, and are still having the blessed opportunity to come to a knowledge of both; in view of which our hearts are filled with love and gratitude to God and his dear people, who have been directly and indirectly instrumental in accomplishing so much good for us; yet having a desire that the good cause and work may be prospered among us even much more abundantly; hence, to this end be it

Resolved, That this conference does hereby respectfully and earnestly recommend that the Board of the A. A. M. Society shall designate a day as early in September as shall be deemed by them expedient, which shall be set apart as a day of fasting and prayer, that God may continue to bless and prosper his work in this direction; and also to the further end, that all those who love God and the "appearing of our Lord and Savior" may be endowed with a double portion of his Spirit, that they may be "accounted worthy" to escape all those things which we believe are soon coming on the earth, "and to stand before the Son of man" when he shall come to reward his people, and to "execute judgment upon all them that know not God."

On motion, it was resolved that a synopsis of the proceedings of this conference be forwarded to The Voice of the West and also to the Crisis for publication.

Adjourned to the call of the Conference Board. H. BEADLE, Secretary.

TO THE BRN. AND SRS.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say a few words to the Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad, through the medium of our paper. I have just returned from the Fennimore tent-meeting, where, through the kind providence of our heavenly Father, my father and mother and sister were permitted, for the first time in eight years, to hear a gospel sermon. We arrived there the second day of the meeting, and almost the first person we met was Bro. Hitchcock, who gave us kind welcome, and it made our poor starved hearts very glad to see his genial face once more this side the kingdom. We found his heart all aglow with love for Jesus, and doing battle like a good soldier for the truth, trying, through the good grace of God, to win souls for the kingdom. We soon had the pleasure of meeting Bro. Sheldon, and were glad to see him looking so much better than we expected, having heard of his sore affliction. It was very cheering to meet once more those faithful servants of Jesus. They have done a good work in the village of Fennimore, and they are very dear to the little band of pilgrims in that place. To our heavenly Father be all the glory.

We soon found that we were among good friends, with warm, kind hearts, who did all they could for our comfort. God bless them, one and all, and bring them, through his grace, to inherit the kingdom, is my heart-felt prayer.

We were only there during the first part of the meeting, which was a source of regret to us all; but during the time of our stay, the meetings were good and well attended. We heard Bro. Hitchcock preach Saturday afternoon, which greatly cheered and comforted us all. Saturday evening we heard Bro. Sheldon speak on the nature of our hope. It was like cool water to our thirsty souls. We feel like taking a new start for the kingdom. Pray for us, Brn. and Srs., that we may fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life at the appearing of our Savior. Amen. From your sister in hope of the gospel. SUSAN A. ISBELL.

COME TO JESUS.

Come to Jesus. O why will ye still delay? He invites you to come. Now he is waiting. O do not delay any longer, for very soon it will be too late. Give your heart to him now. Jesus says my grace is sufficient for thee, for my strength is made perfect in weakness. O do heed these precious promises, and give your heart to him now; and if we are faithful and good, we shall soon meet in the kingdom; for very soon the Lord will come and take his weary children home. We then shall be

"From every pain and sorrow free."

O don't you want to be ready to meet Jesus? I know you do; but still you are waiting. You think you will come soon; but will you not come now? Not for my sake, but for Jesus' sake, I invite you to come and give him your heart. Do not wait any longer, but come to-day.

O I do want to meet all the loved ones in the kingdom, where we shall ever be at home, and where no temptations or trials can ever come; where pain, sickness, and death, will be unknown; where the weary ones will be at rest in the better land. Why will not every body be good and get ready for the coming of Jesus? Let us pray more earnestly each day that the Lord may give us grace sufficient to serve him better, and that we may be ready to meet him at last with joy and not with grief. Come, give your heart to him to-day. MARY J. PRATT.

PERFECTION.

"Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."—Matt. 5: 48.

We are often told that we cannot be perfect, and that none can live without sin. If this be true, then to them the plan of salvation is not complete. When I hear those who profess to be the followers of the blessed Lord say this, I am led to believe that they are taking out licenses to sin. It seems, Brn. and Srs., that when the professed church reasons after this manner, they forget that the Lord has bought them with a price, and that he has said, "Without holiness, no man shall see the Lord." Peter says, "Because it is written, Be ye holy, for I am holy."—1 Pet. 1: 16. Again, it is said by Paul (Rom. 8: 14), "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." Then how blessed it is to be led by the Spirit, so that we can be called the sons of God; and if sons, when the Father makes his will, certainly we shall have that blessed portion. I thank God that it is our privilege to live just as the Lord wants us to. But it is through his grace that we are kept from the evils that are in the world.

I am trying, by the grace of God, to have all packed up for the coming of the good Lord. May the Lord help us all to be ready at his appearing, is my prayer.

G. H. S. PHENIX.

NEVER GIVE UP.

Never give up, brother, never give up!
God has a blessing for those who work hard;
Why should you murmur, and grumble, and fret,
And envy the pleasures from which you're debarred?
Work like a man,
Do the best you can;
This is the wisest and happiest plan.

Never give up, brother, never give up!
Though the future looks lowering, and gloomy and drear;
Though the sun shine not now, yet it may very soon,
So keep up a brave heart and tread down your fear:
Soon may come light,
And all will be bright,
Only struggle and strive, and do what is right!

Never give up, brother, never give up!
Though your burden be heavy, and dark be your way,
The bow in the clouds only comes with the rain,
And when night is deepest, then bursts forth the day:
Soon troubles will cease,
And your sorrows decrease;
Only trust in the Lord, and then all will be peace.

NAPOLEON'S INTENTION OF INVADING ENGLAND.

A well known literary writer in "Blackwood's Magazine" for June, 1868, relates the following conversation which took place between Louis Napoleon and an English diplomatist, some time before the French Revolution of 1848 restored the former from his exile in England to authority over France:—

"I remember once talking with one of our most distinguished—I might perhaps say, the most distinguished—of our English diplomatists, and now an ex-ambassador, on the character of the Emperor Napoleon III., whom he had known well in his days of exile. I was curious to know what amount of faith he reposed in his own future, and how far he believed in that star of destiny that pointed to an empire. My friend assured me that his belief never wavered—that his conviction that he was to replace his uncle Napoleon I. on the throne of France was implicit and unvarying. 'I remember,' said my friend, 'one evening when we sat over the fire together in my room, in a country house where we both chanced to be visitors, as much to indulge Louis Napoleon's passion for a favorite theme as to dispense myself from the labor of talk, I asked him what he would do when he became Emperor. At this time, I ought to mention, the prospects of the Orleans family were at their very brighest. I shall not readily forget the tone and manner of his reply—there was no heat, no excitement about it—nothing that indicated a mind over-stimulated by an over-brilliant future; he spoke calmly, collectedly, and with a force of expression that implied confidence in his own words; he detailed all that France needed to be done, and carefully went over whatever he thought possible. The finances of the State were to be his first charge; and in these, great reform and some reductions were possible. The whole system of secret service, grown to a fearful extent under Louis Phillippe, was to be abolished at once. The plans of family and dynastic ambition, which, in a measure, instituted this organization, no longer existing, might be abandoned as useless. The navy should be reconstructed; France must be at least the equal, if not the superior, of England at sea, and, having no distant possessions or far away interests to protect, she might reasonably hope to be a match for England on the waters of Europe. The creation of a great fleet would be a work of time and cost, but France would feel all the pride of being able to cope with her old rival on the element she had once called her own. As for the army, it was an easy task to revive the spirit of French glory, so lamentably depressed by the reign of the Orleans family.

Next, he sketched out French projects in the east. The first Emperor's designs on Egypt were to be carried out, but in a different way. French commercial enterprise and her missionary influence must be the pioneers of French conquest. We must prepare these people to accept us as deliverers, was the expression he employed. He then adverted to the extension of France by colonial possessions, and clearly sketched the contest that must come between the Latin and the Teutonic races. Wars in Europe there must be, and it would be to the advantage of France to revive, as she was sure to do, the prestige of the first empire. Every legacy of ambition that his great uncle had bequeathed was to be paid in full. France was to be supreme over the whole south of Europe, and Germany was to stand in awe of her in the north. Meanwhile, matters at home were not to be neglected. Municipalities were to be encouraged to beautify and adorn the various cities of the land, not only to give employment to labor, but to serve as a counterpoise to that spirit of centralization in the government which an absolute rule needed and could not dispense with. And at last, said he, drawing a long breath, but only at last, when policy—when necessity will demand it—we war with you in England. There are but two questions on which you will fight, but on these you must, or be reduced to a position which neither the ambition nor the interest of France need be concerned to diminish.' This was the programme detailed calmly, deliberately, over a fire about ten o'clock at night, as they sat in that confidential mood in which each could speak his mind unguardedly.—Signs of our Times.

HONESTY IN BUSINESS.

As two brethren were riding in a wagon one day, the conversation turned on the manner of doing business.

"Brother," said one, "if we would succeed in store-keeping, we cannot be strictly upright in every little thing. It is impossible. We could not live."

"It is contrary to religion not to be upright," replied the other. "Honesty is as much a part of religion as prayer, or reading the Bible. A man may pray and read the Bible, and yet if he be not strictly an honest man, he cannot be a religious one."

"I don't know about that; we must live—that is my doctrine."

"But you pretend to be a religious man, don't you? You are a professor of religion as well as I."

"But we must live. I shall break down in my store if I do not shave a little."

"And you will be more likely to break down if you do. I tell you, my brother, honesty is not only a part of religion, but it is the best policy too; and I will venture to say, the man who is honest will succeed better in his store than the one who is not. The man who is unjust, either in little things or great things, is a dishonest man, and an irreligious man; and the day of judgment will convince him of it fearfully."

The above conversation, in substance, took place in one of the counties of the State of New York. The store-keeper did business in a village near which they were riding. Since that time he has failed in his business, and has been obliged to leave the village.

I wish every merchant, every store-keeper, would lay this truth to heart:—"A man who is not strictly an honest man, cannot be a religious man."

CHARITY SERMON.—A good charity sermon was once preached by a colored brother, according to Mr. Eddy. One of the propositions was "that many churches have very little spiritual life and power, because they do not give as much as they ought to give." In elaborating this thought, the colored preacher said:—

"Ise knowd many a church to die cause it dident gib enough, but I never knowd a church to die cause it gib too much. Dey don't die dat way. Bredren, has any ob you knowd a church to die cause it gib too much? If you do jest let me know, and I'll make a pilgrimage to dat church, and I'll climb up by de soft light ob de moon to its moss covered roof, and I'll stand dar and lift up my hands to heben and say, 'Blessed are de dead dat die in de Lord.'"

THE RIGHT KIND OF RELIGION.—I want, and we all want, a religion that not only bears on the sinfulness of sin, but on the rascality of lying and stealing; a religion that banishes all small measures from the counters, small baskets from the stalls, pebbles from cotton bags and sugar, rocks from wool, chickory from coffee, alum from bread, lard from butter, strychnine from wine, and water from milk cans. The religion that is to advance the world will not put all the big strawberries and peaches on the top, and all bad ones at the bottom. It will not offer more baskets of foreign wines than the vineyards ever produced in bottles.—Uncle Nick.

RULES FOR THE PRESENT.—Stop grumbling. Get up two hours earlier in the morning, and begin to do something out of your regular profession. Mind your own business, and with all your might let other people's alone. Live within your means. Eat with moderation, and go to bed early. Talk less of your own peculiar gifts and virtues, and more of those of your friends and neighbors. Be cheerful. Fulfil your promise. Pay your debts. Be yourself all you would see in others. Be a good man, and stop grumbling.

Gems.

☞ A bankrupt merchant, returning home one night, said to his noble wife: "My dear, I am ruined; everything we have is in the hands of the sheriff." After a few moments of silence, the wife looked calmly into his face and said: "Will the sheriff sell you?" "Oh no!" "Will the sheriff sell me?" "Oh, no!" Will the sheriff sell the children!" "Oh, no!" "Then do not say we have lost everything. All that is most valuable remains to us—manhood, womanhood, childhood. We have lost but the results of our skill and industry. We can make another fortune, if our hearts and hands are left us."

☞ It is well to pause on the threshold of life, and ask ourselves why we live. Life means something. It is big with sublime realities. Every step is a word, every day is a sentence, every week is an oration, every year is a book, full of meaning as the sun is of light. Life is a book, and we write in it something, be it much or little, and what we write we cannot unwrite.

☞ Oh, how blessed is the thought that I am going to live with God, where sorrow never comes; where heaven's own sun always shines with benignant beams, and where love, pure and perfect, flows on in one everlasting stream!

GREATNESS.

That is not greatness, calmness, strength of soul,
When, once for all, thou dost experience
Some sudden, terrible calamity,
Some last, decisive, heavy blow of fate,
The loss of reputation, of estate,
Of those thou lov'st, of health, of happiness,
And still remainest patient and composed,—
That is necessity laid on thy soul;
The suffering of violence humbles thee.
But if thou bearest all the lesser cares,
Burdens and torments of each passing day,
Nor feel'st them bitter,—if, serene and strong,
Thou bearest little trials, blessing God,
That, only that, dear soul, is greatness, strength,
Collectedness of spirit, godly walk.
For little griefs thou mightest not endure,
But scorn them, prove thyself inferior
Ev'n to thy destiny. Then use, O heart,
Courage and strength, mildness and cheerfulness,
Where only thou canst do it,—in little things.

—The Layman's Breviary.

☞ It is not work that kills men; it is worry. Work is healthy; you can hardly put more upon a man than he can bear. Worry is rust upon the blade. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery, but the friction. Fear secretes acids, but love and trust are sweet juices.

☞ Accustom yourself to master and overcome things of difficulty; for, if you observe, the left hand, for want of practice, is insignificant, and not adapted to general business; yet it holds the bridle better than the right, from constant use.

☞ Live not for selfish aims. Live to shed joy on others. Thus best shall your own happiness be secured; for no joy is ever given freely forth that does not find quick echo in the giver's own heart.

Think that day lost, whose low descending sun
Views from thy hand no noble action done.

☞ It is a great blunder, in the pursuit of happiness, not to know when we have got it; that is, not to be content with a reasonable and possible amount of it.

☞ There is a refinement which even wit and knowledge of the world cannot teach their votaries, who often wound the heart without violating the rules of politeness.

☞ Who is wise? He that is teachable. Who is mighty? He that conquers himself. Who is rich? He that is contented. Who is honored? He that honoreth others.

☞ The reason why some preachers make no more impression against sin is, that in preaching they aim to hit it with a slant instead of fully in the face.

☞ Franklin says: "The eyes of others are the eyes that ruin me; if all others were blind, I should not need fine houses, fine furniture, etc."

☞ Many of our cares are but a morbid way of looking at our privileges. We let our blessings get mouldy, and then call them curses.

☞ Value the friendship of him who stands by you in the storm; swarms of insects will surround you in the sunshine.

☞ In doing what we ought, we deserve no praise because it is our duty.

☞ Would you hear a sweet and pleasing echo, speak sweetly and pleasantly yourself.

☞ If you cannot please without being false to yourself, you had better displease.

DEEP PREACHING.—"Is not Mr. B. a deep preacher?" asked a friend of the late Rev. Dr. Campbell, of Aberdeen. "Eh?" replied the doctor, smiling, "I will tell you a story, sir. When I was a boy, I was amusing myself, with some other boy, in a pool. Some of them were going in further than I was disposed to go, and I was frightened. To a man who was passing by, I called out, 'Is this pool very deep?' 'No, man,' replied he; 'it is only muddy.' There is such a thing as preaching the deep things of God, which will be neither understood nor relished by the natural man. But it is very possible to preach the plain truths of the gospel in a language and style which at once clothe them with mystery, and expose them to ridicule. It ought never to be forgotten, that the gospel is a revelation; and that it is by manifestation of the truth that the preacher is to commend himself to every man's conscience.

DR. PAYSON'S COUNSEL TO A MINISTER.—"Paint Jesus Christ upon your canvass, and then hold him up to the people; but so hold him up that not even your little finger can be seen.' There is nothing more disgusting to the pious hearer in the sanctuary, than the sight of a preacher in the pulpit showing himself off, and concealing the Master. The less there is of the preacher and the more there is of Christ, the more perfect is the medium of divine power to the souls of the congregation.

PHYSIOLOGICAL LETTERS ON SLEEP.—NO. 5.

There are certain subjective states which are opposed to the access of sleep. And first of all I will enumerate anxiety and distress of mind:

You are well aware of the power which grief and care and mental suspense have in promoting wakefulness. I have myself witnessed the untiring vigilance of a mother, who, night and day, for more than a week, has watched by the sick bed of a dear child without once closing her eyes in sleep. I have heard such persons confess that under such circumstances it was impossible for them to sleep; so intensely was the mind engaged by the source of anxiety, as to preclude the induction of that state of tranquility and repose necessary for sleep. Such prolonged exercise of nervous power, if it does not permanently injure the brain, at least makes a long period of repose necessary for its complete restoration. Many a hopeless case of madness dates its origin from causes like this. If you wish for proof, consult the records of our Lunatic Asylums.

Probably the most powerful antagonist of sleep is suspense of mind. It has been observed that criminals under sentence of death sleep badly as long as they entertain hopes of being pardoned; but that as soon as they are notified that their death is inevitable, they usually sleep more soundly, and this even on the last night of their lives. (a)

Among other antagonists of sleep, I may mention the voluntary exercise of the reasoning faculties upon any subject on which the feelings are interested; witness the close student, who, in accordance with the desire to master a difficult subject or pass a creditable examination, toils at his books during the long hours of the night, retiring to bed only when overburdened Nature can endure the exhausting process no longer.

There are also certain involuntary states which are unfavorable to the access of sleep. What gave rise to the "Night Thoughts" that master-piece of didactic verse—but a positive inability to sleep when sleep was desired? There is a certain morbid irritability of the brain substance which renders its ultimate cells peculiarly susceptible to impressions from within and from without;—the least stimulus, whether from subjection or objective sources, calls its powers into action, and the sufferer tosses about for hours on his couch, in a state of dismal unrest, till a sort of paralysis by exhaustion occurs, and a brief sleep ensues, which only partially restores the vital energies.

Such persons never have their brain waste sufficiently repaired during sleep, and in consequence awake tired, and complain that their sleep has done them no good; they generally find themselves incapacitated during a portion of the following day for arduous work, both of body and mind. In one way or another sufficient rest is obtained, so that the bodily health is kept at a certain standard, and the individual becomes neither demented nor insane. To such persons the practical physiologist would say, you must have rest, and if you cannot get all the sleep you need, you must make amends as far as possible for want of sleep, by improving regular seasons of bodily and mental quiet. Take an hour every day, when it shall be your business to obtain perfect abstraction from all cares, pursuits and pleasures of body and mind. Stated periods of out-door exercise will be of use, by aiding digestion and favoring the production of a purer, richer blood, and, on the principle of derivation, by causing an increased circulation in the voluntary muscles, and determining less blood to the brain.

It may be inferred, from what has been said, that the production of thought would be limited, not only by the quantity of blood the brain receives, but by the quality of it, and that when a person is in active muscular exercise less blood goes to the nervous centres than when the brain only is in action; and that on such occasions the cerebrum is in a more tranquil state, because those chemical changes which generate thought are less energetically performed than when the nervous and vascular energies are all directed toward the brain, and, finally, is better nourished, since nature is now more actively engaged in regeneration than in destructive operations.

I shall next speak of the causes of sleep. H.

LUNG COMPLAINTS, ETC.

To those troubled with lung complaints, bronchitis, asthma, and kindred complaints, I can conscientiously recommend the prescription of Rev. Edward A. Wilson, of Williamsburg, L. I., N. Y., to be a sure remedy. I have no doubt at all but that the medicine saved my wife's life. She was given up by the best physician as beyond his skill; and Mr. Wilson's remedy cured her, by the blessing of God. This prescription can be obtained free of Rev. Edward A. Wilson, Williamsburg, L. I., N. Y. I know of several other instances where the remedy has effected cures of lung diseases, which baffled the best medical advice. Now all who have lung complaints, or even think consumption has seized upon them, take my advice if you want any such remedy, and send at once as above, and you will never regret it.

Boston, Mass. J. N. BERRY.

CONSUMPTION.

The following valuable information is copied from the manuscript of a forthcoming work entitled 'Influence of climate in North America,' to be compiled by Mr. J. Disturnell:

"Consumption originates in all latitudes from the equator where the mean temperature is eighty degrees of Fahrenheit, with slight variations, to the higher position of the temperate zone, where the mean temperature is forty degrees, with sudden and violent changes. The opinion long entertained, that it is peculiar to cold and humid climates, is founded in error. Far from this being the case the tables of mortality warrant the conclusion that consumption is sometimes more prevalent in tropical than in temperate countries. Consumption is rare in the Arctic regions, in Siberia, Iceland, the Orkneys and Hebrides; also in the northwestern portion of the United States.

In North America, the diseases of the respiratory organs, of which consumption is the chief, have their maximum in New England, in latitude about forty two degrees and diminish in all directions from this point inland. The diminution is quite as rapid westward as southward, and a large district near the fortieth parallel is quite uniform at twelve to fifteen per cent. of deaths from consumption, while Massachusetts varies from ten to twenty-five. At the border of the dry climate of the plains in Minnesota, a minimum is attained as low as that occurring in Florida, and not exceeding five per cent. of the entire mortality. It is still lower in Texas, and the absolute minimum for the continent in temperate latitudes is in Southern California.

The upper peninsula of Michigan, embracing the whole of the Lake Superior region, Minnesota, Nebraska, and Washington Territory, are all alike exempt, in a remarkable degree, from the above fatal disease. Invalids suffering from pulmonary complaints and throat diseases are almost uniformly benefited by the climate of the above northern region, having a mean annual temperature of from forty degrees to forty five degrees Fahrenheit.'

PHYSIOLOGY OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.—Probably no experimental physiologist living has done more to advance the cause of his favorite science than Claude Bernard. This distinguished physiologist has lately made the following curious experiment. We quote from the "Revue Populaire" of Paris:—

"Oxygenated (arterial) blood was injected into the carotid arterus (arteries going to the brain) of a criminal immediately after decapitation. The result was that warmth and sensibility returned, and the eye became animated, displaying such strong perception that a hammer shaken before it caused it to wink and look sideways, the tongue moved in the mouth as if making an effort to speak. Such experiments throw light on the physiology of the nervous system."—Danville Union P. Q.

A MISTAKE.—It is a common error that it is beneficial to break a blister in order to let out the water or blood that fills it. This water or blood is a healing substance, of a kind most appropriate for the parts where the skin is destroyed, and if the blister be allowed to dry, new skin forms more rapidly under it, and much pain is avoided. In exceptional cases, when the blister is very full of fluid, so that it causes much pain by its tension, a small portion of the fluid may be given a chance to escape by the prick of a fine needle. A blister should also be covered up in some way to protect it from being ruptured by accident.

TOM SAYERS.—The famous athlete Tom Sayers was once asked by a gentleman, "Well, Thomas, I suppose when you are training, you use plenty of beefsteak, and London porter, and pale ale?" The boxer replied: "In my time I have drank more than was good for me, but when I have business to do, there's nothing like water and dumb bells." After retiring from "business," he took to drink and died a sot. Cold water made him a Sampson, alcohol laid him in his grave.

CURE FOR THE BITE OF A DOG.—If bitten by a mad dog, get common nitrate of silver (easily procured in any drug store,) put it into the wound, and allow it to filter there. This decomposes the saliva and destroys the virus. The late Mr. Youatt, a celebrated veterinary surgeon, was bitten eight times by mad dogs, and instantly applied the above remedy with perfect success.

POSITION IN WALKING.—What should be the position of the body to secure the greatest ease and benefit while walking? The body should be slightly inclined forward, but not bent, the shoulders thrown back, the chest forward, the hips back, the head erect, and the mouth closed.

HEALTH.—The four ordinary secrets of health are: early rising, exercise, personal cleanliness, and the rising from the table with the stomach unoppressed. There may be sorrow in spite of these, but they will be less with them; and nobody can be truly comfortable without them.

BITES OF INSECTS.—Bites and stings of insects and snakes have been cured by instantly washing the parts freely with spirits of hartshorn or other alkali; at other times by applying a poultice made of common table-salt and the yolk of an egg.

TOBACCO AND BALDNESS.—An eminent medical man says the use of tobacco, by impeding the circulation and preventing the free and natural supply of nourishment to the hair, occasions baldness.

WHEN SHALL JESUS COME AGAIN?

When shall Jesus come again,
O'er his ransomed world to reign?
When the times of Gentile sway
Like a cloud have passed away,
Zion, trodden down so long
By the heathen nations strong,
Shall, to freedom full restored,
Wait the coming of her Lord.

Light and life of dying men,
When will Jesus come again?
When the Gospel's heavenly call,
Published to the nations all,
Gathers in a chosen race,
Heirs and witnesses of grace,
And has compassed earth and main,
Then will Jesus come again.

Jesus, once for sinners slain,
When wilt thou return again?
False messiahs, lying seers,
Preach their claims to willing ears,
Through the centuries of glooms,
Till the last Impostor comes
For its little while to reign;
Then will Jesus come again.

When the sun and moon and stars,
And the earth's distressful wars
Show the crisis of the world,
Tyrants from their seats are hurled,
Nations in perplexity,
Raging like the roaring sea,
Find all earthly hope is vain;
Then will Jesus come again.

When men's fearful hearts shall fail,
'Tis thy coming we shall hail;
Earthly kingdoms all o'erthrown,
Take the crown—it is thy own;
Cast thy foes beneath thy feet,
Claim thy promised royal seat;
Then with thee on earth we reign,—
Come, Lord Jesus, come again.

COMING OF CHRIST.

Christopher Columbus, on his memorable voyage across the Atlantic, was pacing the quarter-deck one morning in deep concern. The previous night, his officers and crew, reproaching him with his illusive hopes, had been threatening to abandon the enterprise in despair. "A new world," he was saying, as he paced the deck that morning, "A new world is yonder!" At length as he gazed upon those "untried waters," his practised eye discerned a "sign." Some drift-wood floated past. Like Paley's watch on the desert-heath, it was its own certain interpreter. They must be near the mouth of some majestic river by which that drift-wood had been floated down. "Brothers!" exclaimed Columbus, his eye glistening with a calm ecstasy, and his finger pointing to the "sign"—"Brothers! look at that! We shall soon see land." The infirm hearts were bold again; from that hour they were other men.

Is not the church of the living God at this hour on the wide untried ocean, steering her course to the kingdom—the "New World" of her "faith and hope?" The voyage has been protracted, till the men of feeble faith have begun to lose heart and to "faint." But stay, my brother! look at that drift-wood. The "signs" declare that the glory is not far off.

Some imagine that to look into the future, to examine the signs of the times, is work only for the idle and for the visionary. God's operatives in the world, the great doers, the brave endurers, are men, they say, of sterner stuff. But is it so? . . . Why has God assigned to the "sure word of prophecy" so large a place in his revealed will? Not surely to gratify a prurient curiosity—not to indulge the idle speculatist, but to meet the daily necessities of the pilgrim—the daily wants of the "good soldier." To affirm that we do not need to study the prophetic word, is to affirm that God has erred in giving to that word a place in his Bible.

How different is God's real thought concerning this matter! "The revelation," we read, "of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass." And it is added: "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things that are written therein; for the time is at hand." Rev. 1: 3.

Does not this mean, that the gracious Lord would have his servants sustained in their conflict by the hope of the good time to come? Does it not mean, that, whilst they are called to pass through the dark "night," he would have them solaced by the assured prospect of the "day?" Does it not mean, that, whilst his eye is on us now from the mountain as we are still "toiling in rowing," he would have us to know that ere long he will be at our side on the stormy waters, and will bring us to our quiet haven?

"I will come again," said the Master to his sorrowing brethren before he suffered, "and will receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." He is away now; but the Comforter is with us, to speak to us about our absent King. "He will show you things to come," said Jesus, defining the leading characteristic of the Holy Spirit's office. And why "things to come?" Because the hope of the glory is that which animates us now in our struggle,—"we are saved"—we are carried victoriously through "by hope." John 14: 3; 16: 13; Rom. 8: 24.

When the disciples on Olivet stood gazing up into heaven, fearing that they had lost their Master, and with him the hope of the coming kingdom, a message came, announcing that they should see him again. Solaced by the hope, they went everywhere,—charging the "little flock" to be of good cheer, for speedily they should have the kingdom,—and charging the unsaved to repent, if they would not be self-excluded from this glory which was so near at hand.

No one who ponders the Acts and the Epistles and the Revelation, can doubt that the attitude in which the Lord would have his church stand, is that of waiting, watching, longing for his return.

Take only two passages as a specimen. The first is Rev. 22; 20. The last words which Jesus uttered, or ever shall utter till he come again, are these—"Surely I come quickly." The certainty of his return, and its possible nearness, are the two elements of "strong consolation." And why should the troubled church deprive herself of either element of her consolation? John, the exile, could not do without either, and so his instantaneous, happy response was—"Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

The second passage is Titus 2: 11–14. What conceivable language could assign to the hope of our Lord's appearing a place more momentous in the dynamics of the christian life? In verse 12, we have the grand practical end which God's gospel of grace was designed to accomplish—"Teaching us, that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world." And in verse 13, 14, we have the motive power which is to stimulate the heart in aiming at this end—"Looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works." Who has not felt, that in the measure in which this hope occupied the heart, the life has been transformed, the whole soul has been lifted into heavenliness? The "hope" may occupy a place in our creed, and the life remain unaffected; but to love the appearing, is the certain source of an earnest, self-denying, happy, working life.—Rev. J. Bailie.

HOW LONG? DAN. 12: 6.

Bro. Himes, and all of like precious faith: This is an important question. How long? If dollars and cents were pending, all the tribes of the earth would say anxiously, how long? But on such a great subject as the coming of the Lord to raise all God's dear, sleeping saints, change to immortality all God's living, waiting ones, set up his everlasting kingdom (Dan. 7: 27,) cleanse the earth by fire as once by water (2 Pet. 3,) and burn up all the proud and all that do wickedly (Mal. 4: 1–3), I am often told we must or can know nothing, when God says in his Bible (Isa. 42: 9:) "Behold, the former things are come to pass, and new things do I declare: before they spring forth I tell you of them." Also (Amos 3: 7:) "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." Says the Savior: "Search the Scriptures."

But, says one, no one shall ever know the day or hour. Please stop and read the whole text (Mark 13: 32:) "But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, BUT THE FATHER. Very well. The Father did, then, at that time know the day and hour, or language don't mean anything. This was in A. D. 12. But in A. D. 96 (Rev. 3: 3,) sixty-three years after, we have words from the Father, that if they won't watch, they shall not know what hour he will come upon them. So the plain inference to me is, if they will watch, they shall know.

Then Paul says, "When they say peace and safety [which is now fulfilled,] THEN sudden destruction cometh upon them [that say peace and safety,] and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief." But I believe all that love the world the best will be snared, every one. For, says the Savior, "as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." But God's children are not dwellers on the earth; they are looking "for a city that hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

Now to the question, How long? The third horn, the kingdom of the Vandals in Africa, was plucked up on the eve of St. Cyprian, A. D. 513. Says Gibbon: One awful hour reversed the fortunes of the contending parties. The eve of St. Cyprian in A. D. 533 fell on the tenth of the Jewish seventh month 533 we add the time at the end of which Daniel was to stand in his lot, or 1335 days, or years as we believe them to be, it makes 1868, tenth day of the seventh month, which falls this year on the twenty-seventh of September. Amen! Still, how long? (Dan. 12: 12, 13.) Daniel is told, "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the three hundred and five and thirty days. Go thou thy way till the end be," or till the end of the days. Not six months before the end of the days, nor six months after; but at the end of the days.

So, my dear brethren and sisters, this year according to my faith, will bring the Lord from heaven. Let us then put forth our best energies in this glorious work. May every one of us try by persuasion, by the help and the grace of God, to get one, at least, of our friends to come to Christ in this last year, as I firmly believe; and I pray God, my brethren, that nothing may deter you from this work. O blessed year! The captives, I believe, will be released. O glorious year! The trump of jubilee, I think, will be blown this year. The long-looked-for year of years, the best, is come! I shall hope to meet you all through faith in God and the blood of the Lamb. Until then, farewell. And I pray God your whole body, soul and spirit, be preserved blameless unto the coming of Christ. Amen.

THE MARRIAGE SUPPER OF THE LAMB IS READY.

BRO. GRANT:—Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, said, "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."—John 1: 3. We see in these words of Jesus something of great comfort to us who are living in this the greatest age of apostasy and unbelief, to cheer us on, and remind us to be faithful. The words of Jesus are as precious to us now as they were to Peter and John, who heard them from the lips of their beloved Master. And why are they precious to us? Because we see contained therein a promise to the faithful of having a mansion prepared for them, by Jesus their beloved Lord and Master. Now be it understood by the faithful, that those mansions which are now being prepared for them are not theirs to occupy till Jesus comes back again; for Jesus says, "If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him."—John 14: 23.

The conclusion I have come to is this: that when the bride makes herself ready, the Bridegroom will come and bring those many mansions with him. John in vision "saw the holy city, the new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven." Again John says, "I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God."—Rev. 21: 2, 3.

Thus far we have seen that Jesus is coming. Now the great question is asked relative to the time of his coming. What shall be the day or the hour? No, but what shall be the sign. Now that is scriptural; to set the day and the hour is not scriptural, and I verily believe that the design Jesus had in view, in speaking those words, "No man knoweth the day nor the hour," was to guard the church from setting the time, which he knew they would do, and thereby bring a reproach on the cause of Christ. But I am willing to bear the reproach, for I know that I shall be justified when I say, there is a wisdom in it that is not known by the world, but by those who love the truth and treasure it up in good and honest hearts.

We have been charged with stirring up the people needlessly, fanatically shouting, "Our Lord is coming." We have been charged also with not making a right application of Scripture. Let us see. Turn with me to the parable of the great supper (Luke 14: 16), for I look at this parable in the light of prophecy. We read that at supper time messengers were sent for, to say to those who were bidden, Come, for all things are ready.

Let us work now, while it is day. Some can preach, some teach, others can give of their means; all can do something to push forward the great work. When I see that we are now proclaiming the last gospel message to a fallen world, I am ready to shout hallelujah, for we almost home. Let us be ready, like good soldiers, watching to hear the welcome sound from the lips of that same Jesus, "Come, ye blessed of my Father." Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus. Your Bro., waiting for our Lord from heaven,

Rochester, N. Y. T. FRASER.

BEAR FRUIT.

"Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit."—John 15: 8.

"When surveying the boundless ocean of covenant mercy, every wave chiming, 'God is love,' does the thought never present itself, What can I do for this great Being who hath done so much for me? Recompense I cannot. No more can my purest services add one iota to his underived glory, than the tiny taper can add to the blaze of the sun at noonday, or a drop of water to the boundless ocean. Yet, wondrous thought! from this worthless soul of mine there may roll in a revenue of glory which He, who loves the broken and contrite spirit, will 'not despise.' 'Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit.'

"Reader, are you a fruit-bearer in your Father's vineyard? Are you seeking to make life one grand act of consecration to his glory, one thank-offering for his immortal love? You may be unable to exhibit much fruit in the eyes of the world. Your circumstances and position in life may forbid you to point to any splendid services, or laborious or imposing efforts in the cause of God. It matters not. It is often those fruits that are unseen and unknown to man, ripening in seclusion, that He values most,—the quiet, lowly walk; patience and submission; gentleness and humility; putting yourself unreservedly into his hands; willing to be led by him even in darkness; saying, Not my will, but thy will; the unselfish spirit; the meek bearing of an injury; the unostentatious kindness;—these are some of the points which your heavenly Father loves, and by which he is glorified.

"Perhaps it may be with you the season of trial, the chamber of protracted sickness, the time of desolating bereavement, some furnace seven times heated. Herein, too, you may sweetly glorify your God. Never is your heavenly Father more glorified by his children on earth, than when in the midst of these furnace fires he listens to nothing but the gentle breathings of confiding faith and love—'Let him do what seemeth good unto him.' Yes, you can there glorify him in a way that angels cannot do in a world where no trial is. They can glorify him only with the crown; you can glorify him with the cross and the prospect of the crown together. If he be dealing severely with you; if he, as the great husbandman, be pruning his vines, lopping their boughs, stripping off their luxuriant branches and 'beautiful rods'; remember the end. 'He purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit'; and, 'Herein is my Father glorified.'

"Be it yours to lie passive in his hands, saying in unmurmuring resignation, Father, glory thy name, glory thyself, whether by giving or taking, filling my cup or 'emptying me from vessel to vessel.' Let me know no will but thine. Angels possess no higher honor and privilege than glorifying the God before whom they cast their crowns. How blessed to be able thus to claim brotherhood with those in the upper sanctuary; nay, more, to be associated with the Savior himself in the theme of his own exalted joy, when he said, 'I have glorified thee on the earth.' 'These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full.'"—By the author of "The Morning and Night Watches." Copied by Mrs. L. Fuller.

PERSECUTION.

"Blessed are ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake.

Truly that saying of the great apostle Paul, which says, "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution," is being made manifest in these last days, in the time which is now present, in which Paul said they would "not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears." It does seem that in these last days, in which "perilous times" have come, that professors of christianity will no longer tread the old, rugged, and thorny way which leads through parched deserts, over rough and stony mountain sides, exposed to the cold, wintry blasts of adversity; but, like the benighted traveler on the trackless prairie, who has lost his way, vainly chasing the mirage which only recedes as he advances, they are entranced with the beauties of the surrounding scenery, forgetting their allegiance to Him who died for them, and begin to participate in the pleasures of the day, turning aside to gratify some desire or evil inclination, which is always unbidden, crowding in upon the imagination, and, by so doing, lose the desire of attaining to those rich qualifications which fit and prepare them for entering through the gate into the city of their Lord. The propensity to seek and follow after the gilded and deceptive allurements of this world has increased, till they unblushingly lay aside the true christian "armor," and don the flimsy cloak which consists of the so-called "religion" of to-day, thus becoming impervious to the gentle wooings of the Holy Spirit. Their affections go out after the falsely gilded pleasures which are held out by the Evil One, which are sought after by the straying pilgrim, as he seeks in vain to grasp the false phantom of worldly pleasures, as they dance and flit in all their gaudy and deceptive colors, dazzling, bewildering and blinding him until he forgets that they are only the decoys of Satan, and madly pursues them till he grows weak and exhausted by chasing the mocking phantom, and stumbles, reels and falls into the yawning abyss over which the phantom is sure to fall.

This is the sad experience of many poor lambs who for awhile struggled on in the way to the green fields of Eden, and then grew weary, and ceased following the bloody footprints of the Good Shepherd, who had gone before, and have gone after the perishable things of this world, only at last in the midst of their sportive gambols to be hurled, crushed and dying, into the gaping and insatiable jaws of destruction, into which those ever busy phantoms and mirages are constantly leading their victims.

Brethren and sisters, let us make untiring efforts to persuade those who are thus bewildered and straying from the fold to pause and return back to the old track, which still bears the bloody footprints of the Good Shepherd, who has gone before to prepare the bright and glorious land for his way-worn pilgrims. Let us raise our voices amid all the persecution that may be heaped upon us by those who are under the influence of the Evil One; for our trials and troubles are only the strokes of the divine Sculptor administered upon us, for the purpose of fitting us as well polished stones to be builded into his temple of eternal glory. Then let us remember that the more we are thus polished, the brighter we will shine as his jewels, if we continue to be patient when we are reviled and persecuted for his sake. Then let us be patient till the coming of our Lord, "for our light affliction . . . worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." Let us go forth, therefore, unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach, "for here have we no continuing city, but seek one to come."

"My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this, that the trying of our faith worketh patience; but let patience have her perfect work, that we may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing," when our Lord shall come. "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him." "For this is thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully; for what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently, this is acceptable with God; for even hereunto were ye called; because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps; who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth; who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him who judgeth righteously; who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness; by whose stripes ye were healed. For ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls."

Brethren and sisters in the Lord, let us keep these precious lessons continually imprinted on the tablets of our minds. Let love and gratitude to our heavenly Father pervade the inmost chambers of our hearts, till they overflow with christian affection towards our brethren and sisters, not forgetting those poor straying ones who disobey our Shepherd's voice. Let us do all in our power to induce them to return home, like the prodigal son, and ask the Father to forgive and receive them back again into his paternal love. Let us with kind and gentle, soothing words, admonish the erring and backslidden. Let us take them in the arms of kindness, and bind up the wounds they may have received by first going after some worldly and deceptive allurement, and thus been led off into by and forbidden paths, till they have grown weak and cold, becoming exhausted, and have fallen down some deep precipice of ruin, and the rough, jagged rocks tearing and bruising them, till they are entirely helpless at the base of a mountain of troubles, which we all have to climb on our journey to the happy land. There are many poor, weak, weary souls, who have struggled on till their strength is almost gone. O how cheering to such ones, as they turn their eyes helplessly to us, imploring our sympathy, if we then give them a kind, encouraging word, a smile of admonition, a warm grasp of the hand, a word of promise, left by the Captain of our faith, by way of encouragement. Never let us turn a cold, suspicious glance to those who are about to fall, and say within ourselves, while a holy horror thrills our vitals, "Ah! I thought you were weak in the faith," and then gather our skirts about us, and pass by on the other side; on the contrary, put forth the hand and help such an one over some great obstacle which, perhaps, we were more able to overcome, and perhaps we ourselves may, owing to a sudden and unlooked for thrust from the adversary, cry for help; and if we have restored some falling one, we may find him close by to help us in our trouble.

Finally, brethren, let me say in conclusion to one and all, Let us gird our loins about, and have our lamps burning, and ourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he shall return from the wedding, that when he cometh and knocketh, we may open unto him immediately. Your Bro. in the Lord,

JOHN B. MCKEE.

Mechanicsburg, Ill., Aug., 1868.

CAN WE STAND IT?

A brother, on his way home recently, stepped into one of the street cars in a certain city. He was accosted by a friend, a gentleman of the legal profession, a man of shrewdness and ability. They passed one of our splendid modern churches, alongside of which an elegant stone parsonage was being erected to correspond with the stately church edifice. "Mr.——," said the lawyer, "you are a Methodist—I am not, but I rent a pew, and I feel interested in the prosperity of that church. Do you see that splendid church and parsonage, sir?" The Methodist brother responded affirmatively. "Well, sir, allow me to say to you, as an outsider, that if that sort of thing goes on it will ruin the Methodist church. It has ruined the Protestant Episcopal Church, putting everything into splendid churches and accompaniments, thereby catering to the rich and aristocratic, and neglecting the masses. Your church has outstripped every other denomination in point of numbers and influence, and you have done it by simplicity and devotion to the masses. Your church in ——street is a model, corresponding with the plainness of your system. Follow that, and all will be well; but take the other course indicated by that splendid pile of stone, and, depend upon it, your church is ruined!"

Such were the candid, deliberate views emphatically expressed by an outsider, making no profession of religion, but a close observer of men and things. And these views find a response in thousands of minds contemplating mournfully the departure of the Methodist church from its first principles. We started with plain worship, plain churches, and plain dress, and were clothed with power. But we are rapidly cutting loose from our well-settled principles. The cry of "the spirit of the age!" is potential, we might almost say, omnipotent. "We shall lose our first families if we do not conform somewhat to their notions." This is everywhere heard. Our chief ministers are encouraging this church extravagance. They get certain rich men by the buttonhole, flatter their vanity, and tell them they will immortalize themselves by building a splendid church. And what then? When it is built, the whole country must be ransacked for a minister. The Bishops are appealed to; Dr.——, in such a conference, they think will suit. The conference is full, it is true, and the men in it are being crowded; but no matter;——street church must be accommodated. Brother A. is there, and has given so many thousands to the church, and Brother B. has given so many thousands, and they must be gratified. No matter about the conference remonstrances against transfers; a little noise will be made, but they will wheel into line.

Well, Dr.—— is transferred to——street church. How does it work? Is any one converted? Any one sanctified? No! But they have a very fashionable, appreciative congregation. Why, Mr.——, the Episcopalian, and Mr.——, the Presbyterian, have taken pews. And then such music! A quartette performance on each Sabbath; so delectable!

A little Ritualism, by the way, must be introduced to gratify the progressive notions of the Doctor. He is a very learned man, and of peculiar refinement. True, the Discipline specifies an order for religious worship, but then it is not expected to be followed very rigidly.

Can we stand this? A serious question now being asked by thousands of thoughtful, devoted Methodists. We are taking up the tools rapidly being cast away by other churches. They are seeking to simplify their worship, we to mystify ours. They are inquiring how to get near the masses, we how to get away from them. Other ministers are crying to be delivered from the thraldom of "paper sermons," ours how most effectually to glide into the paper bonds! Is this thing to go on? Is the ship to be stranded? Is she to go down into the deep, oblivious waves? God of our fathers, help! Talk of numbers! What is a million or ten million members without power? Many of our saintly churches pass two-thirds of the year under a ministry as scholastic and as powerless as the age would have it, and when winter comes have to invoke the aid of some Evangelists who live near the throne to come and pull them out of the mud.

Can we stand it? Not long at this rate. Not even with a million hands on deck. The ship will go to pieces unless some voice of thunder and authority cries, "To the rescue!" May it come in time—before the work of ruin is consummated and the old ship goes down—witnessing angels ready, as it were, to chant the solemn, mournful requiem. It is to be hoped that the national camp-meeting will give the key-note which shall arouse us to spiritual life, and that we shall shake off the dust that blinds our sight, arise, and struggle into light.—Methodist Home Journal.

THE CHURCH.

The church is composed of every disciple of Jesus. Every person whose sins are forgiven is a member. No matter by what name he is called, and no matter whether he has a name, according as men name one another; if Jesus accepts him he is a member of the church, and his name is written in the Lamb's book of life. Men may have cast him out from their societies, and his name as evil; his reputation may have been blasted by the foul tongue of slander, his property destroyed, and he deserted both by relatives and associates; he may not have where to lay his head, yet if he is a christian, he casts his burden on the Lord and sweetly rests in Jesus.

No person is a member of the church unless Christ accepts him. His name may be upon the class-book, his attendance may be constant at prayer meetings, and love-feasts; his prayers may be long and his professions loud, yet, unless Christ has taken possession of his heart and there reigns supreme, he is a hypocrite, and his professions as sounding brass or tinkling cymbal.

The above are simple facts; and, as such, we are prepared to defend them against the encroachments of sin and wickedness, and point out to what they should lead.

The christian denominations have at different times "received into the church" such persons as have presented themselves and have been deemed worthy. They have also "expelled from the church" such as have been thought unworthy to remain. These practices, so long as they mean by "the church" the particular denomination unto which the applicant wishes to join himself, may be well enough, provided that no errors occurred.

But when any particular denomination professes to be the church excluding those of a contrary belief, they profess that for which they have no warrant. The present condition of denominations shows that very frequently those are received as members who are not christians: and some are expelled who are christians. While Christ never makes a mistake, he receives none who are not his; and casts away none who truly trust in him.

It is the purpose of this paper to show what the church is and to oppose the adversaries thereof.—The Church.

HOLD FAST.

"Therefore, we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip."—Heb. 2: 1.

How important this admonition. We have none too much time to prepare for that great day which, I believe, is very near. O that the Lord may help us to see ourselves just as we are, and to get rid of every thing that is not right in his sight. We must be holy; we must be pure, without spot. I bless his dear name that he has made it possible for us to be so, that when he comes we may be ready, and say, This is our Lord, we have waited for him, and he will save us.

Dear, tried, and sorrowing pilgrim, cheer up; the land is near. Soon Jesus will come. Then he will wipe away all tears. Now we sigh, and groan, and sometimes it seems as though we must sink under our load; but rest assured, tried pilgrim, that if we trust in that blessed Savior, he never will leave us to sink. No, no, weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. O blessed be the Lord for the prospect of that glorious morning. May the Lord help us to be up and doing, and be in earnest about the matter, so that when he comes we may be found ready.

"Christian, cheer thee, land is nearing,
Still be hopeful, nothing fearing;
Soon, in majesty appearing,
You'll behold the Lamb once slain."

DEFINITE TIME.

I have become convinced that the preaching of definite time, as it has been preached by some, does not produce a salutary effect upon community. I am alone responsible for the position I take on this question. I regard those who are looking for the speedy coming of Christ as the people of God, raised up for a specific purpose; and that the work to which they are called is not yet accomplished, is manifest to every candid and intelligent observer. We draw our conclusions from the work done, and the work to be done. The relationship they sustain to the world now is synonymous with that of Noah to the antediluvians, in one respect at least; and that is, it is a work of warning. They may be said to occupy a different position, in some respects; that is, they have a duty to do in removing the errors from the minds of the people, which are calculated to create in them a spirit of indifference to the great event at hand. This is no small part of the labor; for when the necessity of the event is shown, and the people see that the hope of future life depends upon the second coming of Christ, nine tenths of the work is accomplished, necessary to secure interest in the event.

Thirty years ago the world did not contain any denomination of christians whose faith was such as to show a necessity for the coming of Christ in judgment, or the resurrection of the dead. During the last thirty years a people have come on to the stage of action, numbering their tens of thousands of laymen, and hundreds of preachers, in possession of talent of no mean order, and in possession of funds to a good degree, and in possession of what is indispensable to success—the grace of God. But what has this people done? They have achieved a mighty work. They have so far revolutionized the theology of the day, as far as they have carried their advance, that it is seldom we hear, in places where this faith has been preached, those old radical ideas of eternal torture in a hell of liquid fire. As a general thing, every battery is soon silenced against which the truth has been leveled, and that is the next thing to a surrender. But to what extent has the conflict been pressed? I answer, it seems hardly begun. When we look about us, and see the vastness of the field, and the limited number of laborers engaged in the harvest, we conclude that much more must be done.

Now what shall we do? Shall we sit under the shade and wish it was supper time, or night, or time to rest? or shall we up and at it, knowing that the work must be done before the supper can be eaten, or the rest enjoyed? It will do to sit down and sigh and cry for rest when the work is all done; but while the field is so thickly strewn with golden sheaves that must be gathered, there is no time for sitting in the shade. O that God would give us more of the spirit of Jesus, so that we can think more of the perishing around us, and less of self; then we can wait with patience for the early and latter rain, and work while the day lasts. Let us be governed more by general principles, and less by technical points, and we shall have a salutary influence, and be less liable to disappointment ourselves, and be less obnoxious to the minds of many, who are far from being friends, or indifferent to consistent Bible faith. The friends of truth are often its deadliest foes, in consequence of their inconsistent conduct in attempting to advance it. Five radical, imprudent preachers can create more prejudice in the minds of honest people in six months, than ten consistent ones can counteract in six years.

God has, in the way of general principles, placed within our hand a good reason to believe we are living in close proximity to the judgment, or the establishment of the everlasting kingdom. The four monarchies to rise and fall, from Daniel's time to the sitting of the Ancient of days, are mainly in the past, and are sufficient of themselves to lead to the conviction that we are near the end; but when we come to set the definite time of the end, it is quite another thing. Jesus had access to Daniel's periods, and times, and days, and quoted from his prophecies, and with all his wisdom did not know the day or the hour (and I think he was as wise as man in general), which leads me to conclude that it is no easy task to determine the exact time when the end will be. With me, the event is a certainty; and while I thus feel, I am determined to labor with reference to it, and be ready for it at all times. Noah preached the event, but not the time. When God revealed the time to him, he went into the ark, and God shut him in; and "as it was in the days of Noah, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." A knowledge of the event, and a readiness to meet it, is what we need; and, while we enjoy this, let us occupy till he comes, and be willing to labor, and not be over-anxious about the time of rest. Let us love the labor; and while we see so much to be done, let us push the conquests with renewed energy, till the labor is all done, and the last servant of God is sealed. Then we will rest. The rest will be the sweeter when we reach the final goal, on account of the intenseness of the labor. Let us press onward, resting assured that the supper will be eaten when the table is full, and the rest will be enjoyed when the work is all done.

Have you done all you could, brother? sister? Are your talents, your means, your hands, all employed in the prosecution of this glorious work? If not, it is in vain for you to sigh for the rest, for it will be enjoyed only by the laborers. Work while the day lasts. "Be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine; for the time will (has) come when they will not endure sound doctrine"; and you shall receive the crown of righteousness with Paul.

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Boston, Wednesday, Sept. 9, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

CLOSE OF THE VOLUME.

It will be observed that this number closes the present volume. Now is the time to pay for the next. We hope to be able to make our paper more interesting the coming year than ever before. The time has come to look over with carefulness the evidences which show that Jesus is soon coming to make up his jewels. The evidences are bright which show that the Lord is at hand.

We hope every reader of the Crisis will make a special effort to get new subscribers this year. A little effort on the part of each subscriber would result in doubling our present subscription. One preacher has resolved to get one hundred new subscribers the coming year. Will not all the preachers take hold of this work in earnest. Many have been led to see the truth, and to rejoice in the blessed hope, in consequence of having the Crisis sent them by some friend. Will not others do the same favor to their friends? Now is a good time to begin. It may be the means of their salvation. Who will begin the good work? We have no time to lose. If anything can be done to save the perishing, the effort should be made without delay.

Will not our preaching Brn. also write for the paper, and thus add a new interest to its columns? Those to whom they preach would be delighted to read their writings, and why shall they not have the privilege? Come, Brn., lend a helping hand. Speak words of comfort to the scattered flocks. Great good may be thus accomplished. Please consider this and send us some articles at once. Do not refuse. Your help is needed.

SPRINGFIELD CAMPMEETING.

We presume our readers who did not have the privilege of attending the great National campmeeting at Springfield, are anxious to hear the news relative to its results.

First, as to the ground, so far as we heard any expression, all were pleased, and considered it a much better place for a meeting than Wilbraham. We heard it said by one well prepared to speak, that there was no camp-ground that surpassed it but the noted one at Martha's Vineyard. It is the best seated of any ground we ever saw, and will accommodate about four thousand persons. It has the best arrangement for boarding with which we are acquainted. The tables will accommodate three hundred and eighty-four at a time. We have three wells of most excellent water, and an abundant supply, easily obtained. This is of great importance to the encampment. The grove is about a mile and a half from the depot at Springfield, and is about as high as the tops of the steeples in the city. It is a delightful spot, and has already become a sacred place to many dear pilgrims, and one where a number of sinners were converted, backsliders were reclaimed, and saints were greatly strengthened and caused to rejoice in the Lord.

On Saturday, Aug. 22nd, about one hundred tents were erected, and a large number of the friends of Jesus were present. It was a great luxury to see the greeting of dear friends in Christ, who had been separated for a year. No one could help saying, See how these christians love another. It was enough to melt hard hearts, and to make the tears of sympathy flow foom eyes not often moistened with such things. It is very evident that true brotherly love is increasing among those who are looking for the coming of Jesus. This is a bright omen. It was a pleasing sight to see so many united in christian affection, while at the same time some of them differed widely in their theological sentiments. The true christian spirit will prompt us to love all whom Jesus loves, though we may differ in our opinions on some doctrinal points.

The meeting began with a love-feast Sabbath morning, Aug. 22nd, when we had a most heavenly sitting together. We think we never attended a campmeeting before that began so well. It was truly a love-feast, and will be remembered with pleasure by those who participated in the exercises. The weather was lovely, the scenery around delightful, and all seemed happy. At the hour of preaching we had a large audience—estimated by some at six thousand—and very good attention. The best of order prevailed, and the people from the city seemed glad that the meeting was opened. We had preaching during the day by Brn. J. Couch, J. V. Himes and the writer.

Monday, Aug. 23d, was spent in erecting tents and in completing other camp arrangements. In the evening we listened to an excellent sermon from H. F. Carpenter. A very large number arrived during the day and evening. The spirit of the meeting was excellent.

Tuesday was another day of rich interest. We had good preaching by Brn. L. Damman, [illegible] remarkably good cheer and rejoicing in the Lord. Good prayer-meetings were held in the large tents.

Wednesday was another pleasant day. We had more good preaching by Brn. A. Ross, H. L. Hastings and Wm. Pyle. The Advent Christian Association met in the great mission tent for the transaction of their business, which was nearly finished before dinner. All seemed anxious to do what was for the general good of the whole. It was pleasant to be associated with such true men.

Thursday was another lovely day. Good preaching by Brn. L. Boutell, J. Couch, and H. Pratt. There were two hundred tents up in the morning, and several more were erected afterwards. Interesting prayer-meetings were held in the tents.

Friday. The weather continued fine, but the streets were very dusty, making it unpleasant for those who came from Springfield to the camp-ground. Preaching by Brn. Jonas Wendell, Geo. Storrs, and J. A. Libby. Most excellent prayer-meetings were held in the great "Advent Mission tent," also in various other places. Quite a number "resolved to become the faithful followers of Jesus.

Saturday was another pleasant day, and quite warm for the season. The forenoon was occupied by a missionary meeting, when Brn. Himes, Leslie, Flagg, and others reported the results of their labors in Memphis, St. Louis, and elsewhere, showing that much good had been accomplished. Bro. Couch preached a stirring sermon in the afternoon, showing we are very near the end of the present dispensation. Bro. I. C. Wellcome preached in the evening. During Friday and Saturday there seemed to be a lack of interest in the devotional exercises, but on the Sabbath it rose to a high degree. Our morning love-feast was most blessed. In less than an hour we had two hundred and forty testimonies, most remarkable for their richness and depth of religious experience. Frequently two or three would be speaking at once in different parts of the ground. Many were unable to speak for want of time. At the close of the love-feast a large number came forward for prayers, and we had a precious season in praying for them.

At the hour of preaching, a great crowd was on the ground, estimated at ten thousand or more. There was preaching in four places in the morning and afternoon. The following Brn. preached in the morning: S. G. Matthewson, J. Couch, Jonas Wendell, and the writer. In the P. M. preaching by Brn. J. V. Himes, H. L. Hastings, I. B. Potter and George Storrs. The meetings were very good during the day, and the most excellent order was observed.

The City Marshall, Mr. Pease, deserves much praise for his earnest and successful efforts in keeping the best of order during the entire campmeeting. Mr. S. S. Daman, who had charge of the night watch, performed his duty in the most faithful manner, and won the esteem of the whole encampment. It was evident that he really took pleasure in doing all in his power for our welfare. This added much to the comfort of the camp. We could lie down and sleep with as little fear of disturbance as in a quiet village.

Bro. Munger preached one of his characteristic sermons Sabbath evening; following which we had a precious communion season, when about seven hundred gathered around the table of the Lord to commemorate his sufferings. Thus closed our first great campmeeting at Springfield. Many will have occasion to praise the Lord for the privilege there enjoyed. A goodly number who came in sin went away new creatures in Christ Jesus. Some thirty were baptized. A large number from Springfield became very deeply interested in the meetings, and expressed a wish to hear more. The truth has been spread, and prejudice removed from many minds.

Sabbaths at 6 P. M., Aug. 22 and 29th, we spoke in the Springfield depot to a large and attentive audience, showing that we have most certainly come to the last days of this dispensation. The campmeeting has made a good impression upon the minds of many in the various Springfield churches. They now see that we have a Bible reason for our hope, and that it is sustained by the harmonious teaching of the Scriptures. We are satisfied that the evidences of the Lord's coming, the sleep of the dead, their subsequent resurrection, the destruction of the wicked, and the saints' inheritance, are truths which are now gaining ground more rapidly than ever; and doors are being opened in all directions where they may be faithfully presented. The Springfield campmeeting has done much to accomplish this result.

The Springfield Union, gave faithful and extended reports of our meeting, also the Republican. Below we give some extracts from these papers, instead of extending our own remarks:—

"No more beautiful sight can be imagined than to see a company consisting of thousands commencing the day by an acknowledgment of Providential care through the night, and humbly imploring a blessing on them through the day. These meeting are characterized by great earnestness, and not a little extravagance; still the impression made on the mind of the spectators, is that the parties are sincere, and that their coming together is not for show or worldly pleasure, but a fervent desire to become more like the divine."

After speaking of the preaching at the stand, the Editor of the Union referred to the meeting of the association as follows:—

"The most interesting meeting was being held at the same time in the large tent, over the election of officers of the association, for the coming year. The course pursued in the past by the editor of the World's Crisis was severely criticised. We were amused as the charges were handed in, they sounded so natural in the editor's room. One wanted arguments in the paper, good sound crushing arguments, another wanted more to interest the people interested, and another had taken great pains to report in full a convention held a thousand miles away, he had been particular to give all the incidents, told who presided, who prayed and what the man said in his prayer, who was chosen secretary—how he declined, and some one else was chosen, he gave a detailed account of his host and family, told how many children he had and gave their names, also the name of his wife's grandmother who lived with him, and "brother Grant" drawing his pen across it merely said a convention was held and told what was done.

The editor sat bowed down like a bulrush, and nodded assent to all the charges, which required a great amount of grace. He plead guilty to all the charges—that the paper lacked argument, lacked spice and the other qualifications mentioned; but when he showed them that it would require a paper the size of a barn door to suit all, and that the present size was hardly sustained, they became satisfied the publisher knew more about the paper than they did. The criticisms were given and received in the best spirit, and no doubt the complaining ones will more fully appreciate the perplexing duties of the editor for the controversy.

We think the following remarks in the Union for Thursday, Aug. 27th, are worthy of consideration:—

"The constant influx of new comers and the necessary work of preparation and congratulations of old friends affects the devotional exercises of the meeting, and should it continue through the week, the religious advantages sought will be neutralized to a considerable extent. This is one of the disadvantages of so large a meeting, composed of persons from such a distance, who never meet except on these occasions. Visiting takes the attention much more than would be the case in a smaller gathering, and it is doubtful if as much good is accomplished. Always at such gatherings there will be a class whose egotism and want of brains will make them conspicuous at all the social meetings, with their peculiar views and doctrines, and they occupy the time that might more profitably be spent by those less pretentious; and of course the larger the meeting the more of this class will be collected, and they will have a damaging effect on the whole assembly. This was noticeable in the social meetings last evening; recitals of religious experience gave way to theories of fanatics about how the world will look when burnt over, and pictures of anticipated enjoyment when the Son of man shall appear, took the place of humble acknowledgment for blessings received and practical efforts in behalf of the unconverted."

The Republican of Friday, Aug. 28th, says:—

"The eating and drinking is a most admirably managed appurtenance of the camp. No better dinners can be got than are provided there, and Mr. Humfreville's experience has taught him just how to systemize all arrangements. The amount of food consumed increases daily. Some 350 pies, 2500 to 3000 biscuit, and 125 loaves of cake are made daily, and nearly 150 quarts of milk used daily in puddings. . . .

The gathering on the camp-ground is as much social as religious and is marked by the most thorough good feeling and cordiality. Indeed, the Adventists seem, among themselves, to pattern after the true ideal of christian fraternity and fellowship more than does any other church; and the awkward rhythm of the old hymn recurs with friendly force.

"How pleasant is it for to see Brethren to dwell in unity."

As hospitality always dwells with its brother virtue, the dwellers on the camp ground logically open their hearts to all who come to test it, and the intolerance sometimes breathing from a sermon is neutralized by the charity of actual contact. We regret that none of our city ministers have yet accepted the invitation to be present and speak from the stand. The utmost liberty is accorded them, and we trust to hear from them before the close of the campmeeting, which will be on Sunday."

CAMP PICTURES.

During the progress of the campmeeting at Springfield two photographic artists took several interesting pictures of different parts of the ground, and of various groups of brethren and sisters. One was taken embracing a large number of the preachers present. It is a good picture, about eighteen inches by twenty. Price one dollar. We will receive orders for them at the Crisis office. Bro. L. C. Mc. Kinstry also has them for sale.

BRO. DECKER.

When at the Springfield campmeeting w received a very kind visit from Bro. Decker, who is now quite out of health. He came from New Jersey on purpose to make a confession, which he wishes to make public to all our readers. In compliance with his request, all the preachers were called together, when Bro. D. made a most humble confession, which moved all to tears. He expressed most heartfelt sorrow for having made the 1867 time argument a test of fellowship, and begged all to forgive him for all unkind expressions that escaped his lips against those who differed from him; and earnestly desires to have all forgive him wherein he has been instrumental in causing any divisions among the children of the Lord; and says, if the Lord will let him live, he will never be guilty of dividing the flock of God any more. No one could ask for a more hearty confession. He wishes us to say that he is now sorry he started the Herald of the Bridegroom, though at the time, he felt it was best.

Bro. Decker most earnestly requests the prayers of the church that he may be restored to health, and enjoy the smiles of our heavenly Father. We hope his case will be made a subject of special prayer.

INFIDELITY.

The infidelity of these days is truly alarming. That it is rapidly increasing there is no room to doubt; and we see nothing arising to check it. The mass of professors live so like the world that careful observers come to the conclusion that their chance of salvation is about as good as the average of church members, and decide to remain as they are, instead of troubling their minds about the christian religion. Having taken one step in infidelity it is easier to take another, and another, till they are led to doubt every thing taught in the blessed Bible.

As soon as their doubts begin to arise, the enemy of all righteousness is ready to invite them to embrace Spiritualism, in which he can fully fit them for everlasting destruction.

Henry Ward Beecher lately said:—"The important question of the day is not on the [illegible] of the Bible; not at all on the divinity of Christ, or on the manhood of Christ; but is there any God,—that is the question. This is the question which men ponder; the others lie back of that."

It is well known that the demons teach that there is no God higher than man who exists as a being. All they will allow is that he is only a principle in all matter, like attraction, or the principle of heat. They make ridicule of the God of the Bible. Spiritualism has done more for the last fifteen years than all things else to destroy confidence in God and the Bible. The wider its influence, the more infidelity.

NEW MUSIC.

We expect to be able to supply orders next week for the beautiful hymn and music, sung at the Alton Bay campmeeting, with the chorus, "O I must be a lover of the Lord." That and another piece of music will be on the same sheet, published by Bro. Geo. Lee. Price, 5 cts.; postage 2 cts. for a single sheet. 50 cts. a dozen, and $3.00 a hundred; postage extra. The postage on a dozen would not be more than for a single one.

BLASPHEMOUS TALK.

The Spiritualists are becoming more and more out-spoken against God and the Bible. They are throwing off their hypocritical cloak of religion, and appear more fully in their true character, which is that of antichrist.

In the Banner of Light, Aug. 8th, 1868, we find the following:—

"It is just as sensible to pray to the ocean, or the sun, as it is to the Jewish 'Unknown' Jehovah, or the Christian's God. Nature justifies a 'faith' in no such abortion. The whole system of modern theology is based on the speculative idea of a personal God. But my god is more real and tangible. 'I can see it in the clouds, and hear it in the wind.' . . . People of shallow brains are so apt to get mad when they hear a free thinker speak irreverently of the great, overgrown boss of the universe. Seriously, what a person believes in reference to the great Idol is of no benefit to me."

THINGS IN NEW YORK.

A New York correspondent of the Boston Journal, under date of Aug. 17th, says:—"Business remains remarkably dull, and clerks, book-keepers and salesmen are out of employment by the hundreds. The prospect of a revival of trade in the fall is not brilliant, and large failures and many of them is anticipated."

After speaking of other matters he says:—

"The great want of our city to-day is a class of young men distinguished for integrity. The amount of peculation, embezzlement and fraud committed in this city, much of which is kept from the public eye, is perfectly enormous. The restoration of a part or the whole, and the dismissal of the employe, is all of the punishment that is visited in many cases on the delinquent. I was talking yesterday with one of our largest tobacconists. He said that he employed three hundred hands. He made an estimate of his losses through his employes. What with the number of cigars smoked, carried away and sold surreptitiously, his annual loss reached the high figure of $15.000. And this is but a specimen. High living, fast teams on Central Park, flashy jewelry and costly wardrobes, the opera and restaurants use up our young men, and in the morning of their life they become bankrupt in character and purse and their sun goes down while it is yet day."

Such is the progress of these last days.

A LETTER OF THANKFULNESS.

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow, Praise him all creatures here below."

The above lines convey the language of my own heart better than I can express it in any other way. I truly feel to praise the good Lord from the depths of my whole soul for his bountiful dealings to me in my declining health. We are commanded in all things to let our requests be made known to the Lord, and for a long time I have had nothing so small or trivial but what I have carried it to God in prayer. Praise Jesus for this blessed privilege to carry all to God in prayer.

Well, I will first say, Glory to God for his dealings with me. I have, as many of the dear saints know, had the whole care of my dear sick sister (L. B. Weaver), who has not been able to be taken from her bed without the most severe suffering for years; and I have tried to take care of her the very best I could. I have had to pass through many trying scenes in seeing her suffer so intensely. She has had many severe fits and spasms, and is never for a minute free from pain. And then I have had to sacrifice the society and company of one of the best and kindest husbands, who has been called of God to preach "the glad tidings" of a soon coming Savior.

I need not relate the hardships, privations, cares, toils, anxieties, and want of rest nights, which for the past two years have caused my health to decline so fast. At times, I have feared my dear family and sick sister would be left without my care; but in answer to the earnest prayers of my dear companion, myself, and many of God's dear ones, I am still upon this mortal shore. During all this time the good Lord has watched over us for good; and when my work has borne so heavily upon me, the Lord has sent me help to make it lighter and easier. I do know it is blessed to trust in the Lord, and no good thing will he withhold from them that love him. O I do love Jesus more and more. He is mine and I am his. Glory to God. We [illegible] Soon we shall see the dear Savior and be made like him, to suffer no more from the effects of the curse. Then there will be no more weary days of watching around the sick and suffering ones, who have to pass all their time in pain and distress, groaning and praying for Jesus to come quickly.

Dear ones, pray, pray for us all, for we do so much need the prayers of all God's dear ones. Pray for me, that my health may be restored to me, if it is Father's will. I can say, Not my will, but thine be done. God bless all the dear ones. Your sister in Jesus,

No. Dana, Mass. MARY E. STREETER.

NOW READY.

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"HYMNS OF THE JUBILEE HARP,"

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

By the Advent Chris. Pub. Society.

Among the thousands who sing from "The Jubilee Harp," there are many hundreds, especially the aged, to whose eyes the fine print of the Harp is a great discomfort and inconvenience, and who would gladly welcome an edition of the same excellent hymns, in a convenient form, in large, clear type. The above work is issued especially for them, and we trust they will find it just what they want.

There are hundreds also who sing from the Harp, who never use the notes, and who would therefore be just as well and better pleased with a book containing the same hymns, without the music, at a lower price. This book was got up also especially for them, and will, no doubt, be to all such just the thing they desire.

This edition of "The Hymns" is not, by any means, intended to supercede "The Harp." It is designed as a companion to it; and is so arranged, with references, that hymns given out from the one can be readily found in the other.

The whole has been carefully revised and corrected, and a brief supplement of choice and popular hymns appended. The type-work was done in our own office, and in a style, we trust, not inferior to that of any other.

It is a volume of 576 pages, containing some 850 Hymns and Anthems, substantially bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, at 75 cents, single copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100. Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9.50 per dozen; $75.00 per 100. It is cheaper by far than any similar work that we know of in the market. When sent by mail, 16 cts. additional postage.

"Historic Echoes of the Voice of God."

AN EXPOSITION OF THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF DANIEL.

BY ELDER J. COUCH.

This is a neat and attractive pamphlet, of 64 pages, just issued from the office of the Advent Christian Publication Society. It comes from the press too late for an extended notice from us this week; but others who have read it in manuscript, speak of it as "one of the most valuable and important tracts on prophecy which has been issued among us for many years, and one well calculated to confound, if not convince, the unbelief of the skeptic, and confirm the faith of the believer.

"It shows, by pointed and convincing extracts from history, the wonderful fulfillment of the predictions of the 11th chapter of Daniel; and, consequently, that the events of the 12th chapter,—the standing up of Michael, the coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead,—are the next events to be expected. It is written in a clear, vigorous style, and contains many passages of singular beauty and eloquence, and closes with a thrilling appeal to the unbeliever and the sinner to be ready for the things that are coming on the earth."

It is just the thing to put into the hands of your unbelieving friends and neighbors. Let it have a wide circulation. A supply will be on hand at the Springfield Campmeeting, and also at Alton Bay.

For sale at this office. Price, 15 cents single copy; $1.50 per dozen; $10.00 per one hundred.

"SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED

BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

A Large 12 Mo., with Covers, by M. D. Wellcome.

This is a new and important pamphlet, prepared expressly to meet a want hitherto unsupplied. Among the many works written exposing the evils of SPIRITUALISM, none have been adapted for gratuitous distribution because of size and price. This work is given in a condensed form, and by having a very large edition published, can be furnished at a price to circulate extensively. Notwithstanding its brevity, it shows in a clear and concise manner the source of Spiritualism, its doctrines, corruptions, and unreliability, by the testimony of its own witnesses. Let it be scattered wherever Spiritualism is found.

Price 10 cents single copy; twenty copies for $1.00; $3.50 per one hundred copies. For sale at this office.

NEW TRACTS

Just Issued by the A. C. P. Society.

"THE KINGDOM OF GOD." A valuable tract of 27 pages, by Eld. G. W. Green. Just what is wanted to circulate widely. Price 5 cents single, postage 2 cts.; 50 cents per dozen; $3.00 per one hundred.

"SEED TIME AND HARVEST." Truly "a Tract for the times," containing fourteen pages, by Eld. Geo. Thompson. 3 cents each, postage 2 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.00 per one hundred.

"WHAT SAYS THE GOSPEL?" By Elder S. L. Manley. Two copies for 5 cents, postpaid; 15 cts. per dozen; 50 cts. per one hundred.

☞ A number of Hebrews in Paris are arranging to go to Palestine to form a colony there.

For the World's Crisis.

$2500 WANTED.

To my widowed sisters in the Lord, poor in this world's goods, but rich in faith, joint-heirs with Christ,—come, rally round this twenty-five hundred dollar call. Let us see what we can do towards building a house in Washington, in which the blessed gospel of the soon coming of our Lord and Master may be preached.

I got the Crisis late in the evening, and laid it aside, after asking God's protection for the night. I arose very early next morning, and went to my work. I was very busy when Bro. Bray's letter appeared before me, I read, "$2500 dollars wanted." With a heavy sigh I said, And I can't give twenty-five cents. My mind immediately ran back to the time when I first read that our dear Bro. Bray was proclaiming this blessed truth, and how I fairly clapped my hands for joy; and going up to a young girl, an Episcopal believer, I said, Gene, what do you think? "Well, what is it?" she said, with her attitude all attention. I told her that Washington was besieged. With a little surprise, she asked, "By whom?" I then handed her the paper; she read it, and we rejoiced together. As I thought of my poverty, I wished to have a share in this blessed cause. Father told me to send one dollar, however small it looked. For a moment it seemed impossible.

And now, my dear sisters in poverty and widowhood, if you could only take one look into my little shanty (hired shanty), and could watch me from Monday morning to Saturday night, you would wonder where the dollar could come from. Well, I will tell you. Out of a little drawer in an old-fashioned desk, where I put it last May, and tried to hide it from myself for the purpose of going to campmeeting, but have never been able to add another dollar to it since. So Bro. Bray, here it is, the widow's mite.

Come, my poverty-stricken sisters, send in your dollar. And, O ye rich ones, send in your hundred. I hope to see a whole column of names in this enterprise, before campmeeting, then we will get together and have a widow's jubilee. I yet have faith to believe I shall be permitted to go to campmeeting. O how I wept last year because I could not get near to go; but I have been praying ever since last January that I might be permitted to go this year, and I believe my cries have been heard, and will be answered. O Lord, strengthen my faith.

I have about as much bread stuff in my house as the widow had when she baked the cake for Elijah. Now that widow's God is our God; and let us trust in him. It is good to nestle close to Immanuel's side, and to feel his loving care over us. Yours in love, looking for the King of kings. A WIDOW.

Correspondence.

From Sr. M. A. Hardy.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—I beg the privilege of writing a short communication in the corner of our weekly sheet. I love to mingle in sympathy with thousands whom I may never see till we meet in the kingdom. I have been a traveler on the way to Zion for many years; and when the glad tidings of the Bridegroom's approach was heralded through the length and breadth of our land, I was among the few to hail it with joy; and from that time to the present it has afforded me a constant and sweet anticipation of the reality of the christian's hope. No wonder we are sometimes overwhelmed in its contemplation. The earth indeed would be beautiful, indescribably so, were it not that the curse of God rests upon it; and that is sufficient to make us long for it to be removed. Thank God, according to the prophetic word it will soon be redeemed. O the mighty work which Jesus has done for this fallen world, and is doing, and will accomplish when he comes the second time to shake terribly the earth.

With these astounding facts before us, dearly beloved ones, are we all true Israelites "in whom is no guile"? Are we living as though we realized these things? living epistles known and read of all men? Is our conversation such as becometh the gospel of Christ? Are we fighting the good fight of faith, and laying hold on eternal life? Are we all followers of those who, through faith and patience, inherit the promises?

May God help us to have the highest ornament, a meek and quiet spirit, adorned with all the christian graces; for I believe he has led a people out in these last days to understand his great plan of saving men; and oh, what a mighty responsibility rests upon us. Who is sufficient for these things? I sometimes tremble for myself, lest I am not faithful, and continually ask for the Spirit's direction that I may know the way to spread the light, by tongue or pen, or make any other influences to bear upon these all-important subjects in the community where I reside; and when the Spirit leads, I will go forward, and stand in my lot and place. I am glad the precious truths that distinguish us as a people are gaining ground in many places, and that soon the rewards will be given, the kingdom established, and the earth be filled with the glory of God. Yours waiting for Jesus, MRS. MARY A. HARDY.

Groveland, July 21st, 1868.

From Bro. J. T. Dixon.

BRO. GRANT:—Our Advent movement oft reminds me of the national armies in the late war. There was the large central army of the Potomac, that attracted general notice, while smaller armies at different stations were rarely thought of; and yet there was perhaps as much hardship endured, as much heroism manifest, in those small armies, as in the larger and far more imposing one.

So I thought to-day, while the general attention was directed yesterday and last week to the great national camp at Springfield. There was here and yonder all over this vast country many a soldier of the cross battling for these same grand truths, looking for the same "blessed hope," and in many instances, perhaps, under trials and discouragements that well nigh sink them; and some were having triumphs for truth which caused their hearts to leap for joy. So yesterday, while you had your feast of tabernacles, while the main army was engaged at Springfield, I felt as though I ought to report some skirmishing (to say the least) in another part of the wide campaign ground.

We made an appointment in a beautiful shady grove, some eight miles from Rocky Brook, called Glenrock, a new place, and the people who professed religion mostly Baptists, and many of them in said vicinity much prejudiced against our views. I sent word to such preachers as I thought might not go to campmeeting to "come over and help us," and the Lord sent Elders J. Northup, E. Wood, and P. Baker, ordained preachers; unordained, C. F. Dixon, G. Noks, and others, who took hold with a will. It was judged that one thousand people came there in the course of the day, though it is a wild out-of-the-way place. We had a good, united, working force, who love to work and sacrifice; for all the pay we expected was such as He alone can bestow at his return.

The singing was excellent, the themes presented timely and appropriate. Some "Harps" and small "Hymn Books," also "Adventism" were sold. Bro. C. F. Dixon distributed free a large quantity of tracts and the "Christian." Bro. S. P. Clark brought a large bundle of his old files of the "Crisis," "Voice of the West," and "Christian," and scattered them (a good way to use the old papers); the result was, much prejudice was dispelled; no one openly opposed; they took our works eagerly, and so hungry were many of them that they made us appoint another meeting one week from Sabbath next.

One old gray-haired Baptist brother, eighty-seven years old, who tends his saw-mill daily (Col. Barber, I think they call him, and Deacon, also owner of the grove), united with us with all his soul; and with streaming eyes, as he bade us farewell and took our papers, he said he felt that we were christians, and hoped we would come up often and preach to them. Praise God for victory.

I think the result will be quite a number converted to the truth in that region, and some will send for our papers. So you see we had quite a little campmeeting while yours was progressing; and, bless God, the victors will all triumph together soon. God bless all the picket outposts south and west, who are battling in the same Grand Army.

Rocky Brook, Aug. 31. J. T. DIXON.

From Bro. J. L. Floyd.

BRO. GRANT:—I sit down to give you a short account of the manner in which the divine Spirit changed my views, feelings, and disposition, from darkness to light. I had become a disbeliever in a God, and all his attributes, for some time; having mixed with almost every society, and prided myself in excelling all that I met with in serving the Devil; and having visited different countries and nations, and filled every station on board a merchant-ship from cabin boy to master, had made up my mind to obtain a collegiate education, and for the foundation of which I had commenced the study of the English language in earnest, in a town school in the town of Surry, Me., where many of my stamp in serving the Devil were associated with me. I had never witnessed a revival of religion, or a reformation, as it was termed, and did not believe in it either. I had not been long at school, when a reformation broke out in the town of Blue-hill, adjoining the town of Surry, and one of my associates, by the name of Benjamin Lord, visited the town and was converted, which somewhat startled me; but he seemed to avoid me. I then began to think what my condition would be if it was true that there was a God, and such a thing as religion; and I began to be seriously wrought upon, but kept it all to myself, and prayed earnestly to God that if there was a God and religion, I might meet with that change, and in such a manner that I and all others should be convinced of its reality. I began to be weighed down with such a load of guilt and sorrow that I thought I should die. I continued to call upon God in secret, both day and night.

At length, on a Sabbath morning, I attended the church and listened as well as I could to the sermon; but found no hope from any thing that fell from the minister's lips. I spent the time from forenoon until afternoon meeting calling upon God to change me, and do it in such a manner that I would ever have the evidence. In the afternoon I attended the same church, and left the church after meeting with the same load upon my very heart. In the evening the same minister preached in the same house, and I attended, and when the sermon was about half done, my strength was taken from me, and the load of guilt was removed, and I fell from my seat, and was caught by Charles Swett, who was sitting beside me, and another person whom I do not recollect. I could neither speak or move, but I had never been so happy in all my life. Every thing that God has done appeared beautiful and glorious. I was convinced that there was a God, and it seemed as though I could see his beauty and all that he had done. O the beauty, the glory, and the happiness, is above description, and I wished ever to remain as I then was. There I lay in that happy state, without power or strength to move tongue or limb, until the close of the sermon, when my strength returned and my tongue was loosed, and it was impossible to keep my tongue still. It seems to me up to this day that, if I had held my peace, every thing around me would have cried out and given praise unto God for what he had done, and was then doing. I did not then feel, neither have I ever since, that God was that vindictive being he has been represented to be. All was love and beauty, and it seemed that all under his rule was right.

From that day, I have ever been strongly impressed that it was my duty to proclaim the glad tidings of the love, beauty and grandeur of God, and the beautiful plan of salvation, which I have tried in every way to shun until recently. I am, dear brother, yours in the true faith, J. L. FLOYD.

[We commend Bro. Floyd to the friends of Jesus. He is the converted lawyer to whom we referred a short time since. He has just commenced to sound the glad tidings of a coming Savior. Give Bro. F. your sympathies.—ED.

ONE TENTH.—At the late meeting of the Episcopal Council of Virginia, Dr. Andrews, who was afterward elected by the clergy as assistant Bishop, preached the introductory sermon. He took the ground that one tenth of the income was the sum which ought to be given to benevolent objects—that contributions should be first given for the support of worship at home—that the pastor's rate of living should be that of the middle man of his community—and that, therefore, wherever there were ten families, a pastor could be supported. If there were but five, it was half missionary ground; if there were twenty, half the proceeds of contributions ought to go into the missionary treasury. If this could be carried out, there would be little missionary ground in this country.

KIND WORDS DON'T COST MUCH.

They never blister the tongue nor lips. And we have never heard of any mental trouble arising from this matter. Though they do not cost much, yet,

1. They help one's good nature. Soft words soften our own soul. Angry words are fuel to the flame of wrath, and make it blaze more fiercely. 2. Kind words make other people good natured. Cold words freeze people, and hot words scorch them, and bitter words make them bitter, and wrathful words make them wrathful. There is such a rush of all other kinds of words in our days, that it seems desirable to give kind words a change among them. There are vain words, and hasty words, and spiteful words, and silly words, and empty words, and profane words, and boisterous words, and warlike words. Kind words also produce their own image on men's souls. And a beautiful image it is. They smooth and quiet, and comfort the hearer. They shame him out of his sour, morose, unkind feelings. We have not yet begun to use kind words in such abundance, as they ought to be used.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

BERLIN, Sept. 2. By orders from the War Office, recruiting for the army in Prussia has been postponed for three months.

FLORENCE, Sept. 2. The Italian Government is increasing the number of its military posts on the frontier of the Papal States.

London, Sept. 4. It is reported that Count Sartiges, who was until recently the French representative at Rome, was recalled on account of his inability to restore friendly relations between Italy and Rome.

Advices have been received here from Teheran, announcing that Muzzoffer Ed-Diu-Murza, heir to the Persian crown, had received died of cholera.

The Bermuda Dry Dock, the largest structure for floating in the world, was successfully launched in the Thames at this city to-day.

The Presse has an editorial to-day on the matter of the American squadron in Turkish waters. It says that the demand that United States war vessels shall pass the Dardanelles was prompted by Russia, and that the Sublime Porte, encouraged by the English and French Ministers, will refuse to comply.

DOMESTIC.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3. A letter from Greece says that the Cretan insurrection is flourishing. The Turks are nearly worn out and disorganized, and it will be with great difficulty if they can continue the contest, while the Christians are flushed with success and infuriated by recent massacres to desperate deeds and enterprises. Through the intervention of Ignatieff, the Porte has been obliged to dismiss Penten Pasha, commanding in Candia, and other officials there.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4. A scout came into Hays City, last evening, from Fort Dodge. He reports that a Mexican train was attacked on the 28th of August, at Pawnee Fork, on the old Sante Fe route, 37 miles southwest from Fort Dodge, by a large party of Arrapahoe and Cheyenne Indians. They killed sixteen Mexicans, scalping them and burning their bodies with the wagons. Another train, a few miles beyond, was successfully resisting the efforts of the Indians to capture them.

Another train loaded with 7500 pounds of wool for Messrs. Otro and Sellers, commission merchants of that place, was attacked at Cimaron Crossing, twenty-five miles from Fort Dodge, on the same road. The men fought until their ammunition gave out, and then abandoned the train, saving what stock they could.

SAVANNAH, GA., Sept. 2. The negroes of the skirts of this city are causing trouble. They have armed themselves, and are drilling nightly. They stop farmers on the roads leading to the city and country. The inhabitants are compelled to go in parties of ten or twelve when they come to market.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2. A letter from Syra, Greece, to the Evening Post, dated Aug. 8, states that the Turks have lately committed another act of vandalism in Crete, which should not escape the notice of civilized Europe and America. The olive trees, heavy with a crop, which promised to sustain the half-starved Christians of that heroic isle, have been entirely destroyed, so that the women and children may be forced by famine to yield to the Ottoman power. The Turkish Commander-in-Chief has also issued an order for the heads of families to bring back to Crete all refugees under the penalty of the confiscation of their lands and effects.

HARTFORD, Sept. 3. Ex-Gov. Thos. H. Seymour died at his residence in this city at half-past eight o'clock this evening of typhoid fever, aged 61 years.

THE INDIAN HOSTILITIES.— The Indian bureau at Washington has received advices from Superintendent Murphy, dated at Atchison, Kansas, August 22. He says he fully concurs in the views expressed in Agent Wynkoop's letter, that the innocent Indians who are trying to keep in good faith their treaty pledges should be protected, while he earnestly recommends that the Indians who have committed the recent gross outrages be turned over to the military, and that they be severely punished. In view of the importance of the case he recommends that Agent Wynkoop be furnished promptly with the views of the department, and that full instructions be given him for his future action. Mr. Wynkoop suggests he be empowered to take the Indians whom he knows to be guiltless of the enormities committed on the Saline river, and who are desirous of remaining at peace, and locate them with their lodges and families at some good point which he may select in the vicinity of Fort Larned, and let them be subsisted entirely by the government until the troubles are over. Let them be kept within certain bounds, and let them be furnished with a small battalion of troops to protect them from their own people and from being forced into a war. Let those who refuse to respond to his call to come within the bounds prescribed be considered at war, and let them be properly punished. By this means, if war takes place, which he considers inevitable, there will be ability to discriminate between those who deserve punishment and those who do not.

A Denver dispatch says the Cheyenne and Arrapahoe Indians are still committing depredations, and murdering inoffensive settlers in central and eastern Colorado. On Tuesday they attacked the Kiowa station, on the Smoky Hill route, capturing thirty horses and carrying off a woman and child whose remains were found the next day, shockingly mutilated. Another band killed three men at Latham, on the Platte stage road, and chased the Smoky Hill coach for several miles, keeping up a running fire without doing any damage. Gov. Hall has organized a company of sixty volunteers and is in pursuit. Gen. Sheridan has authorized him to call on the commander of Fort Reynolds for assistance. No doubt every effort will be made to punish the savages. Great excitement exists, as the Indians are stripping country of stock and provisions. Twelve persons are known to have been murdered within the past two days.

Edward M. Pratt of Peoria, Ill., who was herding horses two miles from Cheyenne, was scalped by five Indians, who drove off thirty horses. J. B. Everett, who was with Pratt, escaped. Similar outrages in that vicinity are common. Cavalry have gone in pursuit of the savages.

Twenty Indians were recently captured by a party of citizens near Old Mission on the Missouri river. They will be delivered up to the military authorities.—Republican.

Maine Mission Tent.

The tent will be pitched at Blackenton's Corner, one mile and a half from Rockland city, to commence work in connection with a campmeeting, Thursday, at 10 o'clock A. M., Sept. 17th, on ground owned by Mr. Benj. Clough, and near his house. It is on the road from Camden Harbor to Rockland, six miles from Camden, four miles and a half from Rockport, five from Thomaston, five from So. Hope, and four from West Camden. Those coming by Steamer will land at Rockland. Pasturing for horses, and board for the people will be furnished for pay, near the ground. Brethren and sisters who can bring tents, provision and bedding, come prepared to labor for the spread of the gospel and the salvation of sinners in this new field. Brn. Moses Young, H. B. Eaton, and S. Hall, have located and arranged for this meeting.

I. C. WELLCOME, in behalf of the Committee.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting commenced in Chicago, Sept. 25th, and held as long as the interest may demand. Eld. Miles Grant has been engaged to preach during the meeting, and Bro. D. S. Clark and others are expected to be present and aid in proclaiming the truth and in bringing souls to Christ. Will God's dear children pray for this meeting, that it may be the means of bringing many to Christ, and that the word preached may be accompanied with the Holy Spirit, convicting the sinner, confirming the saint, and confounding our enemies? For the church, C. C. RAMSEY. WM. HYNES. J. FRANCES.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of the State of Conn. will be held at Square Pond, Conn., Sept. 30th, 1868; the services to commence at 7 o'clock on Wednesday evening. The place is accessible by railroad from Hartford to Rockville, thence six miles. It is presumed that provision will be made for conveyance, and that it will be advertised. Also one at Orcuttville near West Stafford and Stafford Springs.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

Notice.

The seventh annual gathering of the people of God in Darien, Genesee Co., N. Y., will commence Friday evening, Sept. 11th, and continue over the following Sabbath. It is also the quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of New York. Our tent will be here. Particulars hereafter. Circumstances will prevent the Tent being here. Trains stop at Crafts' Station, on the Central R. R., at 5 P. M. from the east, and 4 P. M. from the west. Conveyance will be there ready.

B. C. SIMONDS.

Tent Meeting at Rochester Plains, N. H.

The Lord willing, there will be a tent meeting at Rochester Plains, N. H., commencing Wednesday evening, Sept. 16th, and to continue as the Lord directs. All are invited to come over and help. D. M. LEAVITT. A. SIMPSON.

Advent Christian State Conf. of N. H.

The annual session of this conference for 1868 will be held at Lake Village, N. H., commencing Oct. 15th and hold over the following Sunday. Particulars hereafter. A. W. SIBLEY, Sec.

Minnesota Quarterly Meeting.

The first quarterly meeting for the present conference year will be held (providence not preventing) in Utica, Winona county, commencing Friday evening, Sept. 25th, and will continue over the following Sunday. THOS. K. ALLEN, Sec.

Notice.

In compliance with the request of Deacon T. C. Armstrong, of Liberty, Steuben Co., N. Y., I will hold a two days (or quarterly) meeting with the Christian Church of his vicinity as he may arrange, to commence Sept. 18th, and continue over Sunday the 20th. All are cordially invited.

C. F. SWEET.

Letters.

The following letters were sent to the Springfield campmeeting, but not called for by those to whom they were addressed: Albert B. Cahoon, two for Mrs. Florinda L. Richards, Mrs. L. A. Tagert, Joseph Weaver, James F. Litelle, Albert Hitchcock.

Lost.

A large bag containing blankets, pillows, comforters, a carpet bag filled with sundries, sheets and clothing, delivered by Mr. Collins' teams to Springfield depot, Aug. 31st, in season for the 7½ A. M. train for Boston. Any information concerning the above will be thankfully received at the Crisis office.

LOST, in transporting from the "National Advent Camp-grounnd," a coarse bag, about two feet long, with no name or mark on it, containing ropes in the top, and the duck cloth top of "Thorndike Tent," belonging to Prosper Howard, Thorndike, Palmer, Mass. If found, please forward.

Notice.

There will be a basket meeting in Enfield, Ct., near or on the old camp-ground, near the Warehouse Point depot, commencing Sept. 24th, and hold over Sunday. All are invited to come.

For the brethren. D. PALMER. D. W. MELLEN.

Notice.

Our meetings at Union Hall, 216 Broadway, So. Boston, are suspended. Due notice will be given when and where we shall resume them, by J. N. BERRY, Sec. of the Church and Society.

Notice.

The Rome quarterly conference is postponed to some time in Nov. Future notice will be given.

H. B. SEVEY.

General Union Campmeeting.

There will be a general union campmeeting held in the Sap Grove, belonging to Col. R. J. Sanborn, known in that vicinity as the Deerfield Camp-Ground, near the line between Candia and Deerfield, N. H., commencing Wednesday, Sept. 9th, to hold eight days. We hope brethren and sisters, who love Jesus and his appearing, and are desirous of laboring for Christ, will come to this meeting. We think this will be a good field for labor. Those coming by R. R. will stop at Candia Depot, N. H. Teams for passengers and baggage will connect with the train. It is expected the fare on the R. R. will be reduced to half price. Particulars hereafter. Let those who can, bring tents. For those who cannot, tents will be furnished.

An invitation is extended to the various ministers and churches in the vicinity to come and unite with us, and labor for the salvation of the perishing. The campmeeting committee consists of Enoch Morril, John M. Quimby, James N. Bachelder, Asa P. Moulton, and Albert Quimby. Board will be furnished on the ground at reasonable prices. Preaching brethren will be cared for. H. L. Hastings, John Couch, S. W. Thurber, J. G. Smith, J. G. Hook, and others, are expected to be present and preach the word.

ENOCH MORRILL, for the Committee.

For the World's Crisis.

"WATCH AND PRAY."

Watchful, prayerful, let us be,
Till our Master we shall see;
Him who died that we might live,
Him who will our sins forgive.

Wondrous love! O joy to tell
Of the one I love so well;
Tell to all, both far and near,
That my Lord will soon appear.

Crowns of glory shall adorn
All the saints on that blest morn,
When our great and glorious King
Shall to us salvation bring.

Sinner, vilest of the vile,
Now behold thy Father's smile;
Jesus' blood will cleanse from sin,
Yes, 'twill make the foulest clean.

Never linger, do not wait,
Come, for soon 'twill be too late;
Life eternal—priceless boon—
Thou canst not secure too soon.

He who came and died for men,
Soon will come to earth again;
Yes, the same who went away
Will return at judgment day,

Then to give us, every one,
When our work shall all be done,
Just rewards to good and bad,
Cheering hearts that now are sad.

Then we'll shout and sing for joy,
For there's nought that can destroy;
Nothing either to molest
In the land of peaceful rest.

'Tis the land where all the pure
Hope to dwell with God secure,
That we may by faith and prayer,
All obtain an entrance there.

So may we all watch and pray,
And the great commands obey,
That the Lord, when he shall come,
Will to us proclaim, "Well done."

G. E. Lee.

For the World's Crisis.

ADDRESS.

To the Beloved in the Lord residing in the State of New Hampshire, greeting:

Dear Brethren:—Agreeably to a vote passed at our last quarterly session of conference, held at Whitefield, N. H., respecting protracted meetings and missionary effort in the state, I now write you. Perhaps enough has been said by others to stir up every mind to the importance of earnest and decided action in the cause of our coming King; but we wish to speak to and exhort you again.

Standing as we do in close proximity to the judgment of the great day, when omens of an unmistakable nature tell us that man's last hours of probation are passing, and that soon it will be announced from the eternal throne "it is done!" it is evident that there are responsibilities resting upon us of a mighty magnitude; different from those in any other age of the Christian church.

The church has come to the last grand struggle in her history. Her battle is nearly fought. Victory will soon perch itself upon her banner. Eternal deliverance from all the moral, political and physical evils of our world, will soon be experienced by her. This fact is clearly indicated in the political department of our world, as well as in many other directions. The national and political waters are being stirred as never before. Preparations for a war of a more extensive nature and gigantic form preparatory to the mustering of Armageddon's legions, and the last grand crisis in human affairs, are being made on an unparalleled scale in human history. The world's horizon is being darkened by the rising of these thunder bolts of war. The calm and sober minded of our world, whose actions in the political arena have been characterized with wisdom and discretion heretofore, are startled from their positions by the sounds which fall upon the drums of their ears, and are ready to cry out, "What will the end of these things be?"

The lamp of prophecy is shining with more brilliancy on the pathway of the church than ever before. To the well instructed scribe in the things of the kingdom, this great portended change, which has engaged the attention of kings, statesmen, and the far-seeing political schemes of our times, as well as those who have not acted in the so-called "ring," is as clear as the noon day sun—its nature being understood—the hand writing on the walls being known at sight.

Earth's dissolution is coming. This mortal economy is to close, and that very soon. The proclamation,—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh," that has been proclaimed for about twenty-five years in our midst, has not been sounding for naught. God's voice has been heard in it, admonishing mortal man that his day of probation is soon to close, and that another era and economy, more grand in its nature, far surpassing in beauty and glory the present, are to succeed this; when "Judah's Lion" will reign "from the rivers to the ends of the earth," and the glory of God fill the same as the "waters cover the mighty deep." But notwithstanding the note of warning has been sounding for a quarter of a century; that the scenes in earth's drama are soon to terminate; there are many portions of our own state which as yet have not been explored and the moral soil plowed, and the seed of the gospel of the kingdom sown. There are cries coming up from every direction, saying, "Come over and help us." Will we turn a deaf ear to these calls, and make no effort to save our fellow men, who are standing upon the brink of ruin? Come, let us who feel the obligations to the great Head of the church for the flood of light which has burst upon our vision, and exhilarated our hearts in relation to the return of the "Nobleman," and establishment of his kingdom, make every possible exertion for the dissemination of the same among those who have not been blest with the privilege of hearing these great, sublime, and dispensational truths.

We have some important missions in the South, and elsewhere; but we need missionaries in the Granite State, of divine appointment—men of God, commissioned by the great "Head," approved by the church, to carry the glad tidings, and make a missionary effort in the different localities, where darkness abounds in relation to the glorious truths in which we believe. Let the ministry and church make this a subject of prayer and see if men and means cannot be raised for this object.

Brethren, what is our duty in these times? Is it to lie undisturbed upon our pillows of repose? Is it to say, that "to-morrow will be as to-day, and much more abundant," or is it to sound the alarm, and make every possible effort to save our fellow men from the wrath to come? May we wake up in New Hampshire to the importance of home missions. There ought to be many protracted meetings held in the state before this year closes. There was a protracted meeting committee appointed by the State Conference to hold such meetings. Are there meetings of this kind being held? If so, where? Let the brethren who want protracted meetings held with them notify the committee, and demand of them to discharge their duty in that direction. Action, action, ACTION of a decided nature is what is needed in these times, when things are moving with railroad velocity. May God stir up his people north, south, east and west to make a greater effort and sacrifice for the cause the coming year, than ever before. Yours fraternally,

A. W. Sibley, Secretary of the N. H. State Conference.

For the World's Crisis.

ANALYSIS OF PRAYER.

Bro. Grant:—Let us in brief analyze some of the prayers to which we often listen. And first, I will describe one I heard not long since. It occupied about eight minutes; and if the one who offered it had not said, "Let us pray," I should have considered it an exhortation. It was about Christ, the plan of salvation, etc. At the close of the meeting, I asked him if he could give me the definition of prayer? He said it was the fervent breathing of the soul after God. According to this definition, but little of his time was spent in prayer; only a few seconds at the close, saying, Lord, bless and save us, etc.

Another one I heard was a profuse quotation of Scripture from Isaiah, relating to our Savior, who was wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities, and with whose stripes we are healed, etc. I could mention many others of this class; and no doubt the reader can call to mind those of the same sort. Let no one say this criticism is unjust. Brethren who make such prayers may have sincerity and pure hearts; but looking at them in the light of Scripture, they cannot be called prayers. I know it is well enough in prayer to quote the promises applicable to our wants; but further than this, every thing said, except petitions, can not be called prayer.

It is of no use to put on airs when we come to God in prayer; but having in Christ's name approached him, the most acceptable prayer we can make, and the one most edifying to the church, would be to tell God, in the most comprehensive language we can use, just what we want, or what we feel burdened to pray for, and then say Amen. We doubt whether the Spirit prompts any one to wander into the fields of divinity or theology in prayer. We have no example in Scripture, except perhaps in the dedicatory prayer of Solomon, and that we know was an extraordinary occasion.

If brethren and sisters would adopt this rule of short prayer, and to the point, in public meeting, they would be more spiritual and profitable. The time of our ordinary prayer-meeting is about ninety minutes; and now let us divide this among the small number of twenty, and we have about four minutes each; but how often do a few monopolize the whole time, and many go away unsatisfied. I account for this, and many other inconsistencies of professors, from the contraction of habits at their conversion. We know that the commencement of a religious life is like starting anew in the world; and the convert generally gets into habits, during the first few weeks, which cling to him during all his life. If he at first becomes prompt, brief and active, this will be a peculiar trait in his experience; but if he halts and hesitates, or gets a habit of speaking in an unnatural tone of voice (as many do), or makes long prayers or exhortations, these will also be likely to follow him in future.

And now, in conclusion, let me say to all who are about to start for the kingdom, or who are already in the way, to make it a point to be minute men and women, and whatever the hands find to do, do it with thy might; for the day hasteth greatly, and we have no time to waste. Our specific work should be to prepare ourselves and others for the coming judgment.

GIVE GOD ALL THE GLORY.

We frequently see in the advertising papers of the day advertisements of persons stating that they have been restored to health after many years of suffering by the use of a prescription which they will for a stated sum forward to all who desire it. This is done, doubtless, in many instances not from any real desire to do good to the sick and afflicted, but merely for a compensation, which ought not to be the object of any christian gentleman or lady.

The writer having recently been raised from the verge of the grave by the use of a very simple remedy, designs to furnish freely and cheerfully to all who will receive it, the prescription used in her own case, not expecting or desiring a compensation for her labors in this world, but is expecting, if faithful till Jesus comes, to receive the reward promised to those who love and serve him faithfully to the end.

For three years the writer's health has been gradually declining. She was sometimes troubled with a very severe cough, and had once bled at the lungs, and was afflicted with many other equally alarming symptoms attendant on consumption; yet she kept up and attended to her usual business all the time, with the exception of about three months, until the former part of the month of June, 1867, when she was prostrated with fever. A physician was called and medicine prescribed. In a few weeks she was pronounced to be convalescent, and was able to sit up a few hours in a day; but in a very short time, through some carelessness on her own part, a relapse of the fever was produced. Other physicians were consulted, and medicines prescribed, but all their efforts proved unavailing. She was several times considered convalescent, but in a few days she would be prostrated again, sinking each time lower than before. The mind had become so weakened by disease that, with the advice of friends, she consented and even requested to consult mesmeric or clairvoyant physicians (which, by the way, she always had considered and still does consider to be the work of Satan,) and of course their medicines did her no good. At last, after having consulted physicians both far and near, she was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse; her case was considered hopeless, and she was given up to die.

One day, left alone in her room, as she very often was at her own request, the thought was impressed on her mind that she might be raised to health in answer to prayer were she to send for the Elders; but feeling she would like to talk with some good brother or sister before making that request, and not desiring to live unless it was the Lord's will, and for his glory, she said nothing to any one in regard to the matter, but looked to the Lord in prayer, asking him if it was his will that she should be restored to health in that way, to send some one to converse with her. In a short time two good sisters (may the Lord bless them and give them eternal life in the kingdom when Jesus comes) were sent.

For nearly three months previous to this time she had become so weakened by disease as to be unable to stand or walk without producing the most intense suffering, and for nine successive weeks she had not been up only as she was taken up and placed from one couch to another. She was suffering very much with inflammation of the stomach and disease of the lungs, more particularly the right one. The nervous system was so debilitated that conversation or a very slight noise produced severe suffering. Tongue cannot tell and pen cannot write a tithe of the torture which was endured. There were also many other difficulties which time and space will not permit mentioning. Within the above mentioned time (three months) she had not been permitted to see visitors, and when informed that those sisters were in the house, dared not refuse to see them, and they were permitted to enter the room. They talked with her a few moments and prayed. After prayers the Lord had given her strength so that she was enabled to converse as she had not been enabled to do for many months before without fatigue. After they had left she became fully satisfied what duty was, and soon sent for the Elders in accordance with the directions of the apostle James: "Is any sick among you, let him call for the elders of the church." James 5: 14–16. On the 24th of March, 1868, all medicines and human remedies were abandoned. The Lord heard the prayers of faith and immediately rebuked the disease, and she began to amend from that very hour. The nervous system was instantly calmed, the inflammation of the stomach removed, and food which had previously caused great distress could then be taken without suffering. The lung which was so much diseased is now apparently well, and she is able to work, ride, walk, and attend meeting, as many brethren, sisters, friends and acquaintances can testify.

"Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name we give glory." "O Lord, my God, I cried unto thee, and thou hast healed me. Thou hast kept me alive." "Bless the Lord, oh my soul, and forget not all his benefits; who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction." "The sorrows of death compassed me . . . I was brought low, and he helped me." "O praise the Lord, for his merciful kindness is great toward us. Praise him for his mighty acts; praise him according to his excellent greatness. Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord."

BY FAITH.

"Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face."

Sometimes, when we bow in prayer, we feel so fully the presence of Jesus, that it seems almost as if we saw him whom our souls love; but that is only by the eye of faith. And even that sight is often dimmed by trials and temptations. The days of fulness of joy in the christian life are few. Often we forget that the strong hand of Jesus is holding ours, and will guide us safely, and, like Peter filled with doubts, we pray, "Help, Lord, or I perish."

But soon the time is coming when no longer shall we see through a glass darkly. The veil will be removed, and face to face we shall see our blessed Redeemer. No longer any doubts shall trouble the mind. We shall know then that we are accepted of him, for he will say to us, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you." Do riches take to themselves wings and fly away? We shall find then that Jesus knew best what was for our good. Have we lost our good name in this world, because we are of the poor despised company? We shall there find it again, a name without spot or blemish.

How hard it was to part with that dear loved one of whom death has bereft us here. We almost murmured beneath the chastening hand of God. In that blessed world it will all be clear, and we shall then know what Jesus knows now, that it was the only way to lead us near to him, and make us ready to have a part with him in the better land. There through all eternity we shall be with Jesus, the dear Lamb of God. We shall look on him who was pierced for us, he who bore our infirmities. He will be all glorious then, King of kings and Lord of lords, and we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.

EXHORTATION.

"Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth, and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thy heart and in the sight of thy eyes; but know thou that for all of these things God will bring you into judgment."—Eccl. 11: 9.

While I see so many youth hastening unprepared to the judgment, I cannot forbear calling to them to stop for a moment and consider what you are doing. Your christian friends earnestly desire your salvation. They see your danger. They know that unless your heart is renewed by the Holy Ghost, you must be lost. They plead with you. They weep and pray for you night and day. They long to see you walking in the requirements of the gospel. The angels of God desire your salvation. Yes, their golden harps are tuned to raise a loud song of joy over every one who will repent. Shall angels long for your salvation, and you be unconcerned about it yourself?

Christ himself desires your salvation. For this he became a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief. For this he endured the agony of the garden and the cross. He calls you by his word, by his providence, and by his Spirit. He declares that he is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance. Shall he call in vain? Is it nothing to you that he shed his precious blood and bore the wrath of Jehovah for perishing sinners? O, heart of adamant, that will not melt in view of such condescension, suffering, and love.

Consider the glories of the kingdom. There is the throne of God and of the Lamb. There the pure river of the water of life forever flows. There all the good of every age will unite in shouting, Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth. There every humble saint at last arrives. There is the consummation of all their happiness.

Think of the horrors of the judgment. What pencil can paint or what pen describe them? Weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth. O, who can dwell with devouring fire? Who can inhabit everlasting burning?

Death is rapidly approaching. Perhaps this night you will close your eyes to wake to the solemn scenes of the judgment. How many of your companions have gone down to the grave, their accounts closed for the judgment. My dear friends, the judgment is at hand. Soon the loud trump of the archangel will awake the sleeping dead, and you, among them will come forth to the resurrection of life or the resurrection of damnation. Then the Savior, whom you have loved or despised, will appear in the clouds of heaven, to give to every one according as his work shall be. Before him you must stand with assembled millions, while he bids you depart, or welcomes you to his kingdom.

Signs show that he is at the door. Sinner, escape for thy life! Call upon him while there is opportunity. May you say with the poet—

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee."

Now arise and go to Jesus. Go to him a humble beggar. Go penitent and believing. None such were ever sent empty away. Delay a little longer, and you are lost, lost forever.

IS THY GIFT ACCEPTABLE?

"Therefore, if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee, leave there thy gift before the altar."—Matt. 5: 23. Dear brethren, how few heed the teachings of our Savior on this subject. How willing many are to go to the altar, or prayer-meeting, and offer their gift as though nothing had happened. Perhaps you will hear them talk long and loud, but yet have a little hatred in the heart. They may say they love Jesus. John says, "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer; and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." How careful we should be not to take the first wrong step. "Agree with thine adversary quickly." But, says one, put it off a few days, and perhaps he will come to me. O how many have had to suffer in consequence of not observing the command of the Savior. Shall we mock God with our unholy sacrifices? Will he be pleased with us if we take this course? I think not. Justice demands her right. Will you let your case go to the court of heaven before the great Judge?

If our hearts have been cleansed by the blood of Christ, how can we sow the seeds of discord? Some, desiring to be teachers of the law, are found doing this very work. O for that spirit which will suffer long, and then be kind. Can a fountain send forth both sweet water and bitter? Neither can we love God and hate our brother for whom Christ died. "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain."—James 1: 26. How often we see one of God's little ones grieved by some harsh word and unkind look; sometimes by wicked and unkind treatment; and thus he is overcome by the wicked one, or turned aside unto vain jangling, which will increase unto more ungodliness.

Dear brethren, let us not love in word only, but in deed and in truth. Be ensamples to the flock; not try to lord it over God's heritage, but show yourselves a pattern of good works. Let us who profess to be looking for the Savior have our sacrifices accepted. If our heart is right, we can love our bitterest enemies. Thank the good Lord for this love. It purifies the heart, and overcomes the world. Pray that your unworthy brother may have this principle in his heart, and ever be looking for the Lord's return.

NAPOLEON IN REVELATION.

By Rev. S. Garratt, M. A., Incumbent of St. Mary's, Ipswich, Eng.

Prophecy leads us to expect that the Jews, or some of them, will be restored to their own land by a powerful ruler, whom they will accept as their Messiah, and in the Lord's name cast out his servants.

We see from Daniel and from Revelation that the Roman power, both imperial and ecclesiastical, is to "plant the tabernacles of his palaces between the seas in the glorious holy mountain," and there can be little doubt that the ruler of the Roman empire when that event takes place, will also be the false Messiah of the Jews. The Jews, restored, most likely by the influence of France, will look upon that event as the consummation of their hopes, and upon the instrument of it as the deliverer of their nation and the promised Christ. When the first Napoleon, in the year 1806, assembled the Jewish Sanhedrim at Paris, the language of adulation addressed to him by that body fell little short of this. And at the present time the thought is not unknown to the Jewish mind.

A remarkable proof of this is furnished by a work published in Paris by a Spanish Jew named Salvador, a Frenchman by allegiance, under the title of Rome, Paris, Jerusalem." M. Salvador considers that a new era of the world's history commenced in 1806, with the revival of the Jewish Sanhedrim at Paris, which will develop itself in what he calls a new Messianism, having Jerusalem for its centre, in which the substance of Judaism shall array itself in the dress of Romanism, adopting much of its outward ceremonial, and retaining nominally all the doctrines, both of christianity and of Romanism, while robbing them of their meaning. The valley of Jehoshaphat is to be covered with an immense temple, the arrangement of which he describes, not built after the pattern in Ezekiel, but constructed for the common worship of the Jew, the Mohammedan, the Greek, the Roman, and the Protestant, an international exhibition of all the religions in the world which agree in acknowledging the divine mission of Moses.

He points out the desirableness to France of the possession of the Holy Land, and regards this union of opposing faiths as the culminating point of the civilization of the age. Modern civilization is the object of his adoration. It is not easy to see whether he regards this idea abstractedly, or the French Emperor personally, as the Christ of his new Messianism, but it is evident that he is well prepared to accept either the one or the other as the fulfillment of Jewish expectations.

The phase of the Jewish mind thus exhibited is in perfect keeping with the predictions relating to the restoration of Judah in unbelief and apostasy. But we must carefully distinguish this event from the restoration of all Israel, which forms the theme of all the prophets, and of which St. Paul speaks as "life from the dead" to the world. The one event will take place before the appearing of Christ to translate the church. The other event will take place after the Lord has come with all his saints, and his feet have stood upon the Mount of Olives. The one event will end in great, though purifying affliction, the other in peace, and safety, and glory, in the millennial reign, and the eternal blessedness of regenerated earth.—Signs of our Times.

UNBELIEF.

How prominent a feature of this degenerate age is unbelief. Although many lamentable examples are on record as having occurred in the past, yet no previous age would seem to present so general a display of this sin of sins as the present. Actuated by this propensity, the children of Israel were early in rebellion against that God whose mighty power had just delivered them from Egyptian bondage. (Deut. 9: 23); so too, influenced by the same principle, the Jews in after ages rejected their long promised Messiah, and with him the collective promises of God's word, and their house was left unto them desolate. Matt. 23: 38.

Just prior to the crucifixion of our Lord, when arraigned before a blasphemous council, it was demanded of him, "Art thou the Christ?" His reply was, "If I tell you, ye will not believe." Luke 22: 67. Were Christ to return to the earth in the guise of a teacher and a prophet, may it not be fairly inferred that the pride, opulence and fashion of the nominal churches of this day would not know him? nor would their numbers, who seek honor one of another, regardless of that honor which cometh from God only, believe him. Full of an insatiate desire for wealth, and unmindful of the preceptive humility of the cross, the popular churches of our day are obviously engrossed in those constituents of idolatry, ever abominated by the God of Israel. What are the ornaments of the church edifice, the novel embellishments of church music, the exorbitant salary of a hireling priest, etc., but the ostensible features of pride, vanity, and self-love? And how do these emanations of darkness conspire to foster unbelief.

The Pharisees loved the praise of men more than the praise of God, and this it was that rendered their hearts gross, their ears deaf to the sound of the glorious gospel, and shut their eyes to the sight of miraculous power.

Stoneham, Mass. W. A. Manning.

☞ Lost wealth may be restored by industry: the wreck of health regained by temperance; forgotten knowledge restored by study; alienated friendship smoothed into forgetfulness; even forfeited reputation won by penitence and virtue; but whoever again looked upon his vanished hours—recalled his slighted years, stamped them with wisdom, or effaced from heaven's record the fearful blot of wasted time?

☞ Work is the order of this day. The slow penny is surer than the quick dollar. The slow trotter will out-travel the fleet racer. Genius darts, flutters, and tires; but perseverance wears and wins. The all-day horse wins the race. The afternoon man wears off the laurels. The last blow finishes the nail.

☞ The trappings of dress I most heartily despise, and have always felt inclined to judge of the mind from the clothing of the body. The neatness and purity of the one indicate the solidity and harmony of the other. In either, an extravagant frippery in dress denotes a weak understanding.

☞ Remember that earth has one privilege above heaven. It is the privilege of beneficence. The privilege of passing by a transgression, of relieving the distressed, of instructing the ignorant, of reclaiming the vicious, of seeking and saving them that are lost.

☞ Some folks are prodigiously penitent over other people's sins, and seem to think they have a special call to confess them before the whole world. They will gouge their brother's eyes out rather than leave a single mote in them. At the same time they are singularly blind respecting their own failings.

☞ All God's children have received God's Spirit, whereby they are made humble, believing and holy: humble in regard to their sins, believing in regard of Christ, and holy in regard of their conscience and care to keep all God's commandments.

☞ Give me one hundred preachers who fear nothing but sin, and desire nothing but God, and I care not a straw whether they be clergymen or laymen; such alone will shake the gates of hell, and set up the kingdom of heaven upon earth.—John Wesley.

☞ A good deal of the trouble of God's people arises from a mistake and misapprehension of God. They judge of God by their own sense, not by his promise; by their own frame, not by his constant nature.

☞ In the voyage of life we should imitate the ancient mariners, who, without losing sight of the earth, trusted to the heavenly signs for their guidance.

☞ Adversity has ever been considered as the state in which a man most easily becomes acquainted with himself—particularly, being free from flatterers.

☞ The most common things are the most useful: which shows both the wisdom and goodness of the great Father of the family of the world.

☞ The aim of an honest man's life is not the happiness which serves only himself, but the virtue which is useful to others.

☞ Dull men are to be closely studied. Their qualities, like pearls, lie out of sight, and must be dived for.

☞ Our prayers and God's mercy are like two buckets in a well—while the one ascends, the other descends.

☞ Love is of the nature of the burning glass, which, kept still in one place, fireth; changed often, it doeth nothing.

☞ Carefully avoid those vices which most resemble virtue; they are a thousand times the most ensnaring of all vices.

☞ People oftener want something taken away to make them agreeable, than something to be added.

☞ The duty of the happy is to help the suffering to bear their woe.

☞ Boast of your treasures of grace, and you are soon robbed.

☞ Wise men make more opportunities than they find.

☞ It is better to weep with Jerusalem at noon than mourn with Babylon at night.

☞ We are not worthy of loving truth when we can love anything more than that.

☞ Thefts never enrich; alms never impoverish; prayers hinder no work.

MORAL COURAGE.

Have the courage to hear what your enemies say of you. They are seldom worth knowing—for the most part stories founded upon fact.

Have the courage to call things by their proper names—call flesh, flesh, not meat. Those who do not approve of your honesty will fear it. That is as it should be.

Have the courage to get out of bed immediately when you ask yourself the question as to whether you shall do so or not. The advantage must be in getting up.

Have the courage to refuse a favor that endangers anything, although it costs you little. How much has been sacrificed at the shrine of obligation!

Have the courage to grant a favor that insures a benefit, even if it costs you much. How many could do good, were they but brave enough.

Have the courage to own your altered opinions upon conviction—you need not be ashamed of being wiser to-day than you were yesterday.

Have the courage to carry a cheap umbrella; you will discover why when you lose it.

Have the courage to ask for the bills of your professional men, and to pay them; you will be slow to run up others.

Have the courage to wear thick boots in winter.

Have the courage to be bold in your friend's cause, and modest in your own.

Have the courage to acknowledge you love God—it is base ingratitude not to do so.

Have the courage to discharge a debt while you have the money in your pocket.

Have the courage to tell the truth, and you will find it much easier, and requiring much less hardihood than falsehood.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

BY MRS. M. L. HASTINGS.

Many of the dear little children have asked me to write them a story; and so I will tell them about how God hears and answers the prayers of little children, as well as older persons.

Some may think that children are too small or too poor to be noticed by the great God. But that God has sent his dearly beloved Son into this wicked world to save little children. And when Christ was on earth he called the little ones to his arms and blessed them;—not the good children or the rich children only, but just such children as we see about us every day, roguish, and wild, and sometimes disobedient;—yet Jesus loves them all.

How blessed it is to think that Jesus loves us, and hears us when we pray. We may be in trouble sometimes, and be blamed for something wrong which we have thoughtlessly or carelessly done;—and we may be tempted to deceive to escape reproof; but Jesus knows all about it, and if we carry it to him in prayer, he will work it all out for our good. Have we done wrong? Let us tell Jesus about it, and he will give us strength to confess the truth, and will protect us from all harm.

Now I will relate what the Lord did for me once, when I was a little girl six years old. If my little readers will look upon the map of Vermont, a little north-west of Montpelier, they will see a river called the Winooski, or Onion river, which runs to the north-west, and empties into Lake Champlain. On the south side of this river, in the town of B., stood the little brown cottage where I spent my childish days with my widowed mother, who sought to guide me in the fear of God.

The banks of this river were my favorite resort; here I used to watch the little speckled trout and other fishes, sometimes catching the little fish in my hands, and at other times dipping my bare feet in the water, picking up shells and pebbles, and making cakes of mud, and doing as all children do who have a chance to play by the water-side.

My faithful mother used to watch over me with an anxious eye, and often cautioned me to be careful about the water, lest I should fall into the stream and so be drowned. But one day when I was playing on the shore, picking up the pebbles and skipping them along the water, two of my brothers, who were much older and larger than I, came along where I was, and, wading the river at a shallow place, crossed in safety to the other shore. Then they climbed up the hillside and were soon out of sight, and I was left alone.

Now you all know that little girls do not like to have their big brothers run away and leave them alone, so I cried some, and all the more because I knew that over on the other side there was a hill where checkerberries were plenty, and where the children often went to gather them. I knew too, it was time for the berries to be red and ripe, and I supposed my brothers had gone to pick some; and the more I thought about it, the more I wanted to go there too.

And now came the temptation. I reasoned with myself, if my brothers could wade across the river safely, I could do the same; and so, forgetting the warnings of my kind mother, I ventured out into the stream. I did not fear any danger, and walked boldly on. The water rose higher and higher about me, as step after step brought me nearer and nearer to the strongest part of the current in the middle of the stream. By this time the water was up to my waist, but I thought I could cross over if it did not cover my mouth. But when the water came up to my shoulders my little heart began to flutter with fear, and then I remembered what my mother had told me about the danger of being drowned, and I tried to turn back to the shore, but found the current was too strong for me to go either backward or forward.

Distressed and frightened, I began to call, "Mother! mother!" but mother was out of hearing, and no one else was near to rescue me from the waves. Then I remembered what my mother had previously told me, that God would hear the sinner's prayer," and I lifted my heart and voice, crying, "Oh, God! save me! Oh, God! save me, and I'll never do so again!" But just as I began to pray, my feet slipped from beneath me, and away I went, swept by the swift current, lying on my back, and the waters dashing over my head at times, though I managed to keep my face mostly above water.

A few rods below me, a large, high rock jutted out into the bed of the stream, forming a kind of promontory, above which the current swept round in a dark and deep eddy. I had often sat upon this rock and watched the foam upon the dark waters, and had seen shrubs and flowers and leaves, and sometimes dead animals, floating upon its surface, beneath the solemn shadow of a huge overhanging elm, which was covered by a large grape vine. I had always feared this dark and shadowy place, and now the current was hurrying me swiftly towards its depths, and I had no power to escape.

Well, "in my distress I cried unto the Lord," and besought him to have mercy upon me, and to save me. But still the stream bore me on; —quicker than I can tell the tale the strong current shot past the corner of the rocky promontory, and the eddy was behind me, and the current was yet carrying me on. I still prayed the Lord to save me, and when a little further down, the stream swept me back towards the shore from which I started, and carried me under some overhanging willows which skirted the river bank, and whose bending branches brushed against my face. Wasn't I glad to see them? And didn't I stretch up my little hands to grasp them? and didn't I cling to them for dear life? Holding to those branches, I soon drew myself on shore, and ran home, glad that I had escaped from death, but trembling with the fear of a whipping, which I knew that I deserved, and expected that I should surely receive.

At first I thought I would tell my mother that I had accidentally fallen into the water, and wet my clothes; but I remembered how the Lord had saved me, and did not dare to tell a wicked lie. So I concluded to own the truth, and as I remembered how God had heard my prayer in the water, and delivered me from death, I prayed that he would keep my mother from whipping me when she heard the story of my fault.

Being afraid to go in with my wet clothes on me, I crawled in at my little bedroom window, and got some dry clothes, which I put on, and then hung my wet ones out to dry. I thought at first I would wait for my clothes to dry, but I feared it would take too long, and so I prayed about it, and concluded to go at once and tell mother the whole truth. So I went up stairs, where my mother sat weaving at the old loom.

"What have you got those clothes on for?" said mother.

"Because I have been a naughty girl."

"What have you been doing?" said she.

"The boys have gone over the river to pick checkerberries," said I, "and I wanted to go with them, and I fell into the river. I am sorry, and I will never do so again," said I, bursting into tears.

My mother looked surprised and frightened, and said, "Oh, what a naughty girl! How did you dare disobey me? Now you have come very near being drowned, just because you disobeyed your mother. You deserve a good whipping for this, and if I wasn't in such a hurry to get out this web of cloth to-night, you would get it. But if you ever do so again, you won't escape."

I turned away, and tripped down stairs with a light heart, forgetting all my troubles, and believing that the Lord had heard my prayer, and had helped me to be honest and tell the truth, and had kept my mother from whipping me. And this is the end of my story.—The Christian.

BIBLE LESSONS ON WHAT AUNT ELIZABETH SAW.

Bright eyed Willie came bounding into the room with the eager exclamation, "O, auntie, do tell us a story for little boys, that last story you told us was for great big boys!"

Blue-eyed gentle little Allie chimed in, "Yeth, auntie, thut oo eyeth and tell uth a ittle tory."

"Now, auntie," said Lizzie, "do shut your eyes and tell us what you see."

"I see a great many men building a large ship, they are at work with hammers and nails and other tools. Such a large ship!"

"O, I know," said Fred, with a sagacious nod, "'tis the Great Eastern; she saw it in Liverpool."

"Now, auntie, was it the Great Eastern? Do tell us something Fred has n't seen."

It is not the Great Eastern. It is not a steamer. It was built many years before steamers were invented. I see a great many men coming to look and see what they are doing—

"And boys too?" inquired Willie, eagerly.

"Yes, men and boys and women and girls."

I see a good old man telling all the workmen what to do. The people are looking on asking him what he is going to build that great ship for, he tells them it is going to rain a great, great deal, and that there will be so much water as will fill all their houses and cover them all up and drown them if they stay there, and those who like to come and live in that ship with him will be safe, and will not be drowned. The men, women and children laugh at the old man and make fun of him, but he does not mind that, he goes on building the great ship, and after awhile it is done. And then I see a wonderful sight, such a long procession.

'A funeral procession?" asked Lizzie.

No, O no, a great many beasts and wild animals. There are 2 Elephants, 2 Lions, 2 Tigers, 2 Giraffes, 2 Camels, 2 Kangaroos, 2 Dogs, 2 Cats, 2 little Mice, 2 Pigs, 2 Horses, 7 Sheep, 7 Cows, 7 Deer, 7 Goats, 7 Turkeys, 7 Swans, 7 Ducks, 7 Geese, 7 Peacocks, 7 Larks, 7 Robins, 7 Chickens, 7 Doves, 7 Pigeons, 7 Sparrows, and other birds. These all go into the ship without any one to drive them in. Then that good old man went in, and an old woman, and 3 young men and 3 young women they could not persuade any one else to go in, then the door was shut and fastened. Soon it began to rain very hard. It rained all day and all night and all the next day and the people outside, as their houses got filled with water, were very much frightened and wished they had gone in.

"Auntie," said Lina, "were there any boys and girls shut out?"

"Yes, a great many."

"O!" exclaimed mischief loving Willie, "did n't they throw stones and break the windows? I would!"

No, but they cried and their fathers and mothers climbed up to the tops of the high hills with them, but they could not save them. The rain kept on until it covered every high hill and all those people who were so wicked that they made fun of that good man, and refused to go on board the ship were drowned.

Now tell me, what have I been telling you about?

What was the ship called that he built?
Who went into the ship besides himself?
How long did the rain continue?
How long did they stay in the ship?
When they came out what promise did God make them?—Herald of Peace.

FEAR NOT.

Is darkness round about thy way;
Can faith discern no promised ray
To mark thy pathway with its light?
Fear not, for God will lead thee right.

Does bitter sorrow rend thy heart,
And tears of anguish often start?
Fear not, but trust thy gracious God;
His gentle hand controls the rod.

Are plans for future good made void,
Thy fondest earthly hopes destroyed?
Fear not, for all things work for good
To souls once washed in Jesus' blood.

Amid the throng, art thou alone,
No friends thy heart can call its own?
Fear not, if Christ is ever near,
His loving smile thy soul will cheer.

Do fierce temptations thee assail,
And conflicts cause thy heart to fail?
Fear not, for God will give thee strength,
And conquer all thy foes at length.

Do toils seem more than flesh can bear,
Thy spirit faint from ceaseless care?
Fear not, nor be at all dismayed,
For God's right hand will give thee aid.

Dost thou recoil from death's cold strife?
Fear not, Christ died to give thee life;
The holy Comforter will bless,
And Jesus be thy righteousness.

In all the wants and woes of life,
In all its pleasures and its strife,
Fear not, but trust the mighty One
In three, the Father, Spirit, Son.

LAST DAY PERILS.

"In the last days . . . men shall be . . lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof."—2 Tim. 3: 1–5.

Nothing, perhaps, has a greater tendency to strengthen the christian's hope, and give him a stronger hold of the "faith once delivered to the saints," than to watch closely the signs of the times, and compare them with the sure word of prophecy. Our Savior, while upon earth, keenly reproached the Pharisees for their ignorance of the signs of the times, showing them that in consequence of their ignorance, the Scriptures to them were not profitable, but have become of no effect, because of their vain traditions. Instead of searching the Scriptures to see if these were so, they, like modern professors, wrested Scripture to suit their own imaginations, and thus became the instruments of their national destruction by unbelief. If they, the natural branches, were cut off because of unbelief, should we not take heed lest we be also cut off for the same offense? It is therefore becoming, nay, it is the imperative duty of the waiting church, critically to observe the times and the seasons, and compare them with the sure word of prophecy.

For this reason, dear reader, I wish to direct your attention to the quotation which heads this paper: "In the last days, . . . men shall be . . . lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." It would not require any great stretch of the imagination to see that this prophecy is very applicable to our present times, and that we are really in those perilous days, and may soon expect the King to consummate the hope of the church.

Pleasure is the strange goddess to whom all nations of the earth render willing homage. There is no half-heartedness in those who worspip at that altar. They are willing, hearty, and obedient slaves, ready to sacrifice honor, wealth, nay, the very hope of eternal life, if by so doing they can gain for a moment the smiles of that capricious goddess. The love of pleasure enters largely into the life of all men and women. The ambition to acquire wealth speedily, is the great temptation of the age; and for this purpose men will descend to the meanest and most despicable tricks—overreaching, cheating, lying, wasting the most bountiful gifts of God, health and strength, in gigantic efforts to acquire the wealth that perisheth, that they may indulge in pleasures the most questionable. Merchants, who once stood high in the esteem of all good men, have become wrecked in purse and character, simply because they were lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God.

As I write, the history of some of my own dear schoolmates passes like a troubled dream over my memory. I think of one in particular, whom I regarded with love almost equal to that of Jonathan for David. This young man, born and brought up in the solitude of a highland glen, with a mind pure and unsullied as the mountain spring bursting from the virgin rock, was beautiful as fallen man could be, and the more so as he trusted in the Lord, and endeavored to imitate the meek and lowly Jesus in all things. From his eye beamed forth love to God and man, and his whole countenance declared that he was in possession of that peace which the world cannot give, nor take away. His mind was stored with religious truths, strengthened and encouraged by the example and precept of praying, God-fearing parents. He, above all men whom I ever knew, seemed in a fair way of gaining that crown of righteousness which shall be given to all those who love the appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Alas! for human calculations. After an absence of ten years, I returned to my native village, burning with an intense desire to again behold him I loved so well. We met. Did I find him the same pure, simple, earnest christian as before? O no. I can not even now restrain the tears from flowing at the great disappointment I experienced. Instead of the countenance beaming with heavenly light, that I expected to meet, I saw before me the bloated face, the red, bleared eye of the drunkard. Instead of the hearty shake of the hand, and the loving "God bless you," that used to be our daily greeting, I saw the dirty, palsied hand thrust forth tremblingly, the blue lips parted, and the words come hissing forth (rather than spoken), "Give me a sixpence, for God's sake!" O what a change! And how came this change? The history is given in the words of the text, he became a lover of pleasure more than a lover of God. He was sent to a neighboring city for the purpose of learning something that might be useful to him in life; he was thrown into society to which he had been altogether unaccustomed. Being simple as a child, he believed in the simplicity of all men, and thus fell an easy prey to the god of this world. Step by step was he led from one degree of pleasure to another, until he hesitated at nothing that would gratify his passions. He became dishonest, then a drunkard, and finally died in my presence of that most terrible disease, delirium tremens.

This, dear reader, is only one out of many instances that I could give, and which I am sure you could multiply by your own experience. It is not individuals only that the love of pleasure lays hold on, but nations, municipal corporations, and the professing church of Christ, are all tainted with this love of pleasure. Lately, a meeting of the Presbytery of the Scottish church was held in this city, and the subject of instrumental music came up for discussion. One of the ministers said, "We must do something to please and encourage the young; otherwise we shall lose their sympathy and support." I would just like to ask this question: Where is it recorded that, in order to worship the living God, we require the aid of fiddles, or kettle drums; or that we are to pander to the ear or eye, that the young may be pleased and encouraged? The apostle Paul charges Titus that he is to exhort young men to be sober-minded; which I believe is the only scriptural way of pleasing and encouraging the young. The moving of a straw indicates the way the wind is blowing. I simply mention this fact to show that stern old Scottish Presbyterianism is fast losing its distinctive character, and hastening to become a lover of pleasure more than a lover of God.

Modern christianity, or rather modern congregations of professing christians are held together, not by the love of the brethren, or the love of God dwelling in them, but by the love of pleasure. I speak advisedly. Every thing is made pleasing to the eye, the ear, and the body of the members who can afford to pay a handsome sum in the shape of a pew rent. In the first place, the minister must be pleasing in his outward appearance and address, and study to speak, not the whole counsel of God, but to avoid giving offense to prominent members of the church. He must be eloquent, according to rule; never daring to rise unto anything like enthusiasm when speaking the truth as it is in Christ. He must be cautious, lest by a hasty or misplaced word he give offense; hence, he is a lover of pleasure, inasmuch as he is a lover of men more than a lover of God.

Then the music must be performed in the best style. The organ must be worthy of being talked about; the choir well trained, and deeply versed in all the whirligigs of modern music. As the minister does all the preaching, praying and exhorting for the entire congregation, so the organ and the choir must do all the praising, ignoring altogether the instructions of the apostle to the church at Corinth: "When ye come together, every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation." But this, of course, would destroy the pleasure of meeting together; hence, even in the worship of the living God, men have become "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God."

THE RESURRECTION.

Some of our brethren seem to fall into the same error with regard to the resurrection the Jews did with regard to their Messiah. Because their prophets predicted of Christ, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulders; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace; . . . . upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth even for ever" (Isaiah 9; 6–7); they concluded when their Messiah—whoever he was—arrived at the proper age, he would ascend the throne of David. Those Scriptures that taught his suffering and death, or ascension to heaven, they misapplied, or threw entirely away.

Thus it is at the present time. Because Christ says, "The hour is coming, . . . in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth (John 5: 25, 28, 29), some claim that they must all come forth in the same literal hour, forgetting that some of those same ones that were in the graves at the time the Savior made the declaration, "came forth," eighteen hundred years ago. The Jews are seven-fold more justifiable for expecting the Messiah would ascend the throne without ascending to heaven, and remaining thus long, than we are at the present time for believing the righteous and wicked dead will be raised simultaneously, with the array of evidence there is against it.

When will the wicked Pharisees see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God, and they themselves thrust—or shut—out? It will not do to say they will see them up in the air, in the kingdom, unless we admit the kingdom of God to be a "sky kingdom," which most of us rather not do. The kingdom will not be set up until Christ comes to earth; and unless we believe God's record, that the saints shall reign "with Christ a thousand years," after "the sanctuary is cleansed," and before the rest of the dead," including the wicked Pharisees, are raised; and that they are then marshaled around the camp of the saints, and the beloved city, for which Abraham looked, we can not consistently believe they will ever see him in the kingdom. Let us not be slow of heart to believe all the prophets, and apostles too, have written.

For the World's Crisis.

BAPTISM.—ITS OBJECT.

This subject is clearly set forth in the Scriptures; and when we have learned the object of baptism, we shall not be in doubt about the manner of administration, or the way to perform it.

1st. We inquire, Who are subjects of baptism? And the Scriptures every where answer, believers. Mark 16: 16,—"He that believeth and is baptized." Acts 8: 12,—"But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women." Acts 2: 41,—"Then they that gladly received the word were baptized." Acts 18: 8,—"Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house (all believers); and many of the Corinthians hearing believed and were baptized." Believers are the only subjects of baptism. Infant baptism is nowhere taught or mentioned in the Scriptures.

2nd. Baptism in connection with water. Matt. 3: 16,—"And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water." John 3: 23,—"And John also was baptizing in Enon . . . . . because there was much water there." Acts 8: 38. Here is the case of Philip and the eunuch; this certainly must have been christian baptism; "They came unto a certain water; and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart thou mayest." Here belief is made requisite to baptism. The eunuch's confession: "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." "And they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch, and he baptized him." What did Philip to the eunuch? "He baptized him." How? This brings us to inquire,

What is the object of baptism? For me to understand the way, I must know the object for which it is instituted; and unless I can learn the object, then I know not how to administer the ordinance. How was baptism administered for the first two hundred years after Christ? By immersion. What is the meaning of the Greek word baptizo? To dip, plunge, immerse or wash.

But why baptize at all? What is the object? It is a confession of faith. God has ever set before the church an object of hope; and has always given them an ordinance by which they could confess their faith in that promised hope. Before the atonement a sacrifice was instituted, and when Abel brought his lamb without blemish to the altar, and when that innocent blood was made to flow from that innocent victim, it told of the sufferings of the lamb of God that should take away our sins, and wash us in his own blood. This beautiful type was continued until God's dear lamb was offered once for all. "By faith Abel offered a more excellent sacrifice than Cain." It pointed to an object of hope, a fulfillment of a promise. This object attained, another step is necessary to complete the salvation of man, even a second coming of Christ and a resurrection from the dead. This, now, is the great object of hope before the church for a future life, as Paul says, If there be no resurrection of the dead, then they that "are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." And, again, Why are they then baptized for the (resurrection of the*) dead? It would seem that some were baptizing who did not believe in a resurrection of the dead; it was a mere ceremony without any significance. Just so is baptism now, unless we understand the object. To what, then, does baptism point us, or what does it typify? To just what has already been intimated—the resurrection of the dead. Therefore we are buried with him, by baptism, into death, or likeness of death. We are planted in the likeness of his death, that we may also be in the likeness of his resurrection. Rom. 6: 4, 5.

Baptism, then, is a beautiful type of the resurrection of the dead, by virtue of the resurrection of Christ. This is fully presented in Col. 2: 12,—"Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through faith in the operation of God who raised him from the dead." Thus by being buried with him by baptism, we figure forth the rising or resurrection from the dead, through faith in the operation of God that raised him from the dead; just as Abel, by faith, showed his faith in the death of Christ when he offered his lamb.

Peter calls it a figure when he says Christ was put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the spirit; . . . the like figure . . . . —even baptism now saves us. That is, baptism is a figure of our salvation, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Thus as sure as Christ was raised, so sure there will be a resurrection from the dead, and this is figured forth by baptism. The question concerning the mode of baptism is then fully set at rest, if it be to typify the resurrection of the dead; for there is but one way to show or figure forth our faith by baptism in the resurrection of the dead, and that is by being planted in the likeness of death. Some say, "I answered a good conscience"; but did you answer a good conscience, or witness a good confession of the operation of God by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead?

This is the object, and this is what is overlooked; and baptism, though observed in different ways, has become a mere ceremony, because the object for which it was instituted is lost sight of. But is sprinkling of no value? No more than Cain's sacrifice. It points to nothing. Is immersion valueless without this faith that there will be a resurrection of the dead, by virtue of the death of Christ? Most certainly. If Cain had offered up a lamb because Abel did, there could have been no virtue on his part; and if one was immersed because some one else was, it would be faithless on their part, and in no wise meeting the requirements of the ordinance by faith. The Jews shed blood, but they had lost sight of the atonement; and their sacrifice, which should have pointed to Christ, was meaningless and even became an abomination. And we may be immersed, or buried, but unless it is by faith in the operation of God that raised Christ from the dead, it avails nothing. We must symbolize the object by faith to be accepted. What will become of those who have not understood this? If they have lived up to all the light they had, or might have had, that is all God requires. "This is the condemnation, that light has come into the world, and men loved darkness."

But is not the baptism of the Holy Ghost sufficient? No; we are baptized into one body by the one spirit, and after this comes water baptism, as Peter says, "Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost?" Water baptism is an ordinance for man to observe after receiving the Holy Spirit. This Spirit is to raise the dead saints; and when we receive it, we are begotten to a hope of life, by faith in a resurrection from the dead, and then by baptism we typify or confess it.

It is objected that Philip and the eunuch did not go into the water at all, but went down to the water, and came up from the water. Be it so, there is one thing certain, if he buried him with Christ by baptism, it was in the sand or water, and either would have been acceptable if it had been by faith in the resurrection. Now as Peter says, Who shall "forbid water"; and as the eunuch says, "Here is water," we conclude that water is the element for the baptismal burial.

But is baptism a saving ordinance? Just the same as Abel's lamb. If they sacrifice, it must be blood; and if we baptize, it must be burial. But if there is no one to baptize us, what then? Our condition is as good as the lame man at the pool. Our faith saves us. Now as Christ has commanded us to be baptized, and as Paul says it is a likeness, and Peter that it is a figure of the resurrection, let us, not like Cain, institute a substitute for burial, as he did for blood; while others "by faith offer a more acceptable sacrifice." But if a man is sick? His faith saves him. But do you think it essential? Just as essential as Abel's lamb. Jesus says, Teach "them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you," and he does say, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of (not by) the Holy Ghost"; "and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

The Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, not being baptized of John. Luke 7: 28. May we not fall under the same condemnation, but do all his commands, that he may say of us, "Well done, good and faithful servant." Amen.

For the World's Crisis.

CHEER UP!

The present scenes of earth are dark and dreary. We are nearing the end of the present dispensation, when Gentile rule shall cease. The Bible emphatically teaches that those then living shall see "perilous times." To-day we behold its literal truth. The world is daily growing worse. Vice and immorality abound on every hand. Turn which way we will, temptation stares us in the face. Satan and his emissaries are at work continually, devising plans by which to entrap the christian. We are in a time of trial; but should we falter? Never. God's promises are sure. None need trust in vain. That which he hath promised he will also perform. Take courage, then, and press forward in the path of duty; "For the Lord God is a sun and a shield; the Lord will give grace and glory; no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." Ps. 84: 11.

We may have our dark seasons, it is true, but what is the cause? Unbelief. Whenever we doubt God's word, we fall into trouble. We need more faith. If tried, we have an Advocate, who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, to intercede for us. "Let us, therefore, come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."—Heb. 4: 16. If humble and watchful, God will help his servants to stand in the hour of trial. It is necessary in these days of sore temptation and trial, as it has always been, to exercise a firm reliance in the God of all grace for strength and succor in time of need. The earth is full of wickedness, but God will never forsake his people. Let us not despond, but wait for God's Son from heaven. Deliverance will soon be here. Christians, be firm. "Quit you like men; be strong." God's promises are precious; his word is full of cheer. Do you see perilous times? It is a sign that we are in the last days. Are wicked men and seducers waxing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived? That, also, is a sign of the times. Are men lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof? We are taught to expect it in the end of the present dispensation. Do we behold the nations in commotion? That also we are taught to expect. Do we see the distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming on the earth? Jesus says, "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh."—Luke 21: 28.

"Our days of affliction and sadness
Will soon be numbered and passed;
Our mourning succeeded by gladness;
Thank God, we shall triumph at last.

The day of redemption is dawning,
Its signs in the heavens appear;
Most speedily cometh the morning,
Christ's glorious kingdom is near."

O, cheer up! Despond not! Gird on the whole armor of God, and fight valiantly for the cause of truth; and, if faithful, we shall soon gain the kingdom. G. W. Green.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.
How should it be Observed.

There is no doubt but that in establishing the last supper, Jesus desired and expected his disciples would follow as near after the example set, as was possible; for, according to the accounts given by the four evangelists, he seemed to be particularly anxious; first to secure a suitable place where he could celebrate the feast without fear of interruption; and second, to have none present with him but his disciples. Again, he was so desirous that every thing should be done decently and in order, that he sent two of the twelve to "prepare" and make ready," so that there could be no delay during the feast. He wanted nothing to happen that would in the least distract their attention from the grand object he had in view, and for that reason, an upper and private chamber was selected. He set the pattern, and it is our business to follow it to the very letter, as far as we possibly can. And unless we do this, we fail to receive the full richness of his blessing, or to appreciate the full meaning of his divine ordinance. For this reason, I think the usual method of celebrating this solemn ceremony, before those who care nothing about it, who realize nothing of its importance, who are ignorant of its signification, and who know nothing of its institution, but who remain to stare upon its holy adminstration, as they would upon any exhibition of a worldly character; and whose very presence mars and detracts from its sacred solemnity; I say, I look upon this method as all wrong, and without foundation or excuse. Inasmuch as we know that, when the Master shall drink the fruit of the vine anew with his saints in his Father's kingdom, there will be no disinterested lookers on; we are enabled to judge from this fact in the antitype how we should observe the type itself.

Jesus "sat down with the twelve." He did not even admit the man in whose house he was. It was a scene too grandly solemn, too sacred and holy for the gaze of unhallowed eyes. It was an hour in which was crowded the most poignant sorrow and the most unspeakable joy. Sorrow, that he who should restore the kingdom to Israel," was eating his last supper with them, before he went forth to die the most fearful of all deaths; to leave them as sheep with no shepherd, and to blast, as far as this life was concerned, all their fond hopes of future glory to Israel. And joy that in the observance of this solemn and blessed feast; it should be to them a token that he would "come again" in all the royal splendor and glory of the courts of heaven, to crown their kings and priests in his glorious kingdom forever. No wonder that in the agony of his grief, that disciple, whom Jesus loved," should bury his waking head in the bosom of him whose side was so soon to be pierced by a Roman spear. No wonder, that in the intensity of his joy upon hearing that Jesus had risen again from the dead, according to his promise to them at the supper, he should outrun the nimble Peter and come first to the sepulchre to see if the news was not too good to be true. No, the memories of that supper, and the momentous events which its institution foreshadowed, were stamped upon his and the other disciples' minds with an indelibility which nought but death itself could efface.

Was that "upper chamber" a proper place for a crowd of idle lookers on? No! no! a thousand times, no!! They would have had no more business there than a crowd of loafers would have in the kingdom of heaven; no more than a Jewish rabble would have had in trying to witness the performance of the duties of the High Priest in the Holy of Holies. A man's heart must be prepared by repentance towards God, and faith in his Son, before he is entitled to participate, or even witness the sacred ordinance of the last supper; and this position, I fully believe, is sustained by a decent sense of propriety, and by God's word.

I have been led to make these remarks, because, not long since, I attended an administration of the Lord's Supper, which made my heart ache. Instead of repairing to a spacious hall, which was convenient and private, it was unwisely decided to observe the ordinance in the tent (in which the meetings were being held,) directly after service. Of course it was impossible to tell how many would participate, for the invitation was extended (as it should be) to all christians, and it was equally impossible to distinguish the christians from the outsiders; consequently, no one knew how much bread or wine to provide. Luckily, however, there was bread enough. But when about two-thirds had partaken of the wine, it was discovered that there was not enough, and the ceremony must either come to an awkward stop, or else, what wine was left must be filled up with water. The announcement of this fact of course greatly marred the solemnity of the occasion, but would have amounted to but little had there been none present but the communicants. But to add to our confusion and sorrow, at this juncture, a good but very indiscreet brother rose up, and began asking questions about the proper method of observing the ordinance, in case there was no minister to officiate, etc. Questions all right enough at a proper time and place, but like sour grapes at that time. After occupying two or three minutes, he sat down, and I was just beginning to hope no reply would be made; but to my surprise, as I may almost say indignation, the very brother, who had officiated in breaking the bread a few minutes previous, and while the wine was still passing, and we were trying to concentrate our thoughts upon what we were doing, and the solemnity due the occasion, rose up and proceeded to illuminate the other indiscreet brother upon the subject. In my shame and mortification, I ventured to raise my eyes to see if my ears did not deceive me, and there, within twenty feet of the speaker, and within arm's length of some of the participants, was a sneering, jeering crowd of young men and boys, most of them with their hats on, and numbers of them with lighted pipes and cigars in their mouths, polluting by their very presence the place, and making of the Lord's supper a very mockery. How my heart did burn within me to see this barefaced impudence, and unblushing sacrilege; and how it grieved me to see a professed teacher in Israel rob this holy ordinance of its sanctity and effect. I went away feeling that, although I had not had the privilege of partaking of the supper with God's little ones for almost four years, it were better for me to be deprived of it four years longer, than to eat of it again in this manner. May God forgive me if I ate of it unworthily.

Now all this could have been obviated by simply doing as Jesus did; namely, going away by himself with his disciples. Had those who wished to partake of the sacred elements been invited to meet at the hall, and none others, it would have been easily seen how much bread and wine would be needed. Pearls would not have been exhibited before swine. Jesus would not have been reviled again as he was when in the agonies of death upon the cross; his cause would not have suffered in the hands of his friends, but his name would have been honored, and God's blessing would have rested abundantly upon those who were commemorating the death of him who redeemed them by the spilling of his most precious blood. THE POPE DEFINED.

The celebrated Canonist, Prospero Fagnani, who is the oracle of the Court of Rome, in his famous commentaries on the Decretals, teaches as the doctrine of the Roman Curia concerning the Pope: "The Pope may make laws and institutions for all the world, because his power is unlimited. The Pope has power over all men, even over infidels (that is to say, Jews, Turks, and heathens.) The Pope judges all men, and can only be judged of God. He cannot be judged by councils; nay, were the whole world to pronounce in any particular against the Pope, it would be right to submit to his judgment against the whole world. It is not lawful for any one to discuss the actions of a Pope. Everything that he does is done by divine authority. The Pope does not hold the place of a mere mortal, but of the true God. The Pope may, by himself alone, determine the symbols of faith, since it belongs to him only to decide in matters of faith. The decisions of Fathers, even if supported by Holy Scriptures, have much less weight than the decisions of the Pope. Even if he wished, he could not submit himself to a council, because God alone could make a mortal greater than the Pope. The Pope is not subject to the decisions of his predecessors—not even to that of the apostles; for there is no power that limits the power of the keys, not even the power St. Peter and St. Paul; there being no superiority among equals. The Pope may dispense with the observance of the divine laws and the gospel precepts. It would be heresy to believe that the Pope could err in his decisions as to faith or the sacrament. It would be sacrilegious to doubt whether or no he could change the last will of the dying, and he who should deny his sovereign power would not be a christian. The Pope as a man might err in matters of faith, but as Pope he could not do so. The Pope is the administrator, the dispenser, the true patron of all the ecclesiastical possessions in the world, and therefore he may freely use them as his own. The Pope may grant every species of dispensation with the exception of one, to marry one's father or one's mother. The Pope may depose magistrates and princes, and free their subjects from their obligations to loyalty. Nevertheless, the king or prince thus deposed may not lawfully be driven or slain except by those commissioned by the Pope. The Pope is king of kings, and ruler of rulers; he is the prince of bishops, the judge of all men. In virtue of his absolute power he can change the nature of things, and make a thing out of nought; he can create a law where before there was none; he is all and above all; he can make square things to be round, can make black to be white, and white to be black."

☞ Lying is a sin destructive to society; for there is no trade where there is no trust, and no trust where there is no truth; and yet this cursed trade of lying creeps into all trades, as if there was no living (as one speaks) without lying; but sure it is, we had better be losers than liars, for he sells a dear bargain indeed, that sells his conscience with his commodity.

For the World's Crisis.

OTHER WONDERS.

But, in reality, there is a "lying wonder," which has become so popular, and so deeply rooted in the faith and affections of men, as to have lost its transcendent strangeness in their esteem,—a wonder, the mother of wonders,—a mother wonder, a mother fallacy, a prolific mother falsehood, enunciated to mother Eve. Now this wonder is the open door to mysteries and miseries. By virtue of it behold the harlot in scarlet holding up her cup of juggleries and enchantments. Just once look at it, and mark it! Con it, scan it, scrutinize it, and then abhor and testify against it. Aye, it is the old Romish, Popish, heathen, Satanic, and scandalous lie and inconsistency, the immortality of a man. Just consider. The lie represents that a mortal is immortal! Now then, mark this first lying wonder, and number it. The second is like unto it, and equally singular and marvelous in its way, and cherished with ardent partialities in communities proud of their intelligence, and glorying in their sagacity. O, when will there be an end of this heathenish refinement of science, falsely so called?

Number the second popular error, which is this; that a man is alive after he is dead. And close upon this comes the third; and I pray thee, O man of prayer, if thou art not bound hand and foot with the iron chain of tradition, perceive and disavow this heterodoxy. This is the third wonder, that the wicked shall be eternally burning, and never burned up; in consuming fire and never consumed. The worm never dies while anything remains of its victim, therefore the victim never dies! There is logic for you. The wicked shall perish, according to God's word, but according to theological modernism and heathenism, if we may link words after this fashion together, the wicked shall alway be perishing, and never perish! Isn't that lying? Isn't it a monstrous perversion of the truth?

Try another series of contrasts, and see which one will look most eligible in the light of simple reason, and in the eyes of a sound understanding. Let unsophisticated common sense reach and utter her verdict. God said to Adam, in the event of his disobedience, "thou shalt surely die," or in the margin, "Dying, thou shalt die." Now we will arrange the three voices, the three doctrines, and see what kind of selection we will make, and what kind of declaration, as God's witnesses, we will put forth in this time and place of trial and testifying. Does probation last forever? I hold on my honor and conscience, and so should every teacher and witness, that God requires righteous testifying, faithful testimony to the truth. Is this an arena on which to cut capers of casuistry, and shall christian men on this great battle field between truth and error, between the blessed begotten of God, and the prince of the fiends, play at shuttle cocks of sophistry? One remembers an old prophecy, yet unfulfilled, but not yet obsolete; rather on the other hand the more precious and radiant with its inspiring nighness of consummation.—"The Lord my God shall come, and all the saints (or holy ones) with thee." What we testify on this witness-stand now in soldiers' dress, and with field equipments all around, will be thought of some moment then, seeing it involves the King's honor, and the cause for which he died a sacrifice.

Testimony of the Bible,—Dying, thou shalt die.

Theology of Universalism,—Dying, thou shalt be restored.

Theology of Orthodoxy,—Dying, thou shalt never die.

Christian, professor of religion, you are on the witness stand. Burrowing among traditions may be preferred now, but with what answer will you answer the Judge, when he makes inquisition for your influence and testimony in that day? Learned men may spin their cobwebs, but think ye not that when the Lord of glory sits in judgment, his eye of keenest brightness will dart through the meshes of all flimsiness? What? Is it nothing, then, that you are holding fast the deceiver's great contradiction of God in paradise? Is it nothing that you hold and teach the same denial of God's word? Will you still scout as heresy, that which will itself condemn your own mistaken imagination? Will you pity and reprobate that which suddenly blazing up on your fallacy, shall convict it as an inheritance from the Deceiver? Nay more and worse, and more tremendous, the very deception itself which piloted and pioneered death and woe into our world? Denominational zeal and faith, sectarian tenacity, all the shifts and shelters of learning, tradition or opinion, the dicta of Gentile Rabbis (the doctors of divinity,) will they be your refuge and strength and cosolation then? There may be an apology for unwilling ignorance, but how for that which is voluntary and persistent, amid the attestations of those who, though ostracised by you, nevertheless are willing through contumely and denunciation, and disfellowship and discouragements, to trumpet the truth of Christ? Is it not a fact of solemn magnitude that Jesus will judge the world by his word? Beware, then, how you still longer pervert any part of it. Search earnestly, and thoroughly, and soon. The time is short, and the end is near. And it is that very consummation, at the kingdom and appearing of Jesus, which the enemy, by his fallacy of an immortal soul, makes quite a secondary, mythical and remote realization, or matter of vital faith, to the church. Out on this pernicious misteaching. Away with it. Consider the import of that address to the shining gatekeepers of the holy city, the New Jerusalem,—"Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in." Remember! This is your time to testify. Obey expediency, be mute either through pride, or fear of man, hide your light, stifle your convictions, and your time of witnessing for the truth of Jesus will soon be gone.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Sept. 16, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AGT.

NEW VOLUME.

This number begins a new volume. Now is the time to send the advance pay for it. Those who pay in advance find they read their paper with more pleasure; and it is much better for us at the office. If any are taking the paper, who cannot pay now, and wish it continued, will they please drop us a note, stating the fact, and we will do the best we can for you. Do not refuse to comply with this request.

We hope those to whom we have made our weekly visits during the past year, will continue to welcome us to their hearts and homes. We will try to make our visits pleasant and profitable.

Our faith was never stronger than now, that we are near the time when Jesus will come to set up his kingdom upon the earth. We are anxiously waiting for the great curtain to rise and unfold the beautiful scenery of the world to come.

THREE MONTHS.

Quite a number have been persuaded to take the Crisis three months on trial, and were so much pleased with it that they most heartily became constant subscribers. They can have 13 numbers for 63cts. Send it to your friends for that time, and let them try it. If we spread the great truths entrusted to our care as we should, we must make a special effort and sacrifice. We ought to do more this year than in any two for the last twenty. The people are longing for just such food as that upon which we are feasting every week. Let us spare no pains or efforts to supply them with the same rich dainties. Who will help with purse or pen? Let all come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. If we can all be instrumental in saving one soul it will pay for the labor of a life-time.

NEW TYPE.

"Our paper" appears this week, at the beginning of a new volume, in a new dress of nice type from the Boston Type Foundry, 55 Water street; justly noted for producing type of a superior quality. We hope every reader will make an effort to extend the circulation of the Crisis. If they could read the letters we receive from members of other churches, and know how much good has been accomplished in consequence of reading an occasional copy of the Crisis, we think more efforts would be made to get it into every family. We hope to make it just such a paper as every christian will love to read and lend to his neighbors.

OUR CREED AND COVENANT.

We are desired to publish our creed and covenant. Our creed is the Bible. We have no articles of faith aside from that. We would not consent to sign any articles of faith that every christian in the world could not indorse. We look upon creed-making as a device of Satan to separate the children of the Lord, and create contentions, thereby causing men to backslide from christianity.

is as follows:—"We whose names are subjoined, do hereby covenant and agree, by the help of the Lord, to walk together as a church of Christ, faithfully maintaining its ordinances, taking the BIBLE as our only rule of faith and practice, church order and discipline; making christian character the only test of fellowship and communion:

We further agree, with christian fidelity and meekness, to exercise mutual watch-care; to counsel, admonish, or reprove, as duty may require; and to receive the same from each other as becometh the household of faith."

We are willing to sign as many such covenants as there are churches to adopt them; and as often as they may be presented; for it is simply covenanting with the Lord and his children to live as the Bible directs; which all must do to be ready to meet Jesus at his coming.

The idea should not prevail that signing this covenant gives one any new privileges, or that it separates one from any other christian who does not sign it. But we do think that those who adopt this covenant in an associated capacity love each other more in consequence of the union, and are less likely to get out of the narrow path. The effect is like that upon one who uses intoxicating liquors when he signs the temperance pledge. He could abandon strong drink without signing the pledge; but when he has signed it, he feels a stronger obligation to abstain from the drunkard's bowl than he would without the pledge; but his signing does not separate him from other temperance men who have not taken the pledge; while he may at the same time feel a greater freedom with those who, like himself, have joined the pledge.

Signing the christian COVENANT does not give one the right to the communion any more than he had before; for he should be a christian before he signs the covenant. The object of the covenant is to strengthen the bond of union between the disciples of Jesus; and thereby build up a stronger defense against the attacks of their common enemy, who well knows the power of associated action, when he would attack the children of the great King. Let us all sign the covenant and keep it forever.

TRACTS.

There is an earnest demand for tracts; and the time has come when a great amount of good can be accomplished with a little money devoted to this object. Please read the letters from Bro. P. A. Smith, who is now doing a noble work in Florida. Tracts will preach for nothing and bear their own expenses, and go where no missionary could find an open door. Let us do something worthy of the importance of the great truths contained in these silent and effective messengers. More should be done the coming year, if time continues, than during any year in the past. Hands are stretched out from all parts of the country, and especially in the south, most earnestly waiting to receive the words of life, which they have no means to purchase. Shall they be supplied?

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

The Alton Bay meeting was excellent this year. We arrived on the ground Tuesday evening, Sept. 1st, and remained to its close. We learned the meetings had been very good from the commencement on the Sabbath previous. We found a faithful attendance to the prayer-meetings in the tents. This gave power and effectiveness to the meeting. Good order prevailed and a general harmony and sympathy among the children of the Most High. There were less distracting elements than usual. We did not notice any hobby riders, who frequently attend such meetings, and try to make a fuss if they cannot have a fair chance to show their favorite fanciful systems. The majority seemed anxious to possess and keep the good, old-fashioned christian religion that stands by its possessor at all times, and in all situations.

We were pleased with their arrangements for preaching at $10\frac{1}{2}$ A. M., $1\frac{1}{2}$ and $6\frac{1}{2}$ P. M. This gave a good opportunity for evening prayer-meetings, and an early hour for retiring.

Quite an addition has been made to the number of tents on the ground. According to the count of Bro. Knowles there were two hundred and thirty tents, sixty-seven of which were made of boards. Several of the latter are a story and a half high, and will accommodate some fifty persons. The ground is not large enough for so many tents and people as are on the ground during the encampment. The land is quite uneven, but somewhat romantic and inviting, especially on the borders of the Winnipiseogee lake, which approaches within a few rods of the campground, and affords a pleasant opportunity for steamboat rides to those who desire them. The cars from Dover come also within a few rods of the ground, so that no passengers need a carriage, either from the boats or cars.

We had good preaching from Brn. Couch, Thurber, Hastings, Goodrich, Thomas, Damman, Wellcome, Ross, Libby, Stephens, Sr. Jennings and Smith. A goodly number were converted, some sixteen were baptized, and many backsliders reclaimed.

Friday was a very wet day, but the time was well improved by prayer meetings and preaching in the tents. Or the Sabbath we had a crowd of people, but good order prevailed, and the meetings were interesting. We had preaching in three places during the day, and then there were people enough outside for another large meeting. In the evening we had a precious communion season, when some over six hundred sat down to the table of the Lord. This was the closing exercise of the meeting.

The encampment was much indebted to the captains of the steamboats on the lake, and to Mr. Merritt, Superintendent of the Boston and Maine R. R., for their accommodations in conveying passengers. They made special efforts for our convenience, and in behalf of the committee, we take this occasion to express our hearty thanks for their favors.

We have attended seven campmeetings this year, all of which have been seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. We are still in favor of such gatherings. The weak gain strength at such meetings more in a few days than they might otherwise in a whole year. They are to us what the feast of tabernacles was to the Jews. We need the stimulus arising from such meetings; and those who attend, and do their duty, never go away feeling it was an unprofitable season. Those who go and merely look on, generally find fault with the campmeeting, wishing they had staid at home. They only see the dark side, and call it just what they made it—"a religious picnic;" while those who go to do good, as well as get good, are seldom disappointed. One may go into a city and find some very miserable dens of iniquity, exerting a most wicked influence; while another might at the same time be enjoying in the very next house a most heavenly prayer-meeting. So at campmeeting. One group may be visiting, laughing and chatting about worldly things—they would were they at home,—while in the next tent they are enjoying a most blessed prayer-meeting, and sinners are being converted. People form their opinion of campmeetings from the company they keep while there. If they spend their time in observing and listening to what is unchristian, they may expect to have a poor meeting, and go away with less love for God than when they came; but if they look after the best things, and do their part of the work in the meetings, they will find no place where they will make more rapid progress in divine life.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

It is a matter of fact that a great increase of interest is felt in the signs of the times which indicate that our Savior is coming soon to set up his kingdom. The most devoted in all evangelical denominations are deeply impressed that Jesus will soon appear in all his glory. It is heart-cheering to know it is so. The following is from the July number of the Prophetic Times, edited by Dr. Seiss, and published in Philadelphia:

"Finally, what of our present world and the signs of our times? Most certainly there is now a cry of warning all abroad, more general than has ever been known. It comes up from the four winds; not from any one party, sect, or nation, but from those related to all of these. It comes not in sermons and lectures merely, but written in thousands of tracts, in periodicals and book form. It comes from hundreds and thousands of Bible students, whose good common sense and true piety cannot be questioned. Their united cry in substance is, 'Behold, the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him.' This cry is indeed one of the most marked and startling signs of our times. It brings no gloomy forebodings to the submissive and trusting child of grace. To these, in their feebleness, suffering, and want, God,s message now is, 'Be strong, fear not; behold your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; he will come and save you.' To the world in sin and unbelief this warning cry is most unwelcome and repulsive. Indeed, it must thus be to all who do not sincerely love Christ and his appearing. This cry of warning, of course, as usual, is stoutly met by the opposing peace cry in various ways, either implied or clearly expressed. The various methods adopted by those engaged in this peace cry is wonderfully adapted, and calculated to deceive even into carnal security and thus to final ruin. As it regards the present signs of the times, seen in the wide fields of nature, earth, sea, and air, so fitful and so evidently sending out blight and mildew, sickness and death, on both animal and vegetable life, earthquakes, wars, famine, and especially the unparalleled wickedness of the age. In reference to all these and much more we are gravely told that 'it always has been so,' or, in the very words of the latter-day scoffers, 'Where is the promise of his coming? for, since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation.' Those occupying the highest places in church and state assure themselves and others that the present aspect of things indicates most clearly great and speedy prosperity. Our religious teachers are mostly elated and jubilant over their great and unparalleled success in church extension. They encourage themselves and their hearers with these bright pictures of the success of 'Our church.' Numerous accessions of the rich, wealthy, and influential. The endowment of so many colleges. The building of numerous, costly, and splendid churches. In brief, the unparalleled worldly prosperity of the church! Possibly forgetting that this very worldly prosperity has been and still is the bane of vital godliness, and therefore should ever be dreaded and avoided. It would seem that the church of Laodicea was a type of the present state of the general Gentile church, answering most strikingly as the antitype. Precisely so. 'Thou sayest I am rich and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked.' What self-deception! what deplorable ignorance! All under the influence of the peace cry of prosperity, when in reality there was moral ruin and no prosperity!

The great latter-day heresy, 'My Lord delayeth his coming,' has very much to do with this state of things. No other teaching is more pleasing to the Arch-deceiver, or more directly subservient to his cause and designs of ruin to the race. Thus, when they shall be saying peace and safety, 'sudden destruction shall come upon them, and they shall not escape.' While thus turning a deaf ear to the true cry of warning, and listening to the false cry of peace, the dwellers on earth will be taken in this very device and snare of Satan; while all those who are not mere dwellers on the earth, but, in the Scripture sense, confess that they are 'strangers and pilgrims on the earth,' shall 'escape all these things that are coming on the earth, and stand before the Son of man at his appearing and kingdom.'"

STOP MY PAPER.

One who has been receiving the Crisis, wishes her papers stopped, saying, "they are never read, . . . for we disbelieve them. Please to read the chapter comprising Jude, and see your complete description, and also your destruction by 'the vengeance of eternal fire.'"

After reading the above, we thought what a wide difference there is in the opinions of different individuals.

BROTHER OR SISTER?

We frequently receive articles for the Crisis, with only the initials prefixed to the surname. In such cases we cannot tell whether to say the article is from a brother or sister. Please sign the name so that we may know whether the communication is from a brother or from a sister.

NOT GONE TO HEAVEN.

John Wesley, in his sermon on the rich man and Lazarus, says:—"To say that souls go to heaven at death has not the least foundation in the oracles of God; neither did Christ go there at death."

Where do they go? The real persons, the accountable beings, who are to be judged, rewarded and punished, go to sheol—hades—where "there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge," in which situation they remain till they are raised from the dead. We think no plainer truth is taught in the Bible than this; and it is strange that all cannot see it.

NEW TRACT.

HISTORIC ECHOES OF THE VOICE OF GOD; an Exposition of the eleventh chapter of Daniel. By Elder J. Couch.

The above tract of 64 pp. is the best thing we have seen on the eleventh of Daniel. Let it have a wide circulation. Price 15 cts., postage 2 cts. For sale at the Crisis office.

WORTHY OF HELP.—If any wish to help a worthy, poor saint, send something to Bro. F. H. Chamberlain, Webster, Mass. He is needy.

For the World's Crisis.

"TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS."

At a meeting of The Advent Christian Publication Society, held at the National Campmeeting, Chapin's Grove, Springfield, Mass., Aug. 28th, 1868, the following resolutions were adopted:—

Resolved, That we raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year.

Resolved, That our preaching brethren be, and hereby are, requested to act as Agents in this good work, to solicit contributions to the Tract Fund, as often at least as once in every quarter, and forward the same to the Treasurer, GEORGE T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

This resolution invites the earnest and continued co-operation of every true friend of the Society and of the Lord's cause in the land. Shall we have it? The help of every minister and layman, of every brother and sister, old and young, rich and poor, is called for and solicited. Will you give it?

Here are piles of tracts,—thousands upon thousands, and more coming,—that speak of truth, righteousness, and a judgment to come; and they are waiting, anxiously waiting, to go forth on their mission, and ceaselessly crying, "Send me!" Who will send them?

Two Thousand Dollars will send forth millions of these little leaves from the tree of life for the healing of the nations, and give them wings and voices, flying over all the land, under the whole heaven, to carry the last message of life and immortality to a perishing world, and proclaim, "The hour of his judgment is come!"

The great day of the Lord is near. It is near, and hasteth greatly! A few more days of labor in the Master's vineyard, and the great Sabbath of rest which remains for the people of God will shed its glorious light upon our longing eyes, and end forever these working days, in which we are now privileged to do a little for him who has done so much for us. How much shall we do for him this year? It may be our last, and what we do must be done now! How much will you do, dear reader, for Jesus and his truth, this year?

WILLIAM B. HERRON,
Secretary Adv. Chris. Pub. Society.

DO YOU BELIEVE

That the Tract cause is one of God's instrumentalities? DO YOU KNOW that men are perishing for want of light? DO YOU DESIRE to be used as a means for diffusing the light?

The publishing committee, feeling their responsibility, would submit the following proposition:—Let every Adventist throughout the land appropriate one day's labor to this cause. Set apart one specified day (say Oct. 1). Ask God's blessing on the act, and sacredly devote all your earnings or income for that day to this cause, and send the amount to George T. Adams, Treasurer Tract Fund, No. 167 Hanover St., Boston. WILL YOU DO IT? D.

FREE TRACTS.

"Please send me some tracts for free distribution." Calls like the above are constantly being made upon the A. C. P. Society. Last year we sent out for free distribution some two hundred and seventy-five dollars worth of tracts, more than we received on the Tract Fund. There was a balance of former years on hand, which made up this deficit. This balance is now nearly exhausted, and unless the friends send in funds, we shall very soon be compelled to discontinue the work of scattering free tracts. Brethren and sisters, now is the time to act in this matter.

Who starts first? We have not as yet received one name on the new call. We do not purpose to publish names and amounts received on this call, until Oct. 7th, which will give the friends in various parts of the country an opportunity to do as suggested by Bro. Dickenson, and send in their names, so as to appear in the first list published. The Lord put it into the hearts of his faithful servants to take hold in earnest. Let some one start with $100.00 or more. All do what they can, and the Lord willing, we shall be able to print in the first Crisis of next month a good long list of subscribers to The New Tract Fund. Disappoint us not. AGT.

A man might frame and let loose a star to roll in its orbit, and yet not have done so memorable a thing before God, as he who lets go a golden orbed thought to roll through the generations of time.

OUR NEW DRESS.

The type used in the issue of the Crisis up to the present number, having been in use for several years, has become badly worn—much of it unfit for use—so that we have thought it advisable to procure new type with which to commence the new volume. We think our readers will be pleased with the plain, clear, bold face of our type, which is from that old, well known, and justly celebrated establishment—THE BOSTON TYPE FOUNDRY, Water Street, J. K. Rogers Agent. We now send out over 8000 copies of our paper weekly, and we purpose to have our work done well and promptly, have no unnecessary delay in the printing, mailing, or business departments; and with the Editor and the contributors doing their best to make the paper one worthy of a place in every family, we hope that, before the close of another year, the Lord willing, we shall be obliged to publish 10,000 copies each week, in order to supply the calls for the Crisis. Brethren and sisters, let us all do what we can to increase the circulation of our paper; and may the Lord direct us all to his glory. AGT.

NOW READY.
NEW HYMN BOOK.

"HYMNS OF THE JUBILEE HARP,"

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

By the Advent Chris. Pub. Society.

Among the thousands who sing from "The Jubilee Harp," there are many hundreds, especially the aged, to whose eyes the fine print of the Harp is a great discomfort and inconvenience, and who would gladly welcome an edition of the same excellent hymns, in a convenient form, in large, clear type. The above work is issued especially for them, and we trust they will find it just what they want.

There are hundreds also who sing from the Harp, who never use the notes, and who would therefore be just as well and better pleased with a book containing the same hymns, without the music, at a lower price. This book was got up also especially for them, and will, no doubt, be to all such just the thing they desire.

This edition of "The Hymns" is not, by any means, intended to supercede "The Harp." It is designed as a companion to it; and is so arranged, with references, that hymns given out from the one can be readily found in the other.

The whole has been carefully revised and corrected, and a brief supplement of choice and popular hymns appended. The typework was done in our own office, and in a style, we trust, not inferior to that of any other.

It is a volume of 576 pages, containing some 850 Hymns and Anthems, substantially bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, at 75 cents, single copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100. Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9.50 per dozen; $75.00 per 100. It is cheaper by far than any similar work that we know of in the market. When sent by mail, 16 cts. additional postage. "Historic Echoes of the Voice of God."

AN EXPOSITION OF THE ELEVENTH CHAPTER OF DANIEL.

BY ELDER J. COUCH.

This is a neat and attractive pamphlet, of 64 pages, just issued from the office of the Advent Christian Publication Society. It comes from the press too late for an extended notice from us this week; but others who have read it in manuscript, speak of it as "one of the most valuable and important tracts on prophecy which has been issued among us for many years, and one well calculated to confound, if not convince, the unbelief of the skeptic, and confirm the faith of the believer.

"It shows, by pointed and convincing extracts from history, the wonderful fulfillment of the predictions of the 11th chapter of Daniel; and, consequently, that the events of the 12th chapter,—the standing up of Michael, the coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead,—are the next events to be expected.

"It is written in a clear, vigorous style, and contains many passages of singular beauty and eloquence, and closes with a thrilling appeal to the unbeliever and the sinner to be ready for the things that are coming on the earth."

It is just the thing to put into the hands of your unbelieving friends and neighbors. Let it have a wide circulation. A supply will be on hand at the Springfield Campmeeting, and also at Alton Bay.

For sale at this office. Price, 15 cents single copy; $1.50 per dozen; $10.00 per one hundred. AGT.

For the World's Crisis.

ALTON BAY.

Our annual campmeetings at Alton Bay have been good in other years; but truly this last great feast of the beloved of our heavenly Father, on the heaven-blest grounds, near the beautiful waters of the Winnipiseogee, has been the best one ever enjoyed there. To our God and his Christ let all the praise be given. We, as a people, do not hold to the doctrine of close communion, as entertained by some of the churches; but beloved, if we did not have one of the sweetest and closest communions at Alton Bay last week, that can be had on the old earth, then many of that great congregation have made a slight mistake in saying so; for they all, as far as we could learn, gave in their testimonies to that effect. How blessed it was to see and feel how close we were to each other. Drawn together by the great central cord of love, and that heaven-born influence which causes all who have it to act in union, harmony, and wisdom; which made us close together, not merely in a temporal sense, but spiritual, heart-and-hand sense; and more than that, in all good senses of the word. Praise the Lord forever.

Well, children, I hear your sweet, tender, loving words of prayer and praise yet ringing in my ears, and meeting a glad response in my poor heart; and then the songs of Israel, how transporting, as sung by the heaven-taught singers. We never expect to hear it excelled until we hear the heavenly harpers around the throne of God unite in the everlasting songs of praise and glory. May the heavenly influences of this meeting never cease to be with us while here we roam. Let us all try and keep it with us wherever we are, or wherever we go, that the name of Jesus may be honored and glorified, and the cause of our Master not hindered in its progress by any of us. It was really good and encouraging to see so many of "our young folks" already engaged in the service of King Jesus, and many more ready to enter into his service. The Lord bless them one and all, and keep them safe from the evils of the world, and bring them at last with all his people to live always in that beautiful world, "just over there."

It has been truthfully asserted that practical truths have not been preached enough among us, but a great improvement has characterized the meeting in this respect. We think no one can reasonably find fault. If there is one, may the Lord of heaven convert him before it is too late. And now, if we each one will only practice in our homes, in our churches, in our neighborhoods, and everwhere, the precious truths that have faithfully declared unto us by men of God, we shall be kept just as busy as can be, with no room for fault finding, backbiting, pride, envy, covetousness, drunkenness, or any other evil; but plenty of time and room for all good things, and have an attendance of peace with God and our fellow men. Come, brethren and sisters, let us all try as one to live out the blessed precepts of the gospel; and when Jesus comes, we will have the best camp-meeting that ever was held, never to end. "If ever I loved thee, my Jesus, 'tis now."

Correspondence.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—I have just returned from holding a five days meeting about seventeen miles north of here, near the Suwannee river, with the most satisfactory results that a person would dare to expect. I baptized twenty-seven in all, twenty-five white and two colored. Thirty joined the covenant, and they calculate to build a meeting-house, and support Advent preaching, so far as it is in their power; and if the cotton crop is not destroyed this summer, they will be able to carry out their expectations, if they can secure the labors of a good, faithful Advent preacher. There never was such a meeting held in that country before, and all are very happily disappointed in the result of the meeting. As I get out of the cities into the country, where they have had very little preaching since the commencement of the war, and all is desolation and ruin in religious matters; and where there are no educated ministers to oppose the truth, I find the people very anxious to hear; and all who can possibly come, turn out, and listen with the greatest attention, and conviction rests down on the people more universally than I ever saw it before. The most intelligent receive the truth.

O what a field to work in. They come ten or fifteen miles to hear, and the next thing is, you must go into their neighborhood to preach. And any thing they have, they are willing to share with you. It is different from the city. A good man need never go hungry among this people, as long as they have anything to eat; and if they have good crops, so they can get money, I think they would do as much as any people to help spread the truth.

I am to commence a series of meetings at the White Springs next Tuesday, the 18th, about seventeen miles from here. Some were over from there to our meetings that we have just closed, and were much interested.

In two weeks from the 10th, I am to hold a series of meetings within a few miles of where I have just been, near where they expect to build a church. And on the 11th of Sept., we are to commence another campmeeting at Olustee. The people are under conviction all over the country, for miles around, where those fruitful little tracts have been scattered. The Publication Society sent me fifteen dollars worth to distribute, since I came back this last time; and those of you who contribute means to furnish tracts to scatter in such destitute places, little think perhaps that they do what preachers can not do, and are the means of opening the way, and creating a desire to hear the truth. There is such an increasing demand to have preaching all over the country, I do not know what to do. I have to do the labor of two or three men now. I preached twelve discourses between Wednesday evening and Sunday evening, and it is the remark of many that they can not see how it is possible for one man to do so much; but glory to God, I grow fat on it in this lovely climate, and the blessing of the Lord, and have no higher ambition than to see the work of God prosper. O how blessed to see the old and the young of all classes receive the truth, and follow their blessed Lord and Master. Yours in the blessed hope,

P. A. SMITH.

LATER FROM FLORIDA.

Bro. P. A. Smith writes again, under date of Sept. 3d, as follows:—

BRO. GRANT:—I returned last Saturday from holding meetings at the White Springs, and also on Big Creek, near the Suwannee river, about seventeen miles northerly from Lake City. I can hardly find language to express my thankfulness to the Lord for such display of the Spirit as attended the glorious truths of his word. There is scarcely a family but what some of its members have been sharers in its blessings. The people say there was never a time in the history of Florida, of such a reformation—so universal, and so marked—as the present. All of the most influential, old and young, have been baptized and joined the covenant. I have baptized forty-four, and forty-nine have joined the covenant. The school-master and the prominent young men and ladies, who used to take great delight in dances and other amusements, have been baptized and joined, and now their recreation consists in getting together to sing our hymns, and in going to meeting. They will come to meeting an hour before services to sing, and I am delighted with the progress they make. A subscription was started immediately to build a church, and they took hold of it with a will, and they want an Advent preacher to preach to them.

The difference between this country and the north, in regard to the success of spreading the Advent message, is this: at the north it is so thickly settled, it is very easy for the preachers to visit the people, after they have heard the truth, and induce them to turn against it. But here in the country, people live a great ways apart, and come many miles to meeting, and it would be very laborious to visit them all; and educated ministers out here are not very willing to labor above what is absolutely necessary for their support. As it regards the common preachers, they either come into the faith, or keep still about that of which they know nothing. I received a letter yesterday from a Bro. Green, who has been a preacher, but was sent to the Legislature from Baker Co., and could not be present at the Olustee campmeeting, in July, which he regretted very much; but will be present at the campmeeting to commence on the 11th, one week from to-morrow. He desires to become qualified to maintain the truth we preach.

The Lord is working on the minds of a number of persons, who are strong in the faith, to go out into the field and warn the people of the coming of the Lord. Praise the Lord for what he is doing all through the country where this truth is proclaimed.

I intend to start for home week after next, the 18th of Sept., after our campmeeting at Olustee, which promises to be a great meeting. My health remains very good, but I expect it will not be so when I go north, where those cold, chilly winds will bring on the asthma. Yours in hope, P. A. SMITH.

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept 3d, 1868.

From Bro. J. B. Wadsworth.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been very sick, for the first time since I left Rochester. I have eaten too much trash, watermelons and other like stuff. O how good to be the Lord's. Life is uncertain. I am so glad that I ever saw you, and Bro. Pratt. May God bless you. May you have many stars in your crown of rejoicing. I love you. Pray for me, that I may live nearer the Lord. I am wading through deep waters now, and all alone; no one to speak one word of comfort to me. Satan is trying to sift me as wheat, but the little still voice whispers, A little while longer, and the storm will be over. Yes, I feel that we are almost home. A few more days and nights, and our toils will be past. I do want to live right, walk right, and talk right. O Lord, what way wilt thou have me to go? Teach me what to eat, and what to know, and how to live for thy glory. I am willing to be anything for Christ's sake. I am nothing without him. What are our trials compared with the sufferings of those in early days? See Jacob with a stone under his head; see Jesus and the disciples sleeping in the deserts, oft in perils, nakedness, and hunger. Why, then, should I be troubled, though sometimes I do have to make my own bed, and like a tortoise carry all on my back, and seldom make the acquaintance of a laundress? There is no time to murmur, when we are told to pray always. We are reminded to be watchful, zealous of good works, faint not, become not weary in a good cause; though the waves may splash over us, still trust in the Lord; be of good cheer, "It is I; be not afraid."

Satan is very busy in these last moments. He has thousands of agents out; he knows that when Jesus comes his work will be done, so he is making the best of his time; and if we are not watchful, he will have us on the broad road to eternal destruction. I have more trials now than I have had in all of my travels, though I have been without. I am here sick, without money; have some friends, but poor friends as regards this world's goods. I am fast mending, and as soon as I get strong, I think to get into some business to raise money enough to get necessaries, then I shall journey on again. I am determined, by the grace of God, Satan shall not trip me, when I am so near home. O Lord, scatter the mist, improve my eye-sight, that I may see more light.

I met two men, one yesterday, and the other one to-day, who recognized me, and said I left some tracts at their house, and in their neighborhood. One of them is from Tenn., and the other from Miss. The one from Miss. said that a minister preached a sermon out of one of the tracts (I think he said "Plain Truths"), and was somewhat excited and wished to see me again. These two men will go back in a day or two. I will give them some tracts, and also a paper. I have the promise of two clubs for the Crisis, and about the same for the "Voice of the West." As soon as I am a little stronger, I will see to it, for one subscriber is worth a thousand tracts, as I think. There can much light be had from reading papers.

I don't know how long I shall be here, but as soon as I can make money to get me a knapsack and a satchel, and adjust myself in a more respectable manner, I then will bid adieu to these unhealthy regions. I will write again about the time I leave here. I think I will remain here until the first of Oct. Your Bro., looking for deliverance,

Mobile, Ala. J. B. WADSWORTH.

From Bro. J. A. Purdy.

BRO. GRANT:—Having received a letter from Bro. Purdy, and knowing that the brethren scattered abroad would be glad to learn that the Lord is convicting sinners in Nova Scotia, and turning them from their altars to the unknown God to seek the true and living God; by permission of Bro. Purdy, I send it to the Crisis for insertion. May the Lord carry on his great work of salvation. Yours, hoping for redemption, E. W. POTTER.

PUBUCCO BEACH, AUG. 11TH, 1868.

E. W. Potter:—Dear Brother in the Lord: A few lines from a wayfaring pilgrim might cheer your heart in this world of sorrow. We arrived here the 31st of July, and commenced meetings. We found religion very low. The people gathered in to hear what the strangers had to say. There was no one to take a part. I appointed a prayer-meeting on Sunday, at ten o'clock. Four came. One took part. My heart began to be more burdened for the people. We went on to labor for Jesus. The people began to gather, and the burden came on the more heavily. Bro. Reed, who accompanied me, went on four miles further, and held meetings. I still worked on, praying that the Lord would bless the people.

Sunday, Aug. 9th, Bro. Aram came. I was glad. I saw very plainly that God was at work among the people. We called a prayer-meeting again. The people began to take hold. Monday, another meeting, ten o'clock. The power of Satan began to yield Monday night. Glory to God, what a night. Ten came forward for prayer, and finally a crowd, crying for God to have mercy on them. The whole place has since been shaken by the power of God. The angels in heaven have been made to rejoice over backsliders returning to the Lord, and sinners who are being converted to God. The work is still going on.

Yesterday I went for Bro. Reed. We needed his help. We have had another great meeting this evening. Some have walked five miles to hear, and say that they never heard such preaching before. The Bible is a new book to them. We have calls to go to other places, but can not leave. Glory to God, that I live to-day to praise him. Bro. Aram has done much to remove the prejudice the people had against us, by giving us a recommendation. The Lord bless him, and comfort him in his affliction.

A few words about my health. It is about as usual. It is only Jesus that keeps me up. Well, Bro., Jesus is coming soon. What we do must be done quickly. Sunday, Aug. 16th, four were baptized, and the work is still going on. I left Brn. Aram and Reed to labor for the Lord. Sinners are coming to Christ, and saints are rejoicing in the love of God. I left on Tuesday, Aug. 18th, for Bear River, for more laborers, as there are numerous calls from adjacent places. Truly, the harvest is great, and the laborers are few. Yours, looking for redemption when Jesus comes,

JAMES A. PURDY.

Smith's Cove, Digby Co., Aug. 22nd.

From Bro. D. D. Reed.

BRO. GRANT:—I have just closed my Tent meeting in this city. The whole community is stirred. They have to acknowledge that we preach the truth. The Methodist preacher came out to hear. It kept him wiping off the tears. I baptized five happy souls last Sabbath. There were more to be baptized, but their husbands came into the tent and swore that their wives should not be baptized; so I left their cases in the hands of the Lord, praying that God would convert them to the truth. We formed a happy church, and a number of free Methodists joined the company. I left them on their way to the kingdom of God. I expect to meet them soon.

I am now on my way with my tent to Monticello, about twenty-five miles from Minneapolis, on the Mississippi. They want the tent there very much. Bro. Fassett is with me a part of the time, but I miss my old last year's team—Bro. Bellows and Sr. Crumb. I will try to meet them in the morning of the resurrection. The whole region is being stirred on the great truth of Christ's soon coming.

While I was on board of a steamer, going down the Mississippi a few days ago to my appointment to preach, the boat got on a bar, so we had to stay there a number of hours before we got off. When the bell rang for tea, we sat down to take our supper, and as the captain and all hands had been hard at work to get the boat off, and still she hung, they were badly vexed; so I commenced telling them the Lord was soon coming, and all of the wicked would be burned up root and branch. After we got through at the table, the Capt. came to me, and wanted me to come up and talk to them in the wheel-house about our hope, for they wished to know what the Bible taught. So I preached to them the destiny of the wicked, and also of the righteous. After I got through, they said they believed it; it seemed the most reasonable of any doctrine they had ever heard. I gave them a lot of tracts, hoping they may see the truth.

Let us be up and doing, and keep sowing the good seed, and we shall reap if we faint not. This world is our great field in which to labor. If we do not sow, we shall not reap. I shall keep in this field with my tent until cold weather, then I expect to go to California with the tent, and hold meetings the coming winter, if time continues. We cannot do too much. I should like to be with you at the campmeeting, but I must follow up the Mississippi. In hope, D. D. REED.

Hudson, Wis., Aug. 15th, 1868.

From Bro. J. R. Preston.

BRO. GRANT:—Since we pitched Antioch Tent at this place, we have had an opportunity to see what prejudice can do. The members of the churches are so priest-ridden that they dare not claim the privileges of freemen enough to come and hear. A few however have ventured, and are deeply interested. The Lord is with us, and we rejoice. The doctrine of eternal misery has made many infidels in this town, and more are on the point of throwing away their Bibles, because they can not harmonize the doctrine of hell torture with what the Bible says of the goodness of God.

Bro. Snook and myself have been dealing out the truth to them faithfully, and some are beginning to rejoice in it. Bro. A. B. Fabrick, formerly of Edinboro, Penn., lives here, and is a bright and shining light among his townsmen; all of whom acknowledge him to be a christian. Thank the Lord for such helpers in his cause. The truth is gaining ground rapidly in Mich., and we trust that many will be found ready at the day of the coronation of the King of glory. Your Bro., waiting for God's Son from heaven, J. R. PRESTON.

Clinton, Mich., Aug. 12th, 1868.

From Bro. C. F. Sweet.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say to the brethren and sisters in Southern N. Y. and Pa., that I purpose spending the coming fall and winter in my old field; viz., Southern N. Y. and Pa. If any one living isolated and alone, desires my labors, let them write me at Albion, N. Y., as soon as convenient, and I will do all I can for them. No matter if you are poor; the poor must have the gospel preached to them. I dare preach and trust in God for a living. All I want to know is that it is the will of God, and I am ready to go anywhere and preach to any people; and if God does not raise me up friends, I will lodge with the unfriendly, for the gospel of the kingdom must, "SHALL" "BE preached" for a WITNESS; then shall the end come. If GOD has any thing for me to do in the regions beyond, let his providence open the way; for I do not wish to go any where unbidden or unsent; but do wish to labor for the salvation of man where I can do the most good, to the greatest number of God's creatures. Let any one write who feel that God impresses them to do so, and thereby let God be glorified and his work done. C. F. SWEET.

From Sr. M. E. Otis.

BRO. GRANT:—As I have been requested by the brethren and sisters to write a line occasionally for the papers, that they might know how I was prospering, while traveling as a "pilgrim and stranger" over the hills and through the dales to preach salvation to the dying, I will attempt this morning to pen a few lines for their perusal. My mind has been somewhat engaged this morning in scanning my past life, and I look back on many trying scenes and fiery trials that I have passed through, and even to places where it seemed as if the waves had well nigh gone over my head; but through them all the Lord has led me, and made a way for my escape. I look to the few past months that I have been out this summer, and they too have been months of trial to me. I have been reproached, evil has been spoken of me, even by those who profess to be Christ's disciples, and some, too, who profess to be Christ's ministers; but yet, while some have turned away and tried to entice others away also, there have been many that had a desire to hear for themselves; and while they have crowded in out of curiosity, to see what "the woman" had to say, their hearts have been touched, and thank God, I have seen backsliders reclaimed, and others seeking the Savior that never knew anything better than the pleasures of Egypt.

Since laboring in Calais, where I have been a short time this summer, and where I labored last fall awhile, I have seen the work of God going on; and last Sabbath I had the pleasure of seeing two happy souls led down like the eunuch of old into the water, and there buried with Christ beneath the yielding wave, and then raised to go on their way rejoicing. These have companions who, as yet, are going on in sin; but prayers will arise for them that they too, ere long, may join their wives, and with them seek a land which knows no blighting. That land is just ahead, and with the poet I can exclaim:

"O hail, happy day, that ends our tears and sorrows,
That brings us joy without alloy,
O hail, happy day.
The day that brings a sweet release,
That crowns our Jesus Prince of peace,
And bids our sorrows cease,
O hail, happy day."

Dear brethren and sisters, let us press forward and overcome every obstacle that lies in the way; and, like the apostle Paul, be unmovable, who said at one time, "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Rom. 8: 38, 39. Again, says Paul, "None of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy," etc. Acts. 20: 24. Your sister in Christ, rejoicing in tribulation. MARY E. OTIS.

Calais, Aug. 13th, 1868.

SCARLET SINS.—At no period in the country's history was there ever such cause, as exists now, for anxiety to the patriot and the christian.

We have no desire to be alarmists; but there are certain very startling things to which it will not do to shut our eyes.

We have written already on certain matters, in which the national conscience is utterly corrupt; on matters, too, wherein religion, as it is called, has busied itself in increasing that corruption; that is to say, gambling has been taught, practised, and sometimes, for the first time, introduced by "religious fairs" for "religious" objects; and finally the Romanists have organized gambling in this country as they have in Italy, into a regular source of revenue for "holy" objects.

The "religion" of the country has become rotten on that matter among others, and has ceased to have any moral sense upon the subject.—Prophetic Times.

POWER OF A HORSE'S SCENT.—There is one perception which a horse possesses to which little attention has been paid, and that is the power of scent. With some horses it is acute, as with the dog; and for the benefit of those who have to drive at night, such as physicians and others, this knowledge is invaluable. I never knew it to fail, and I have ridden hundreds of miles on dark nights, and in consideration of this power of scent, this is my simple advice: Never check your horse at night, but give him a free head, and you may rest assured that he will never get off the road, and will carry you expeditiously and safe. In regard to the power of scent in a horse, I once knew one of a pair that was stolen, and recovered mainly by the track being made out by its mate, and that after he had been absent six or eight hours.—Tait.

Obituaries.

HEINLY. Joseph Richman Heinly, son of Joseph Heinly of Sweetland, Iowa, departed this life July 12th, 1868, at Oarville, Ala., aged twenty years.

He was a young man of much promise and of rare talent and ability. As a student and teacher he had but few equals of his age. He was loved by all who knew him. His sympathy was with the Freedmen. He saw a chance among them at the south to do them good, and to get a position for himself that would be an honor and blessing, both to him and them. He now sleeps in Liberty Church Yard, Alabama. A funeral discourse was preached by the writer, from Heb. 2: 9, 10, at the Presbyterian Church, in Sweetland, to a large concourse of mourners, friends and people.

S. G. GIBSON.

HEMENWAY. Died in Worcester, Aug. 11th, 1868, of cancer, Betsey C., wife of Bro. Ebenezer Hemenway, aged sixty-five years, seven months, and seven days.

Sister H. was one of those whose lot it was to suffer. She embraced the hope of soon seeing Jesus, and being made like unto his glorious body, in 1842, and died in the triumph of faith, soon to awake to die no more. She was beloved by all who knew her for her faith in God, and her consistent christian character. She leaves a large circle of friends to mourn her loss.

SAMUEL AYRES.

MCCLURE. Died in Meadville, Pa., Aug. 15th, 1868, Martha McClure, wife of Alexander McClure, aged fifty-seven years.

Sister Martha was among the most amiable of those "of whom the world is not worthy." She loved her Lord. She loved her husband and adopted daughter, and those "who love" Jesus' appearing, with an ardor that nothing could inspire but the Holy Ghost. Now she rests in hope of the glory to be revealed "at the resurrection of the just." J. B. COOK.

"Voice" please copy.

HAMBLIN. Died in East Boston, Feb. 18th, of scarlet fever, Lucy H. Hamblin, daughter of Bro. Eli Hamblin, aged three years.

Lucy was a dear sweet child, and far ahead of her years, and was the idol of the household. She sleeps quietly, and if faithful a little longer, father, mother, and children will meet on the other shore, where death cannot enter. The writer tried to comfort the mourners with "these words": 1 Thess. 4: 18. A. P. MOORE.

MACEY. Died in Lynn, Aug. 28th, 1868, Gertie Imogen, infant daughter of John S. and Emma Macey, aged four months and ten days.

Her mother fell asleep when little Gertie was about one week old. Since that time Gertie has been in the care of her grandmother, Sister Moulton, until death has done its work. Words of comfort to the mourners by the writer.

G. R. COBURN.

DRAKE. Died in Manchester, Ct., Aug. 25th, Harriett T., wife of Darius Drake, aged sixty-eight.

She was a consistent christian through life. Her end was peaceful, and she died with a triumphant hope of the resurrection of the dead at the coming of Christ.

MOORE. Died in Bear River, N. S., Aug. 20th, John Hastings, infant son of John and Mary Jane Moore, being within four days of one year old.

He sweetly sleeps in Jesus, sure of immortality at the resurrection of the just. M. J. MOORE.

MILLESON. Died of pneumonia, Dec. 28th, 1867, Oliver G. Milleson, aged thirty-four years, nine months, and ten days.

Papa was a faithful christian.

A. O. MILLESON.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Sept. 13. It is generally considered that the events of the last fortnight have made little change in the political condition on the continent either to lessen or increase the chances of the war. While on the one hand the press of Germany have assumed a quieter tone and profess to be more confident of peace, on the other hand it is known that France has refused a formal demand made by Chevalier Negra, the Italian Ambassador, for the recall of the French troops from Rome, and at the same time Prince Girgenti has brought to Paris proposals from Spain to cement an alliance with France by sending 30,000 soldiers to Rome.

This proposition and the approaching interview shortly to take place at Bayonne between the Emperor Napoleon, and the Queen of Spain are looked upon as foreshadowing an alliance, the object of which is to rid France of the care of the Holy See in case she should be plunged into war, so that by this means France, if without any other ally, could make Spain useful. Rumors, too, that several fighting regiments have been recalled from Africa, that Gen. Lebouf has been sent on a special mission to Germany, and that Prussia has determined to annex the Grand Duchy of Baden, add to the feeling of distrust in the permanence of the existing peace. This feeling is faithfully mirrored in Paris by the depression on the Bourse and consequent decline of rentes, and in diplomatic circles here the situation is pithily summed up in these words: "No fear of war, though it may begin to-morrow."

LONDON, Sep. 14. The press of this city comment, this morning, upon the recent speech of Napoleon at Chalons. The following words were made use of by the Emperor on that occasion:

"I will say nothing more, as the public prints are sure to draw prophecies of war, however moderate my words are."

PARIS, Sept. 9. Despatches from Madrid state that the government is taking extraordinary precautions to guard against any outbreak, and many disaffected in the army have been removed.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Sept. 8. The Tribune's Bowling Green special charges the Ku Klux Klan in that State with being more bold and defiant than ever. They recently forced an entrance into the house of Glasgow Williams, a Union soldier, and in the presence of his wife killed him because he said he intended to vote for Grant. They also hung an old inoffensive negro, and on Friday they attacked a settlement of Shakers, inflicting damages to their property amounting to $250,000.

Terrible Earthquake in South America.

REPORTED LOSS OF 30,000 LIVES.

Correspondence from South America to the New York Herald gives accounts of fearful earthquakes which occurred on the 16th ultimo, and destroyed several large cities in the southern portion of Peru. The shock, a Havana dispatch says, only lasted five minutes, but in that time from 25,000 to 30,000 persons were killed; but terrible as this statement is, that of the Herald's correspondent is worse. He says:

"A rumbling sound preceded the earthquake, and was succeeded by a rocking motion of the earth which warned the inhabitants of their danger. All along the southern coast the sea was terribly agitated, causing the ships to drag their anchors and flooding the land for some distance. The wildness of this scene of destruction has never been equaled.

Arequipa, a city of 35,000 inhabitants, its houses built solidly of granite, has passed away, scarcely a vestige being left. The strength of the houses being so great as to resist the shock for a time, many of the people were enabled to escape, but 400 are said to have perished in the ruins.

The town of Arica, containing 12,000 inhabitants, was also destroyed, leaving not a house standing. Here, as before, the strength of the houses gave many of the people time to escape, 500 only being engulphed and killed in the ruins. The water rose to such a height that a tidal wave forty feet high rolled with a terrific roll and resistless fury upon the ships in the harbor and precipitated them on the main land, far beyond any point ever before reached by sea. The U. S. storeship Fredonia was capsized, and all on board were lost. The Fredonia had on board $1,800,000 worth of naval stores. [The loss of property between Arica and Tacin is estimated at $14,000,000.] The vessel went over and was smashed to atoms by the advancing tidal waves and all on board were thus drowned before she was released from the mighty grasp of the sea. The U. S. steamer Wateree was carried fully half a mile inland and left high and dry, only one sailor of her crew being drowned. The injuries to the vessel were comparatively slight, but from the great distance she was carried inland it will be found impossible to ever get her afloat again.

The towns of Iquique, Moquegua, Locumba and Pequiaca, were also utterly destroyed. Over 600 persons were drowned in the destruction of Iquique, and many persons later were perishing for want of water. The government estimates the damage done to cities and private property at three hundred millions of dollars. The total number of lives lost by this shocking event has been estimated at over two thousand.

In addition to the fearful calamities above reported, intelligence has been received of even a more fearful succession of shocks in Ecuador. On the 16th ult., in the provinces of Pachincha and Imbarana, a tremendous earthquake, unequaled in the history of Ecuador, occurred. The towns of Ibarra, capital of the province Imbabara, San Pablo, Atuntaqui and Imantad, are in ruins. Where Catacachi formerly stood is now a lake. The populations of Ibarra, Ottovala and Catacachi are almost entirely destroyed. Towns adjoining Quito, as Parucho, Puellaro and Cachiguanjo, have been also entirely destroyed. The number of deaths in Quito has been small, but in other towns it is calculated that not less than 20,000 persons have been killed. The dead are so numerous that the surviving inhabitants have been forced to fly from the stench of putrefying bodies.

Items.

☞ King Victor Emmanuel is selling the property of the church in his Italian Kingdom. In this way he has already realized over 174,000,000, of francs.

☞ The "wickedest man" in New York has at last been converted. At the prayer meeting on Tuesday, he said that God had forgiven his sins, and that thenceforth he should lead the life of a Christian man. It was reported that "Shanghai" Hadden, "Sojer" Brown, and "Kit" Burns had offered the use of their rooms for prayer meetings.

☞ It is estimated that not less than 8000 buildings will be finished in Chicago, by the close of the season, at a cost of between $10,000,000, and $12,000,000.

☞ A famine is threatened in several of the Mexican States by reason of the scarcity of provisions.

☞ The late venerable President day, of Yale College, on being asked what he thought of the modern Spiritualism, so called, replied, "Either there is nothing in it, or the devil is in it." A statement that could hardly be improved.

THE JUBILEE HARP.

We are now ready to supply friends with the new Hymn and Tune Book, at the following prices:—

Plain cloth, leather backs, colored edges, $1.00 per copy; $9.00 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges, $1.15 per copy; $10.50 per dozen.

Extra cloth, leather backs, gilt edges and covers, $1.25 per copy; $12.00 per dozen.

☞ Postage 15 cents per copy additional, when sent by mail.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Spiritualism Unveiled.
What is Man?
The Soul—What is it?
The Spirit—What is it?
The Rich Man and Lazarus.

All the above works, in one volume, flexible cloth, in a compact, durable form, for use and preservation, for 35 cents, postpaid.

Address all orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

"WHAT IS MAN?" A Bible view of his creation, with the meaning of "Soul," "Spirit," and an exposition of the "Rich Man and Lazarus," "Thief on the Cross," and "Souls under the Altar." By Miles Grant.

This is a work of 128 pp., containing four tracts bound together. Every body should have a copy. Price 25 cents postpaid.

The New Hampshire Tent.

To the brethren and friends of New Hampshire, in favor of having a tent to carry the gospel of the kingdom into new places, I would say, at the Alton Bay campmeeting it was found that enough had been raised by Bro. D. M. Leavitt, and others, except about one hundred dollars, to obtain a tent; therefore the brethren decided to purchase one at once, and have it in the field, believing the friends would soon send in the remainder. A committee of three was also chosen to see that the tent was judiciously run, and they to receive what the friends wished to give to make up what was lacking. Bro. Z. H. Ford of Concord, Bro. John Shorey of East Rochester, and myself, were chosen said committee. Bro. Ford is Treasurer, but money can be handed to either, and we will see that it is appropriated as designed. If it is more convenient to send it by brethren to the State Conference, to be held at Lake Village, commencing Oct. 15th, you can do so. Our friends will see that the first meeting of the tent is to be held this week at Rochester, N. H. Brethren, pray that good may be done.

J. G. SMITH.

Tent Meeting.

The Maine Mission Tent will be pitched in Mt. Vernon Village, Sept. 30th, and remain over the following Sunday. The small tent, for the accommodation of brethren and sisters to board themselves, will be there also. This is a new place for our faith; yet the friends in the place will do all they can to make the meeting interesting; and we trust our brethren and sisters will come prepared to labor for the salvation of the people. Will you pray for us, dear brethren and sisters, that sinners may be saved. The Farmington and Augusta Stage fare is reduced one third, for those who go to the above meeting. Per order,

H. B. SEVEY.
I. C. WELLCOME.

Dedication and Conference.

The new chapel, built at Province Falls, Freedom, N. H., is to be dedicated the first day of October; meeting to hold over the following Sabbath. Elders T. W. Piper, D. M. Leavitt, D. F. Leavitt, and others, are expected in attendance to preach the word. Come, my brethren, one and all. Come to labor for the good of souls. This house is peculiarly located, being within five minutes walk of two States, three counties, and four towns.

For the brethren, J. S. MOULTON.

N. B.—Homes will be provided for all that will come. J. S. M.

Tent and Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, the Rhode Island Mission Tent will be pitched in Woodstock Valley, Ct., Sept. 21st, and remain over the following Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, to this meeting. Come in the name of the Lord, with the whole armor on, prepared to labor for the salvation of perishing sinners. Come at the commencement, and stay through. Don't be covetous of your time; it is the Lord's. Make a sacrifice and come. What we do for the world must be done quickly. Are your skirts clean? Have you done what you could to awaken a slumbering world, just ready to be summoned to the judgment? See to it at once.

Those who can, had better come prepared to board themselves, and lodge in the tents. We expect one will be brought for that purpose. Arrangements will be made for keeping horses. Brn. E. Bellows, H. F. Carpenter, and others, will be present to preach the word. A cordial invitation is extended to other denominations to come and hear, and worship and labor with us. Let sectarian bars be broken. Amen.

For the Church, I. B. POTTER.

Maine Mission Tent.

The tent will be pitched at Blackenton's Corner, one mile and a half from Rockland city, to commence work in connection with a campmeeting, Thursday, at 10 o'clock A. M., Sept. 17th, on ground owned by Mr. Benj. Clough, and near his house. It is on the road from Camden Harbor to Rockland, six miles from Camden, four miles and a half from Rockport, five from Thomaston, five from So. Hope, and four from West Camden. Those coming by Steamer will land at Rockland. Pasturing for horses, and board for the people will be furnished for pay, near the ground. Brethren and sisters who can bring tents, provision and bedding, come prepared to labor for the spread of the gospel and the salvation of sinners in this new field. Brn. Moses Young, H. B. Eaton, and S. Hall, have located and arranged for this meeting.

I. C. WELLCOME, in behalf of the Committee.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting commenced in Chicago, Sept. 25th, and held as long as the interest may demand. Eld. Miles Grant has been engaged to preach during the meeting, and Bro. D. S. Clark and others are expected to be present and aid in proclaiming the truth and in bringing souls to Christ. Will God's dear children pray for this meeting, that it may be the means of bringing many to Christ, and that the word preached may be accompanied with the Holy Spirit, convicting the sinner, confirming the saint, and confounding our enemies? For the church,

C. C. RAMSEY.
WM. HYNES.
J. FRANCES.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of the State of Conn. will be held at Square Pond, Conn., Sept. 30th, 1868; the services to commence at 7 o'clock on Wednesday evening. The place is accessible by railroad from Hartford to Rockville, thence six miles. It is presumed that provision will be made for conveyance, and that it will be advertised. Also one at Orcuttville near West Stafford and Stafford Springs.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

Conference.

The Lord willing, we will commence a conference at Colebrook, N. H., Thursday, evening, Sept. 24th, to continue as may be thought best. Brethren and sisters are invited to come and help in the work of the Lord. Strangers may call on Jas. Little, who will look after the interest of the meeting.

GOD'S WILL.

Pain's furnace heat within me quivers,
God's breath upon the flame doth blow;
And all my heart in anguish shivers,
And trembles at the fiery glow;
And yet I whisper, as God will!
And in his hottest fire hold still.

He comes and lays my heart, all heated,
On the hard anvil, minded so
Into his own fair shape to beat it
With his great hammer, blow on blow;
And yet I whisper, as God will!
And at his heaviest blows hold still.

He takes my softened heart and beats it;
The sparks fly off at every blow;
He turns it o'er and o'er and heats it,
And lets it cool, and makes it glow;
And yet I whisper, as God will!
And in his mighty hand hold still.

Why should I murmur? for the sorrow,
Thus only longer lived would be;
Its end may come, and will, to-morrow,
When God has done his work in me;
So I say, trusting, as God will!
And, trusting to the end, hold still.

He kindles for my profit purely
Affliction's glowing fiery brand,
And all his heaviest blows are surely
Inflicted by a master hand;
So I say, praying, as God will!
And hope in him, and suffer still.

—Selected.

For the World's Crisis.

EDWARD IRVING ON THE 1260-1335 DAYS.

Bro. Grant:—I think the readers of the Crisis would be pleased to know what that devoted, learned, and most eloquent preacher of England (for so he was esteemed, as I was told by one who used to hear him), wrote forty-three years ago concerning the Lord's coming this year. I quote from his "Babylon Foredoomed." The time when the Pope was exalted to supreme head in the church, and the civil power used to discipline heretics, is ascertained beyond dispute, and from this source of information there can be no appeal. The code and pandects to which he refers, and which Gibbon calls Justinian's "immortal works," is probably the original work of the ten compilers appointed by Justinian. They were found at Analfi, in Italy, in the war between Pope Innocent II. and the king of Sicily and Naples, about the year 1527; though some say earlier. They were taken to Florence, new bound in purple, placed in a rich casket, and were shown to curious travelers by the monks and magistrates, bareheaded, and with lighted tapers. They have been copied from at various times. One person was engaged several years studying the manuscript. "Since the above period, Justinian's laws have revived, flourished, and continue to be, indeed, the general law of Christendom, one single kingdom excepted." The ardent desire expressed by Mr. Irving at the close was not wild, as, if now living, he would be but seventy-six years of age, but he wore himself out in nine years from the time he wrote.

S. Hall.

"It now therefore becomes the question, at what time were the saints given into the hands of this 'little horn' power? Now, it must be some great event in the history of Christendom; not the petty encroachments of a bishop of Rome, or his ambitious pretences, but some great and conspicuous action of power, whereby he obtained a right to and inheritance over all the churches. And it must be ascertained, not by impotent acts of councils, or doubtful edicts of petty princes, but by enactments issued from the fountain head of power, and enrolled amongst the constitutions of empire. For unless it were so recorded in a sure place, the comfort of the prophecy were wholly lost to the church, and we were as much out to sea as ever respecting the coming of Christ, and the beginning of the kingdom of the saints. Now, the church ought to give thanks to God, that by his wonderful preservation of the pandects of Justinian, the far-famed imperial code, which, after being lost for centuries, they say was dug up from the ruins of Analfi, about the time that light began to dawn upon the church; that from this code, so wonderfully preserved and restored from the dust of ruins, we can give the date, not only when power was given to the bishop of Rome over all the churches, but when the very form and character of that power was ascertained and determined; and, as if to make these edicts the more conspicuous, they stand at the very beginning of that famous code of civil law, as if it were to call the attention of all christians and civilians to the most important edicts of the work.

The first of these edicts by which authority was given to the bishops of Rome to settle all controversies in the church, by which he was declared head of the church, and infallible in all matters of faith, and permitted to use the power of the empire against whomsoever he deemed heretical; this most important edict bears the date of 533. But this important matter, we should say, rests upon a complete system of policy and creed of imperial authority, issued to the empire, and written in the law of the empire, whereby the Papacy was established the imperial religion; not merely granting the power, but severally constituting the chief features in the character of the Papacy, so that its very image is delineated and fixed in the beginning of Justinian's code, then given, as if to signify that it was the rubric of that most famous work. . . . .

Now, if these acts of Justinian, incorporated into the code of the empire, by which the empire continued to be governed, do not give the 'little horn' the power over the saints of the Most High, I know not what before or since could give him that power, but no part of canon law rests upon a surer foundation. Nay, so complete was the submission of all right of judgment into his hand, that Justinian himself set the example of it; who, being about to issue an edict containing his own orthodox confession of faith, and condemning Nestorius, and other heretics, with all who should differ from it, submitted it first to the Archbishop of Rome for his approbation; 'he hastened to communicate to his holiness all things which regarded the state of the church, since it had always been his earnest endeavor to maintain the unity of the apostolic seat, and the state of the holy churches of God, wherefore he thought it necessary to make known to his holiness his late decree against the heretics, as he would not suffer any thing that related to the churches, although it might be clear and undoubted, should be done without his Holiness being notified, who is the head of all the holy churches, and that the churches maintained the constitution which they had received from the apostolic seat of his holiness.'

The celibacy of the clergy, the intercession of the Virgin Mary, the religious use and veneration of holy crosses, the setting of councils on a level with the holy Scriptures, the founding of the supremacy of the holy see upon our Lord's injunction to Peter, 'feed my sheep,' these, and other capitol institutions of the Papacy, are all within a year of the same date, enacted and embodied in the standing law of the empire. And not only so, but in the Emperor's letters to the Pope, he uses these expressions, 'your highness,' 'your beatitudes,' 'the head of the holy churches,' 'the head of the holy priests of God;' which blasphememous titles he recognizes, not only in a letter sent to the Pope himself, but in one addressed to the bishop of Constantinople, continually referring to Rome as the apostolic seat . . .

From all these things, and much more that might be quoted from the pandects of Justinian of the same date, there can be no doubt that, however the way might have been preparing, this doubtless is the epoch at which the supremacy of the Pope over the saints within the realms of the horned beast, received supremacy as a great historical event in the reign of a great Emperor, and supremacy as a part of a code which continued for centuries the adoration of the world, and the foundation of civil law.

Mr. Irving further says in conclusion:

"Justinian, in the beginning of his reign, occupied himself with the great work of revising all the former laws of the empire, and adding thereto such edicts as should bring the whole state of society, government and religion, into conformity with the spirit of his own enlarged mind, and those of the able counsellors with whom he was surrounded. . . . This work brought into a fixed and perpetual form the hitherto fluctuating and undefined powers of the Reman pontiff, established the exemption of the clergy from prosecution before the civil courts, at once making the Pope the head of all the apostolical churches, and constituting the church a distinct political power from the state—an Imperium in Imperio. The acts by which this was effected, bear date of 533, as being preparatory to the great onset upon the Arian powers whereby they were destroyed, which was in a manner necessary to precede the promulgation and reception of his body of laws in the west, where the Arian nations governed to the entire contempt of his authority. So that in one and the same year the catholic faith was established, the Pope's supremacy written in the constitutional law of the empire, and the twofold empire of the church and state within each other was constituted, which are the three grand features whereby the beginning of the period is determined; and I hold it to be such a grand demonstration for the Papacy as never before or since was made, and such an exact fulfillment of the threefold prophecy which determines the beginning of the period as another like it hath not been found by any commentator, nor can be found.

And for the event by which the close of the period is signified, there are in it so many striking particulars, that it is equally remarkable with the preceding, and equally fit for signifying the conclusion of the period. The two witnesses, though they testify 1260 days against the abomination, are not slain until their testimony against it is finished. At this time there is an earthquake, or popular revolution . . . of great importance, which no event of history answers to but one; namely, the French revolution, when the witnesses had finished their testimony in sackcloth. That they should be slain after continuing through 1260 years, without being hurt but only obscured, is another occurrence of which the whole body of European history gives but one solution. That they should come to life again after the three years and a half, is definite beyond all parallel. And that all these things should concur just at the expiration of the 1260 years from the date of the commencement, is a most marvelous coincidence of things, which I defy the ingenuity of all commentators to force any event of history to explain, but the right one, which God foresaw and foretold by his holy prophets,—the event in which we have its accomplishment, namely, the desecration and abolition of the Scriptures by the government of France,—perhaps the most extraordinary event in the history of nations, and by those who brought it to pass, deemed the greatest feat of power that had been accomplished since the coming of Christ, from which they proposed to date the beginning of a new era, and a new division of the year, the abolition of weeks, and a thousand other proud imaginations of their wicked hearts. A period which is expressed in three different forms of times, of months, and of days, and twice under two of these forms in one and the same place, as if to preclude all chance of miscalculation; a period whose beginning is defined by three events, political, ecclesiastical and military, all concurring in one year, whose conclusion is defined in like manner by events political and ecclesiastical, and of a given duration, all concurring in one year, and these not minute or unimportant; but the most important in centuries on either side of them; a period so defined and determined can only be misinterpreted by taking up a part of the evidence. Take it all as we have sought to do, and you may defy any one to misinterpret it. He cannot find two other points of time between which it will lie, and he cannot deny that it lies plainly and squarely between these two points of time which we have fixed for it—533 and 1793. From the setting up of the Papacy, therefore, there shall be 1290 days, till something, which is not determined by any event, and there shall be 1335 days till the term which is pronounced, Blessed,—blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to it. There can be no doubt that this is the commencement of that glorious time when all shall be blessed in Christ, and all men shall call him blessed. No other epoch in holy writ is designated blessed. Therefore we say, that in seventy-five years over and beyond the 1260, or in forty-three years from the time I now write (1825), the blessed reign of Christ shall have commenced. (The Lord lengthen out my life to see one of the days of the Son of man, though in the extremest age as of Simeon and Anna, the Lord spare me to behold his glorious coming.)"

Avoid Abstractions.—If you would keep up attention, avoid abstractions in your sermons, except those of mere argument. Come down from generals to specifications, and especially to individual cases. Wherever possible, give name and place, and intersperse anecdote. By this means the Puritans, even when they were prolix, were vivacious. They subsidized every event of Old Testament history, and talked of David and Judas, instead of royalty and treason.

NAPOLEON.

The following letter is from the foreign correspondence of the New York Examiner (Baptist), and is from the pen of a piquant and original writer, a minister, and also Professor in the Chicago University, if I mistake not. In regard to the expression near the close, "he is a broken man"—Question, Will he not live to fill the mould of prophecy? We believe he will.

C. Colegrove.

I have seen the Emperor. Switzerland must wait. Human nature before any other kind. I wanted to see the Emperor, was more anxious to see him than any other man of either hemisphere. I heard he was away for the summer. I gave up seeing him. But my luck was better than my hopes. The next day after my arrival in London I saw the Queen of England; the next day after I arrived in Paris I saw the Emperor of France.

I was sauntering thoughtfully along the broad and brilliant Rue de la Paix, when I saw a commotion in the distance. It ran along the pavement and came toward me. People stepped quickly to the curb and leaned over intent upon an open carriage. Hats were lifted. It is somebody of consequence, I thought, pereaps it is—it was nobody else but Napoleon, who sat on the back seat bowing to those who recognized him. I, too, hurried to the curb and lifted my hat, as a barouche drawn by four graceful prancing bays, two of them mounted by jocky caps and fancy livery. Alongside were two or three outriders in plainish uniform. As the equipage jogged slowly by, I saw the picture I had often seen, only it was now flesh and blood—the veritable personage who has turned the world's sneer into a world's admiration, mingled with fear, for these two decades has been the foremost man in Christendom, the first monarch on earth, the most brilliant sovereign since Julius Cæsar. If you think I exaggerate come to France, and see for yourself. Come, and be but fair, listen to all sides, hear all parties, ask questions, judge for yourself. If you would see Wren's monument in London, look around you. If you would see the Third Napoleon's in Paris, do the same. His spirit is in everything. His handiwork is everywhere.

I say, hear all sides; but there is but one side when you speak of success. Legitimist, Bourbon, Republican, all concede the splendor of the man's success. Whoever may detest him, none can hold him in contempt. One party glories in, another bites its lip over the transcendent brilliancy and the indisputable beneficence of his reign. His faculty for rulership is unquestioned. His attainments are as widely conceded as his achievements. Many question his policy, none doubt its ability. A multitude would rejoice to see his thone overturned, and his crown trodden under foot, but they do not pretend that any other Frenchman has the brain or the breadth of this one. They would take him away, but have no substitute to propose. They would pull down, and let the building up take care of itself. They are for a republic, though a republic mean anarchy and chaos.

All thoughtful Americans, all thoughtful Englishmen, all the thoughtful here and everywhere, concede that the present Emperor is the best friend of the present France. And this is what galls the factious all that prowl and growl around the throne—the world's concession to the throne's success. Even John Bull shrugs his shoulders, and with grim reluctance joins in this world's concession.

Ask the poor, and they will tell you that Napoleon is busy in devices for their comfort and contentment; while his wife is at the head of every philanthropic movement of the capital—a pure, sweet, earnest woman, by the way, says universal testimony, making her court, as far as she is concerned, the decentest that France has had since Josephine.

And with all their discontent (and with what ruler are these people more discontented than the Ruler of the Universe) the common people will own to the benignity of their present sovereign's reign.

"Are you going to let the prince reign?" I said to the shopkeeper, and he said in reply, "Don't know, monsieur, don't know."

"Well, why not let him reign? The crown descends to him. He comes out of the loins of your greatest modern ruler. Why not stand still and give him a trial?"

"O, we Frenchmen like a change, you know."

It was useless to reason. The French do not reason. They get up in the morning and go to bed again at night, in the meantime sitting upon the pavement before the cafe waiting for a "change." And herein is a tribute to Napoleon. Look at the material he has to deal with. It is fire and powder. It is human nature in a state of chronic eruption. It is people whose highest aim is an explosion, whose chief end, only end, is a "change." Put the Archangel Gabriel over them and they would not be content until the Archangel Gabriel was not over them. Satan or Savior, it matters not, the French must befrenzy themselves over the powers that be. The French war-cry is, Whatever is, is wrong! Set fire to it, and the devil take the responsibility. This vast, wide, deep mass of boiling spirting, menacing human lava the Emperor has to master, and to have made it own him its master is his highest praise.

The army, if it were like any other army in the world, would glory in him, and perhaps this one does. Some say it does, some say it does not, while others say what is probably the nearest the truth—"the Lord only knows, for the French army is composed of French people." But a better dressed or a better taken-care-of army does not step to music. If they should happen to stand by the Prince when his father's uneasy head sinks to rest, the Napoleonic dynasty continues. Otherwise, otherwise.

Talk of the jaux pas in Mexico! Fudge! The volcano had an outlet. The lava got vent. The French spirited. Mexico drew the lightnings that were gathering over France. Better war abroad than revolution at home. If you say, a terrible remedy, see how terrible the disease is; and to realize how terrible that disease is, come here and feel its hot throb. You can have no adequate notion of the intensity and propensity of that disease without coming here. The shopkeeper's cool reply is a household word. It is universal. Nothing else is thought of. Anything for something else. This is the disease—a mania—madness after change. Change is the God of France.

A wonderful man he then who could rule, and fashion, and hold, and keep in orderliness and tranquility for twenty years this nation of the French.

And Paris is itself a monument to the brain of Napoleon III. Such strides in the path of renown, in enterprise, in beauty, in art, in order, in taste, in municipal government, in scientific experiment, in sanitary reform, in industrial improvements, in educational advantages, in artistic enjoyments, in benevolent contrivances, were never achieved by any other metropolis of any other country in any other age of the world. Paris is the best governed, the best regulated, the best looked-after city every way on the surface of the earth, and the hand that governs and regulates, that cleans and adjusts and embellishes it, is that of its Imperial master at the Tuilleries. And that hand never rests, never stops. It is driven by a passion. It is propelled by a will that has no peer and a brain that has no compeer. I might write a dozen newspapers full of what Paris has become and is becoming under the direction of its monarch.

No wonder the Emperor looks haggard. He wears an empire in his countenance. The harrow of apprehension has torn up his face in tearing up his soul. He is a broken man, and he shows it. He is an uneasy man, and he looks it. His eye is abstract. He lives in himself. He is self-absorbed. There was a pathos in one of his late speeches, where he made allusion to what may happen to him any day, and a calm, lofty dignity in the words of faith and hope he spoke for France and her future.

Mind, I am not treating of the man Bonaparte, but of the monarch Napoleon. Of his motives, or of personal matters, I say nothing now. I speak of the Emperor of the French as I saw him yesterday, and as I believe he will be spoken of by the historian of the future who shall be candid toward the present.

LOOK TO CHRIST.

The love wherewith the saint loves his Savior is a very peculiar love. It constrains him to think often of Christ,—almost constantly. Thoughts of Jesus flow right along with the current of his every-day life. You have doubtless heard men disparagingly spoken of as men of one idea. (By the way it is good to have one clear, well-defined idea—some have not so much as that.) Well, the true christian is such an one—a man of just one idea. Christ is that idea. Christ is with him the first and the last. He is the radiating point of all his thoughts. The resting-place to which the mind on wings of thought returns after every fight. A man of one idea. He may, it is true, have gone profoundly into science, but then science conducts him along a shining path-way to Christ as the great first cause of all. He may be an adept in the law, and yet the law leads him to Christ as the only lawgiver. He may be a proficient in history, having the names of empires, kings and princes at his tongue's end, and yet history only leads him to Christ the King of kings, and Lord of lords. He willingly gives up all to Christ. A little girl had a cluster of luscious grapes. She stood by her father and gave him one grape, then another. But now love gained the complete ascendency in her soul, and she threw the whole cluster into his bosom—"Take them all, papa." So the Christian cannot content himself with giving Christ just one from the cluster of his affections. But he says:

"Love so amazing, so divine, Demands my heart, my life, my all."

A Short Prayer.—At the opening of an important meeting Tingly was called upon to offer prayer. He bowed before God and in the presence of his brethren, and prayed as follows: "O Lord, teach us to feel the need of thy grace, and seek it; to know thy will, and to do it; to find our place and keep it. Amen." The language and sentiment of this short prayer were decidedly appropriate, and no one could have grown weary while listening to it. But this could not in truth be said of long prayers which we sometimes hear—Advent Review.

☞ Small acts of kindness, how pleasant and desirable do they make life. Every dark object is made light by them, and every tear of sorrow is brushed away. When the heart is sad, and despondency sits at the entrance to the soul, a trifling kindness drives away despair and makes the path cheerful and pleasant.

HOW A BOSTON D. D. GAVE UP TOBACCO.

The devotee of tobacco who trifles with the habit is a slave laughing in his chains. The man who pours scorn on the Anti-Tobacco Reform shows a pitiable ignorance of what is indispensable to elevate and save our race.

In my abject slavery I was not given to smoke. An English gentleman once offered Orestes Bronson his snuff-box. "No, no!" said the Catholic priest. "I don't serve the devil in that shape; I chaw." I came under the same category with Orestes, and belonged to that portion of the animal creation that "chew the cud." I rolled the sin as a sweet morsel under my tongue twenty years and more. It gave me as a city pastor intolerable annoyance; and was, I may say in truth, a blighting curse upon my ministry. My sorrows and tribulations in this quarter were many and severe, and it may not be amiss to state a few as examples.

In my parochial duties I would sometimes be walking up Washington street and see a deacon of my church with whom I must come in close quarters, and in so doing expose my abominable habit. Indignant, chagrined, I would spitefully eject my quid, resolve never to resume its use, do my best to cleanse my mouth and protect my breath, and cordially greet my deacon. The evening would pass, the night would pass, with but little trouble. The morning, however, would come with unearthly and insatiable cravings; and it seemed as though I would "give my kingdom" for a bit of pig tail or Cavendish! I would take to my study, feverish and half delirious, and drive for a sermon or lecture. But it was all in vain; all thought was spell-bound. I would walk the diagonal of my room, rub my throbbing temples, and at last, in utter despair, rap upon the banister and cry, "John! John! get me some tobacco!"

The tobacco would come, and I would eat it as greedily as an ox eats green clover. My delirium tremens would pass away, my mind become calm and clear, and I would drive on my sermon respecting self-denial, or consecration to God, or battling the "world, the flesh, and the devil," in Jehu style! O! I now hate tobacco! It makes hypocrites of ministers; it made a hypocrite of me!

A short time would pass on, and a similar flare-up would occur. I would see before me in my walks some sister of my church, who would expect a few kind words from her pastor, in an interview rather unavoidable. But the thought would occur, O! she will see my mouth! She will detect a habit which she loathes, and which I try to despise. I would cast out the abomination; I would resolve never to use another particle—never; and, with the apparent innocency of a child, greet the sister with usual salutations as her pastor and friend. I repeat it, I abhor tobacco! It makes hypocrites of ministers; it made me a hypocrite!

These are specimens of my battles with this most popular poison on the globe. At length, however, I fought the last battle with this Apollyon. It was in this wise. I called on a dying man, a member of my church. The good brother, on the verge of the grave, made many confessions; and among the rest he said: "Tobacco has been an idol with me. It has brought me to this death-bed, and I shall die a happier man if I leave my testimony against it; and I wish my testimony to be written." I wrote from his dictation. We raised him from his pillow; and the last time he ever used his pen he affixed his name to a humble confession that he had sinned against God in ruining his health and cutting short his life by the use of tobacco.

This was a trying moment. My reflections were painful. I was in agony. A dying brother giving his testimony against a sin of which I, his pastor, am guilty! I resolved then as I never resolved before. I called God to witness that I renounced tobacco totally and forever; and, God be thanked! I can now say in truth, I renounced it totally and forever.

The next morning I took my study. The conflict was terrible. Hell seemed to be let loose upon my soul. Delirium tremens was getting the complete mastery. I saw, or thought I saw, Satan enter my study and present to my choice "Cavendish," "Ladies' Twist," "Honey Dew," and all the infernal paraphernalia of a fashionable tobacco saloon. I heard him, or thought I heard him say: "Come, Doctor, why do you spurn me? Try me again." You can think, you can write, if you try me again. At this point God gave me unwonted courage and resolution. I remembered Luther's successful conflict when he hurled his inkstand at the devil, and I cried aloud: "You black, slimy, nauseous fiend, begone, begone!" And the tobacco demon left my study, and left me, forever; an epoch in my ministry.

Reader, if you never used tobacco, but sit in judgment upon my statement and count it visionary, allow me to tell you that you are as ignorant as a Hottentot upon this whole matter.

On the other hand, if you are a victim o the "weed," and call us extravagant, we ask you to make the experiment—give it up as a finality, once and forever. Otherwise, good friend, please hold your peace.—N. Y. Independent.

PARTING WORDS OF JESUS.

The comfort wherewith I have been comforted of God. "Verly, verily, I say unto you, that ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice; and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy A woman when she is in travail hath sorrow, because her hour is come; but as soon as she is delivered of the child, she remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world. And ye now therefore have sorrow; but I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you. And in that day ye shall ask me nothing. Verily, verily, I say unto you, whatever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you. Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name; ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full. These things have I spoken unto you in proverbs; but the time cometh, when I shall no more speak unto you in proverbs, but I shall show you plainly of the Father. At that day ye shall ask in my name; and I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you; for the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God. I came forth from the Father, and are come into the world; again, I leave the world, and go to the Father. His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no proverb. Now are we sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee; by this we believe that thou camest forth from God. Jesus answered them, Do ye now believe? Behold, the hour cometh, yea, is now come, that ye shall be scattered, every man to his own, and shall leave me alone; and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me. These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer. I have overcome the world."

All glory to the name of Jesus! Amen.

Your sister, E. S. Willard.

☞ With men you keep accounts; every item is entered in your day-book that it may not be forgotten; but what you do for one of the least of Christ's disciples, if it be giving no more than a cup of cold water, is entered in God's book of remembrance, "and shall in no wise lose its reward."

PHYSIOLOGICAL LETTERS.—No. 6.

The causes of sleep are divided into predisposing, proximate and ultimate.

The predisposing causes are darkness, and silence, and muscular rest. Habitual sensations are to be reckoned in the same class—the continuance of an accustomed sound, for instance. It is owing to the power of habit that some persons can sleep more soundly in the neighborhood of noisy mills, or cataracts, than elsewhere; the attention of the individual being more attracted by the suspension of the sound than by its continuance. For as the exercise of the attention implies an awakened and concentrated consciousness during such exercise, sleep is in the nature of the case impossible (See No. 2 of the series.) Other predisposing causes are gentle, tranquilizing sounds—such as the piping of crickets, the rustling of foliage, the hum of bees, hearing a dull book read, etc., which conduce to sleep by making a series of monotonous impressions on the sensorium, which are neither interesting enough, nor powerful enough, to keep the attention alive (a). These soothing sounds at the same time have the tendency to call away the mind from the distinct consciousness of its own operations, which very state is, as Dr. Carpenter observes, the transition stage to complete unconsciousness. (b.)

The muscular and tactile senses may often be lulled to sleep by a uniform succession of gentle movements, as of rubbing the forehead or hands—a practice which is often resorted to by nervous persons. By these external impressions the mind is withdrawn from the consciousness of its own operations, and the directing power of the will is suspended. On the same principle, some persons are in the habit of counting numbers, or repeating texts of Scriptures: a practice, by the way, which, from experience, we cannot recommend.

TURKISH BATHS.

Bro. Grant:—As your columns are always open to everything good and beneficial to the family of man, I offer for publication my opinion of the "Turkish Baths," based upon a year's experience. I offer it for the benefit of the suffering among the children of men. You have been acquainted with my condition, as as invalid, for a few years past, and you learn from others, as well as myself, my present condition. In short, let me say that, for a few years past, I have suffered more than a majority of the time from what is called "Nervous Dyspepsia," which, with all its attendants, is perhaps a condition more to be dreaded, and the consequences more to be feared, than any other disease known. Says one, It is only the "Blues"; "some serious trouble"; "mind disturbed"; "don't get out enough"; "thinks too much"; "makes it all"; "don't believe any thing about it"; "can't be a christian, possibly, and fret and act so."

During the years of my affliction, all of these things have been said to me, and much more. I pity the man, woman or child, who has the misfortune to be thus afflicted. Such ones demand the greatest amount of care and sympathy. What can be done for them? Very many, nearly all, can be benefited some, many cured. By a strict observance of the laws of life, as near as we can ascertain them, we may live much longer, and much better, than when we are careless and risk the consequences.

We should avoid in our eating and drinking every thing that would knowingly injure us. Among the helps to be found, I think of no one which is more beneficial than a proper use of the "Turkish Bath," so called; or more properly, a sweat. For years, considerable of the time my disease has caused depression, sadness, and gloom, which needs to be experienced to know what I mean. With nothing to trouble me, I would find myself sorrowful; no enjoyment any where; no desire to live, but the very opposite. To depart this life was all I wanted. But no, I was chained. Unfortunate man! no hope in life; no sympathy of consequence from a surrounding world. My business left uncared for, I only breathed, but did not live. O how many will say—"My case exactly." Friends, you have my deepest sympathy; and if it could be a divine sympathy, such as our Savior has for our race, you should have it most gladly; and I will do even more for you than sympathy could ever do. "Faith without works is dead."

Learn how to eat, and what to eat. Learn how to use religiously all that God has given you to use. Take nothing into the system as food or drink of a doubtful nature, much less known to be injurious; such as alcohol in all its forms; tobacco, at present working ruin to our race faster than any one thing. Avoid it as you would the serpent of Eden. "Stand not in the way of sinners." Young men, dare to do right. Young ladies, if you seek as companions the virtuous, the kind, the even-tempered, those who will invariably make you happy, do not, I entreat you, choose one who uses "alcohol" or "tobacco." If you do, nine out of ten times you will be disappointed.

Now there are helps for us who have trampled thus upon the laws of life, and I know of no one that equals the "Turkish Bath." Gentlemen, go to No. 17 Essex St., or (for ladies and gentlemen) to 1427 Washington St., Boston, and you will find an institution which, in my opinion, stands first among the helps to throw off and ward off disease. One year ago (June 10th, 1867), I was one of the most miserable and sorry men, and had been for about eight months—long months those. I was induced to try the bath. I went to 1427 Washington St., in company with Bro. Hale (God bless him for his large heart of sympathy); and without believing it possible to be very much, if any, benefited, I went through the process, and greatly to my advantage; for whereas I was blind, I left there beginning to see.

For the year past I have continued them, not as often as I wished, but so often that, with the exception of three days, I have been engaged in active business, and now, to-day, am feeling as well as usual. My age is fifty-six, or nearly; have labored hard at farm labor; most of the time feel young and vigorous. I am not well, but by frequently using the baths, and care about my other habits, I keep off the sadness which has so long sunk me out of sight almost.

Now do not understand me as saying that the use of the bath will cure all of the ills of life. All cannot be cured. Nature, or God through the laws that pertain to our bodies, will throw off disease ordinarily, if enabled to have free action. [illegible] The bath, I claim, only removes the obstructions and lets the machine run. Medicine never does more, and rarely does as much, without leaving a sting behind which cannot be removed. The bath cleanses, and prepares the system to do its own work.

Invalids of every kind, do as I have done; try it. It is a universal panacea, not curing any, but preparing the body to cure itself. Don't fear to sweat. It will not hurt you. Don't say that you can sweat just as well at home, or that you sweat enough in your labor. It is not so. Go and try it. Have faith. Go all through; finish up in the plunge bath. Into it, and immediately out; don't stop there.

If the city of Boston would furnish four public "Turkish Baths" of the first order in the city, the records of death and crime would not be so alarming as now, providing the masses would use them. O how much there is that is wrong, that might be made better. My case is before the world. It is a real one.

W. G. Woodward.

We are acquainted with Bro. Woodward, and know him to be a man whose word is reliable. He has stated his case truthfully. —Ed.

THE TEETH.

A writer in Harper for June says: The too early loss of the first teeth has an unfavorable influence upon the beauty and duration of the second. The youngest children should accordingly be made to take care of them. All that is necessary is to brush them several times a day with a little ordinary soap or magnesia and water. Grown people should clean their teeth at least five times in the course of the twenty-four hours, on rising in the morning and going to bed at night, and after each meal. A brush as hard as can be borne without pain should be used, and the best of all applications is pure soap and water, always lukewarm.

After eating, the particles of food should be carefully removed from the teeth by means of a toothpick of quill or wood, but never of metal, and by a thread passed now and again between the teeth. Tooth powders of all kinds are injurious both to the enamel and the gums, and if employed every particle of them should be removed from the mouth by careful rinsing. The habit which some women have of using a bit of lemon, though it may whiten the teeth and give temporary firmness and color to the gums, is fatal to the enamel, as are all acids. No one, young or old, should turn their jaws into nut-crackers; and it is dangerous even for women to bite off, as they often do, the ends of the thread in sewing. It is not safe to bring very hot food or drink, especially if immediately followed by anything cold, in contact with the teeth.

Wholesome gums are more essential even than the teeth to the beauty of the mouth. They should be of a firm texture, and a lively red color, and well spread over the base of each tooth, but they are often pale or livid, shrunken, fleshless, and sometimes even ulcerated. The excessive use of sugar and candies does great mischief. It is not only the bad effect of the acids produced by their decomposition, but the grittiness of these substances which wears away the gum, bares the roots of the tooth, and spoils the mouth. This is the chief danger of the use of tooth powders. Livid gums will be benefited by occasional, but not too frequent, hard rubbing and pricking with a tooth pick until they bleed slightly.

DISEASE BY ALCOHOL.

The strength experienced after the use of alcohol is not new strength added to the system, but is manifested by calling into exercise the nervous energy pre-existing.

The ultimate exhausting effects of alcohol produce an unnatural susceptibility to morbid action in all the organs, and this, with the plethora superinduced, becomes a fertile source of disease.

A person who habitually exerts himself so as to require the daily use of stimulants to ward off exhaustion, may be compared to a machine working under high pressure. He will become much more liable to disease and will certainly break down sooner for it. The more frequently alcohol is used for debility; the more it will be required.

Cure for Neuralgia.—Some time since we published, at the request of a friend, a receipt to cure neuralgia. Half a drachm of sal ammonia, in an ounce of camphor water, to be taken a tea-spoonful at a dose, and the dose to be repeated several times, at intervals of five minutes, if the pain be not relieved at once. Half-a-dozen different persons have since tried the receipt, and in every case an immediate cure was effected. In one, the sufferer, a lady, had been affected for more than a week, and her physician was unable to alleviate her sufferings, when a solution of sal-ammonia in camphor water relieved her in a few minutes.—Alta California.

THE INVITATION.

Come unto me, ye weary,
The Savior smiling said;
Come unto me, ye hungry,
And feed on heavenly bread.

Come unto me, ye weary,
And drink of living streams;
Come, ye who dwell in darkness,
Where light eternal beams.

Come, ye who sit in darkness,
And I will give you joy;
Come, ye who live in sorrow,
Where sorrow ne'er shall cloy.

Come, ye who're sick of sinning,
And I'll your sins forgive;
Come unto me, ye dying,
Come, and forever live.

Come, ye who seek for riches,
My wealth can never fail;
All things are my possession,—
Go tell the wondrous tale.

Come, ye who seek for glory,
Seek that which cannot dim;
Seek not mid scenes of bloodshed,
Or in the haunts of sin.

Come, ye who have afflictions,
Cast your care upon the Lord,
And he will help you bear them—
He's promised in his word.

Those who in him do rest their hope,
Shall have a lasting home
(When present things are passed away),
In that bright world to come.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
Treasurer A. C. Association.

On the acceptance of this report, the Association listened to the following Report of the President of the A. C. P. S.

Mr. President, and Brethren of the Advent Christian Association:—

Through the abounding mercy of God, we are permitted to assemble at the commencement of another fiscal year, to associate in the fraternal and Christian relations contemplated by the constitution and laws of this Society.

The Advent Christian Publication Society being subordinate to your Association, it becomes the duty of its officers to report to you its operations, its financial condition, and the prospects and wants of its several departments. As the executives of the different branches of its business will lay before you, in their annual reports, all the statistics and transactions of importance in their several departments, and also suggest the wants and demands of our holy cause the ensuing year; you will expect no more from me than a few remarks upon general principles and future prospects.

The principles underlying this Association, I trust, are not selfish, nor human and earthly; but self-sacrificing, heavenly, and divine. You have not fraternally united, that you might the more safely combine for worldly speculations, or to increase your enjoyment of present pleasures, or the gaining of wealth and honors; but that you may the more effectually discharge your whole duty to the present generation, in warning it of coming judgment, and leading the church of Christ to wait for God's Son from heaven.

We are a Publication Society; therefore our object is to make public that which is private, to speak abroad that which is hidden, to cause many to understand that which is known by few. Our special work is the publication of the last edition of Heaven's prophetic revelation to man. It is no common work. The holiest men of past generations have, none of them, been called to it. God has reserved it for the church of this last age; and we occupy a prominent place in its ranks. The message we are commissioned to publish is all divine, coming from the holy place, glowing with heavenly radiance, and flashing its living light around the world, while its heaven-toned voice sounds out the sweet note, saying, "The time has come when sin and death must end, and Messiah's long-prayed-for reign commence."

How insignificant and unworthy do the instrumentalities we bring, for the accomplishment of this great and glorious work, appear! But we can do no more than to lay upon the altar ourselves, our means, our papers, and our books and tracts, with all that we can command, that they may speak, silently or orally, and teach the great truths embodied in the gospel of the kingdom.

The World's Crisis is our most important and necessary organ of publication, through which the last note of warning to a perishing world is being sounded. Its importance demands that a prayerful and earnest effort be made to increase, if possible, its attractions and its instructiveness, and, with a little perseverance, its subscription list.

The Young Pilgrim is an important and valuable child's paper, designed to reach the children and youth, and turn their minds to Christ and truth; thus staying the fearful tide of infidelity now so fatally sweeping over all classes, old and young. The object is a noble one, and ought to be sustained. May God help you wisely to provide for its support, and labor to increase its circulation.

We have many excellent books, which have been widely circulated and extensively read; which have accomplished great good, and doubtless will continue to do so. But as time rolls on, and society progresses, new works are demanded to fill the vacuum constantly forming between the interpreted past and the present. God will hold us accountable for any neglect in the production and circulation of such books.

Our Sabbath Schools should be provided with libraries, containing less FICTION and more GOSPEL.

In the Tract department, praiseworthy progress has been made. A number of new tracts have been published, and sent out to tell the story of Calvary and a coming judgment; but I fear that many of us are still guilty of not doing our whole duty in this department. The last gospel message is unwelcome to this world; therefore but few men, of sufficient talents to become efficient teachers of its truths, can be induced to sacrifice their name and standing in society in order to become its advocates.

But these truths, in some way, must be proclaimed; and if but few men can be found who will preach them, then God will see, and he has seen, that the types are prepared, and the presses invented, so that this great work may be accomplished by these silent messengers, and tracts and publications scattered among the people like the rustling leaves of autumn.

O, brethren in Christ, the time has come when God wants active and earnest men in his cause; men who are willing to work, and wait for Jesus to reward them. Then rise above self and selfish interests. Rise by grace superior to yourselves. Gain a victory over the last day's jealousies and a carnal will. Take your pens; take them in the name of Christ, and go to your closets and pray. Pray earnestly for an unction from the Holy Ghost to guide you in writing truth—truth due at this "season." Publish it to the world, and Jesus will reward you.

Friends are needed, and needed immediately to do this great work. God is making large appropriations, and drawing upon his earthly treasures. HONOR HIS DRAFTS, and refuse not at your peril. And now may the blessed Jesus guide you with heavenly wisdom in all things unto the end.

All of which, for the sake of Christ and your salvation, is respectfully submitted.

JOHN COUCH.

The President's Report was most heartily accepted, after which the meeting heard the following Report of the Secretary.

There have been three meetings of the Society during the year,—the first, at Wilbraham; the second, in Boston; and the third, here, yesterday.

At the first meeting, in the American Advent Mission Tent, on Wilbraham Campground, August 21st, 1867, Bro. George T. Adams was re-elected to the office of Business Agent of the Society for the ensuing year; and, in consideration of the increase of time and labor spent in the discharge of the duties of said office, and also of the office of Treasurer, his salary was increased to $200 as Business Agent, and $300 as Treasurer.

Elder D. T. Taylor having resigned his office of Corresponding Editor of the World's Crisis, and signified that he would not accept of any further compensation for the same, the Treasurer was ordered to send a check to Bro. Taylor for the full amount of his services up to the time of this meeting.

In the afternoon, a meeting for consultation was had, in conjunction with Brn. Himes, Mansfield and Sheldon, of the Western Association. Letters from Bro. Taylor to Brn. Himes, Adams and Carpenter, were read and discussed, and the time taken up with a consideration of his case.

At the session, Friday, Aug. 23d, it was moved and carried, that we execute, through the Treasurer, the instructions of the Board to the Society in reference to the expenses of the members of the Council in the case of Elder D. T. Taylor.

The compensation of the Editor of the Young Pilgrim was increased to $10 for each issue; the usual sum of $10 was voted to the Secretary of the Advent Christian Association, and to the Secretary of the Advent Christian Publication Society, for their services the past year; and the following resolutions were adopted:—

Resolved, That the sum of $3000 be raised the coming year for the Tract Fund.

Resolved, That the Editorial Committee make special efforts the coming year to engage the best talent in the church in writing tracts on various subjects for publication.

Resolved, That all tracts or works offered to the Society for publication be submitted to the Editorial Committee, who shall decide upon their merits, and also upon the price to be paid the authors for the copyright of the same, if accepted; all tracts and works thus accepted and purchased, to be handed to the Business Agent with instructions for their issue.

Resolved, That an appeal be made to churches and conferences, that they may meet the expense of the Society in sending the Crisis free to the poor within their limits.

Resolved, That henceforth all applications for the Crisis free be made to the Business Agent, through the officers of some church or conference, or through some preacher or person known at the Crisis office.

At the second meeting of the Society, in the Crisis office, April 1, 1868, in order to meet the wants of the many in our congregations who desire a Hymn Book with coarser print, and without the notes, it was resolved that the hymns of the Jubilee Harp, without the music, and in large, clear type, be published in convenient form, for general use; and Brn. Herron, Adams and Hamblin were appointed a Committee to superintend the execution of the work.

At the meeting in this grove yesterday, in the New York Mission Tent, the Secretary's Minutes (of which this report in brief is the substance) were read, accepted, and adopted; and the reports of the Treasurer and Business Agent were also read, accepted, and adopted, and ordered to be read, as usual, before the Advent Christian Association.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM B. HERRON,
Secretary Adv. Chr. Pub. Society.

The Secretary's report was accepted, and Bro. Geo. T. Adams laid before us the state of the Treasury of the A. C. P. S.

CRISIS OFFICE, Boston, Aug. 20, 1868.

We, the subscribers, have examined the accounts of the Treasurer, and find them systematically kept, correctly cast, and properly vouched; and a balance in cash on hand of one hundred and four dollars, twenty-four cents. ($104.24.)

HENRY V. DAVIS, } Auditing
J. G. HAMBLIN, } Committee.

The Treasurer's Report being accepted and adopted, was followed by the Business Agent's Report.

Brethren of the Advent Christian Publication Society:

Another year having passed, and being continued through the mercy of "our heavenly Father," it devolves upon me as the executive officer of the Society to report to you the business transacted during the past year.

The capital with which we commenced the business of the year, as given in our last report, was $13,148.67; while our present capital we put as follows:—(for the items of which see Treasurer's report.)

Property on hand, valued at	$9427.17
Cash in the Treasury	104.24
Amount due the Crisis, valued at	4200.00
" " " Pilgrim, valued at	125.00
" " " Book account	475.00
Total capital	$14,331.41

Our receipts the past year have been $21,324.89, which are $1,364.74 less than the previous years, when our receipts on the Tract Fund were unusually large, owing to legacies received from the estates of deceased brethren, being $1640.84 more than the entire amount received on the Tract Fund this year; thus showing that, if we except the Tract Fund, our receipts the past year were larger than in the year before, and the largest received in any one year since the Society commenced business.

THE BOOK AND TRACT DEPARTMENT.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Society, held in April last, it was voted that the "Hymns of the Jubilee Harp" be published in a volume, without the music, to accommodate those who do not wish for the notes, but who do very much desire large, plain type; and who also wish to procure a hymn book at a less price than the Harp has been sold for.

The committee appointed to perform the work of getting out the Hymn Book have attended to the duty assigned them, and the book is now ready. The type-work was performed in our own office, in a most creditable manner, and we have printed an edition of some 1600 copies, on beautiful paper, which we now present to the brethren and sisters as the best and most perfect Hymn Book ever offered to the Advent believers; and at, perhaps, the lowest price of any similar work of the kind and size for sale by any Society or firm. The indications are that it will have a large sale, and supply a want long felt.

We have issued during the past year 3,001,260 pages of tracts; some of which are new ones, namely, "The Kingdom of God," "Seed Time and Harvest," and "What says the Gospel?" We have published the past year two editions of the "Jubilee Harp"—some 4100 copies. The sale of 10,000 copies of this work, during the two years it has been before the public, is good proof that it is highly esteemed by our people. We have also printed a second volume of "Young Pilgrim Stories," and also in tract form.

The value of books and tracts on hand at the beginning of the fiscal year was reported at $3,306.33. The cost of books and tracts made, purchased and donated during the year, is $5,097.98. Due on book sales, less than last year, $262.44. Total books and tracts, $8,666.75. The receipts for books and tracts were $6,465.49. Amount received from Tract Fund for tracts granted, $690.08. Total sales and grants, $7,155.57. Value of books, tracts and papers on hand, $3,552.17. Total, $10,707.74.

It will appear from the above that, while the book business has been somewhat smaller than in the previous year, it has been more profitable in a pecuniary point of view.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

Since our last annual report, the subscription lists of the Crisis have been completely overhauled, quite a number of names stricken off, errors corrected, and a new system of keeping the accounts of subscribers adopted. A new mailing machine, new type with which to set the names of each subscriber, and other conveniences, have been procured at quite an expense, which, however, we trust will be more than met by the benefit which the subscribers and the office will receive in consequence of the new arrangement adopted.

We now print a weekly edition of some 8200 copies. The number of free subscribers on our list at the present time is 727, being a decrease of some 150 since last year; some having paid, others discontinued at their request,—no worthy poor being stricken off, whenever they have made known their wish for the continuance of the paper.

The receipts for the Crisis during the year have been, on subscription, $13,106.24; on the poor fund, $145.95. Total, $13,252.19. The expenditures about $12,500, not including the extra expense of mailing apparatus. There is a large amount due the paper from its subscribers, who have the date from which they are owing the paper stamped upon the issue of each week. Let all such remember that while the Advent Christian Publication Society gladly send the paper to the poor free, so far as it has the ability, the Society most earnestly requests those who can to pay up their arrearages at once, and thus help the office, not only to continue the paper to those who are not able to pay for it, but to send to others who really want it, and who are constantly applying for a free Crisis.

We regret that we are not able to report a larger increase in our subscription list, but we fully believe that were the friends of the Crisis to take hold of the matter of extending its circulation earnestly and faithfully as they might, its subscription list could easily be put up to 10,000 within a few months. One earnest worker recently remarked that he was going to obtain one hundred new subscribers for the Crisis; and we doubt not that he will do it. Let all do the best they can to circulate the only paper issued in the New England States that proclaims fearlessly and outspokenly the great and present truths designed by our heavenly Father for this generation.

THE YOUNG PILGRIM.

The subscription list of the Young Pilgrim has also been revised. Last year we were sending out 520 free papers. At present, our free list is 121; some 400 less. We now print an edition of some 5800, semi-monthly. The receipts for the year are $1194.02; the expenditures about $1500. The Pilgrim appears to be doing a good work, and it is due the children of Advent congregations that one child's paper at least, free from the theological errors of the day, should be sent them regularly; and we hope that in every city or town where the gospel of the coming and kingdom of Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me," is proclaimed, and our people gather their children in the Sunday School, there a package of Young Pilgrims may be found, one for each child, to gladden their hearts and instruct them in the pathway to the heavenly city.

THE TRACT FUND.

The amount received on the Tract Fund the past year, we are sorry to say, is very small, being only $413.19. Last year our receipts were larger than ever before, in consequence of legacies received from the estates of brethren deceased. The amount of tracts granted for free distribution the past year is $690.08; $276.89 more than the receipts. There was, however, a balance from the two previous years, from which this deficiency has been made up. Our tracts have been scattered widely in various parts of the country, and received gladly. We hope that, should time continue another year, several times as many as have been sent out the past year will be put into the hands of those who may be profited thereby. The brethren and sisters have responded to various other calls made upon their liberality; yet we feel that the Tract Fund is one of the most important presented for their support, and we do hope that there will be a renewed effort to provide means, so that tracts, filled with the present truth, may be in readiness for free distribution everywhere.

THE POOR FUND.

The amount received for this fund the past year is $145.95,—about the same as that of last year. Could the brethren and sisters see the many letters we are receiving from those among us, scattered in different parts of the country, some in places where the writers have no brethren and sisters of like precious faith to meet with, expressing hearty thanks for the Crisis received, they with us would feel that to supply the wants of all such with a copy of our family paper, is among the most pleasant duties we have to perform; and that there may be no lack of means to supply all such, we do earnestly solicit the brethren and sisters, those who have the means, not to forget the "Poor Fund," but be more liberal in this direction than for the past two years.

THE EUROPEAN MISSION.

The amount received for this mission the past year is $598.30, of which we have sent Bro. Czechowski $593.24, some $5.00 having been received since we remitted. Bro. Czechowski has reported his labors in the Crisis from time to time. We doubt not that he is a faithful servant in the cause of the Master, and that he has need of all the assistance which you may be able to afford him. May the Lord direct in this, as in all other matters before us, as shall be for his glory and the good of all.

Brethren, in looking over the work of the Society for the past year, we feel more fully than ever the importance of being more active and zealous in presenting the great truths of God's word which distinguish us as a people, and feel that all of our publications—papers, books, and tracts—should be clear and distinct in their enunciation of the present truth which our heavenly Father designs for this generation; and may the Lord so direct, that the future operations of this Society, by whomsoever carried forward, shall tell more fully than ever before to the glory of the coming One, and the salvation of perishing mortals.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
Business Agent A. C. P. S.

Boston, Aug. 17th, 1868.

CRISIS OFFICE, Boston, Aug. 20, 1868.

We, the undersigned, have examined the accounts of George T. Adams, Agent of the Advent Christian Publication Society, as embodied in the foregoing Report, and find them correct, according to the best of our knowledge and belief.

HENRY V. DAVIS, } Auditing
J. G. HAMBLIN, } Committee.

The Business Agent's report was accepted and adopted. The following nominations were reported for officers of the A. C. A., viz:—

For President.—S. G. MATHEWSON.
For Vice President.—M. BATCHELOR.
For Secretary.—H. F. CARPENTER.
For Treasurer.—GEO. T. ADAMS.
For Directors.—H. H. Dickenson, J. Couch, Wm. A. Fenn, J. G. Hamblin, A. W. Sibley, Jonas Wendell, C. S. Sherman, W. H. Mitchell, H. V. Davis.
For Editor of Crisis.—MILES GRANT.

Ballots for officers of the A. C. A. were received by Brn. Leverton, Wiswell and Narramore, appointed by the Chair for this purpose; and ballots for Editor were received by Brn. Andrews, Hall and Collier, likewise appointed.

The committee on nominations for the A. C. P. S. reported—

For President.—J. COUCH.
For Secretary.—W. B. HERRON.
For Treasurer.—GEO. T. ADAMS.
For Editorial Committee.—S. G. Mathewson, W. H. Mitchell, A. Ross.
For Publishing Committee.—H. V. Davis, H. F. Carpenter, J G. Hamblin, M. Batchelor, I. C. Wellcome.

Ballots for the A. C. P. S. were received by Brn. McKinstry, Pratt, and Hale, the committee appointed on this ballot.

The Chair was authorized to appoint a committee of three to nominate a campmeeting committee of seven to be elected at the stand.

The committee on ballots for the A. C. A. declared the nominations elected. The ballot committee for Editor declared Miles Grant elected. The ballot committee for the A. C. P. S. declared the nominations elected.

Thursday, 8½ A. M. Prayer being offered, the elections of yesterday were read by the Clerk. Bro. I. C. Wellcome declined to serve as elected yesterday. His resignation was accepted, and Bro. H. H. Dickenson was chosen by ballot, as his substitute, and on motion declared unanimously elected.

H. H. Dickenson, Jonas Wendell, and I. Damman, were appointed the committee to nominate a campmeeting committee of seven to be reported for election at the stand.

On motion, the thanks of the A. C. A. were tendered to its Boards of Officers for their faithful services the past year; whereupon the meeting adjourned sine die.

H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

RESURRECTION OF THE UNJUST.

Will there be a resurrection of two classes to opposite destinies? We do not hesitate to answer in the affirmative. The Scriptures, we think, are plain and emphatic upon this point, those who have done good shall come forth unto a resurrection of life, and those who have done evil unto a resurrection of condemnation, (John v: 29,) is the explicit testimony of him who spoke by authority. How any one who reads the Word carefully can call in question the resurrection of the unjust we do not see. But, says one, who writes us of late, "where does the Bible teach that the wicked, if raised from the dead, will die again?" Why did not our correspondent ask us where the Bible teaches that Lazarus, whom Jesus raised, ever died again? Does our correspondent think that Lazarus never died? Most assuredly he does not. He knows that Lazarus, being restored to this life, must of necessity, being mortal, die again. Just so it will be with the unjust. They come forth to a resurrection of condemnation, hence, being reckoned unworthy of eternal life, they must of necessity die again. But upon this point we have what does not appear in the case of Lazarus, namely: plain teaching, affirming that the wicked shall experience the second death. John says he "saw the dead, small and great, stand before God, and the books were opened, and another book was opened, which is the book of life, and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works, and whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire," and this, says John, "is the second death." Rev. xx: 12-15.

If our friends, who deny the resurrection of the unjust, would hear the Spirit's words upon this subject, they would not be standing in the unenviable attitude of opposition to the truth. But almost all manner of special pleading is resorted to by them in order to do away with the plain teaching upon this point. Everything is a parable or symbol to them that affirms the resurrection of the unjust. Besides they have a wonderful supply of sympathy for the wicked dead, so that what they cannot do by the word of God, they seek to accomplish by their ideas of love and justice. They think it an outrage upon justice, that wicked men, who are amenable to the law of God, should be called into judgment, at the last day. "O," say they, "raise a man up to kill him again? Why, it is awful to think of it." By such talk as this, one would conclude that we were guilty of charging God with the work of killing men twice. Who affirms that God kills men twice? Does the Lord kill men when they die now? Most assuredly not. Why then talk about killing them again? If our friends can prove that God kills men now, we will admit that they have gained their point. But such is not the case. God does not single out men here and there, and murder them. When the Lord punishes men with death, that's the end of them, but this he does not until they experience the second death. Away then, with such a false issue, as the Lord's killing men twice. Lazarus, we have no doubt, died twice, but we do not believe that God killed him either time. Hence the great plea of love and justice, which our non-resurrection friends make in behalf of the wicked dead is all uncalled for; it is a great ado about nothing.

"He that overcometh," says Jesus, "shall not be hurt of the second death." But suppose we do not overcome, what follows? If they who overcome are not hurt of the second death, does it not, as a natural and logical sequence, follow that those who do not overcome, shall be hurt of the second death? It seems to us that every reflecting mind must be able to see the force of this language of the revelator's. But if there was no text in all the Bible, that alluded to the second death, it would still follow as a natural result, that the unjust, being restored to life, and that life being a mortal one, must of necessity come to an end. This point is too plain for further comment.—Herald of the Kingdom.

HYPOCRISY.

The most detestable of all hypocrites is the person who is all devotion and piety and smiles abroad, and cross and churlish and fretful at home. There are such among both men and women. Abroad they try to pass for saints; at home they lay aside the mask, and act out the evil nature that is in them. The conduct of such persons is detestable. He who is polite to other women, and is neglectful of her whom he has solemnly vowed "to love, cherish and protect," richly merits all the domestic unhappiness from which he suffers.

The direction which Paul gives to the children of widows is equally applicable to all: "Let them learn first to show piety at home." Be courteous—especially with your own household. Study to make every one around you happy. Use kind words and gentle tones. Make all the provision you can for their comfort. Teach your children, by example as well as by precept, to deny themselves for the good of others. Insist firmly upon the obedience of your children; but let it be in love. Would you know the measure of conjugal affection? You find it in the untold love which Christ felt for those for whom he suffered and died. Husbands love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it.—Earnest Christian.

COME TO JESUS.

Dear sinner, will you come? Will you come to him now? O how oft he has invited you to come! How many he has employed to extend this invitation, "Come to Jesus." How can ye delay? Why not come now? It is God's time. The best time you ever will have. . . . I am deeply impressed in view of the shortness of time, and a long eternity, to invite, urge, and plead with you to come to Jesus. Dear friends, what shall I say to induce you to come now? Most of all, I would invite you to think of God's goodness in our creation, preservation, and redemption. How can you despise the riches of his goodness, his forbearance and long suffering? What hard hearts you must have! Do you say that you have many things to prevent you? Here you make a great mistake. You cannot name one thing to prevent you but your own wills. Jesus says, "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." You may say, even now, you soon expect to repent. Simply waiting for something extraordinary to turn up to awaken and bring you to Christ. Precious sinner, what do you mean? Are you waiting for death to remove some of your loved ones; or some great calamity to befall you to bring you to Christ?

Do you not remember "that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance? Hence, dear sinner, you have no excuse. His goodness has followed you. It is great. The earth is full of his goodness. All should praise him for his goodness. Let me say once more to friends, as well as strangers, to all out of Christ, What can you do now? what will you do in death? O what will you do in eternity if you do not come to Jesus?—The Church.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Sept. 23, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable in ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.00 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is no safety for their money, if those names are given. Neither is it safe to use your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too. Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

THE MISSION FIELD.

The South has now become the great mission field. The harvest is all ripe for faithful reapers. Those who read Bro. P. A. Smith's letters in the last Crisis, will get some idea of the state of things in the South. If one is ready to do real missionary work, and can go, now is the time, and he will find the doors in the South are open, and the Macedonian cry is earnest. Who will go and carry the glad tidings to the perishing? If one is going to take sides in political matters, he had better remain at home; but if he is willing to go and labor for the salvation of sinners, white or black, and live and talk as a true christian, he will not labor in vain. The time has come when the white people at the South are ready and anxious to hear about the coming of Jesus. Shall they have a chance to hear? Are there not those who feel the fire burning in their hearts, who can go South the coming winter and spend a few months in scattering tracts, and proclaiming the good news that Jesus is coming soon? Let us hear from such at once; and we will do what we can to aid them in the good work.

Those who labor exclusively among the colored race will not be able to reach the white population; but if they go to the latter, and get them interested first, then the colored people will catch it from them, and after the whites get hold of it, they exert a restraining influence over the freedmen, which is still much needed, as we learn from those best prepared to speak on this subject.

Who will go and help save the people in the South? Shall they hear the glad tidings? Sr. Hastings and others intend to go to S. C. soon. She has been and found there an open door, as has Bro. Smith in Florida. It will be seen from Bro. Smith's letter that he must return home immediately; who will go and take his place? Shall the call for help be in vain?

Let those who cannot go themselves give the means to send others and to scatter tracts. Great good can be accomplished by means of the tracts. Let them have a general circulation through the South, and blessed results will follow.

Dear Brn. and Srs. we ought to do more this year for Jesus than ever before. His coming must be near; and let us withhold no reasonable effort that we can make to save the people in the South, which is now emphatically the missionary field.

MY PILGRIM NOTES.

Sabbath, Sept. 13th, we spent with the church in Chelsea, Mass., and found a healthy state of things. Some requested prayers, and others feel the need of the christian religion. The meetings during the day and evening were real seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. We had a good love-feast in the morning, and a number of warm hearted testimonies were given both before and after the evening discourse. The truth is spreading in Chelsea. On Tuesday evening (15th,) we were with them again, and had a good meeting. One requested prayers that she might become a christian. Others spoke who had been revived from a low state within two or three days.

The church voted to invite the Mass. State Conference to hold its next session in Chelsea.

Wednesday morning, Sept. 16th, we left Boston for Castleton, Vt. At Rutland we met Bro. M. Batchelor, on his way to Massena, N. Y. He is one of the true men, who are always ready to stand up for Jesus and his word. He is firm in the faith that we are near the end of the present dispensation.

On our arrival at Castleton, as usual, we received a hearty greeting from our dear Bro. and Sr. Mathewson, Bro. and Sr. Sherman and family, Dr. Smith, and many other dear saints. We found the church in a state of happy union with their pastor, and ardently looking for the coming of Jesus. The faithful labors and judicious course of Bro. Mathewson have been the means of removing a large amount of prejudice from those who were afraid of our influence, when we first commenced preaching in C. They are now satisfied that our faith may be believed and advocated by devoted christians, and many of them are well convinced that what we preached to them is the truth, and that our opponents are the ones who are advocating the fables. There has been a very happy change in public sentiment relative to the great truths which we love so well, and for the belief of which we have been called infidels, and unfit to have a place in respectable society. All this we can well afford to bear for the sake of Jesus and the light he has shown us upon his word. Those who have maintained a firm position in the defense of the "blessed hope," and lived a consistent christian life, now feel better satisfied than ever, that the Lord is pleased with their course, and have no desire to be on the side of those who are still opposed.

PENALTY FOR SIN.

Wherever there is a penalty for a crime, it is understood that he who does not commit the crime escapes the penalty. For instance, if the penalty for stealing is imprisonment in the jail; then a man can keep out of jail by abstaining from stealing. It will be his own fault if he gets into prison. If the penalty for murder is death upon the gallows, then it is understood that every individual can escape the penalty by avoiding murder. No penalty can be righteously attached to an act which a person is under the necessity of committing; as Cowper said, "A necessary act incurs no blame;" and consequently can deserve no penalty.

The penalty for Adam's disobedience was death; but no time was specified during which he was to remain dead. This penalty Adam could have avoided by obedience. Not so his posterity. If the first death had continued to be the penalty for sin, then all who obeyed the Lord, all pardoned ones through Jesus, and all innocent children would escape the penalty; but as it is, no matter how holy one lives, he cannot escape the first death; therefore that is not now the penalty for sin, and has not been since Adam's time.

As all die unconditionally, we shall all be raised unconditionally, then judged, and if found "unworthy of everlasting life," we must die "the second death," because we did not do as we might have done, and thus escaped the penalty. The Lord says, "Turn ye, turn ye . . . for why will ye die?" If he means the first death, the sinner could reply, I shall die if I do turn. I can't help myself. But if the sinner will turn from his evil ways, he can escape "the second death," which is to be experienced by the wicked after the day of judgment. We can see no chance to come to any other conclusion on this point. According to the Scriptures, "the second death" will not take place till after "the sea" shall give "up the dead which" are "in it, and death and hell" shall deliver "up the dead which" are "in them; and they" shall be "judged every man according to their works." Then following this judgment, comes the second death, which is the penalty for unpardoned sin since the days of Adam. This penalty all can escape who will obey and follow the Lord. Let us all live near to Jesus, shun the second death, and secure eternal life in the everlasting kingdom.

INFIDELITY SPREADING.

That infidelity is rapidly spreading on both continents is very apparent to any careful observer, and we see nothing to check its progress but the very truths for the belief of which some of us are called "infidels." Satan has always tried to sanctify error, and cause it to be honored among men, and to brand the truth with the title of infidelity. Let us not be sneered or ridiculed away from the good old way, but hold fast to the faith once delivered to the saints. The following from a devoted and able writer in one of our exchanges, says:—

"A distinguished American preacher, lately returned from Europe, has given an account of what he saw and heard. He gives us to understand in his work, entitled 'Impressions of Europe,' that the science and philosophy, the intelligence and the political tendencies, of the people of Germany, are all leaning against evangelicism,' as maintained in the Protestant church. He makes the painful statement that the universities, as a rule, are favoring the secular and non-religious view and feeling, and after referring to a report that one of the most venerable and popular of the professors had openly boasted of his atheism, and that few scholarly men, not tied to official necessities, have the courage to treat miracles with the least respect, and some other things looking in the same direction, he inquires: 'Is it possible for christianity as an institution or a religion to survive the prevalence of opinions so radically destructive as this?' This is a question so serious in its import that it is worthy of a thoughtful and serious answer. The contest undoubtedly is great, and the aspect of the sky is stormy."

NOTES, QUERIES AND OBJECTIONS.

20. Perhaps the strongest passage, or the one most relied on to prove the consciousness of man between death and the resurrection, is Rev. 6: 9–11. You will observe that the persons referred to had been "slain," (verse 9), or "killed" (verse 11.) And yet they reasoned, felt, and cried with a loud voice. What does the whole passage mean? Please give it a thorough sifting, and see whether it spoils or confirms the theory which you have adopted. A. A. PHELPS.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug., 1868.

Rev. 6: 9–11 reads as follows:—

"And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held: and they cried with a loud voice, saying, how long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow servants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were should be fulfilled."

If this is the strongest passage, or the one most relied on to prove the consciousness of man between death and the resurrection," we think the evidence rests on a very weak foundation. This scene was among the events under "the fifth seal." It represents the martyr ages. These martyrs were unborn at the time John beheld them in vision; but he saw what would actually take place when the "little horn" of Daniel should hold sway over the saints, as it afterwards did in the dark ages of persecution.

Let it be remembered that John "saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain." He does not say that he saw them in heaven with Jesus, but they were "under the altar." The "altar" represents the place where they "were slain." Were they slain in heaven? Certainly not, but upon the earth. Then that is where he saw them. This same class is brought to view again in Rev. 20: 4, as follows:

"And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshiped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years."

These are the same martyrs who had been "killed," according to the record in Rev. 6: 11; but at the coming of Christ they are made alive, and "reign with him a thousand years." It is said some of them "were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God."

All who have examined the subject carefully know that the word psukas, rendered souls in Rev. 6: 9, and 20: 4, is often used to represent the whole person. In both of these passages Prof. Whitney renders the word persons in his translation of the New Testament. It is certain that those souls "were slain," "killed," "beheaded," and did not live after that till the beginning of the thousand years, when the first resurrection took place; "but the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." This shows most plainly, that those who had "part in the first resurrection" had been dead from the time they "were slain" till they were raised from the dead at the second coming of Christ.

When they were being led to the slaughter, "they cried . . . how long" must this state of things continue? They were informed that they must 'rest' in the grave till others "should be killed as they were." That rest was to continue; or they must lie "under the altar" of sacrifice till the time named in Rev. 20: 4, when the same ones arise to reign with Christ.

THE SPRINGFIELD N. A. CAMP-MEETING.

In reply to the question as to how we are coming out in regard to paying the expenses of the meeting this year, we would say, that the bills are not yet all in; but from what we have received, we know that we have need of every dollar that was subscribed both this and last year, also all the assistance which there is any prospect of receiving from the Railroad companies. We hope, therefore, that those of our friends who have not as yet paid in their subscriptions, whether made this or last year, will please do so at once, that we may meet our bills, and report in full the expense of fitting up the ground, and all the expenses of the year. THE AUTOMATIC WASHING MACHINE.

We have seen many machines for washing clothes, designed to save labor, and yet do the work well. Some might be considered an improvement upon the old-fashioned way of rubbing them by hand; but the advantage was small. What was gained in one direction was lost in another. A few weeks ago, our attention was called to the "Automatic Clothes Washer." We hardly felt it would pay to spend even ten minutes to go and look at it, for we had lost all confidence in washing machines, excepting a pair of good hands, well sustained by muscular strength. But when we saw the machine, we watched its operations with real delight. Its simplicity and effectiveness filled us with astonishment, and we at once decided to adopt it for home use.

The following description will give some idea of its operations:—

"This boiler operates upon purely philosophical principles, is self-acting, and dispenses with labor and the wear of the clothes. The hot suds and steam, by the action of heat, are driven up through tubes, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing all articles perfectly, from the finest laces to a bed blanket, without any rubbing. For flannels it is invaluable, as it does not full them as in the old process of rubbing and pressing. The time required for cleansing a boiler full of clothes is twenty to thirty minutes, and nearly three hundred gallons of boiling suds are forced through the fabric, thoroughly eradicating the dirt without labor or friction. A thorough rinsing finishes the process.

Warranted to do work if directions are followed.

We give place to the following, from Sr. Woodward:—

THE AUTOMATIC CLOTHES WASHER.

Bro. Grant:—Knowing the readers of the Crisis to be a progressive people, to be first in all true reforms, I take the liberty to inform them, through its columns, of my experience with the above named "Washer," or rather Boiler. I am rather shy of new inventions which claim so much, especially of washing machines. It usually takes more time and strength to handle them than washing in the old way. And then the clothes always came out looking better from a good careful rubbing on an old-fashioned washboard, than all the general sousing I was able to give them in a machine. So I tried the last one I had heard of, rather prejudiced against it.

My washerwoman failed to come, and as my clothes had been soaked over night, I borrowed the improved Boiler, and commenced operations at nine o'clock A. M. I followed directions, putting the worst pieces even in to boil before they had been rubbed at all, expecting to see them come out dinged and yellow as shirts could be. Any one would have thought so by the appearance of the water I boiled them in, it was so perfectly dirty. And I believed, when I first took them out, that my fears were realized. I commenced to rub them in despair, but what was my surprise to find the soiled wristbands, collars, etc. etc., become clear and white almost immediately under my touch. At half-past ten A. M. my white clothes were out on the line. Thus the labor, which usually took three hours, was performed in one hour and a half, the clothes looking better than when washed by the washerwoman; they being unusually clear and white. And I shall have an Automatic Clothes Washer. I am satisfied to use it for what I know it will do, even if in time I find it does not do all that is claimed for it.

"TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS."

At a meeting of The Advent Christian Publication Society, held at the National Campmeeting, Chapin's Grove, Springfield, Mass., Aug. 28th, 1868, the following resolutions were adopted:—

Resolved, That we raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year.

Resolved, That our preaching brethren be, and hereby are, requested to act as Agents in this good work, to solicit contributions to the Tract Fund, as often at least as once in every quarter, and forward the same to the Treasurer, GEORGE T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

These resolutions invite the earnest and continued co-operation of every true friend of the Society and of the Lord's cause in the land. Shall we have it? The help of every minister and layman, of every brother and sister, old and young, rich and poor, is called for and solicited. Will you give it?

Here are piles of tracts,—thousands upon thousands, and more coming,—that speak of truth, righteousness, and a judgment to come; and they are waiting, anxiously waiting, to go forth on their mission, and ceaselessly crying, "Send me!" Who will send them?

Two Thousand Dollars will send forth millions of these little leaves from the tree of life for the healing of the nations, and give them wings and voices, flying over all the land, under the whole heaven, to carry the last message of life and immortality to a perishing world, and proclaim, "The hour of his judgment is come!"

The great day of the Lord is near. It is near, and hasteth greatly! A few more days of labor in the Master's vineyard, and the great Sabbath of rest which remains for the people of God will shed its glorious light upon our longing eyes, and end forever these working days, in which we are now privileged to do a little for him who has done so much for us. How much shall we do for him this year? It may be our last, and what we do must be done now! How much will you do, dear reader, for Jesus and his truth, this year?

WILLIAM B. HERRON,
Secretary Adv. Chris. Pub. Society.

DO YOU BELIEVE

That the Tract cause is one of God's instrumentalities? DO YOU KNOW that men are perishing for want of light? DO YOU DESIRE to be used as a means for diffusing the light?

The publishing committee, feeling their responsibility, would submit the following proposition:—Let every Adventist throughout the land appropriate one day's labor to this cause. Set apart one specified day (say Oct. 1). Ask God's blessing on the act, and sacredly devote all your earnings or income for that day to this cause, and send the amount to George T. Adams, Treasurer Tract Fund, No. 167 Hanover St., Boston. WILL YOU DO IT? D.

FREE TRACTS.

"Please send me some tracts for free distribution." Calls like the above are constantly being made upon the A. C. P. Society. Last year we sent out for free distribution some two hundred and seventy-five dollars worth of tracts more than we received on the Tract Fund. There was a balance from former years on hand, which made up this deficit. This balance is now nearly exhausted, and unless the friends send in funds, we shall very soon be compelled to discontinue the work of scattering free tracts. Brethren and sisters, now is the time to act in this matter.

We do not purpose to publish names and amounts received on this call, until October 7th, which will give the friends in various parts of the country an opportunity to do as suggested by Bro. Dickenson, and send in their names, so as to appear in the first list published. The Lord put it into the hearts of his faithful servants to take hold in earnest. Let some one start with $100.00 or more. All do what they can, and the Lord willing, we shall be able to print in the first Crisis of next month a good long list of subscribers to The New Tract Fund. Disappoint us not. AG'T.

THE BOSTON DIRECTORY.

The Boston Directory for the year commencing July 1st, 1868, a copy of which we have received from the publishers, contains the usual amount of valuable information for business men, with some additions and improvements. It embraces the former city of Roxbury, which was annexed last January, gives a list of the re-numbered streets, and contains a new and very conveniently arranged Street Directory. PITTSFIELD TENT MEETING.

Our tent-meeting in Pittsfield, Me., was one of the most precious seasons in the Lord we ever enjoyed. The Lord's blessing was manifest in every meeting. The weather was not favorable for a large gathering, being stormy most of the week, yet over a thousand were in attendance some of the time. Reports of our last year's tent meeting came in in a most gratifying form. Several who were not with us last year were with us this year to tell us their neighbors came last year and embraced the good news of the gospel of the kingdom and were converted, set up meetings in their towns, and the truth spread and produced converts. It will be so this year. We expect abundant fruits from this meeting, to go into the soon coming kingdom.

I. C. WELLCOME.

NOW READY.
NEW HYMN BOOK.

"HYMNS OF THE JUBILEE HARP,"
WITHOUT THE MUSIC.
By the Advent Chris. Pub. Society.

Among the thousands who sing from "The Jubilee Harp," there are many hundreds, especially the aged, to whose eyes the fine print of the Harp is a great discomfort and inconvenience, and who would gladly welcome an edition of the same excellent hymns, in a convenient form, in large, clear type. The above work is issued especially for them, and we trust they will find it just what they want.

There are hundreds also who sing from the Harp, who never use the notes, and who would therefore be just as well and better pleased with a book containing the same hymns, without the music, at a lower price. This book was got up also especially for them, and will, no doubt, be to all such just the thing they desire.

This edition of "The Hymns" is not, by any means, intended to supercede "The Harp." It is designed as a companion to it; and is so arranged, with references, that hymns given out from the one can be readily found in the other.

The whole has been carefully revised and corrected, and a brief supplement of choice and popular hymns appended. The typework was done in our own office, and in a style, we trust, not inferior to that of any other.

It is a volume of 576 pages, containing some 850 Hymns and Anthems, substantially bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, at 75 cents, single copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100. Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9.50 per dozen; $75.00 per 100. It is cheaper by far than any similar work that we know of in the market. When sent by mail, 16 cts. additional postage. LETTER FROM BRO. O. BENDIXON.

DEAR BRN. IN THE LORD:—Grace be with you. Amen. I am just returning from a journey, and I am happy to relate to you how the Lord is with me. I have great reason to thank the Lord for his goodness to me, and tender care. You may think, dear friends, that when I came home I found very few friends, but plenty of foes. From all sides I was attacked. Letters were sent about warning the people, and I stood as it were without a friend save one, my dear Savior; and as I have found him to be my strongest, wisest, dearest, and truest Friend, I have committed my case into his almighty hand; and I have already found that he stands for his own truth, yea, over what I could not understand or think, in the very place where they sent their first warning letter. I have been at work, and to the glory of God, I can say that a great number are awakened and seeking for mercy; and I fully trust that the Lord will give us such an outpouring of his Holy Spirit, that we may have a pentecost, before we have the feast of the Jubilee. Pray very much for us, dear brethren.

I am glad, dear ones, to tell you that here are not a few already who are waiting for the Lord, and understand the great truth of the sleep of the dead. All those that arose against me were professing christians, which made me so much more sorry. If it had been ungodly, wicked men, I would have thought nothing of it; but when I found that it was of the household of faith (by the name), it was very hard for me, but the Lord kept me up wonderfully, and his joy is my strength.

Now I will tell how it has gone with all these fearful warriors. It is coming back on themselves to their great shame; and instead of hindering or injuring me, they are hindering and injuring themselves, and the people tell them that they do not want to hear anything from them, nor to have anything to do with them; for they have not shown themselves christians; and the greatest number of them stand on my side. And so it is, if we humbly and faithfully go on our way of duty, committing every thing to the Lord, he will not let us be ashamed, but lift us up in his own good time. While I have been away, I have buried a young girl, about twenty years of age. She had been sick about eleven months, of consumption, and hasting towards eternity without any hope. When I found her, she was in great darkness, but I fully trust that she found peace, and became reconciled to her heavenly Father. All her trust was in Jesus, to whom she committed her soul, and slept in Jesus, and now awaits the resurrection of the just. The day that she was buried, I preached at her father's house, before we went to the burying-ground, and the priest of the national church preached at the grave. Her parents are under great conviction, and I fondly trust that they will be converted.

Now let me tell you what the enemy is rejoicing in now: Because I have received no letter from America yet; I shall get nothing to keep my family with, when I have no more help, and then I shall give up, and be glad to ask the poor-house for assistance. But my trust is in the Lord, that he will not let me want for bread and water. I have waited many weeks for letters from you, dear Brn. It is very hard for me, when the post comes, and there is no letter for me.* I can tell you, it tries my faith; and how I long for the "Crisis," so I can hear how the work goes with you. Please send me a letter, or something, as soon as possible. Please let me hear from you soon. Farewell, until Jesus comes.

Christiana, Norway. O. BENDIXON.

* The Treasurer remitted, several weeks since, all the funds that had been sent in for Bro. Bendixon, which he, no doubt, has received before this. The Crisis is also sent regularly.

NOTE.—It is time for all, who expect to be ready for the coming of Christ, to awake to earnest labor in the cause of God, in doing all we can to awaken our fellow men to flee from the wrath to come, and prepare for the speedy coming judgment. Our missionaries should be sustained in their respective fields of labor; and many more be sent forth. I was particularly impressed with the statement of Bro. Himes at our missionary meeting, at Springfield camp-ground, that the Moravians sustain one foreign missionary to every six hundred believers. Now if all that profess to believe in the near coming of Christ were as much consecrated to the work as this class of believers referred to, we should have from fifty to seventy-five foreign missionaries in the field, proclaiming the coming of Christ at hand, with truths connected with it that the world ought to hear. If I read rightly the word of God (and I believe I do), every christian is under solemn obligation to self-sacrifice, to live as prudently as possible, and save all he can, and give it to help forward the missionary work.

If each one who professes to believe that the Lord is SOON coming to reckon with them would thus do, there would be at least a million dollars yearly devoted to this work. The apostle Paul tells us (Rom. 6: 16) that we are servants to whom we yield ourselves servants to obey; and we are not our own, but have been BOUGHT "with the precious blood of Christ." O may the Lord help us to realize our responsibility in this matter, and awake to duty in these closing moments of time; that we may at least commence in the right direction. God has opened a wide door all through the Southern States, and if Christ comes this year, what will be the account that we can give of our stewardship, for not acting in this direction to the utmost of our power?

The best light that can be obtained points to this year as the last year for the probation of this world, and probably the present month. Dear brethren and sisters, awake to duty, that you may all be found ready for the coming of the Bridegroom. Amen.

L. T. CUNNINGHAM, Sec. A. A. M. Board.

For the World's Crisis.

ADV. CHR. CONF. OF N. Y. STATE.

The seventh annual gathering of the people of God of Darien, together with the quarterly Advent Christian Conference of New York State, met at the Advent church in Darien, Genesee Co., N. Y., on Friday evening, Sept. 11th, 1868. The meeting opened, amid a heavy rain storm, with prayer and conference, and an hour was profitably spent in laying the foundation and sills, as Bro. Newell remarked, for a good meeting.

Saturday, ten A. M. Met for social meeting and love-feast, and the Spirit of the Lord run from heart to heart, and a blessed time was enjoyed by all present. At 2 P. M., Bro. J. W. Taylor preached a sound discourse from Rev. 6: 17. During the afternoon reinforcements of brethren and sisters came in, notwithstanding the rain poured down in torrents. At seven P. M., we were refreshed with a sermon by C. F. Sweet, from Matt. 24: 6, and continuing through the entire chapter, the discourse occupying two evenings.

Lord's day, met at nine A. M. to hear the reports of delegates. The following Elders were present:—D. Cogswell, C. F. Sweet, A. C. Newell, J. W. Taylor, and Bro. Allen. The delegates from various sections reported the condition of their respective localities, as regards number of members, their spiritual condition, etc. At the close of the reports Bro. Newell announced there were yet fifteen minutes before preaching, and he hoped the time would be occupied. Forty-one testimonies were given in on the Lord's side, and they were really soul-stirring. It was a feast of fat things.

At half-past ten A. M., Bro. D. Cogswell preached from Matt. 24: 44–5, and really gave us meat in due season. At one o'clock, Bro. Newell baptized two young converts; one was his own daughter, a young lady, and the scene was very interesting indeed. At two P. M., Bro. Taylor gave us a logical discourse from Matt. 16: 26. After the discourse Bro. Newell, who at present occupies the desk at Darien, extended the right hand of fellowship to the brother and sister he baptized. We have never witnessed a more interesting occasion than when he extended the right hand of fellowship to his beloved daughter, accompanied as it was with deep words of gratitude to God, that she had been constrained by the love of Jesus to come into the fold. Scarcely a dry eye could be seen in the entire audience. It was blessed to be there. After this the ordinance of the Lord's Supper was administered in deep silence, which spoke more truly than words, that it was an occasion fully appreciated by all who partook of the Lord's broken body and spilled blood.

Six P. M. Moved and carried that the next conference be held at Honeoye, Dec. 17, 1868. The following preamble and resolution was unanimously adopted:—

"Whereas, Bro. Wm. and Sr. Mary Ongley, now residing at Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Penn., have devoted many years of their lives in preaching the truth as revealed in the word of God, and have worn themselves out in the cause of our blessed Master, and are now in feeble health and destitute circumstances; therefore,

"Resolved, That this conference take up a collection for their benefit; and we do also recommend the brethren and sisters at large to contribute their mites to support this dear brother and sister in their declining years."

A collection of $12.25 was received and placed in the hands of Bro. Wm. Brown, Jr., of Dansville, to remit to them.

Bro. Sweet closed up the proceedings of the conference with a full exposition of Matt. 24, taking up the subject where he left it in his previous discourse. The best feeling prevailed throughout the entire meeting, and although the rain poured down in torrents every day, yet it could not dampen our spirits, and all felt it was good to be there. The most ample arrangements were made for the accommodation of all present, both as to the conveyance to and from the depot, and for their comfort at the meetings. Brn. B. C. Simonds, L. H. Delano, Moses Whittaker, A. C. Newell, Griffith, Johns, and others whose names I did not learn, threw open their doors, and made every body feel at home.

We think these home conferences are far more profitable than the large campmeetings, where so many thousands are gathered together that they really almost defeat the very object for which they are designed. It is hoped the next quarterly conference at Honeoye will be more numerously attended, and all will be benefited, and good will be done.

AN EDITOR'S EXPERIENCE.

An editor who has had several years experience, writes:—

"Our past five years' experience has taught us that the position of an editor of a weekly religious paper is one that no christian man need covet. Certain it is he cannot please all. Some will think they and their communications are neglected, and seem to suppose everything they send for the paper should be inserted without delay or abridgment, no matter what reasons the editor may have for thinking otherwise; even if he withholds it out of good will to the correspondent, satisfied that he would be injured by the insertion of what is written."

WESTERN A. C. P. ASSOCIATION.

We give below the Secretary's Report in brief of the Western A. C. P. Association, read at their annual meeting, Sept. 2nd:

SECRETARY'S REPORT—1867-8.

Brn. and Srs.:—While our report for the past year is not of so favorable a character in many respects as we could wish, nevertheless, as we review the year with its providences and mercies, our hearts are moved with gratitude to Him who has so graciously blessed us since our organization, and whose goodness has been renewedly manifested since our last report. And above all things else, it is our fervent desire that that evident presence of the Holy Spirit which has attended all our previous business meetings, making them most precious seasons of religious interest and spiritual refreshment, may be renewed at this gathering: that our harmony, peace, and love may be unbroken, and we all realize the depth of blessedness conveyed by the apostle's words: "all one in Christ Jesus."

THE "VOICE OF THE WEST."

The principal point of interest at this time, as it is the chief object of the Association, is our weekly organ, the Voice of the West. Of its management the past year, we need say but little. So far as we know, but one opinion is expressed, and that is of decided satisfaction. It has steadily and deservedly enlarged its influence. In hundreds of families it has come to be looked upon almost as a member of the household group, and its absence from any cause is as sincerely regretted, as would be the absence of a dear friend. Sound in faith, kind in spirit, liberal to differing views, it commands respect, even where it fails to convince. In a new and unoccupied field, it is rendering indispensable aid to the cause which in turn will sustain it. And while it labors specially in behalf of the Western Advent interest, it recognizes and rejoices to record the growth and prosperity of each and every section and department of the general cause, seeking peace and harmony with all, so far as in it lies. Its conduct in the past is its guaranty for the future so far as spirit, doctrine, and general management are concerned.

As to its financial prospects, we had during the last fall and winter high hopes of reporting it at this meeting a self-sustaining paper: and it will undoubtedly become so within a few months, at the present rate of increase in its subscription list. During the year, we have had a net gain of about 800 subscribers, most of whom are likely to be a permanent addition to our list. We consider the prospects good; and our success, as compared with similar enterprises in larger and more popular denominations and causes, is unexampled. An earnest, united effort would soon give us four or five thousand subscribers, and enable us to make improvements in the paper which are now beyond our reach.

We must renew our appeal to the ministry for their hearty co-operation and aid in this direction. The ministry and the Voice must be co-workers in our great, common cause. The paper backs up their labors, waters the seed they sow, and often sows seed for them to water. Its importance to the body while rightly conducted can scarcely be over-estimated. It is a bond of union, joining individuals, families, ministers, and churches all over the land; and it deserves, as it asks for and needs, the aid of all.

We carry a free list of a little over 300 names, nearly all of which are recommended by responsible persons, or are known by us to be such. The grateful letters which we receive from every quarter, some of which have appeared in the Voice; and especially from those whose almost only opportunity for communion with those of "like precious faith" is through its columns—these testify that this gift of the cause to its poorer members is wisely bestowed.

The donations to send the Voice to the poor the past year have been $287,45, less than half the expense incurred in this behalf. Nevertheless, we have not felt at liberty to reduce the list at all, but have, rather, added to it, believing that it was a wise as well as generous policy thus to do; and that any deficit that might occur on this account, would be fully and freely provided for.

We have had no especial extra expenses on account of the Voice the past year, though there might have been improvements made, had the means been at our command.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

In this department we have accomplished more than double the past year than in the three previous years since our organization. We have published over 76,000 books and tracts, making an aggregate of 2,682,300 pages, nine-tenths of which have been put in circulation, and scattered all over the land, in every State, and a goodly number in foreign countries. But with all our efforts, we have been unable to keep pace with the demand made upon us, or even nearly supply the wants of the cause in this direction. Often when the call has been for 100, we have been compelled to write fifty, or even twenty-five, in order to have an equality in distribution, and give each applicant a portion.

We have received for the free distribution of tracts and other publications, $526.90; and have given out tracts and books to the amount, at cost, of $652.69: leaving a deficit here of over $125.

Our most important publication the past year is Br. Wm. Sheldon's work—Adventism. Its very name sent a thrill through the body, and it has proved the most popular book ever issued from the Advent press. The sixth thousand is now being issued, and the demand for it is still good.

We do not claim that every Adventist endorses every position in this book: but we do claim that it is the best general outline of the views popularly known as Adventism which is, or is likely to be, issued from the press: and as such, it should command the favor and patronage of the friends of the cause. And we are happy to announce that in general it has done so.

It has already been the means of much good; and has, doubtless, been more largely read by outsiders, than any other Advent book in the same space of time. We are convinced that by the use of proper and appropriate means, a vast amount of good in the removal of prejudice and the correction of mistaken notions of us and our views, may be accomplished by the wide circulation of this book. Already there is a pressing demand for this work for free distribution. Some have engaged in its distribution upon their own responsibility. One brother has given out over 150 copies; and another has given 100 copies for distribution at the South, among the Freedmen and others. But these gifts are only a drop in the bucket compared with the demand for the book. From 15,000 to 20,000 copies could be profitably disposed of through judicious hands during the coming year, should time continue, with great advantage to the cause of truth. A copy should be placed in the library of every minister in this country who will receive it (for some have refused to receive it,) and all who will read it should, at least, have the opportunity. To this end the work might be got out in a cheaper form, so that an edition of 20,000 might be circulated at an expense not exceeding $4,000.

We owe it to the cause of truth to publish and circulate such works more largely. It is impossible for our preachers to occupy all the fields from whence come continual calls for aid. Our only resource in many cases is to send those silent but always powerful preachers, the Voice, books, and, especially tracts. Satanic emmissaries know full well the power of the press, and it is made to groan under the burden of wicked, licentious, and infidel literature; to say nothing of the more subtle poisons which flood the land in the form of daily, weekly, and monthly journals, beside novels and tales, filling out the long catalogue of light literature. Spiritism, and the popular theology to which we stand opposed, make an able and efficient servant of the printing press. And shall our press stand idle from half to two-thirds of the time, while those of the enemy are kept in constant motion, day and night?

Who among us will awake to the importance of a noble, broad, and far-reaching policy in our publishing department? We have a publishing Association in name: let it be one in fact. Not sending out "gospel and water," publications giving no certain sound; avoiding, or omitting to press "present truth"; but works which shall take hold upon the living, vital issues of the present day: giving the gospel trump a certain sound, with such clearness and boldness as to arrest and command the attention of some at least of this hurrying, heedless, though judgment-bound generation.

Where are we in the stream of time? There can be but one answer: we are in the last days, amid the most perilous of its perils. We profess to have, and to walk in, the best and clearest light which God's Word affords. Let us then, for the sake of him who has given it to us; for the sake of our fellow men; and for the truth's sake, let it shine! And especially use this most important means, the press, which God has placed in our hands, for the dissemination of the truth as it is in Jesus—the present truth.

Every one should have a part in this work, and every one should make a sacrifice in its behalf. It is the gift that costs something which God most bountifully blesses. And let us the present year send out our papers, books, and tracts by the hundred thousand, full of earnest, vital, living truths; and, should time continue, our next annual meeting will evidence the faithfulness of our Heavenly Father; and that in return for the filling of his house with the tithes, he will have poured us out a blessing which, there not being room enough to receive it, will have overflowed all our borders.

Nor is it to our own countrymen alone that we owe an earnest effort in this direction. We have at the west, a large German, Swedish, and Norwegian population, some of whom we may, and must reach. The Swedes, indeed, in Illinois, have gone to work for themselves, setting us an example of zeal and sacrifice which we do well to imitate: but we ought to take up their work and unite our effort with theirs, for a greater and more extended work.

What has been accomplished the past few years has been done, comparatively speaking, by a few: what must be the result if every one will act the same noble part that the few have? God help us to awake out of sleep, and make an effort in behalf of the gospel of the kingdom which shall stir the world!

DONATIONS.

We acknowledge the receipt of generous donations the past year; though in some cases friends have been unable to redeem their pledges; and in others have felt it duty to recall them in order to expend the amount in aiding to build chapels, and support the ministry. To this we have cordially assented; for we believe that all which contributes to the upbuilding of the cause in its various sections, enlarges and sustains our general interests also. There must be, even in appearance, no conflicting interests. The best good of individuals and of single churches is the best good, also, of the body. If one member is in health, and rejoicing, all other members will rejoice with it! We recognize this fact, and have ever endeavored to pursue a broad, comprehensive, and generous policy in all our relations.

The Treasurer's Report shows the receipts to have been $12,799.31. The expenditures were $12,466.11. The assets of the Association are $10,000, including office building, press, type, etc. The liabilities are $3,383.28.

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF THE ASSOCIATION.

The financial condition of the Association is readily analyzed from the Treasurer's report. There is a lack of ready means; but our condition is not only solvent, but encouraging. Our debts, in the main, are not pressing; and while some aid will be needed this year to meet the deficit in last year's pledges, on the Voice, and on the Tract Fund, nevertheless, we were never before in so good condition to engage in the great work for the prosecution of which the Association was organized.

We crave your hearty sympathy, cooperation, and material aid.

Respectfully submitted, in behalf of the Board of Trustees,

WM. L. HIMES, Secretary.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. T. Ongley.

BRO. GRANT:—Not having written for the Crisis, or any of the papers, for some time, and as some, perhaps, are inquiring what has become of Bro. John T. Ongley; I therefore write. Through the tender mercies and blessing of our heavenly Father, I am still alive and looking for and earnestly desiring that blessed hope. I have been sometimes discouraged, on account of circumstances that surround us. For the past two or three years, I have spent but a little time in preaching, for various reasons: 1st, the people of this region of country are generally poor, that love the truth. 2nd. Certain men have crept in and divided and subdivided the flock with their seeds of discord. 3d. Being poor, and having a large family to support. 4th. Having signed with a brother-in-law for a mill, etc., and he failing to do anything, left the whole matter resting on me. Now the mill property is in my hands, and I would be glad to sell it at a sacrifice, so as to be free and go out into the field and proclaim the good news of a coming Savior.

Wonderful are the ways of Providence. Last spring, just as winter was breaking up, I received a letter from Asa C. Eastman, of Spring Creek, Penn., about twenty-five miles from here, stating that he had seen my name in the paper, as a preacher, and requesting me to come there and preach. I sent an appointment, but on account of the breaking up of the sleighing, etc., could not go. The next I heard from that place was, that Asa C. Eastman was drowned while being engaged in clearing a mill-dam. I have since been there three times, once in four weeks, and preached in three different school-houses to crowded congregations. Opposition is plenty, but some have "ears to hear," and I think good will be the result. I found a Bro. Enoch Eastman and wife taking the "World's Crisis," which has been sent to them by a relative from the East, in which they first saw my name. They belonged to the Baptist church, but by reading the Crisis, and comparing the same with the blessed word of God, they were converted to the truths advocated in the same, and for advocating them were turned out of said church. I also found two or three others that hold forth the doctrine; but hope, by the blessing of God, to see more come out on the side of truth. O Lord, help, is my prayer. More anon.

My parents, through sickness, having become nearly destitute, are now with me. My father is not able to dress himself only once in a while; and mother's health is very much impaired through her sickness with typhoid fever. They find their work in preaching the gospel is done. They have spent their time, talents, and property, in the cause. Old age and a broken constitution have used them up for labor of any kind. We will do, as children, all we can for them. I have been building them a small house. It is now ready for plastering, but don't know where to get the means to finish it. Also they will want something to buy them a little furniture, etc.; and I think that there are those of God's dear children that won't let the old pilgrims suffer. Already, through the notice given by Bro. J. B. Cook, some have opened their hearts and purses, for which they are very grateful, and pray that the blessing of our heavenly Father may reward the donors in this life, and give them eternal life in the coming kingdom.

Receipts as follows: Bro. J. B. Cook, $5; C. Colegrove, $1; "A lover of Jesus," Syracuse, $1; No name, Olneyville, R. I., $2; Hannah T. Miller, $1, and two stamps; Anna Treadwell, $2; C. Greene, M. D., 50 cents and a bottle of medicine. "A sister," Allegheny City, Penn., $1; "A sister," Reading, Mass., $1; Mrs. Abner Hardy, $1; Mary Alger, $5; in all, $20.50. If there should be any more received, will notice hereafter. Address, Wm. and Mary S. Ongley, or John T. Ongley, Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.

TO THE PILGRIMS:—Failing health has compelled me to give up my situation in Brockport, therefore I desire my friends to address me henceforth at Rochester, N. Y. I earnestly desire the prayers of the pilgrims scattered abroad, that the inhuman hands of consumption may spare me a little longer. I desire to be one of the number that shall see Jesus coming in the clouds of heaven; but I have nowhere else to go for aid but to Jesus.

BRO. INGHAM.

As many feel anxious to know of Bro. Ingham's whereabouts since campmeeting, I would say that he is for the present staying at the pilgrim home of Bro. Richardson, in Lawrence, where he is being kindly cared for. The following extract from a letter from Sr. R. will show how he is.

"Will you be so kind as to write a few lines for the Crisis for Sr. Ingham, as quite a number requested her while on the camp-ground to write, that they might know where he was, and how he appeared after he should get home. He is certainly no worse, and his appetite is much better. Sr. Ingham is quite worn down with continual care and anxiety, and now that she is a little relieved feels the effects of it. It would be quite a task for her to write more than she is obliged to. She wishes all her letters sent to Lawrence, Mass., in care of Cyrus B. Richardson."

Brethren, remember Bro. Ingham in your prayers, and let your sympathy reach pocket deep.

Obituaries.

MOORE. Fell asleep in Jesus, Sept. 9th, 1868, very suddenly, of heart disease, Bro. Horace W. Moore, of Farmington, N. H., aged fifty-three years and six months.

He leaves a wife, son and daughter, also a large circle of friends, to mourn his loss. Bro. Moore was very firm in the belief that the Lord would come this year, and has labored faithfully to set his house in order, to be ready to meet the Master when he comes; and not only be ready himself, but has faithfully warned others of the approaching judgment, that they might seek refuge from the coming storm. His ear was ever open to the cry of the poor and the needy, and his hand outstretched to help them. His charities were bestowed according to the Master's rule, "Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth." The little church feel his loss deeply, and sympathize with our sister in her affliction; but with her rejoice in the hope of a speedy reunion with our brother; and as by faith we look forward to that "land beyond the river," we can say—

"I shall see thee in the morning
Of Heaven's eternal light,
Where the saints of every nation
Are robed in changeless white;
With Jesus and his angels,
The glad host of the skies,
I shall see thee in the morning,
When all the dead arise."

Words of comfort were spoken by Bro. J. G. Smith. Elders D. P. Cilley and David Edgerly (Baptists) assisted in the services.

GEO. W. BURNHAM.

SHANNON. Died at Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 11th, Bro. John Shannon, aged seventy-eight years.

Bro. Shannon professed faith in Christ about thirty years ago, and was deeply impressed with the duty of baptism, but shrunk from the cross, consequently lost his enjoyment, and has wandered in darkness and gloom. A few months since he became conscious of his condition, and saw the importance of a preparation to meet the Lord. He sought the Savior with all his heart, found peace in Christ, and died in hope. He leaves an aged widow, whose hope and trust is in the widow's God. Also a large family to mourn his loss. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Bro. H. L. Kelsey, of the M. E. church. Sermon from Job 14: 14.

JOS. W. WHITE.

PLUMMER. Died in China, Me., Aug. 4th, 1868, of typhoid and brain fever, Betsey Ellen, wife of J. F. Plummer, and daughter of the late Capt. Chas. H. and Betsey Clark, aged twenty years and nine months.

The subject of this notice was our only sister. During her illness of three weeks, although a great sufferer, she did not once complain. May the enemy soon be destroyed, and his sting withdrawn.

Our sister dear lies cold in death,
O'er us is cast a gloom;
When Jesus comes, he'll bid her rise,
Decked with immortal bloom.

MARIA CLARK.

MONTGOMERY. Died at Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 14th, Rienzie P., son of David H. and Abbie G. Montgomery, aged five years and four months.

Little Rienzie was a promising child, and his interest and knowledge in Bible truth was truly astonishing for one of his years. His death is a severe stroke to both parents and grandparents; but the morning will soon dawn, and the little one will return from the land of the enemy. In the absence of the writer, the funeral services were conducted by Bro. Waterhouse, of the Christian church.

JOSEPH W. WHITE.

YOUNG. Died at Wakefield, Mass., Aug. 25th, Henrietta S., daughter of Bro. A. Young, aged sixteen years and nine months.

Henrietta, with a brother and two sisters, was early deprived of a mother's care by her death. Bro. Young and family are sad, but they mourn not as those that have no hope; for before her death Etta expressed her confidence and trust in the Savior, and her willingness to sleep if it was for the glory of God. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Dr. Chickering and Bro. Brown. Sermon from Ps. 16: 9.

JOSEPH W. WHITE.

POWERS. My husband, Mr. Jonathan Powers, died at Waupaca, Wis., Nov. 14th, 1866.

He was a firm believer in the doctrine of which the Crisis is a very able exponent. He died in the firm hope and faith of a resurrection from the grave, and a blissful immortality beyond the dark river. His faith was unswerving, and for many years he stood with the whole armor on, doing the will of his Lord and Master, and waiting with longing heart, and his eyes fixed on the mark of the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

LONDON, Sept. 16. It is reported in Paris that the speech of the King of Prussia, at Kiel, excites animosity in the French cabinet. The words of the King were regarded as having reference merely to the events of 1866, and as not susceptible of any application to the present state of affairs in Europe. The Moniteur has a tranquilizing leader, in which it reviews the relations of the great powers, and considers the situation calm and peaceful.

BELGRADE, Sept. 16. Reports have been received here that a battle has been fought between the Turkish troops and the Bulgarian insurgents, near Phillippopel. The latter made the attack, but after a desperate fight they were repulsed, pursued and driven back to the Balkan mountains. The Turkish loss was heavy. Over 200 are reported to have been killed while defending one of the forts assaulted by the rebels. The loss of the latter is unknown.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 17. A letter to the Independence Belge, in this city, from Constantinople, dated the 8th inst., states that an attempt of the Greeks of Chios to celebrate the day of the baptism of the heir of the Grecian King was suppressed by the Turkish authorities. The Greek attache of the American Consulate, who was one of the persons arrested, said that Admiral Farragut petitioned for his release, but the petition was refused and he was taken in confinement to Dardanelles.

FLORENCE, Sept. 18. Cardinal Reisach has been tried by the civil court at Rieta, and sentenced to pay 500 francs, for attempting to take possession of the See of Sabina, by order of the Pope, without the authorization of the King of Italy.

BIARRITZ, Sept. 18. The Emperor Napoleon, Empress Eugenie and Prince Imperial to-day made a visit to Queen Isabella of Spain, at St. Sebastian.

METZ, Sept, 18. A terrible explosion took place at the cartridge factory in this city, to-day. Thirty persons were killed outright and eighty-two badly injured. The building in which the explosion occurred was torn to pieces.

MUNICH, Sept. 17. Mr. Bancroft, Minister from the United States, is expected here this week to exchange ratifications of the naturalization treaty between the American and Bavarian Governments.

LONDON, Sept. 20. Dispatches from Madrid state that the Queen of Spain's Admiral, Foolete, and all the naval force off Cadiz had revolted. The Generals recently banished had returned and joined in the revolt. Marshal De La Forre headed the movement, and the leading men of the old O'Donnellist party sustain it. Several towns have joined the insurrection, and the most intense panic prevailed at the court in Madrid. Troops had been dispatched south, Gen. Cough taking command. A rumor prevailed in Paris Saturday evening that Queen Isabella had abdicated.

DOMESTIC.

THE SOUTH AMERICAN EARTHQUAKE.—In Tambo a priest told the affrighted people not to flee to the hills. He would go down to the sea, and he had power to still the waters. The foolish people, five hundred in number, believing in his omnipotence, gathered around him in solemn procession, and followed him to the sea; but the voice of a man who took upon himself the attributes of the Almighty, was not heeded, and himself and five hundred were drowned.

The most horrible calamity befell the two cities of Puffo and Cerro D'Pasco—the former containing 40,000 inhabitants. These cities are built near and over the silver mines, and it seems that the very ground on which they stood was one hollow cavern. These caves opened at one wide chasm, and swallowed up the cities, and the ill-fated population, at one deep and awful opening. They literally fell down into this immense hollow. A number of horsemen rode into Lima and reported the catastrophe, and, as the mines themselves are entirely destroyed, we shall probably hear of other towns being destroyed. Cuzco has not "one stone left standing upon another," and most of its population were killed.

New York, 16th. Additional accounts of the earthquake state that at Arica the shock was preceded by a sound like that of a distant tempest, and then the ground shook from south to north. A palm tree remains standing untouched and as green as ever in the midst of the desolate city.

TERRIBLE RESURRECTION.—Gen. Kilpatrick reports a singular and horrible circumstance which took place at Arica, on the south side of that city, during the recent fearful earthquake. As the earth opened and yawned, there came up five hundred mummies, who stood in long lines facing the sea, every one of the skeletons in perfect preservation, the hands doubled up and supporting the chin, the knees drawn up, and the feet supporting the fleshless body! This must have been one of the most frightful sights possible, and quite beyond description. The spot where these mummies now stand was once an old cemetery, some ninety years ago, it is said, and these skeletons are doubtless the fabled Incas and Indians who either buried themselves alive or were interred in this manner. They correspond exactly to the old mummies of the Incas.

A WEALTHY CONGREGATION.—At the auction sale of pews in the new Temple Emanuel in New York, the amount received reached about $750,000. The trustees expected a pre-emption of $80,000, but it amounted to $200,000. The highest price paid was $4600. The other members paid various sums, ranging from $4000 to $5. The appraised value of the pews was $600,000, there being twenty at $5000 each. The lowest priced pews were sold for $300. By this sale, the Temple stands free from debt, and with a sinking fund of $100,000.

Items.

☞ Victor Emmanuel, during a recent excursion in the mountains, was in imminent danger of losing his life, when a shepherd rushed to his rescue and saved him. The King gave him 1000 scudi on the spot, and has since settled a pension on him for life.

☞ There are few people who have not been occasionally puzzled whether to write ei or ie in the words that so represent the sound of long e. A very simple rule, says a schoolmaster, removes all difficulty. When the diphthong follows c, it is always ei—ceiling, conceive, etc; when it follows any other letter it is always ie—grief, friend, niece, etc.

☞ A clergyman observing a poor man by the road breaking stones, and kneeling to get at his work better, made the remark, "Ah! John, I wish I could break the stony hearts of my hearers as easily as you are breaking those stones." "Perhaps, master, you do not work on your knees," was the reply.

☞ Encke's comet is now visible through a glass. It is located near the constellations Gemini and Cancer, and can be seen between 3 o'clock and daylight in the morning. After the latter part of September it can be seen with the naked eye from 9 in the evening till 3 in the morning.

☞ It is said that Garibaldi has written a letter to an English friend, in which the following sentence occurs:—"I intend to attack Rome when France shall be engaged with Prussia."

☞ It is stated that there are two mountains in Europe higher than Mont Blanc. These are Elbrous and Kasbek, of the Caucasian chain. The first is 18,256 feet high, the second 16,540.

☞ Calumny is like the cinders flying from a large fire, which quickly go out if you do not blow them.

☞ The Pope has taken to writing for the newspapers, in emulation of the French Emperor.

☞ The Austrian Crown Prince is learning the trade of a locksmith.

☞ Wicked men stumble over straws in the way to heaven, but climb over hills in the way to destruction.

☞ There are nearly 20,000 Americans in and about Paris.

☞ The corn crop of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, is said to be larger and better than ever before known.

☞ There are more than a hundred houses in Fifth Avenue that rent for $40,000 a year.

Massachusetts Quarterly Conference.

By invitation of the Second Advent Church in Chelsea, the next State Quarterly Conference of the Society will be held in Chelsea, Mass., at Library Hall, commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 20th, continuing daily and over the following Sunday. It is to be hoped we shall have a general gathering of all the faithful in this region. We will do our best for you, both temporally and spiritually. Come, both delegates and all, that have an interest in the salvation of men at the coming of Christ. Some business of importance will come before us. Preaching the first evening. E. OWEN, Sec'y.

Conference at Square Pond, Ct.

Notice was given in the last week's Crisis that our State Conference would be held at Square Pond, commencing Sept. 30th, and hold over the following Sunday. As this is our annual meeting, we hope for a general attendance of preachers, and a delegation from every church in the State. Will churches appoint delegates, and send them, and pay expenses, if needs be? Some brethren appointed delegates are poor; their traveling expenses should be met. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

Those coming on the cars from the western part of the State, will stop at Rockville, where conveyance can be had to the meeting, which is six miles from Rockville. Inquire for Jonathan Ladd, who is engaged to carry passengers. Those coming from other parts of the State, will come with their teams. For the Church, I. B. POTTER.

The New Hampshire Tent.

To the brethren and friends of New Hampshire, in favor of having a tent to carry the gospel of the kingdom into new places, I would say, at the Alton Bay campmeeting it was found that enough had been raised by Bro. D. M. Leavitt, and others, except about one hundred dollars, to obtain a tent; therefore the brethren decided to purchase one at once, and have it in the field, believing the friends would soon send in the remainder. A committee of three was also chosen to see that the tent was judiciously run, and they to receive what the friends wished to give to make up what was lacking. Bro. T. H. Ford of Concord, Bro. John Shorey of East Rochester, and myself, were chosen said committee. Bro. Ford is Treasurer, but money can be handed to either, and we will see that it is appropriated as designed. If it is more convenient to send it by brethren to the State Conference, to be held at Lake Village, commencing Oct. 15th, you can do so. J. G. SMITH.

Tent Meeting.

The Maine Mission Tent will be pitched in Mt. Vernon Village, Oct. 2nd, and remain over the following Sunday. The small tent, for the accommodation of brethren and sisters to board themselves, will be there also. This is a new place for our faith; yet the friends in the place will do all they can to make the meeting interesting; and we trust our brethren and sisters will come prepared to labor for the salvation of the people. Will you pray for us, dear brethren and sisters, that sinners may be saved. The Farmington and Augusta Stage fare is reduced one third, for those who go to the above meeting. Per order,

H. B. SEVEY.
I. C. WELLCOME.

Dedication and Conference.

The new chapel, built at Province Falls, Freedom, N. H., is to be dedicated the first day of October; meeting to hold over the following Sabbath. Elders T. W. Piper, D. M. Leavitt, D. F. Leavitt, and others, are expected in attendance to preach the word. Come, my brethren, one and all. Come to labor for the good of souls. This house is peculiarly located, being within five minutes walk of two States, three counties, and four towns.

For the brethren, J. S. MOULTON.

N. B.—Homes will be provided for all that will come. J. S. M.

Tent Meeting.

The last meeting of the season in the New York State Mission Tent will be held at West Barre, Orleans Co., N. Y., beginning Oct. 8th, and continue as long as practicable. We hope to see a general rally from the surrounding country at this meeting. Pray for us, that this may be the best meeting of the season; and yet many are rejoicing in the truth as the result of our meetings through the summer.

WM. A. FENN.
JONAS WENDELL.
EDWARD COTTON.

Notice.

The New York State Mission Tent will be pitched in Rose, Wayne Co., N. Y., Sept. 24th, and continue to Oct. 5th. We earnestly desire the cooperation of brethren in the vicinity, that they, and the people who attend the meeting, may be blessed of God.

WM. A. FENN.
JONAS WENDELL.
EDWARD COTTON.

Conference.

The Lord willing, there will be a conference at Middleton Corner, N. H., commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 8th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Brn. Daniel Churchill, Joseph Spinney, and others are expected to be present to preach the word. Brethren and sisters are invited to come and work for the Lord. MARK STEVENS.
C. COLMAN.

R. I. and E. Ct.

Our next conference will be held at Lafayette, R. I., commencing Wednesday, 2 o'clock P. M., Oct. 7th, 1868. Remember the delegates and letters, and looking to God, let us expect a precious season. H. F. CARPENTER.

Conference.

The Lord willing, we will commence a conference at Colebrook, N. H., Thursday, evening, Sept. 24th, to continue as may be thought best. Brethren and sisters are invited to come and help in the work of the Lord. Strangers may call on Jas. Little, who will look after the interest of the meeting.

J. COUCH.
J. A. LIBBY.

Advent Christian State Conf. of N. H.

The annual session of this conference for 1868 will be held at Lake Village, N. H., commencing Oct. 15th and hold over the following Sunday. Particulars hereafter. A. W. SIBLEY, Sec.

P. O. Address.

Letters may be addressed to me as follows:—La Porte City, Iowa, care of H. J. Preble, until Oct. 7th; then Bascobel, Wis., until Oct. 17th, care of C. B. Sylvester; then Rouses Point, N. Y., care of Elder D. T. Taylor, until Oct. 24th; then Lynn, Mass. T. M. PREBLE.

Sycamore, Ill., Sept. 10th, 1868.

South Vershire, Vt.

We purpose to commence a protracted meeting in this place, commencing Oct. 7th, and continuing over Sunday. Will friends from surrounding districts come over and help us? Come one and all. Homes will be provided for all.

H. F. CARPENTER.

Notice.

There will be a basket meeting in Enfield, Ct., near or on the old camp-ground, near the Warehouse Point depot, commencing Sept. 24th, and hold over Sunday. All are invited to come.

For the brethren. D. PALMER.
D. W. MILLER.

Notice.

Our meetings in South Boston, for the worship of God, will be held hereafter at "Fraternity Hall," No. 120 Broadway, every Sunday, the Lord willing. Come over and help us.

J. N. BERRY, Secretary.

Minnesota Quarterly Meeting.

The first quarterly meeting for the present conference year will be held (providence not preventing) in Utica, Winona county, commencing Friday evening, Sept. 25th, and will continue over the following Sunday. THOS. K. ALLEN, Sec.

Notice.

The Mt. Vernon tent meeting is necessarily postponed from Sept. 30th to Friday evening, Oct. 2nd.

I. C. WELLCOME.

Trunk Lost.

A medium sized black trunk was taken from the camp-ground at Springfield, with the first load of baggage that was sent to the depot Monday morning, to go east in the first (7.15 o'clock) train. There was a card tacked on one end of it, marked thus: "Boston, Mass., George R. Markham." The "Boston, Mass." was written with a pencil, "George R. Markham" was written very plain with pen and ink. There was no other mark of any kind on the trunk, nor any check. If any of the friends took it by mistake, or if any one can give any information in regard to its whereabouts, they will greatly oblige by writing to

S. J. [illegible], Lynn, Mass.

Camp Letters.

The following letters were sent to the Alton Bay Campmeeting, but not called for by those to whom they were addressed: John Day, Esq., Norman W. Johnson, E. M. Short, T. Pinnear, L. D. Allen, P. H. Potter, Esq., L. Colby, D. H. Dugin, two for Mrs. I. M. Colby, Mrs. M. A. Colby, Mrs. Nellie M. Grover. J. G. SMITH.

FOUND on Alton camp-ground, one traveling bag, one umbrella, three parasols, one square hood, one cloud, one veil, two linen handkerchiefs, one towel, a jack knife, and spectacle case.

J. G. SMITH.

FOUND. On the camp-ground at Springfield, two hymn books, and a pocket Testament.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon, otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

DEATH OF SUMMER.

Summer is dying; see, the birds are gone,
They would not stay for such a scene;
They flocked around to sing when she was born,
And lingered through the sweetest months of green,
But lo, at the first signs of her decay,
They sang a farewell dirge and fled away.

Summer is dying now; each moving breath
Tells to the careful ear her days are few;
And her gay robes are laid aside for death,
Her flowers are left for tender hands to strew;
And the cold night-dews gather on her brow,—
Be still and weep; Summer is dying now.

Summer is dying; see, the mantling clouds
Hovering to watch her all along the sky,
And, holding out for her thin, snowy shrouds,
They seem to say, when the fair one shall die,
These robes are hers, and bending o'er her bier,
We'll not forget to shed the farewell tear.

Summer is dying with her many charms;
O who will take her sinking frame to-day?
Lo, sweet September stretches forth her arms,
Clasps her most fondly, hurries her away;
And as they go she dies, and sterner Fall
Draws o'er her lovely form the funeral pall.

J. ALBERT LIBBY.

For the World's Crisis.

A LOOK AT THE PASSAGE—Mark 9: 43.

The first point that we will notice here, is the expression, "It is better for thee to enter into life maimed." Now life is the opposite of death; and the passage under consideration shows that life is to be preferred above death; and if it should cost a hand or a foot to save life, when, if you don't part with a hand or foot, it will cause the whole body to die, that thus the dead will be cast into hell,—Greek, geennan—the valley of Hinnom, "where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched," which teaches destruction real or figurative, in whatever way we take it.

The second point we notice is this: Is the expression, "having two hands," and be cast "into hell," when it is said that it would be better for you to have only one hand and live, clear or reliable proof of endless life in misery, when the Bible is entirely silent about any one, or any thing living, "where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched?" The law of nature don't allow such an idea.

The third point to which I will now call attention is this: That the Lord speaks about a place "where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched," and calls the objects in this place carcasses of the men that have transgressed against him. Isa. 66: 24. A question is to be made and considered before we can dismiss the passage before us, and it is this: is the life, into which it is better for us to enter, than to be cast into hell, eternal life, or is it temporal life? This is an important point, more so than we may imagine. The majority, I suppose, would say, eternal life, of course. True, nothing else can be made out of it, if we wish to make eternal life in torment out of the words being cast "into hell "where their worm dieth not," etc. But how is it about entering into eternal life maimed or crippled? How many do we think are there to live with Christ for ever, with only one hand, one eye, or one foot? We ought to think over this point. Perhaps some conclusions will not bear investigation..

In the next place, it is a fact that cannot be denied nor contradicted, that the word geennan, translated hell, is a place that had its location on this earth, near Jerusalem, and it is literally true that carcasses of men, at the time when the Savior uttered the words under consideration, had been under the destructive influence of worms and fire in geennan, the valley of Hinnom; but I would not undertake to find a place answering to this geennan, on the renewed earth, where Christ's everlasting kingdom will be established, and the works of the Devil will be destroyed for ever. Thus we see that neither the entering into life maimed, nor the geennan of worms and fire, will answer for the world to come.

That there was a literal geennan in the time of the Savior, where carcasses of men had been consumed by worms and fire, until every particle of them was destroyed, is not and cannot be denied. Then to take it literally, as it really is, we cannot possibly make it answer for a place, or state of endless life in misery. But it might be said, yes, but this literal occurrence is made use of by the Savior as a figurative representation of the state of the wicked after judgment. Well, then, after all, would the figure not teach, as the Scriptures do in general, "the second death" of the wicked, and a destruction that would not stop until it would have its inmates in a state precisely consistent with Obd. 16, which declares that the wicked "shall be as though they had not been"? B. KNEPPER.

THE TESTIMONY OF PAUL.

"I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you."—ACTS 20: 20.

Paul testified "both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ." He declared unto them "all the counsel of God." Although, in writing to the Corinthians, he said, "I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified;" even to them he preached all the doctrines essential to salvation. It seems that the Corinthian brethren were but babes in Christ; there were divisions and strifes among them; they were "puffed up for one against another;" they were carnal, and he could not speak unto them as unto those who were spiritual, but fed them with milk as they were not able to bear strong meat, or to comprehend the mysteries of the gospel.

There are many churches now in a similar condition to that in which Paul found the church at Corinth. One is of Paul, another of Apollos, another of Cephas; one prefers this preacher, another that, and will not cherish christian charity and respect for others aside from their own faction. "My brethren, these things ought not so to be." Paul, and Apollos, and Cephas, are all faithful ministers of Christ. And Christ is not divided, neither should his people be. If wolves in sheep's clothing come among you, "false apostles, deceitful workers," there is a way to detect them. "By their fruits ye shall know them." If these divide and scatter the flock, instead of adding to it such as should be saved, then beware of them.

The truth of God, spoken in love, will commend itself to every man's conscience, especially to the conscience of God's people. This is what will build them up in the most holy faith. This will unite them, bind them together in the bonds of love. We are all children of the same Father; children by adoption, brought nigh to God by the precious blood of Christ. "I, therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace. "There is one body, and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, and through all, and in you all." F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

Webster, Mass.

COMING OF CHRIST.

BRO. GRANT:—It will be remembered by some that we stated our conviction that, if this year is to be the great Jubilee, or deliverance of the people of God from this world, prior to the cleansing of the "sanctuary," there would be a movement by the Turkish power that would fulfill the closing verse of Daniel, eleventh chapter, prior to Michael's standing up. Events have not transpired, as yet, of the character we anticipated. It is possible our application of that prophecy is incorrect. If so, there is nothing, as we conceive, to prevent the Lord's coming according to Bro. Thurman's arrangement of chronology.

If our application of that prophecy is correct, we do not see how it can be accomplished in so short a time as between now and the tenth day of the seventh month this year, Jewish time; still, it is possible. So we had better watch. We conceive it to be within the bounds of possibility that there may be a discrepancy of one year in chronology, as to the right starting point, or in some other way, in coming down a period from one to above two thousand years; though we have no light on the point. Time alone will have to determine this. The argument on the jubilees, and the termination of the 1335 days, this present year, is satisfactory to our mind; all we can say is, the light points to the present year; but if it should pass without our seeing the glorious dawn of endless day, God will either give us more light, or grace and patience to endure the rest of the conflict.

We have repeatedly said, and have published it, that there is no argument that will terminate the 2300 days, Dan. 8: 14, till A. D. 1875; therefore we consider ourselves entitled to all the time between this and that point. There has been an ominous silence and quiet in the movements of the nations of Europe for the last six or eight months past; but we think it only the calm that precedes the outburst of the violent hurricane. The third woe will soon come; the time of trouble (Dan. 12: 1) is impending, and must soon commence. The Lord help us to keep our lights burning, and keep on the watch-tower. Amen. L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

UPWARD AND ONWARD.

A LETTER TO A FRIEND.

Beloved in the Lord:—"Grace, mercy and peace" to you and yours. You are not forgotten at the mercy seat. Again and again have we taken you to the arms of Jesus, with special, definite importunity, that he would bless you with all spiritual blessings, make you humble, meek, loving, kind, like the blessed Master; that all the christian graces might be in you and abound; that the fruit of the Spirit—love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance—against which there is no law, might shine forth radiantly in every thought, look, word, and action. We have felt deeply anxious for your growth in grace, that the great and precious promises, by which we are made partakers of the divine nature, might work effectually in your inmost soul. And besides, having the application of these great and precious promises, cleansing you from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord, we have prayed earnestly for you to go on and on, rising higher and higher in whatsoever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report; that Christ would grant all, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that you, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the length, breadth, depth and height, and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that you might be filled with all the fulness of God.

And still more; we have prayed, and do pray, that you would give all diligence, adding to this strong, overshadowing faith, which works by love and purifies the heart, virtue, moral courage, holy boldness, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity. We have prayed that these things might not only be in you, but be in you aboundingly. "For," says the apostle, "if these things be in you and abound, they make you, that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and has forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things ye shall never fall. For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."—2 Pet. 1: 8–11. It is impossible for us to fall while "forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth to those things which are before"; meanwhile, pressing "towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." See Phil. 3: 14.

Dear friend, these are mighty things and glorious we are asking for you, and shall continue to ask. But are they too great, too glorious? Can you remain satisfied, or entirely safe, with any thing less than what Jesus has purchased for you, and of what he freely invites you to partake? "Ho! every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk, without money and without price."—Isa. 55: 1. O what a blessing to leave the world and "come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season."—Job 5: 26. What an unspeakable blessedness to live here so uprightly, God-fearingly, as to leave behind us a bright and glowing testimony! What a felicity to our own souls to leave this world in the midday sunlight of glory. Moreover, what a consolation to your surviving relatives and friends.

I am just now reminded of the beloved Bro. T. Kinney, a faithful servant of the Lord Jesus, who fell asleep sweetly in Jesus under our roof. While breathing his last, it seemed as if the room where he bade adieu to earth was the very gate of heaven. Bright angels ministered to him. His departing accents were, "Glory! glory!! glory!!!"

"The chamber where the good man meets his fate,
Is privileged beyond the common walk
Of virtuous life, quite on the verge of heaven."

Besides, beloved, think how God is glorified by such a life, such a death. Angels will tune their harps afresh,—"Glory to God in the highest." Your tombstone likewise will speak, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."—Rev. 14: 13.

Dear friend, is it thus with you? As you near the shores of eternity, are your hopes brightening for the better world? Are you ripening daily for the heavenly mansion? Is your soul on fire with heavenly love? As you step nearer and nearer the grave, can you say with old Simeon, "Now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word; for mine eyes have seen thy salvation." Tell us, dear friend, tell us, if you please, how is it with your soul? Soon we must meet at the judgment bar. Will it be a meeting of joy and not of grief? "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad."—2 Cor. 5: 10. Seeing these things must be, "what manner of persons ought" we "to be in all holy conversation and godliness?"

"Be wise, and use thy wisdom well;
Who wisdom speaks, must live it too;
He is the wisest who can tell
How first he lived, then spoke, the true.
Be what thou seemest! live thy creed!
Hold up to earth the torch divine;
Be what thou prayest to be made;
Let the great Master's steps be thine."

MORNING PRAYER.

In the morning the mind is calm; the temptations of the day have not beset you; the duties of the day have not filled your mind and begun to vex you. Before you go to the duties of the day, to its cares, anxieties, and temptations, begin the day with prayer. Temptations you certainly will meet; trials of virtue and patience will overtake you; and many times before night you will need the aid of your Father to shield you. Go to him, and ask his counsel to guide you, his power to uphold you, his presence to cheer you, his Spirit to sanctify you. Then will you have done what is equivalent to half the duties of the day, when you have thus engaged his care and assistance. And when the evening comes, when you have done with the duties of the day, the body is wearied, and the mind is jaded, when the world is shut out by the shades of night, when you come to look back and review the day, when you see how many deficiencies have marked it, how many imperfections still cluster around you, how many sins stare you in the face, how little you have done for yourself or for others, or for God, the day past, then is the hour of prayer. It will be sweet to feel that you have One to whom you can go, and who will hear you; one who will forgive, if you are penitent, and ask in the name of Jesus Christ; one who will accept your evening sacrifice, and give you strength for the morrow, and gird you with his righteousness. This hour, if rightly improved, will be like the cheering countenance of a most beloved friend. Take care that nothing comes between you and those hours devoted to God. Think of Daniel, prime minister of Persia, with the affairs of one hundred and twenty provinces resting on his mind, yet finding time to go "into his chamber, three times a day, that he might pray and give thanks to God.' Think of Alfred with the cares of monarchy; of Luther, buffeted by the storms of papal wrath; of Thornton, encompassed with a thousand mercantile engagements, yet never allowing the hurry of business to intrude on his regular hours of devotion."—Dr. Todd.

THE SIGN OF THE SON OF MAN.

Much has been said respecting this next sign, as we believe, before the coming of the Son of man. I think all must conclude that it will be in the heavens; and as it is put in connection with other signs, I am inclined to believe it will appear before Christ leaves the mercy seat, and will serve as a voice to the church to be ready to meet the Bridegroom; for should he appear at the same time of this sign, he would find many unprepared.

But we should not wait for any other voice than the one that has been sounding in our ears from childhood, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." What preparation shall we make? If we have wronged our fellow men in any manner, we should ask their forgiveness, if we expect to be forgiven. The gospel makes straight paths, and if we refuse to walk in them, we shall go astray. The sermon of Eld. J. Couch upon this subject, on Sabbath morning, at the campmeeting, was full of instruction, and took hold of many hearts; and it appears to me that this should be the one great business of the church, at this time, to be ready to help others to be ready. FROM ONE OF THE SCATTERED FLOCK.

BRO. GRANT:—I have received a letter from a sister in Iowa, and forward a few extracts from it for publication. She writes that she is entirely destitute and dependent; helpless, a stranger in a strange land. She has no home and has not been able to do any work for years. Yet she is rejoicing in hope, and I send these extracts to the Crisis, that others may be encouraged to bear cheerfully their lesser trials when they see how bravely this dear sister bears up under her load of sorrow. F. H. C.

"I am thinking of the years that are gone, when I had the privilege of meeting with my dear brethren and sisters in Christ, those of like precious faith, hearing the sound of the gospel, and pleading with poor sinners to get ready for the judgment, and exhorting believers to have on the whole armor; those were happy days, blessed seasons;

"Heaven came down our souls to greet,
And glory crowned the mercy seat."

But ere long a sad change came. My health gave way. I was prostrated by sickness, and being a poor orphan girl, soon found myself destitute and dependent. After a while, I came to Iowa to live with a friend, who is a distant relative; and for fifteen long years I have not heard one Advent sermon or seen one Advent believer. The people here never heard the gospel of the kingdom. The Crisis has been coming to me nearly a year, and I prize it next to my Bible. It is meat in due season to me, for I was starving for the word of life. God bless the giver, and give him a glorious reward, and an abundant entrance into his everlasting kingdom when he comes. Through the grace of God, I have ever kept my lamp trimmed and burning, and am waiting, looking and longing for the return of my blessed Savior, that this mortal may put on immortality. Glory, glory, what a blessed change!" Your sister, H. M. H.

☞ "The Lord seeth not as man seeth." They whom he most loves are very often the objects of scorn and derision to the proud and luxurious. Wicked men love self-delusion, and willingly remain ignorant of themselves. But the good man earnestly desires and prays that God would search his heart, show him all his hidden faults, and help him to repent of them and forsake them.

☞ All who are guided by heavenly wisdom will manifest a heavenly spirit; and none have reason to expect acceptance with Christ any further than they have evidence of likeness to him in temper and conduct.

☞ It may be the duty of persons to change their religion, although it has come down to them from their ancestors, and is supported by ancient traditions; and unless they do change it, they will in many cases lose their own souls.

☞ The most excellent, lovely and enduring ornaments of women are not those which are external, but those which are internal;—purity of heart, meekness, contentment, and delight in doing good.

☞ Daily family prayer is one of the most powerful means of grace; and husbands and wives should so live that uniting in it will be delightful, and a means of fitting them for the joys of this life and that to come.

☞ As the seed which is sown with toil springs up from beneath the clods, and yields an abundant harvest; so labor performed in the night of trouble, is often to the righteous the beginning of great prosperity and joy.

☞ The great business of ministers is to preach the gospel; and they should be careful not to muffle it with human drapery for an ornament, lest they prevent its saving effect.

☞ When the goodness, patience and long-suffering of God encourage men in sin instead of leading them to forsake it, it is a fearful evidence that they are ripening for ruin.

☞ That religion which does not govern the tongue, and make us beneficent and holy, is not the religion of Christ, and will secure salvation never.

☞ The coming of Christ, to save his people and judge the world in righteousness and truth, is anticipated with great joy by those that love him.

☞ Those who in time of trouble have vowed unto the Lord, should be careful when he delivers them, to acknowledge him with praise.

☞ The best way to be kept from all iniquity is to be diligently employed in learning and doing the whole will of God.

☞ Meditation upon the word and ways of God is a great safeguard to youth, and to those of riper years.

☞ The service of God should be the employment, and the praises of God the joy of every heart.

☞ Communion with God is a sure relief from anxious and distracting cares.

"THE WICKEDEST MAN IN N. Y."

BRO. GRANT:—I went last evening to see Mr. John Allen, called "The Wickedest Man in New York." I found him very friendly. He declared his determination to be a christian. He has abandoned his business, turned his dance house into a mission house, and all the family seemed to enjoy it very much. I had but little chance to talk with him, there were so many visitors. He was free to talk with all, and had a kind word for them. He is tender-hearted, and shed tears freely. He shut up his house last Sunday night, at midnight, and says it shall never be opened again, except for a good purpose. Quite a number were gathered in front of the house, and though it is a very hard place, there being a number of low dance houses in the vicinity, yet they were very quiet, owing probably to the presence of the police. Let us pray for John Allen, and every other wicked man.

I clipped the following from the New York Sun of last Monday. J. K. BELLOWS.

Sept. 2nd, 1868.

John Allen shut up his dance house at midnight on Saturday, Aug. 31st, and announced that it would never be opened again, except, for some good purpose; that, as a dance house its career had closed. A number of christian friends were present, who had been notified of his intention, and, after the house had been closed, a midnight prayer meeting was held in the dancing saloon. Allen, his wife, and the girls took part in the prayer meeting, and joined heartily in singing the hymns.

Many of Allen's neighbors and lots of loafers gathered in the street in front of 304 Water street, and discussed the portentous conduct of the Wickedest Man. Some thought he'd gone crazy; others felt sure that he knew what he was about, and had really made up his mind to quit the business for the sake of his children; but an oracular dance house keeper said:

"I'll tell you what's the matter. It's religion! These cussed singin' and prayin' fellers have got hold of John, and he's gettin' to be too damned religious. Religion's unhealthy. It's worse'n cholera. It's took many a poor feller off, and now it's gettin' hold of John, and it'll take him off—leastways it'll take him off from Water street. You see if't don't."

This declaration was received with silent awe, as though the entire crowd felt the doom of religion impending over them.

On Sunday morning the following announcement, written in a bold, plain hand, was posted on the door of 304 Water street:

"THIS DANCE HOUSE IS CLOSED!"
"No gentlemen admitted unless accompanied by their wives, who wish to employ Magdalens as domestics. JOHN ALLEN."

This notice attracted great attention, and groups were constantly gathering in the streets during the day, discussing the matter, and making all manner of prophecies in regard to the result.

In the afternoon Allen attended the Sabbath school and meeting at the Howard Mission, where the fact that he had closed his dance house was publicly announced. Allen himself made a few remarks as follows:

JOHN ALLEN'S SPEECH.

Ladies and gentlemen, unaccustomed as I am to public speaking my address will not be prolix. I simply say that although I have been called "the wickedest man in New York," I will show yet to the world that I am not the wickedest man in New York; that I will help the outcast and fallen of all creeds and denominations, and that I will begin from this moment to achieve a moral reform whenever and wherever I can. I want my friends to stand by me, as I shall have a hard time of it for a while, and I will in future devote my life to doing good as far as I can.

He seemed very frank and honest, and in downright earnest, as we hope he was, and will continue to be.

After Allen took his seat it was announced that there would be a prayer meeting at his house in the evening, and a prayer meeting was held last night at 304 Water street, in accordance with such announcement.

THE PRAYER MEETING LAST NIGHT.

Water street was arrayed in all its wickedness last evening. By contrast, such streets seem if possible wickeder on Sunday than on week days. The evening was close and sultry; the tenements and dance houses filthy and warm. The heat drove the residents out in the open air. Not that the change was much for the better, for the stench that rose from the filth and garbage of the gutters was intolerable. Men sat smoking and swearing, women in very dishabille costumes kept them company in both, while ragged boys and girls—gutter snipes as they are called—rolled about and played with each other in the mud. The crazy music of bands, the croaking of a worn out piano, and the groaning whine of a dilapidated violin, floated on the heavy air from inside many a dance house, inviting passers by to enter these ante-rooms of perdition. There was one house, however, from which all this noise and wickedness had passed away, out of which the evil spirits had been cast, and whose proprietor had turned over a new and very important leaf in the book of his life. This was 304, the house of John Allen.

At 7 o'clock we reached the house, and found John sitting outside the door. For coolness he had discarded coat and vest, and sat in his shirt sleeves. He was in a good humor, and cordially invited us to enter, remarking as we did so, that he was going to have a prayer meeting there as soon as the clergyman came. The bar-room had been arranged for the purpose. Tables were placed in the centre of the room, and John told one of his boys to "chuck down a few Bibles and hymn books, and bring in a few more chairs." He then inquired, "Are you a religious personage, for if so I'll call in a clergyman to talk with you." We expressed a preference for a discourse with himself. He spoke unreservedly of his reformation, said he was glad he had got out of the business, and was determined to make up in every way he could for the balance of his life. Turning his face full upon us he inquired if he looked like a scoundrel. We confess he did not. His lower jaws are heavy and protrude, and that is the only bad portion of his physiognomy. "Two of the girls," he said, "are to be provided with situations, and those who won't reform will skedaddle to some other house like what this was."

One of the women wanted to get some whiskey when John replied, "No more rum in this house, not by any means."

Messrs. Arnold Van Meter, Oliver Dyer, and other gentlemen dropped in, and each was warmly welcomed by John. He stood at the door inviting his neighbors to come to prayer meeting. "Ye're all welcome, every one of ye. Come in, boys, walk along girls, it'll do you no harm and may do you a sight of good." Four young men entered. They were sailor-looking, and their red faces wore the outward sign of the whiskey within. They knew John and shook his hand, but looked sheepish when he told them to "go in and pray." They did not come for prayers, and were dumbfounded to find a notorious hell turned into a house of worship. They slunk out half ashamed, and doubtless went directly to one of the dens near by.

The time is half-past seven and the company has arrived. It is a motley assemblage. On the right hand side are the women of the town, red hot from the dance houses in the vicinity. Their faces are bloated, and whiskey is the rouge with which they have reddened their complexions. The redness is permanent. Dressed in tawdry finery, their clothes hanging round loose on their bodies, some of them dirty as filth and foulness and disease can make them, others not long at their fearful vocation have not yet fallen into the depths from which these persons must be rescued before morality can be taught them. One young girl, sixteen years of age, not bad looking, on whose features crime had not yet stamped its seal, looked on the opposite side of the room, where some lady visitors were seated, and, with a deep sigh, said, "Oh, God, I wish I was like them. I was once, but it's too late now!" The tears dropped over her lost purity, and, unable longer to stand the contrast she had instituted, she rose quickly and went forth to the wickedness whence she came. Another said, "These are good people, but what can they do for us?" Others of them laughed and sneered, but when youth and home and mother were spoken of, the eyes of the most hardened were brimming with tears.

The men were a study. Some of the worst characters of Water street were present. Pickpockets, genteel loafers, burglars, bullies, dog fighters, stood side by side. Some were dirty, most of them low-browed and villa nous looking. Kit Burns, of Sportsman's Hall, stood outside, not being bold enough to venture in. Coleman was there too—Peter Coleman. This person is not known to fame unless in the courts. If John Allen is the wickedest man in New York, certainly Peter Coleman has the hardest looking face. His head is round, like a cannon ball; the cheeks puffed out, almost hiding the small, cunning eyes; the nose a horrible pug; the forehead furrowed deeply; the whole forming a countenance which when filled with liquor as it was last night, glows like a red hot coal. His body is short and stout, his feet are crooked, one of them lame, and one of his hands is deformed. We are glad to say this man was impressed and confessed he would like to be a better man.

Thirty children come in to see the fun, as they termed it. They are unclean, their clothes rent in many places, their faces unwashed, their hair uncombed. Many have no shirts or caps, but then the weather is warm. These children are "gutter snipes," as they are called. Some of them are born in the gutter, bred in the gutter, and die in the gutter. Among them are bright faces too, and had they been born under better auspices, they would be bright, intelligent, school-going children, and not outcasts, being educated already in the rudiments of crime. Two or three little girls, with intelligent, handsome faces, sit together in one seat. They are children of men like John Allen, who, like him, may love their children, but have not courage to leave their horrible trade for their sake, if for nothing else.

Mrs. Allen sat at the table near Mr. Arnold, her baby in her arms. She expressed herself overjoyed at John's reformation, and said she had been awaiting it for years. John stood in different parts of the room during the evening, one time with his arms crossed upon his breast behind the bar near Mr. Van Meter, and again at the door. He looked not sad, but rather proud that he had created such a sensation. The title of the "Wickedest Man in New York" will never kill John Allen. He is fond of notoriety in his own way, and he has got it. He was attentive during the service, joined in the singing, and stood with covered face and bowed head when prayer was being made.

The service was opened by Mr. Arnold, who gave out the hymn,

"More like Jesus would I be,
Let my Savior dwell with me."

All who knew the tune or words, or could read the hymn book, joined in the singing. The voices of the women were distinctly heard, and they were sweet, though it is true that the effect of all the voices was not harmony. One woman persisted in singing the words "More like Jesus" all the time. She knew no more. The gamins kicked up a row and added their voices to the discord. Eventually the hymn was sung through. Mr. Hamilton prayed, but was interrupted by the boys, who commenced playing pranks on each other, and the laughter of the grown-up children added to the confusion. As soon as the prayer was ended, the boys were put out. Quiet having been restored Mr. Van Meter gave out the hymn commencing,—

"O come to Jesus now, Jesus is here,
All low before him bow, Jesus is here."

This was sung with much feeling and correctness. Mr. Arnold then spoke a few plain telling words. The next hymn is entitled "There's room for all." It was well rendered, and at its conclusion Mr. Van Meter prayed. Mr. Oliver Dyer made a short address, the most effective made during the evening. It was short, pithy, and to the point. "Jesus paid it all" was sung, and Mr. Arnold said a few words, and Dr. Perry followed in prayer. Mr. Arnold then called upon John Allen to say something. John smiled, looked bashful, and said:

"I don't know what to say. I rejoice to have a prayer meeting here. It is a friendly gathering, and I shall be glad to have it repeated next Sunday night." A portion of one of the hymns previously sung was given out, and got through all right, with the exception that in the middle of it a woman put in her head and called out another, saying her place was on fire. The woman called did not stir, however. Mr. Arnold finally gave out the hymn, "Shall I be there?" which he said was the favorite of little Chester. It was well sung. Chester sat on the bar counter alongside Mr. Arnold, and his clear, strong voice was heard all over the room singing his choice hymn. After some remarks by Dr. Ward, of Newark, N. J., the doxology was sung, and the benediction pronounced. It was announced that at the request of the Wickedest Man a daily prayer meeting would be held at noon, commencing to-day. The visitors bade John and his family good night and went home with plenty of food for reflection.

HOW TO AVOID A QUARREL.—A true story is told of a lady who complained to her minister that her husband was always quarreling with her every time he came into the house. The good minister, suspecting the true cause, told her to fill her mouth with flour when she saw her husband coming. She did so, and to her great surprise her husband did not quarrel with her at all."

A PLACE FOR PRAYER.—"Where do you find a place to pray in?" was asked of a pious sailor on board a whaling ship.

"Oh!" he said, "I can always find a quiet spot at the masthead."

"Sam, do you find a spot for secret prayer?" asked a minister of a stable-boy.

"O yes, sir, that old couch is my closet."

ROBERT THE STONE-THROWER.

"Shame upon you, Robert," said Mrs. Wilson to her son, as they walked across the field towards the church, "you grieve me exceedingly by throwing stones at the poor little birds; and then to do it on the Sabbath day. It is very sad,"

Mrs. Wilson turned toward her husband, after having addressed these words to her little boy, and, with a sigh, which evidenced a mother's deep concern, she said, "I fear that something sad will happen to Robert some day on account of his cruelty."

"Lads will be lads," replied Mr. Wilson.

Robert overheard the words of his father, and he gave a very disobedient look to his mamma. When he returned from church he went into the garden, and whilst his mamma was dressing for dinner, he threw several stones at the birds, one of which lamed a pretty little sparrow, so that it could never fly about as it had done before.

Although Robert's mamma did not see this act of wicked cruelty and disobedience, he who said "not one of them (sparrows) is forgotten before God" did. O yes, God saw it; and let all disobedient boys and girls who read this ever remember those solemn words of sacred Scripture, "Be sure your sin will find you out."

As Robert grew older, his cruelty increased. Flies, birds, dogs, donkeys, and horses, suffered from his hard-hearted ways. Bad as this was, it is not the worst that I have to tell. It has been frequently observed that children who practice cruelty to the dumb creation grow up to be bad men and women, and in not a few instances, has it been found to be the case that those parents who have refused to properly correct their offspring for acts of cruelty, have, in after years, been the greatest sufferers by the ingratitude of their children.

It was so in this instance. When Robert grew up to be a man he was noted for his wicked conduct. On one occasion, in a fit of passion, when his parents would not give him money to squander in sin, he actually struck his father.

That father now lies in the church-yard. He died broken-hearted. What earthly friend will continue to love like a mother? Long did Robert's mother bear with her son's dissolute conduct; but at length her strength and spirits failed, and she, too, was laid in the silent tomb.

Whether Robert still lives or not, I do not know. It is now several years since I saw him. He was then walking on crutches. His leg had been injured by a stone, and notwithstanding all the skill of the doctors, he was pronounced to be a cripple for life. As I looked upon him I thought of his boyhood, and the stone which broke the sparrow's leg, and of those impressive words of our Savior: "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."—Matt. 7: 2.

There would be fewer heart-broken parents in the world if the counsel of the wise man were better attended to. "Chasten thy son while there is hope." Prov. 19: 18. "He that spareth the rod hateth his son; but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes." Proverbs 13: 24. "Withhold not correction from the child." Proverbs 23: 13.—Child's Paper.

HOW TO BE A MAN.

Not long since a boy of some seventeen years of age called on a merchant doing a large business in New York. Being busily employed at the time, he had to wait a little before getting an opportunity for the interview. Occasionally the merchant cast a glance at him as he stood respectfully at a short distance. He was rather poorly clad, and showed evidences of pretty hard work; but his face indicated honesty and common sense, with a firm and energetic manliness, under the somewhat rude exterior. A practised business man requires but a brief examination of a boy to declare as to his weight and worth of character.

When at liberty, the merchant said:—"Well, my young friend, what can I do for you?"

"I called, sir," he replied, "to ask you for a situation as an engineer. I was told you were having a new engine built, and I want you to give me the place. I'd like to run it for you."

"Are you an engineer?" asked the gentleman.

"No, sir; but I can be," he answered, setting his lips firmly together, standing squarely before the gentleman, and looking him full in the face. "I don't understand the business well; I know something of it though. But I can be an engineer—and I will be. And I wish you would give me a chance."

His modest but determined manner pleased the merchant. He was having a new engine built for a certain department of his business, and could of course have as many experienced operators as he desired. It was no object for him to take up an inexperienced boy and attempt to train him; no object except to help the boy. Such deeds he was noted for; a fact which no doubt had encouraged the boy to make this application.

"What are you doing now?" he inquired.

"Working in a machine shop in Brooklyn. I have been fireman, and often worked the engine. I think I could get along pretty well with one now, if anybody will have a little patience with me."

"What wages do you get?"

"Five dollars a week, sir."

"What do you do with your money?"

"Give it to my mother, sir."

"Give it to your mother! humph! what does your mother do with it?"

"Well, you see, there is mother and sister and me; and mother takes in sewing. But it goes pretty hard, you know. They don't give much for sewing, and 'tis pretty hard work, too. And then, with all the other work she has to do, you know she cannot get along very fast at that rate. So I help all I can. If I could get an engineer's place I could get more wages, and it would make it easier for mother."

"How do you spend your evenings? asked the gentleman.

"I attend the free school at the Cooper Institute, and study mechanics," he replied. "I spend all the time I can get studying."

"Do you ever drink liquor?"

He looked up with an expression of astonishment on his countenance that such a question should be asked, but answered firmly:

"No, sir."

"Do you chew, or smoke, or go to the theatre?"

"Never—can't afford it Mother needs the money. And if she didn't, I could make a better use of it. I would like to have some books if I could spare the money to get them."

"Do you go to church or Sunday-school?"

He held down his head, pretending to brush the dust off the floor with his foot, and replied:

"No, sir."

"Why not?" asked the gentleman, a little sharply.

I haven't any clothes fit to wear," he replied. "It takes all the money I can get for us to live; and I can't have any clothes." He looked down at his coarse and well-worn suit. "It didn't use to be so when father was living. I was brought up to go to church and to Sunday school. If I can get to be an engineer, we shall go again. I know that I can run an engine."

Telling him to call at a certain time, when he expected his engine would be ready for use, and he would talk further with him, he dismissed him.

"But he must have that engine," said the merchant to a friend, to whom he related the circumstances. "He will make a man, that boy will. A boy who is determined to be something; who gives his mother all his money to lighten her burdens; who does not use tobacco, and does not go to theatres; who spends his evenings in study after working all day, such a boy will make a man, and deserves to be helped. I have not told him so, but I shall take him and put him under one of my engineers until he is fully capable of taking charge, then let him have the engine. He will get twenty dollars a week then instead of five, and be able to lighten a mother's burdens, have clothes to wear to church, and buy books to aid him in his business,"

A noble boy, though hidden amid hard conditions and under unattractive garbs, will work out and show his manhood. He may not always find friends to appreciate him; but determined, virtuous, and willing to endure, he will in due time conquer.—Mother's Journal.

"THAT'S HOW."

After a great snow storm, a little fellow began to shovel a path through a large snowbank before his grandmother's door. He had nothing but a small shovel to work with.

"How do you expect to get through that drift?" asked a man passing along.

"By keeping at it," said the boy, cheerfully: "that's how!"

That is the secret of mastering almost every difficulty under the sun. If a hard task is before you, stick to it. Do not keep thinking how large or hard it is, but go at it, and little by little it will grow smaller and smaller, until it is done.

If a hard lesson is to be learned, do not spend a moment in fretting, do not lose a breath in saying, "I can't," or "I do not see how," but go at it, and keep at it. Study. That is the only way to conquer it. If a fault is to be cured, or a bad habit broken up, it cannot be done by merely being sorry, or only trying a little. You must keep fighting it, and not give up fighting until it is got rid of.

"PLAYING LIKE A CHRISTIAN."

I heard of two little children, a boy and a girl, who used to play a great deal together. They both became converted. One day the boy came to his mother, and said:

"Mother, I know that Emma is a christian."

"What makes you think so, my child?"

"Because, mother, she plays like a christian."

"Plays like a christian?" said the mother; the expression sounded a little odd.

"Yes," replied the child, "if you take every thing she's got, she don't get angry. Before, she was selfish; and if she didn't have every thing her own way, she would say, 'I won't play with you; you are an ugly little boy.'"

TRUST.

Trust in the Lord! seek thou a home
Where all around is fair;
He'll safely guard us as we roam
All through this world of care.

Seek to do good, and thou shalt dwell
With God, at his right hand;
And of his love delight to tell
To all throughout the land.

Let now thy wrath and anger cease;
Be fervent in the Lord;
Still trust thou in the God of peace,
Rejoicing in his word.

Unto the Lord commit thy way,
And he shall prosper thee;
Rejoice! and live for that glad day,
When Christ our Lord we'll see.

Rest in the Lord; with patience wait
For Him who comes to reign;
This joyful news to all relate,
That Christ soon comes again.

The earth is promised to the meek,
When all things are made new;
That glorious home, oh! may we seek,
With God's own chosen few.

THE CITY OF GOD.

"Glorious things are spoken of thee, oh city of God." Ps. 87:3.

The Psalmist's heart must have been animated with a glorious vision of the future when he made the above expression. His mind could not have been confined simply to old Jerusalem, which, though once glorious with earthly glory, is now numbered with the ruins of earth; its glory has passed away, and is to be trodden down by the Gentiles until the end of this dispensation. The same spirit of prophecy that filled John's heart on the isle of Patmos, must have animated his; for he speaks of the "city of God" as none less than his habitation. "I, John, saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God." Rev. 21:2.

1. One of the glorious things spoken of the city of God is that it is a holy city. This can not be said to have been the characteristic of old Jerusalem; nor, indeed, of any city of this world. It is holy because it is the habitation of God; therefore when the sanctified heart longs and prays for the "fulness of joy there is in the presence of God," it is in substance a prayer for admission into that holy, peaceful, happy place. None but the pure in heart will enter there to be with God, and dwell in his glory. "And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie; but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life."—Rev. 21:27.

2. Glorious things are spoken of the nature of this city. Erroneously as theology has taught us in regard to this city, God's word declares that it is a literal city, for Abraham, now waiting the resurrection trumpet, "looked forward to a city that hath foundations," and declared that its "maker and builder is God," and the Revelator declares that "the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones." Though some have spiritualized this away wholly beyond the comprehension of man, yet, as if to make it more definite and plain regarding its literality, he seeming stands on "a great high mountain," and beholds "that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven," and "lieth four square." Of course, if it is a real, literal city, and descends from heaven, it is philosophically true there must be some material place for it to rest upon. This is according to God's plan. John has a vision of the New Jerusalem; he says, "I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea." The very nature of this vision precludes it from being spiritual (or means something that it does not say). If the "new heaven and new earth" are spiritual, then the "first heaven and the first earth" are, which would not make that position tenable for a moment. But Peter describes the desolation of this earth, at the last day, when "the elements shall melt with fervent heat, and the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up"; and, says he, "Nevertheless, we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." Then we can see through God's plan. The present state of things is not to continue always, but the earth is to be melted, the works therein to be burned up, and the new heavens and new earth are to succeed it. Of that, the city of God is to be the Capital. Then shall the "will of God be done on earth as it is in heaven," and the glory of God cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. This is the eternal future. Thus is this city glorious; for "the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it; and the kings of the earth shall bring their glory and honor into it."

3. Glorious things are spoken of the inhabitants of this city. Jesus told his people, "It is expedient for you that I go away; . . . I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself." None gain admission to that city till Christ comes to judge the world, and decides who has a right to enter there. Its inhabitants will be a tried people, for their loyalty will be tested in this life. They will be an immortal people, for they will put on immortality before they enter. They will be a happy people, for "God will wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." They will be a favored people, for "he that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." "They shall see his face, and his name shall be in their foreheads."

These are glorious things indeed; but they are all within reach of us. Reader, will you be one of those tried, immortal, happy, and favored people who will inhabit the city of God? God will be your Father, Christ your King, and the angels your companions.

THE STUDY OF "REVELATION."

No part of the inspired volume is so much neglected in the daily reading and private study of the christian public, as the Revelation of Jesus Christ to St. John on the isle of Patmos. Hence no part of the divine word is so little understood or appreciated. The rich promises; the glorious portraitures of the saint's Eden home; the resurrection of the dead to life eternal; the destruction of sin, death, the curse, and all who do iniquity, in the lake of fire; the new heavens and new earth springing from the ashen ruins of this planet at the fiat of God; the city of God descending in eternal splendor, resting perhaps upon Mount Moriah, where of yore was seen the presence of the heavenly Shekinah in the Temple made with hands; the throne in the midst of that city on which the King of kings shall reign, his brow pressed with the many crowns of his blood-bought inheritance; the presence of God the Father (for that throne is "of God and the Lamb"), whose hand shall the sweet eternal rest in undisturbed repose; these promises, and pictures of our eternal home, enter but seldom, if ever, into the devotional thoughts of the pious, because of the indifference to, or the neglect of, this sublimest of all the books that constitute the canon of Scripture.

"wipe the tear
From every weeping eye";

The "Revelation" is emphatically a book of prophecy. It is a revelation of things which must shortly come to pass. It is termed the "words of this prophecy." It unfolds in successive and consecutive chains of symbolic prophecy the leading political and ecclesiastical events of earth's dominant empires, and the history of the church through all its ages of persecution and blood, until she finally emerges in the great Reformation begun by Martin Luther and his co-laborers, and spreading broader and broader her wings of salvation, sends the glad tidings of justification through faith in the Son of God round the globe; and, stretching on still further, traces the history of the Church to her militant conclusion in the great consummation of all things, at the second appearing of Jesus Christ to earth to dwell with his saints.

The subject of prophecy should engage every christian mind; especially so when infidelity abounds, and atheism here and there holds up its deformed head. I can not conceive of any thing that should more excite the fears of christians in regard to the eternal well-being of their fellow men, or should cause them to labor more faithfully in earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints, than the respectful infidelity that sometimes goes to church, engages in moral reform, but sneers at the Bible as an inspired book, and Jesus Christ as a Savior from sin. The pernicious influence of this class of teachers is seen and felt far and wide among all classes, but especially among the young. Painful facts illustrating this statement are too numerous to need mention or comment here. The young, and in many instances the aged, are rushing on to the black reefs of infidelity that line the shores of everlasting destruction. What shall save them from the dark abyss? A knowledge of the prophecies, and their fulfillment as evinced in the history of the world, is the greatest external evidence of the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures.

The dark veil of the future is impenetrable to human foresight. Man guesses badly at future occurrences. He knows not the time of his own dissolution. There is but One who views the future and has an unerring knowledge of its events. He inhabits eternity. To him the future is as the past, and both are as the present to us. If he has revealed to us the future, we may know it; if not, we must remain in utter ignorance concerning it. But he has dissipated our ignorance concerning some very important future events, by giving us prophecy, which is a history of events written before their actual occurrence. And the exact fulfillment of the prophetic word, even to minutiæ, proves that some superhuman intelligence has written it, and written it in the Bible. And if all those prophecies which relate to the past have had a complete fulfillment, it is the strongest evidence, reasoning from analogy, that those which belong to the future will have a correspondingly exact fulfillment.

No christian can ignore prophecy, for Christ is the sun, and often the theme of prophetic vision. "The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy."—Rev. 19:10. Even Balaam, a heathen priest, was compelled to sing of God's Anointed in prophetic strain: "I shall see him, but not now; I shall behold him, but not nigh; there shall come a star out of Jacob, and a sceptre shall rise out of Israel."—Num. 24:17. And if a heathen was compelled to prophesy of him, how much more gladly and fully have God's own inspired prophets "testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow."—1 Pet. 1:11. But no prophet has described him in his mediatorial and kingly characters more fully than he describes himself in Revelation.

That we ought to study and give heed to the doctrines of this book, is evident,

1. Because it is a revelation. A revelation is something revealed or made known. It is important that the church should understand and profit by what is made known, or else He would not have revealed it. It is not a book of secrets, for "secret things belong unto the Lord our God, but that which is revealed is for us and our children." And if Almighty God has considered it of sufficient moment to give to us, we ought to consider it of sufficient importance to study and obey.

2. Because it is a Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him. It comes from no doubtful authority. It is a letter of the absent Lord to his household. It is the last letter he will ever write them. It is a duty, as it should be a pleasure, for his servants to study and obey his commands. It is the Shepherd's voice. And the sheep will list to catch and obey every instructive word or sign.

3. Because we are commanded to "hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches"; for it is supposed that every christian will have an "ear" to hear what his Savior says. We should not be commanded to hear, unless we could understand; and we could not understand, unless the language and symbols were sufficiently plain to be comprehended by us. It is objected to Revelation "that commentators so disagree upon the meaning of its symbols, that we cannot determine what their true application is." We reply, commentators differ upon nearly every doctrine of the Bible, even upon the nature of the atonement of Christ. And if we allow this rule to be applied to the Bible, we must reject the gospel itself, and go to perdition in heathen darkness. Those who trust in commentators will doubtless be confused and not benefited; but those who trust in the wisdom of the Holy Ghost as a teacher, will be both instructed and blessed by the sublime truths of this book.

THE LORD'S SUPPER QUESTION.

Should the Lord's Supper be observed by Christians as a yearly festival? The columns of the Herald of Life, as formerly also the pages of the Bible Examiner, have given full expression to the arguments in behalf of the affirmative of this question. These I have endeavored to examine with care; and the result has long since been a perfect conviction that the view which they are adduced to support has no foundation in the Bible. For nearly a year, I have felt that the ground of this confidence should be presented to the readers of this paper. If the theory of a merely annual observance of the Eucharist is unscriptural, its practical influence must be injurious to the cause of Christ. This of itself would be a sufficient reason for undertaking to place the subject before the Lord's children in its true light. The innovation proposed for our acceptance in this matter, is certainly one of no small magnitude; and is, therefore, on account of its own independent merits, to be scrutinized attentively by those who would "prove all things," and "hold fast that which is good." . . . . .

The New Testament teaches that the earliest christian churches observed the Eucharist oftener than once a year. This I call a partial statement of an argument on which I repose the utmost reliance. To make it complete, and valid as an argument, the observance claimed as actual, should also be held to have had divine sanction. This additional claim I do expressly make. Then the argument may be stated thus: Whatever the earliest christian churches did, with divine approval, was right. But the Lord's Supper was observed with divine approval, oftener than once a year, by one of the New Testament churches. Therefore, such frequent observance was lawful and right.

The annual-feast theory falls to the ground, inevitably, if the minor premise in the foregoing is scripturally sustained. Can it be thus sustained? To this point let us now direct our attention. The proposition embraces two points, each of which it will be proper to consider separately.

I. In the first place, then, I affirm that one of the New Testament churches observed the Supper oftener than once a year. What is here asserted as true of one of these churches, I believe is true of all of them. But the present argument has reference to a particular church—the one at Corinth. In support of the position assumed with respect to the usage of this church, I appeal to the 11th chapter of Paul's 1st Epistle to the Corinthians. It is quite incomprehensible to me how any Bible student, who reads that chapter with unprejudiced attention, can fail to see that it clearly discloses a frequent observance of the Eucharist. I think that a distinct apprehension of several points, now to be named, should make this matter plain to every reflecting mind.

1. It must be admitted by all that the 17th and 18th verses of the chapter alluded to, bring to our view the ordinary meetings of the church at Corinth; and, also, that these meetings were not yearly, but frequent. "When ye come together in the church, I hear that there be divisions among you." It would be worse than trifling to suppose that the apostle here loses sight entirely of the schisms that must have appeared in the ordinary meetings of the church, and then levels his rebuke at the same things as occurring once every year. Paul knew what the Master had said about straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel.

2. The word "therefore," in the 20th verse, is conclusive evidence that the coming together of the church, which it mentions, is identical with the coming together spoken of in the 17th and 18th verses. But the coming together in the 20th verse, was for the purpose of eating the Lord's Supper. It follows, therefore, that the Supper was eaten at the ordinary meetings of the church.

3. The supposition—should any one venture it—that the irregularities denounced by the Apostle, in the 20th verse and onward, were such as had connected themselves merely with a yearly festival, will bear not a moment's examination. The idea is sufficiently refuted by the single fact, that Paul had visited Corinth, in person, between the time of his writing this 1st Epistle and the last preceding Passover. This visit being admitted as having taken place, it must be conceded that the flagrant abuses of which he had been informed, and which he seeks in the 11th chapter of his Epistle to correct, must have existed subsequently to both the Passover and the visit. Those abuses were, therefore, in no wise connected with an anniversary occasion of any kind. Besides all this, the entire structure of verses 17–34, of the chapter under consideration, evinces that the writer of the epistle believed that the evils which called forth his reproof were in operation at the time he wrote. If they were, then it is certain that the Corinthians met oftener than once in each year to eat the Lord's Supper.

But why multiply words on a point so plain? I do not believe a single expositor of the Scriptures can anywhere be found who would not say, that the position which I now contend for is the clear and only possible deduction from the portion of holy writ on which I base it. . .

II. In the second place, I affirm that the "frequent celebration" of the Eucharist, by the Corinthians, was justified by the apostle, and thus had the divine sanction claimed by my argument. This asserted approval, by the apostle, is seen,—

1. In his entire omission to rebuke the frequency with which the church at Corinth celebrated the Eucharist. Here is an eminent instance in which we may insist that "silence gives consent." Paul had "received of the Lord" the true doctrine concerning the Supper; and he had delivered it in its purity to the Corinthians. This we learn from his own explicit declaration. Now this true doctrine had become wofully lost sight of in the practice of the church, and the apostle sets himself about the work of correcting the existing abuses. This being the case, I hold it to be simply preposterous, to suppose that he would have failed to discountenance the "frequent celebration" of the Lord's Supper, provided that he had previously taught the church, on the authority of Christ, that it could only be properly observed as "a yearly festival." Certain it is, that such recreance to duty is not, in this particular matter, chargeable upon the modern advocates of the annual observance. It is not easy to believe that our dear brethren of the present day, are more zealous than Paul was to have an institution of the Lord observed in harmony with its original intent.

The yearly theory regards the Lord's Supper as a continuation of the Passover of the Mosaic dispensation. The claim I believe to be unfounded; but it will help us to an illustration. Suppose, then, that in the days of Moses, the Israelites, from a "misconception" of the "design" of the Passover, had taken it into their heads to observe it every week, instead of once a year. Suppose, also, that they had grown somewhat loose in their manner of observing it. They might, for example, have deemed the command to exclude "leaven from their dwellings, as being "more nice than wise," and so have contented themselves with seeing that the article was carefully kept out of their dough during the Passover week. Let us suppose all this to have taken place—then, I ask, how would Moses have acted in the matter? Would that servant of God, "who verily was faithful in all his house," have merely reproved their "disorderly procedure when they did" observe the feast? Or would he have read the riot act to the whole congregation—commanding the people to return straightway to Jehovah's arrangement, and keep the feast only "from year to year"? To ask these questions, is to answer them; and to answer them for Moses and the Israelites, is to answer them for Paul and his disorderly brethren at Corinth.

2. Significant as we may regard the omission of the apostle to rebuke the frequent celebration of the Lord's Supper, it is not our only evidence. What Paul says to the church at Corinth, shows directly and positively that he approved of their "frequent celebration" of the Eucharist. Hear him: "When ye come together therefore into one place, this is not to eat [margin, ye cannot eat] the Lord's Supper." Why not? "For"—here comes the reason, and the only one—"for in eating every one taketh before other his own supper: and one is hungry and another is drunken." Now Paul could not have written in this way, if "the Lord" had taught him the yearly notion which some of our brethren maintain. According to their view, there can be no such thing as a scriptural observance of the Lord's Supper oftener than once a year. With them, the time of its observance is of as great importance as the manner; nor do they hesitate to declare that the "frequent celebration" is not only unauthorized, but that it tends to degrade the institution itself. Not so the apostle Paul. He offers not so much as one lisp of remonstrance against the frequency with which his brethren met together to eat the Supper; his rebuke, on the contrary, is confined entirely to the manner in which they behaved themselves when they were together. I therefore insist that verses 21 and 22 can never be harmonized with the idea, that Paul regarded the Corinthians as celebrating the Supper with too great frequency.

Paul's approval of the church's "frequent celebration" is further involved in the language of the 26th verse. "For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." These, be it observed, are not the Savior's words, but the apostle's. The "ye" addressed were his brethren who ate the Eucharist oftener than once a year. Now Paul says—"as often [even though it be every time "ye come together in the church"] as ye [Corinthians] eat this bread," etc. I beg to know what could be language of approval, if this is not?

Finally, the closing verses are decisive as to this matter of divine sanction. "Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat [we have seen that this can not mean once a year,] tarry for one another. And if any man hunger, let him eat at home; that ye come not together unto condemnation." In this passage the apostle tells his brethren what to do at home, before going to meeting to eat the Lord's Supper; and, also, what to do at the meeting, after they have satisfied their hunger at home. He could not, in any other way, have more explicitly sanctioned the church's act of coming together for the purpose of eating the Eucharist. Settle it, therefore, that the coming together is oftener than once a year, and you put to flight the assumption of a merely annual observance. So I believe, and so I teach. Amen.

In the foregoing observations, I have purposely refrained from any attempt to answer the arguments which are offered in support of the yearly theory. All of them appear to me easy of refutation. But I have desired, in this article, to make one distinct issue respecting the usage of the church at Corinth. If my reasonings in this direction are valid, the arguments on the other side must be fallacious. In due time I shall be glad to show, if I can, that such is their character.—Herald of Life.

GENTLE INFLUENCES.—If the secret of all regenerate hearts could be laid open, we should doubtless view with a mixture of astonishment and gratitude the quantity of benefit which has been and which is affected in the world by the familiar converse, and even by the silent looks, of truly good men.—Bishop Jebb.

For the World's Crisis.

THE TRANSLATIONS OF THE BIBLE BEFORE 1793.

Some months ago, an article from me, showing that the Bible cannot be the two witnesses of Rev. 11, was published in the Crisis. I wish now to add the following items, showing that the Bible was not in sackcloth up to 1793, in the sense that is claimed, nor in any other sense:—

Peter Waldo translated the Bible in 1160. The king of Castile had a translation made in his native tongue in 1280. The German translation was in 1460. Luther translated the New Testament in 1522, and the whole Bible in 1532. Wickliff in 1380. Tyndale's translation was in 1526. But most of these copies were bought up and burned, by order of Toustall, the popish bishop of London. This being a Protestant translation, burning it by order of a Roman bishop surely looks as much like killing the Bible, as burning the Catholic Bibles in France by the infidels. Another edition was published in 1535. Tyndale and two of his associates were seized and burned. Luther's translation was revised and reprinted with notes in 1537. This translation was published in England in 1539, and called Cranmer's Bible. Another edition was printed in 1540, and by a royal proclamation was placed in every church for public use, under the penalty of forty shillings per month. Two years after, it was suppressed by Mary, Queen of England, and then restored by Elizabeth.

John Knox made a new translation in 1560. This is called the Geneva Bible. Archbishop Baker caused a new revision and edition in 1568. This is called the Bishop's Bible. More than thirty editions were printed in as many years. King James disliked this Bible on account of the notes, and ordered our common version by forty-seven of the most learned men. This Bible was published one hundred and eighty-two years before 1793. The German and English Bibles were in no way affected by the French revolution. To say that the burning of some of the Bibles, held by the Papists in France, was the killing of God's two witnesses, to me is an absurdity.

When the revolution in France was over, and quiet was restored, the Bible was left just where it was before 1793, under the control of the Pope, so far as France was concerned. The Protestant Bible was not permitted to be circulated in France until 1832. Therefore, in no sense was the Bible killed or brought to life in or by the French revolution. Calling the Bible the two witnesses will not hold true in any particular whatever, either literally or figuratively. In addition to other objections, I do not see the propriety of dividing the Bible, or word of God, and so making two of it. J. S. WHITE.

For the World's Crisis.

"THY WILL BE DONE."—Matt. 6:10.

This expression is in the prayer which our Savior taught his disciples. It is also in his own earnest prayer, when his soul was exceeding sorrowful. In his actions, sufferings, and death, he was submissive and resigned to the will of his heavenly Father. He practised what he taught. The labors of his life, and all the affecting circumstances of his death, were so many expressions of the sentiment, "Thy will be done." We easily and early learn to say, by memory, "Thy will be done"; but to say so from the heart is often found to be a great and difficult thing.

To yield to the authority and law of another; to have one's inclinations crossed, disappointed purposes broken off, are serious trials. We learn to say to our heavenly Father, "Thy will be done"; but how contrary to this petition do we often find our feelings and practice. Do not our dispositions and behavior seem to say, that we consult our own will much more than the will of our heavenly Father? Do we not very often connect all our ideas of comfort and happiness with having our own way and our own will? How common a thing it is, when our own will is not done, when our pleasure is defeated, when our wishes and expectations deceive us,—to grow impatient, to complain, to feel that our peace is gone. It is a great thing to stand up between a tempting world, which is present, and a heaven which is future, and say to God, "There is none upon earth I desire in comparison with thee." It is a great thing to turn a deaf ear to the pleadings and persuasions of appetite and passion, and amid all the adversities of life to look up to heaven and say, "Father, not my will, but thine be done." Such a prayer, and a life corresponding with it, is the very substance and spirit of religion, and the very foundation and source of all pure happiness. It is a great thing to make this prayer the prayer of our heart, and the rule and purpose of our life.

A little consideration would teach us how proper it is that the will of God should always be preferred to our will. We are ignorant and short-sighted beings. Our will is often perverse and blind. We often find it to be our misfortune and affliction that our will was indulged. We have many sad proofs that our own wills ought not to be our guide. We are at times cast into situations when we are glad to surrender ourselves entirely to the disposal of another. It is a relief to give up ourselves to another's direction and control. Often do we feel our own weakness and insufficiency. Whenever we feel as though we could not offer up this prayer to our Father, let us inquire into the cause of our unwillingness. Why is it that I can not say, "Thy will be done"? Is it that I question his authority, or doubt his wisdom and goodness? Can I imagine that he does not do what is best for me, or that he will not be so faithful to my highest interest as I should be myself? O, I can not entertain such a thought. When I cast my eye around me, and see so many tokens of his care and benevolence; when I retrace all his past dealings towards me; when I search his holy word; and when I also consider my own imperfections, my ignorance of what is best for me, my past disappointments, and my inexperience; I have abundant cause and strong motive to say, "Thy will be done."

Times of suffering and affliction are among the most trying seasons when this prayer is suggested to the mind. How important, in every way, it is that we know God. For we all want some friend; some object on which to lean; some one in whom we can repose unshaken confidence. And without this knowledge of God and trust in him, how doubtful and anxious must we often be in this world of trials. How often our way becomes difficult, perplexed, and dark. Would we avoid a life of fretfulness, impatience, repining, and despondency; a life of comfortless sorrow and helpless grief? Let us know God and trust in him, and also in his Son Jesus Christ. Would we be resigned, calm, and contented? Would we have that peace which the world can not give? O let us trust in the living God.

Heavenly Father, may the thought that I am a stranger on earth, lead me to such an acquaintance with thee, and with the gospel of thy Son, that I may enjoy present peace, and finally become a citizen of heaven. Dear brothers and sisters, pray for me, that when Father calls, Children, come home, I may be one of that glad number who will have a home in the kingdom of heaven. Your sister in Christ, MANNIE L. GREEN.

NOW.

Now! a short word; a shorter thing. Soon uttered; sooner gone. Now! A grain of sand on a boundless plain. A tiny ripple on a measureless ocean. Over that ocean we are sailing; but the only part of it we possess is that on which our vessel at this moment floats. From the stern we look backward and watch the ship's wake in the waters; but how short a distance it reaches, and how soon every trace disappears. We see also some landmarks farther off, and then the horizon closes the view; but beyond, that ocean still rolls far, far away. Memory contemplates the few years of our individual life; history shows us a dim outline of mountains; science tells us that still farther back, out of sight, stretches that vast sea; reason assures us that, like space, it hath no boundary; but all that we possess of it is represented by this small word—Now! The past, for action, is ours no longer. The future may never become present, and is not ours until it does. The only part of time we can use is this very moment—now.

O, listen to the voice of warning now. "Awake thou that sleepest!" Awake now. "Seek the Lord while he may be found!" Seek him now. "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved!" Believe now. Confess to him your sins, ask pardon through his blood, rely on his atonement, implore the help of his Spirit, devote yourself entirely to his service! Do it now. "Strive to enter in at the strait gate" now. Offer the prayer, "God be merciful to me a sinner" now. Too much time has been wasted already. Lose no more. This may be your only opportunity. Seize it now.

Now! for the time is short, and death is near, and judgment threatens! Now! for in eternity it will be too late, and your very next step may land you there! The only season of which you can be sure is now. The purpose may not last till to-morrow; fulfill it now. Fresh difficulties will flood the channel to-morrow—wade it now. The chain of evil habit will bind you more tightly to-morrow; snap it now. Religion is a work for every day; begin it now. Sin exposes to present miseries! escape them now. Holiness confers present joys; seize them now. Your Creator commands; obey him now. A God of love entreats; be reconciled now. The Father from his throne invites; return now. The Savior from his cross beseeches; trust him now. The Holy Spirit is striving in your heart; yield now. "Behold now is the accepted time, behold now is the day of salvation.—Rev. Newman Hall.

For the World's Crisis.

TEMPTATION.

The idea conveyed by the word "tempt" is of Christian origin. The Greeks, Romans, and Gentile nations generally, had no word in their language which conveyed the idea which the christian understands by "being tempted."

The Christian idea, probably, for the first time occurs in the Greek in Mark 1:13, Matthew's gospel having been written in Hebrew. In Jas. 1:13, its usage is established by peirazo. "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God." In Gen. 22:1, where King James' version reads "God did tempt Abraham," the Hebrew "nahsah" means "tested." The Septuagint renders it by epeirase, which may be derived from peirao, to try, as well as peirazo. Wright's Greek Lexicon does not give the meaning of "tempt" to peirazo. The inference is therefore very strong, that the words peirazo and peirasmos were never used in the sense of "tempt" and "temptation" until after the descent of the Holy Spirit.

The proper rendering therefore of the phrase in the Lord's prayer,—"Lead us not into temptation,"—should be, "Lead us not into trial"; notwithstanding that the christian has reason to rejoice when he falls into or encounters divers trials. Jas. 1:2, 3. Some have translated eisenenkes, "suffer us not to be led"; and "abandon us not to"; but the plain sense of eisthero is to bring in, or introduce; although the above may be the idea intended to be conveyed by the whole passage. Lusts entice, but may nevertheless be the decoy ducks of Satan. I. LAMB.

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Sept. 30, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

SARATOGA TENT MEETING.

We arrived at Saratoga Thursday evening, and found Bro. Knapp waiting at the depot, and Brn. Jonas Wendell and Wm. A. Fenn engaged in the meeting at the tent. The weather had been unfavorable, which had prevented a full attendance; and besides it is a hard place to produce a religious sensation, unless it be some fair, festival, or grand pic-nic; then the people will turn out. The great rush of fashionable company that resorts to the Springs in the summer, exerts a chilling influence against pure and undefiled religion. The past season has been noted for the number of visitors to Saratoga, and their extravagance in dress and fashionable display. It was said that Congress Hall had fifteen hundred boarders at one time; and many were sent away for want of room. The Union Hotel, the Clarendon, and several others, have also been full. The Indians have a camp near by, in the pine grove, where they make and sell their nice baskets, fans, bow and arrows, bead work, etc., etc. Their camp is a favorite resort for the Saratoga visitors, who wish to get something from the Indians to carry home. We think there were some forty or fifty tents in the Indian camp. Some of their work is done with superior taste and skill. They find there an excellent market for their curiosities, and do a lively business in the summer. The visitors are now nearly gone.

While at S. we called on Dr. Wark, who has a Movement Cure, on Broadway, in Dr. Bedorathy's building, where he is treating consumptive people with marked success. We were very much pleased with his apparatus for arousing the latent energies of the physical system, and thus aiding nature to throw off disease. He appeared to be well posted in his business, and his common-sense remarks gave us confidence in his mode of treating consumption.

Notwithstanding the unfavorable circumstances with which we had to contend, the meetings in Saratoga have produced very encouraging results. The great indifference to religious things, which was manifested at first, was finally changed to a very deep interest in the minds of many intelligent persons, several of whom were members of other churches, while others who came had made no profession of religion, but became satisfied with what they saw and heard in the tent, that christianity was just what they needed for this life, and to fit them for the one to come. One was baptized on the Sabbath, and received a sweet blessing of peace and joy. We heard that others were beginning to feel it to be their duty to put on Christ, and be buried with him in baptism.

Sr. Holden, from Worcester, was with us, and helped us much in the meetings. Bro. Pike and others came from Sandy Hill, and assisted in the good work. If Brn. Wendell and Fenn could have staid another week with their tent, we think they would have seen some very happy results. Members of other churches had become so deeply interested in the meetings, that they wept when we bade them farewell, and pleaded earnestly for more meetings. They now propose to hire a hall and give the people a chance to hear more about the coming of Jesus, and the other great truths of the Bible that have been so long concealed by fables. There is an open door for the truth—the whole truth—in Saratoga. Bro. and Sr. J. L. Knapp, formerly of Poultney, Vt., were the means of having these meetings. He has been pleading for years, but the way seemed hedged up till now. We trust he will have no occasion to repent over the effort he has made.

OMENS.

It is evident that, in all the civilized world, the impression is gaining ground that "the end of this dispensation" is at hand. It is becoming common talk, and the feeling is rapidly spreading, especially among believers in the Bible. People now speak of it as a matter settled beyond dispute. We do not see how the student of prophecy can come to any other conclusion. Signs are abundant and certain that show Jesus is soon coming.

As straws show which way the wind blows, so do items like the following indicate the pulse of the public press on this subject:—

"Europe is standing aghast, and the boldest men of the age are holding their breath for a time. Louis Veuillot, of the Univers, the leader of the ultramontanes of the world, the highest of high Roman churchmen, and the writer of greatest ability among them,—a man who is more Papist than the Pope himself,—has joined Cavour, Gladstone, and other disendowment celebrities, to advocate the entire separation of the church and state. He also concurs with Dr. Cumming in predicting the end of the 1260 years as nigh at hand, which shall finish up existing arrangements, and leave all things free to start anew. In this rapidly approaching new dispensation, the church (of Rome of course) is to put herself at the head of the universal democracy, and pay no more court to the kings of the earth. This wonderful change of sentiment doubtless given out of the [illegible] of Popery in obtaining her ends from representative governments in the United States, Canada, and Britain."—Montreal Witness.

ROCHESTER.

After riding all night, we arrived in Rochester, Monday morning, Sept. 21st, and found a good resting place at Dr. Nasmore's. How pleasant to a pilgrim to find a happy home, where he can feel all the welcome that he would receive from his mother in his boyhood home. We enjoyed our visit very much in R. We found Bro. H. Pratt faithfully at work in the vineyard of the Lord, enjoying the confidence and support of the dear saints, who with him are looking for the coming of Jesus. His labors have been much blest in leading many to see the truth and embrace it.

We had a precious meeting in the evening. The Spirit of the Lord was with us to afford great comfort to the friends of our Lord. It was a feast indeed. We do not know another city where the candle of the Lord shines more brightly than in Rochester. The work is still onward, and new ones are coming to the light of truth, and leaving all to follow Jesus, and be ready to meet him at his coming.

BUCHANAN.

We left Rochester at noon, Sept. 22d, and arrived in Buffalo in about three hours. We had a pleasant interview in the evening with Brn. Clark, Tanner, and others, at Bro. Emmons'. We found them anxious to have a special effort made for that city, and we hope the time will soon come when such a company may be raised up there as is now in Rochester.

At ten minutes past eight P. M., we were on our way to the Suspension Bridge, en route for Chicago. We arrived at Detroit in the morning, and at Buchanan, Mich., at about 5 P. M., where we received a hearty greeting from Brn. Himes, Mansfield, and their dear families. This was our first visit at B., and will be remembered with pleasure. We first looked over the office of the Voice of the West, and made a special call on the little steam engine, which is the smallest we ever saw, but abundantly able to run their press, turning off one thousand papers per hour. The cylinder for the steam is two inches in diameter inside, and four and a half inches long, and is one and a half horse-power. They now print three thousand and three hundred a week, having added eight hundred last year. The Voice is an excellent paper, exerting a healthy influence, and justly deserves a wide circulation.

They have a very neat and commodious chapel, and a large, living church. A large audience was out in the evening, and we felt at home in the meeting. We could say it was good to be there. A very healthy religious influence is going out from the church at Buchanan. Many prominent men and women in the place love the "blessed hope," and are active members of the church.

We hear a very good report from the great western campmeeting at De Kalb, Ill., which was held at the same time as the one at Alton Bay, N. H. The truth is rapidly spreading in the west, and there are many earnest calls for more laborers. Zealous christian ministers, who are willing to suffer with Jesus, will find plenty of work to do in the western field. It is no place for drones, or for any but true men. They will be cared for and will see rich fruits from their labors.

We were rejoiced to learn that Bro. Sheldon's health is improving, and that he is now able to preach again.

Thursday morning, Sept, 24th, we left Buchanan for Chicago, in company with Bro. Wm. Himes, a noble young man, who renders his father very efficient aid in conducting the Voice of the West. His heart and talent are in the work of the Lord. We expect to begin our tent meeting in Chicago to-morrow evening, Sept. 25th. Pray for us.

AFFAIRS IN EUROPE.

Although this year has been noted for a state of quietude in European politics, observing men see strong reasons to believe that a great war is at hand. The cry of "peace," from men preparing for war as fast as possible, is very much like some of the movements of the natives in this country, in the time of the early settlers. When the Indians were laying a plan to kill all the inhabitants of a village, they would go and trade in a very friendly manner the day before the massacre, in order that the people should not suspect their plans; so now, Napoleon and others are talking "peace," in order that other nations may not be alarmed, and prepared for coming events.

A cable dispatch of Sept. 15th. says:—

The Pall Mall Gazette of this afternoon has a leading article on the prospects of peace or war. It says that in every capital of Europe the belief that a great and immediate war is impending grows day by day, and that the best informed men expect it to break out before the end of the year."

The following is another news item:—

"Letters from Aix-la-Chapelle mention that the city of Triero (Treves,) Rhenish Prussia, is fully armed and prepared to sustain a siege, the garrison numbering twelve thousand men. Rhenish Prussia is alive with troops and forty thousand men are ready to seize Luxemburg and fortify themselves there should a telegram from Berlin order them to do so."

"THE WORLD IN COMMOTION."

Under the above heading, dated Sept. 20th, we find the following:

The recent earthquakes in South America, by which thousands of human lives and millions of property were in a moment utterly destroyed, suggests the thought that the whole world is now threatened with commotions which, if precipitated, will prove eventually as destructive to life and property as did the recent earthquake.

The condition of all Europe is threatened by questions in the solution of which are involved the prospects of peace or war. There is a belief in every capital of Europe that a great and immediate war is impending, and that it will break out before the end of the year.

France is threatened by a gigantic war with Russia, and if the conflict is inaugurated Russia will doubtless interfere and the struggle will become general throughout Europe. France and Russia are already measuring words and gathering their forces for the mighty revolution that threatens the two nations.

Spain is agitated with internal dissensions, and it is not improbable that what seemed at one time only a cabinet emeute will yet deepen into a savage revolution. The safety of Isabella's throne is constantly in jeopardy while Montpensier lives, and if revolution does come Napoleon will not be idle.

In Italy the revolutionary serpent is scotched, not killed. The spirit of freedom engendered by Garabaldi, is spreading daily to all parts of the kingdom, and unless all indications are erroneous, there will yet ensue a struggle that will shake the throne of royalty to its foundations.

The relations between Russia and Holland have recently been ruffled by the rupture of certain negotiations, and a dispute has arisen that is not unlikely to result in open hostilities.

Turkey has a tremendous rebellion on her hands in the Cretan uprising, and Japan and China are rocked to their very centers by internal revolutions. England rests on a mine that is liable to be exploded at any time. The discontented elements of Irish freedom cannot be quieted and must soon break out in open and formidable revolt.

The London Times urges the government of Great Britian at once to invade Affghanistan as a step to checkmate Russia in her rapid strides towards India. Russia, having taken Bokhara, is upon the border of Affghanistan, and that is the only territory that separates the British possessions from the Russian.

The armies of most of the monster governments of Europe are now on a war footing, and it is only a question of time which will assume the aggressive first.

South America is continually in a condition of uproar—either shaken by terrible convulsions and upheavals of nature, or rent by the thunders of conflicting forces within her borders. The Paraguayan war is now uppermost, and is likely to continue so. The smaller States are constantly warring against the greater, and revolt follows revolt in quick succession.

Mexico, never at peace, cannot long escape a terrible revolution. Every part of that unhappy country is to-day the scene of carnage and strife between opposing political or religious factions.

In our own land, unhappily, there is not that assurance of peace and prosperity which the close of the rebellion four years ago warranted us in believing would certainly ensue. It is not extravagant to predict that the nation is approaching another era of internicine strife more intense and disastrous than any that has preceded it.

Thus, the whole world, although not in a state of actual conflict, is lingering on the verge of war. The forces of nature and mankind are feverishly at work, and the results are hidden in that boundless future which is both unexplored and unexplained to man.

NOW READY.

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"HYMNS OF THE JUBILEE HARP,"

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

By the Advent Chris. Pub. Society.

Among the thousands who sing from "The Jubilee Harp," there are many hundreds, especially the aged, to whose eyes the fine print of the Harp is a great discomfort and inconvenience, and who would gladly welcome an edition of the same excellent hymns, in a convenient form, in large, clear type. The above work is issued especially for them, and we trust they will find it just what they want.

There are hundreds also who sing from the Harp, who never use the notes, and who would therefore be just as well and better pleased with a book containing the same hymns, without the music, at a lower price. This book was got up also especially for them, and will, no doubt, be to all such just the thing they desire.

This edition of "The Hymns" is not, by any means, intended to supercede "The Harp." It is designed as a companion to it; and is so arranged, with references, that hymns given out from the one can be readily found in the other.

The whole has been carefully revised and corrected, and a brief supplement of choice and popular hymns appended. The typework was done in our own office, and in a style, we trust, not inferior to that of any other.

It is a volume of 576 pages, containing some 850 Hymns and Anthems, substantially bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, at 75 cents, single copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100. Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9.50 per dozen; $75.00 per 100. It is cheaper by far than any similar work that we know of in the market. When sent by mail, 16 cts. additional postage. AG'T.

NEW MUSIC.

"O I must be a Lover of the Lord," and "Gathered in the Morning." On one sheet. Price 5 cts., postage 2 cts. Also, "Blessed Tidings." Price 5 cts., postage 2 cts.

For sale at this office. AG'T.

SIMPLICITY IN LANGUAGE.

We commend the following excellent advice to all writers and public speakers. Many might write and speak in an entertaining manner if they would only follow this advice, who now make complete failure because they try to be like some one else, or to do something beyond their capacity:

"Above all things don't part with your common sense when you write. You need not make an idiot of yourself, because you have a pen in your hand. Be simple, be honest, be unaffected in your speaking and writing. Never use a long word where a short one will do. Call things by their right names; never smother your thought with a cloud of phrases; let a spade be a spade, not a well-known oblong instrument of manual industry; let home be home, not a residence; a place be a place, not a locality. Write much as you would speak; speak as you think. With your inferiors speak no coarser than usual; with your superiors no finer. Be what you say, and say what you are. Avoid all oddity of expression. The wise man will so speak that no one may observe how he speaks. Above all, do not bore your company with an affectation of precision and accuracy. One of the worst [illegible] is the talker who is always setting [illegible]. If some one says 10,000 men were [illegible] some battle, do not tell him that it [illegible] 970. Allow for a little latitude [illegible] freedom of easy talk, and be [illegible] with a certain degree of harmless [illegible] when no false impression [illegible] intended. Talk to please not yourself [illegible] your neighbor; give him the refreshment [illegible] by a cheerful, modest, sensible [illegible] one who is equally ready to [illegible] or to take [illegible] and who [illegible] his opinions [illegible] in which they were uttered. Be a gentleman in openness of [illegible], in simplicity of language, in freedom from singularity. Show your good taste and good breeding in your speech and style, if not in the fashion of your dress or your knowledge of etiquette.

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at the National Campmeeting, Chapin's Grove, Springfield, Mass., [illegible], 1868, the following resolutions were adopted:—

Resolved, That we raise TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year.

Resolved, That our preaching brethren be, and hereby are, requested to act as Agents in this good work, to solicit contributions to the Tract Fund, as often at least as once in every quarter, and forward the same to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, BOSTON, MASS.

For the World's Crisis.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Dear brethren and sisters, and all who read the Crisis, and are interested in the work of the Lord:—

The number of the Crisis which comes to hand this morning contains a letter from a "Widowed Sister," on behalf of our precious interest in this city, which does our hearts and our faith much good. We did not know until this morning that any one outside our little circle felt any special interest in us. We really now "thank God and take courage." That widowed sister's mite, sympathy and prayers, will not be as "water spilt on the ground." No, the Lord, the widow's "husband," "will avenge his own elect."

Dear friends, if you could personally inspect our necessities, the importance of the field we occupy, remembering that it is in the Capital of the nation; and the real, heartfelt earnestness of our little few, in their struggle with poverty, persecution, and all manner of evil speaking; their beautiful harmony and good, social fellowship; their interesting S. School of one hundred scholars and fifteen teachers; the self-denying labors of the pastor (and his family), who is at present really broken down with incessant toil and want of rest;—we do feel sure you would all do something to aid us in our cause. We only ask $2500. Shall we ask in vain? We have subscribed about $250 towards the building site—to cost $500, and with $2000 we shall put up and complete a nice house, splendidly located, thirty feet by fifty; with a small Sunday School room at the back. Our pastor (who gives all his services) and his family together subscribe $75 in the $250. Are there not twenty servants of God, who look for the speedy coming of Jesus and his kingdom, who are able and willing to send us $100 each? How could they contribute $100 to a better and more deserving cause?

Dear brethren and sisters, please send "over and help us." The time will soon be at an end when such opportunities of doing what we can for the Lord will be available. Now is the time to give, do, and pray. The Master is near, and the reward will come with him. We are also greatly encouraged by the blessing of the Lord on our work. We commenced with nothing last December, and "behold, what hath God wrought!" We organized in April with eighteen members; now we number twenty-six, the Lord having given us eight souls by conversion and baptism. We have also at the present time two or three anxious ones. We all wish to thank the "widowed sister" for her dollar, and still more for her sympathy and prayers.

Hoping soon to be enabled to "arise and build," and again begging that our brethren and sisters in the Lord will promptly respond to our appeal, as we are very desirous of getting into our proposed house this fall, we are your brethren and sisters in "the kingdom and patience of Jesus."

WHO ARE METHODISTS?

Some time last spring, Bro. Joseph Chapman, a superannuated Methodist preacher, had published in the Northern Christian Advocate an article on the "Kingdom of Christ," showing that it would be a literal kingdom on earth, as virtually as was David's kingdom of old. Shortly after it was followed by an article from the pen of a cotemporary brother Methodist, stating that Bro. Chapman sometimes occupied his pulpit, and, as both were Methodist ministers, and both sometimes preached to the same congregation, they ought as much as possible to preach in unison with each other.

But how does he try to get them in "unison" with each other? By taking the "word of God," and reasoning together? By no means. He takes up his "commentaries," and shows from them that "Methodist standard authors," such as Clarke, Wesley, Wheadon, and others, did not believe such a doctrine; and, therefore, if a man preaches it "he can not be a Methodist"! So you discover that if God's word teaches anything contrary to the teachings of these wise men, in order to be a Methodist the "word" must be thrown aside, and we must cling to the teachings of "standard" authority!

All this is the result of being bound by a creed. But I apprehend that Bro. Chapman is too far advanced to think of being muzzled by his old associates, should he see fit to break over the traditions of his forefathers, in this or any other respect. If an individual must believe what all "Methodist commentators" have written, in order to be a Methodist, I pity them. Dr. Clarke, on Eccl. 3; 19–21, says:—

"Solomon most evidently makes an essential difference between the human soul and that of brutes. Both have souls, but of different natures; the soul of man was made for God, and to God it shall return; God is its portion; and, when a holy soul leaves the body, it goes to Paradise. The soul of the beast was made to derive its happiness from this lower world. Beasts shall have a resurrection, and have an endless enjoyment in a new earth."—Clarke's Com., vol. 3, p. 581.

Here Dr. Clarke not only teaches that brutes have souls, but also that they are to have a resurrection [illegible]. Must an individual believe this in order to be a Methodist?

Again, Dr. C. says,—"The first death consists in the separation of the soul from the body."—Com., vol. 6, p. 1004. Now as he admits, nay, teaches, that beasts have souls as well as men; and as Solomon says, "As the one dieth, so dieth the other"; if death means a separation of the soul from the body, the Dr. must have held to the separate existence of the souls of beasts, as well as that of men! And, as it is contended that "the soul perpetuates the conscious identity of the dead", and as Solomon declares, "All go to one place"; it legitimately follows that if the souls of men on leaving the body go immediately to Paradise, the souls of beasts must follow suit.

This is not making men like beasts, but making beasts like men. J. W. TAYLOR.

DEATH OF SISTER NORTHRUP.—Just as we go to press, the sad news comes of the death of Sr. F. C. Northrup, a faithful teacher and helper in the Memphis Mission. She fell asleep in Jesus on the evening of the 23d inst., at Memphis, Tenn. May she soon awake to life eternal. AG'T.

For the World's Crisis.

WHOM SHALL WE PLEASE?

There are some people who seem very anxious to please everybody. They are "hale fellows well met" with all classes of whatever age, condition, or sex. They harmonize perfectly with people of the most different sentiments, tastes, and habits. They are everybody's particular friend, and are especially interested in everybody's affairs. In whatever society they chance to be, with all persons of every variety, their motto seems to be, "I'm with you." They sympathise with all, and work their way into the confidence of people, until they get their very capacious brains so full of the secrets of their neighbors, they swell to an enormous size and feel their pomposity amazingly. They are not confined to sect, party, or doctrine. They hang on a swivel, and can turn with every breath that blows. In order to agree with everybody, they must take very different sides with different persons.

They have one story for A., another for B., and still another version of the same matter for C. They have the faculty to cook the same material in a variety of ways to suit the different palates around them. But after a time A., B. and C. get together and compare notes, and when they find they do not agree, of course their confidence is destroyed. They find that these officious sympathizers have been in reality their worst enemies. Beneath the garb of friendship were concealed poisoned arrows. Alarmed at the proximity of danger they stand aloof, feeling that "better are the wounds of a friend, than the kisses of an enemy."

Then the poor men-pleasers feel very much abused. They are so extremely innocent, and have tried so hard to work themselves into the good graces of all, they think people are very ungrateful to withhold their commendation, and go so far as to accuse them of being envious of their wonderful accomplishments. Dear me! I should as soon think of coveting the glossy coat and brilliant colors of a serpent. "O, my soul, come not thou into their secret; unto their assembly, mine honor, be not thou united." Some people seem to have no conscience; do what they will, they always feel "perfectly justified."

But whom shall we please? Please God. Whether men frown or smile, whether they become our friends or our foes; in all circumstances, under all trials, whether it bring us riches or poverty, honor or reproach, life or death, let us seek to please the God of our salvation, the Lord who bought us with a price. This life is short. The friendship of this world at best will soon pass away, but the friendship of Jesus will endure when time shall be no more.

Please God. He will take care of earthly friendship if we are true to him; but if we leave the banner of the Prince of life, and count his friendship too small for our demands, and go out under false colors to electioneer for friends in our own strength, we shall certainly fail; where we gain one friend, we shall make two enemies.

O for true, honest, upright, faithful souls, who will stand up for what is right, and discountenance wrong; who will exalt virtue, war against vice in all its forms; who will make no compromise with hypocrisy and deceit; who will defend the truth when it is covered with reproach and ignominy, as well as when it is looked upon with favor by the proud and popular; who are willing to wear a crown of thorns in this ungodly world, if they can have the smile of the crucified One, and a crown of glory in the world to come.

God help us to be true to ourselves, true to our fellow men, true to God our Father, and to Christ our Savior, that we may enjoy the smiles of heaven, and be clothed upon with the righteousness of Christ, and finally walk with him in white. O. W. S.

For the World's Crisis.

OPPORTUNITY.

"Opportunity is the flower of time. As the stock may remain after the flower is plucked, so time may remain with us after the opportunity is gone."

This is a wise saying, and should be indelibly impressed upon every mind. Who has not had opportunity to make his peace with God, and to do good to others? Who has not had occasion to regret lost opportunities? but the real worth of them will only be known at the great reckoning day. May those that are past be forgiven, and we improve those allotted to us hereafter, so that it may be said to us, Well done. D. N. SMITH.

DESTRUCTION OF THE CRESCENT.

The following is a straw from Russia:—

"The populations in Russia are greatly excited by the preaching of an old Muscovite peasant named Alexis Alexandrovitch, who, after a seclusion of several years, appeared in the district of Samara, declaring himself a prophet. He is now going from place to place announcing the approaching destruction of the Crescent and the substitution of the Greek Cross for it on the dome of St. Sophia at Constantinople. The Russian government allows every liberty of action and language to this popular agitator, who besides does not attack the laws or the administration in any way. His doctrines are those of the old Russian party."

☞ Trouble and perplexity drives us to pray, and prayer drives away perplexity and trouble.

Correspondence.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—We closed our campmeeting at Olustee Sunday night, and can say it was one of the most quiet, orderly campmeetings I ever saw; not one to make any disturbance or show any disrespect, but all came to be benefited; and such attention was delightful. I baptized seven, and seven signed the "Covenant." And, thank the Lord, one preacher (missionary, Baptist), by the name of Thomas Green, came out and made a public confession of the Advent faith, and signed the Covenant, and will do all he can in spreading the gospel of the kingdom. He has subscribed for the Crisis, and has all the books he has been able to obtain at present. His whole heart is in the work.

It is three months last Saturday since I came back to Florida, and in that time I have held two campmeetings, planted the truth in five different localities, and supplied the church at Jacksonville and Lake City with preaching almost every other Sunday. Have baptized sixty-one, and raised up one church of over fifty names, who meet every Sunday to pray, sing, and exhort one another. They have subscribed over $150 for a meeting-house, and expect to start a Sabbath School and support a preacher part of the time.

I start for home in Rochester, N. Y., today, but shall, the Lord willing, return as soon as duty requires. I leave with bright hopes that this "gospel of the kingdom" will be preached all through the Southern field. Yours in hope, P. A. SMITH.

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 16th.

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—The Lord is doing a good work here. Our revival is still increasing. Two have been converted at almost every meeting since we came home, and last evening nine asked for prayers, and two came forward. O! I thought, what a difference between these meetings and those we had in the woods. Here sinners come trembling and weeping, begging for mercy, with such earnest praying; and they never stop till they find peace.

Our mission people enjoyed themselves much at the two campmeetings. We had eleven of them at Springfield, and five at Alton Bay, where we had our large wooden tent for the accommodation of the missionaries. The friends at Alton Bay were very kind to us and our people, especially those from Portland; they took us all in, soul and body, the first three days, to eat at their table, without money and without price,—my family, my missionaries from Virginia, and missionaries from New York, and the colored people.

I found many of my old friends on the ground, and it did me good to meet with them and hear their experience of the past year. I found that all the Lord's children are passing through severe trials; some in one way, and some in another, showing that we are down in the time called "perilous." O that God may give his children grace in these days to say, and realize it—"Be still, and know that I am God." O for grace to be still! There seems to be such strife, grievous jealousies, evil-surmisings, in these days, it is almost impossible for those who are in the struggle to keep still.

"Be still, my heart, these anxious cares
To thee are burdens, thorns and snares;
They cast dishonor on thy Lord,
And contradict his gracious word.

Brought safely by his hand thus far,
Why wilt thou now give place to fear?
How canst thou want if he provide,
Or lose thy way with such a guide?

Did ever trouble yet befall,
And he refuse to hear thy call?
And has he not his promise past,
That thou shalt overcome at last?

Though rough and thorny be the road,
It leads thee home, apace, to God;
Then count thy present trials small,
For heaven will make amends for all."

This is the experience of the present day, but as I have not time now to write all I would like in regard to our mission work, you may expect to hear from me again ere long.

From Sr. C. C. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel this morning that Jesus is round about me like a wall of fire, and nothing can hurt or drive me from him. I have an abiding faith and trust in him, that the foolish things of this world can not take away. I praise my heavenly Father that my peace is like a river. My brethren and sisters, how good it is to have our faith stand in the power of God, not in the wisdom of men, and to trust in the Lord Jesus Christ; for in him there is everlasting strength.

Let us get on the whole armor of God, our lamps trimmed and burning, ready to meet that dear Jesus whenever he may come. How sweet it will be, after a long night of toiling on the wretched ocean of life, to see Jesus coming to take us to himself. I long to see him, and those dear loved ones I have laid away to sleep until that blessed morning. I long to see that day, and although I have arrived at the age of almost fourscore years, I believe I shall see the King come in his beauty, with all his holy angels, and hear the welcome sound, "Come, ye blessed of my Father!" But the highest note that I shall ever raise will be, Jesus, thy blood alone hath saved me!

And now, my dear brethren and sisters, the Lord says, "Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." I received a letter from sister A. E. Smith's Mission. It very much grieved my heart to hear they were in want. There had been nothing sent in for a long time, and they were quite destitute, and had been eating mush and molasses. Well, that is good prison fare, but I think those that are set at liberty by the Lord Jesus Christ, and are laboring in his vineyard, are worthy of more and something better. Our Savior says, "The laborer is worthy of his hire"; and, "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Now I feel that I am an heir of God, and joint-heir with Jesus Christ; and God knows if I had some of those "bonds" that many have, I should be cutting them off to give to those who are suffering for the comforts of life.

I pray God that the Mission may not run down. I believe it is the will of God that it shall stand until he comes to take his weary people home. Do not let us be found, when our Lord shall come, with any of the Babylonish garments upon us. Giving doth not impoverish us; it is the reverse. Christ says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Let us arouse ourselves, and, with all the power God will bestow upon us, come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty, and put means into the hands of the laborers in the vineyard of our Lord. Your sister, looking for speedy redemption, C. C. SMITH.

So. Hadley Falls, June, 1868.

From Bro. D. D. Reed.

BRO. GRANT:—I left Memphis the last of May, and arrived at Minneapolis, Minn., in June. I was four days on the great Mississippi. I pitched my big tent in the city of Minneapolis, and commenced meetings. Brn. Himes and Fassett were with me. The Lord blessed our labors. Great good was done. One young man, a Swede by birth, was converted all over into the blessed hope. He has gone one hundred miles up the Mississippi, to tell his people about the Lord's coming. Thus the Lord works to get the light before all nations.

I took down my tent the last of June. I now have it pitched thirty miles from Minneapolis, in the town of Prescott, on the east side of the great Mississippi. I have been here about two weeks. A number have been converted, and the work of God is progressing in power. Brother William is laboring with me. He is a good preacher. His wife was converted to God last night, and we all gave glory to God. She said she could hold out out no longer. Bro. Fassett goes with the tent. He is a good workman, you all know. Two-morrow we shall baptize.

Our next place is to Hudson. They are praying us to come over and help them. Here is a great field, where no tent has ever been. God's glory goes with the pentecostal tent. We have no hobbies to preach to the people, but repentance and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and all kindred doctrines connected with the gospel. We think good, sound, gospel truth is good enough. I do not think God will say to me, "Well done, good and faithful servant," if I have been preaching lies. The Lord help us to preach truth, and nothing but the truth; the faith that works by love and purifies our hearts. In order to do good, we must have the sanctifying power of God and the Holy Spirit in our hearts. In our flesh dwelleth no good thing. O for a closer walk with God. Yours in the blessed hope,

Prescott, Wis., July 18. D. D. REED.

From Bro. J. Chapman.

BRO. GRANT:—I truly feel that we are occupying a solemn moment of time, when wicked men are waxing "worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived," and nothing but the pure love of God in the heart, and his all-sufficient grace, will enable us to stand amid the deceitfulness of this world, and the buffetings of the enemy. I thank the Lord that there are a few who are willing to take the Bible and to stand out boldly, and defend the truth, through all the fiery darts which are continually being hurled at us on every side, by those who are under his control, and led captive by him at his will. I am still trying to do my Master's work. The cause where I am laboring is in a good condition. I have enjoyed the privilege of burying forty-two in the likeness of their Master's burial during the past year.

I believe time is short. Soon we shall see our King returning to set up his kingdom here on earth, and what is done must be done quickly to save perishing men.

JOHN CHAPMAN.

Magog, P. Q., July 30th, 1868.

From Sr. C. E. Gilbert.

BRO. GRANT:—We are still almost alone in our faith of Christ's appearing, and have to contend with opposition and scorn on every hand. For two years we have been endeavoring, with the help of the Lord, to let our light shine before the people, and I bless God that there is now an interest manifesting itself to hear the truth. As the interest increases, our opponents are becoming more bitter and zealous against us; but the Lord is still with us, and is blessing his truth. I have distributed those tracts that I received from you a short time ago, and they have done a great deal of good. They have been the means of leading many to search their Bible with a deeper interest than ever before; and many have said that they have afforded them greater light upon that holy book, than anything that they have ever read or heard before; and I am often asked, Have you any more of those tracts? I should be glad to have more of them, but I am a poor woman, and have myself and child to support by my daily labor, and am not able to do as much as I would like in the cause of my blessed Master; but I am glad that he has permitted me to do a little, for I feel it to be a great privilege to be counted worthy to work for Christ. I have obtained the use of a hall in which to hold meetings, and have written to Bro. Cole, of Rhode Island, to come and preach the word to the people. C. E. GILBERT.

Baltic, Ct., June 28th, 1868.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

DEAR BRN.:—You see the call from the Sec'y for the quarterly conference in Chelsea, to commence Oct. 20, continuing certain days. The church here send greeting, and give you a cordial invitation to this feast of days. Do not disappoint us, but at once decide to come; lay aside every care but the cause of Christ and his coming, and a preparation of a people to shine as the sun in the firmament for ever and ever. Let our interest be made manifest in this good work. Thine for a waking up,

Sept. 25th. L. BOUTELL.

From Bro. S. L. Manley.

BRETHREN AND FRIENDS:—Please to direct all communications for me to Rochester, N. Y., as I now make it my stopping place, awaiting the coming of Jesus, and then I hope and expect to have a permanent home. Praise the Lord. A great work has been accomplished in this city, and more is yet to be hoped for. The Lord will bless his faithful children. S. L. MANLEY.

From Sr. S. Jennings.

BRO. GRANT:—I have had the privilege of witnessing the prosperity of the cause of God in Chicago, under the labors of our beloved and faithful Bro. C. C. Ramsey, from Boston. He came in Jan., and found a faithful few who had been endeavoring to hold up the truth in that ungodly city. Bro. Ramsey took hold of the work as though God sent him there, and it was evident that he did, for he was with him and blessed his labors, and the result is, there is a living church of God, of about thirty members, and a flourishing Sunday School of sixty scholars or more; also two prayer-meetings in the week, and they are prayer-meetings too. There is quite a difference between meeting to pray and meeting to say prayers. A number have been brought in and confessed Jesus, and their love for him and his truth. The work was still going on when I left, and I trust it will until Jesus comes; but it is like gathering the berries in the outer branches, when the harvest is done. May God wake up every energy of our souls to try to pluck the perishing around us, for the time is short that we can labor for the Lord.

SUSAN JENNINGS.

Seneca Falls, N. Y., July 14th.

From Bro. H. Pratt.

BRO. GRANT:—Yesterday was one of interest with us in Rochester. The European nations are marching on in prophetic sublimity, filling up their part of the programme ere He come; while thoughtful statesmen "breathless" await the flashing steel and cannon's roar of this tempestuous war-cloud that lowers upon a guilty world, saying, Who strikes first? How awful the tempest! How certain it is here! Earth trembles in all her parts; even Gibralter itself is shaken, premonitory of the final doom. Along the cabled wire, swaying in the mighty deep, bright flashing light in all night's watches tells us we are nearing home. Reporters' pens record the thrilling fact for what our eyes have watched and waiting hearts desired. Those Holy "keys" invite the Russian sword, the Frenchman's lance. The Crescent wanes, the crimson Harlot pales, while trembling vials wait with the wrath of God.

With bated breath the spotless bride already cries, "'Tis He!" but soon like mighty thunder's sound the alleluia's roll. "Rejoice," "be glad," the marriage has come; go meet Him in the air.

H. PRATT.

From Bro. Otis Ryder.

My dear brethren and sisters of like precious faith, who are "waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body,"—we are subject to many and varied trials in this life; but if we are faithful in the cause of our blessed Redeemer, and "by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, and honor, and immortality," we shall in the end receive "eternal life." These light afflictions are but for a moment. Let us count it all joy that we are counted worthy to suffer with Christ; that we may also reign with him. I am glad of the assurance that he will not suffer us to be tempted above what we are able to bear; but will with the temptation provide a way of escape. And he does it every time. Blessed be his holy name. Let us watch for the way of escape, and we will surely find it. I am striving to hold myself in constant readiness for translation. But if it is the will of our heavenly Father that we should wait a little longer, Amen. It is pleasant to serve the Lord. Brethren and sisters, let us be watchful, as well as prayerful, keeping ourselves unspotted from the world, with pure hearts, wait a little longer, and "deliverance will come."

OTIS RYDER.

Monroe, Wis., July 28th, 1868.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. ISAAC BLANCHARD, West Hawley, Mass., writes:—"About the middle of last February, Sr. Ellen E. Otis and the writer commenced laboring in the east part of Pownal, Vt., for the salvation of sinners, and God has set his seal to the message concerning the wondrous love of Jesus for poor fallen man. The meetings were held in a private house, which soon became filled to overflowing, and the Spirit of the Lord moved on all hearts. When invited to come forward for prayers, men and women of more than threescore years, with the youth and middle aged, made it manifest that they wanted a share in what God has promised to his faithful children, even eternal life in the kingdom of God, which is soon to be set up under the whole heavens.

Some have yielded to obey the Lord, and are on their way rejoicing. Between thirty and forty have been reclaimed or converted, and I have had the pleasure of burying nine beneath the yielding wave, showing not only their faith in the death of their blessed Lord, but also in his resurrection."

SR. E. W. AGER, Buggsville, Wis., July 9th, writes:—"Enclosed you will find five dollars, for which I wish you to give me credit on my subscription for the Crisis. It has been a great trial not to be able to pay for it sooner, for I think it is the best paper I ever saw; and when it comes every week with its pages filled with the glorious truth it advocates, my heart is filled with love to God for all his mercies to me.

I am a member of the Christian church, but my heart is with those who are looking for the coming of Christ. I attended the campmeeting at Fairfield. I was on the ground only about twenty-four hours. I felt it was good to be there. It was the first opportunity of the kind I ever enjoyed. O how much I wish some of the preachers, who proclaim the glad tidings of the gospel of the kingdom, would come this way. My neighbors and friends are perishing for lack of a knowledge of the truth. Truly the harvest is great, but the laborers are few."

BRO. J. J. MARESS, Chelsea, Mass., July 31st, writes:—"From the time my blessed Redeemer first opened my mind to read his word with the understanding of his love to me, which was when the gospel tent was sent to Chelsea last autumn, I have taken your valuable paper, the Worlds Crisis, and I am sure that I have been much benefited and strengthened by it. Praise the Lord for it. I have been very much pleased when I have read the caution given to the people against using tobacco. I have used it for more than thirty years, but I thank my Lord and Master, I do not use it now, and have not for these last eighteen months."

SR. RHODA M. SAYLES, Thompson, Ct., writes:—"I prize the paper next to my Bible. I cannot tell you how it cheers and comforts me in my lonely hours. It is like cold water to the thirsty, or bread to the hungry. I hope and expect to soon reach that better land, where the brethren and sisters can all meet together to praise our Redeemer forever. O what a joyful day that will be! It is worth striving for. Our present sufferings are nothing compared with the glory that shall follow. I will still continue to pray for you, that God will be with and bless you in all your labors of love."

VEAZEY. Died in New Hampton, N. H., March 29th, 1868, at the residence of her brother, Simeon Veazey, Sister Sally Veazey, aged eighty-seven years.

Sister Veazey experienced religion in early life, and lived a consistent christian; but she neglected the duty of baptism until a few months before she died, feeling too unworthy to follow her divine Lord and Savior down into the liquid stream. We soon expect to meet her in the kingdom, where separations are never known. May the Lord sustain the mourning ones. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer.

CALEF. Died at Meredith, N. H., July 30th, 1868, of diphtheria, M. Annie Calef, aged nine years and two months.

Annie was a bright-eyed, healthy looking girl, but death came very unexpectedly and took her away. Bro. and Sr. Calef mourn not as those that have no hope, for they expect she will soon come from the land of the enemy, and meet where death and the tomb can divide them no more. We tried to comfort the afflicted ones from 1 Thess. 4: 18.

MARSTON. Died in Great Falls, Sept. 15th, 1868, Annette V. Marston, daughter of Bro. Thomas and Sister Almira Marston, aged eighteen years and ten months.

Thus early was our dear friend called away from earth's trials, to sleep till the morning of the resurrection. During her sickness of six short weeks, she manifested christian patience and resignation. Although not a professed child of God until her sickness, yet we believe our blessed Life-Giver forgave all her sins, and sealed her for his own.

HUNTER. Died in Clinton, Sept. 24th, Wesley Hunter, aged forty years.

Bro. Hunter's sickness was short, but very distressing. In this trying hour he gave his heart to the Lord, and died rejoicing in the hope of immortality through Christ. He leaves a large and destitute family. May they look for comfort unto Him who has promised to be the widow's God, and a father to the fatherless, and finally be saved with the departed one in the coming kingdom.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

MADRID, Sept. 21. A royal decree has been issued, accepting the resignation of all the ministers, and naming Jose Concha as President of the Council. He has not, however, as yet formed a new ministry.

The Gazette to-day announces that a revolt has taken place in Cadiz and Seville. The government has formed three military divisions, comprising Catalonia Castile, and Andalusia, under the command of Pezuela, Manuel Concha and Novalischez. They have decided to attack the insurgents. The Captain General of Madrid has published a notice which has been posted on all the corners of the streets, forbidding any assemblages of the people. A Provisional Government has been formed at Seville, which has declared Esparto as President. The forces of the insurgents are estimated at fourteen thousand soldiers and eleven ships of war with 5000 seamen. The revolt makes progress. The Queen left St. Sebastian at midnight for Madrid.

VIENNA, Sept. 22. A despatch from Madrid, published in the journals here, says the revolutionists demand the abdication of the Queen Isabella, in favor of her son Don Infanta Alphonse, and the calling of an extraordinary session of the National Cortes to settle the affairs of the country.

PARIS, Sept. 22. Gen. Jose Concha, acting President of the Spanish Ministerial Council, has sent a circular dispatch to the Representatives of Spain at all the foreign Courts, assuring them that the insurrection will be suppressed.

The French fleet is under orders to sail for Spain, for the purpose of affording protection to French residents and their property. France will remain entirely neutral in the affairs of Spain.

TRIESTE, Sept. 22. A deputation of Greek citizens waited upon Admiral Farragut to-day and returned thanks for the sympathy which the United States had manifested for the patriots in Candia. The Admiral in reply said America not only sympathized with the Cretans, but would aid as far as possible the cause of liberty in Crete.

BERLIN, Sept. 22. The King of Prussia has returned to this city from his tour through the Northern States.

LONDON, Sept. 22. It is reported that Peru has sent agents to Europe to make a treaty of peace with Spain.

It is reported that the leaders of the revolution are undetermined as to the form of government to be adopted for the country.

LONDON, 24. The following is the latest news received from Spain:

"The Government at Madrid has declared all Spain in a state of siege. Gen. Isnado, who was sent out with a detachment of royal troops against the province of Santander, has joined the insurgents. A desperate affray took place in Santander between the opposing parties, in which several persons were injured.

Reports that Gen. Prim is marching directly on Madrid are reiterated. He is accompanied by Gen. Zenano, Duke de la Torre, and it is estimated that the forces under his command are now 20,000 strong. The Duke de la Torreo is said to be acting as Provisional President and the civil head of the revolution. He has refused offers of accommodation made by Gen. Concha, from Madrid.

The Spanish ships-of-war in the port of San Sebastian have declared against the Queen and joined the rebel fleet.

The revolutionary leaders have issued a decree declaring that any officer, who orders an attack on the people or patriot soldiers shall be adjuged a traitor to his country.

PARIS, Sept. 24. The report that the Queen of Spain had crossed the frontier into France was premature. She still remains at San Sebastian, but it is rumored that she will soon leave for Pau, in the Department of the Lower Pyrennees. The French authorities have arrested a number of refugees who crossed over the frontier.

LONDON, Sept. 22. Dispatches from Naples report that an insurrection has broken out in Calabria and Sicily in favor of an Italian Republic. The Italian Government has taken prompt and strong steps to put a stop to the disorders.

PARIS, Sept. 22. Telegrams to journals here confirm the news of the rising in South Italy. The Temps fears the Italians desire to overthrow the monarchy under Victor Emanuel. It is asserted that Francis 2d, ex-King of Sicily, is the prime instigator of the movement, and that the rebels are merely acting under pretence of Republican principles. It is reported that Espartero gives his sanction and support to the movement.

PARIS, Sept. 24. A report is current that the Minister of War will instantly issue an address for the dismissal to their homes on furlough of 50,000 men from the army.

LONDON, Sept. 22. The people of the provinces of Corunna, Lugo, Orense, Pontevedra, Murcia, Albacete, Huesca, Zaragoza and Teruel have pronounced for the revolutionists. The rebels are very strong in the provinces of Barcelona, Tarragona, Lerida and Gerona. It is said that [illegible]

LONDON, Sept. 25. Rev. Henry Hart Milman, Dean of St. Paul, died to-day, aged seventy-seven years.

MADRID, Sept. 26. The insurgents have torn up the railway in the Sierra Morena. Count Gergenti with his troops is compelled to remain in the mountain defiles. Gen. Prim is expected at Barcelona to-day, where the people are only waiting for his arrival to rise. Madrid and Saragossa are also ripe for revolt. The vanguard of the army, under Novaliches, numbering 800, has joined the insurgents. Novaliches has, in consequence, been obliged to wait for reinforcements. A French squadron has arrived at Barcelona.

LONDON, Sept. 27. A battle is hourly expected between Novaliches and Serrano near Cordova. The Royalists lost over 600 in the fight at Santander, but they succeeded in regaining possession of the city.

Gen. Calonge marches to-morrow on Santona. He has resolved to burn the place if it makes any resistance.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Sept. 22. The Ku Klux are said to have invaded New Jersey. For some time the mysterious warning, with the symbolic cords, daggers, bloody heads and coffins have been received by Radical members of the military companies threatening them with death, but no notice was taken of them except as a series of stupid jokes. On Sunday night, however, Lieut. Rynner of Co. H., New Jersey Rifle Corps, was knocked down by a slung shot in Kearny, and when found was insensible. Near him was a pistol marked Ku Klux, hieroglyphics and other evidence of the presence of the Klan. The police are now on the track of the mysterious marauders.

New York, Sept. 22. An Atlanta special to the Tribune has the following: "On Saturday last Col. Pierce, Republican candidate for Congress from the 2d District, and Capt. Murphy, Republican Presidential elector, went to Camilla, Mitchell county, in the south-western part of the State to speak at a public meeting which had previously been announced. When near the town they were met by a rebel, mounted and armed, who warned them not to go into the town.

They went on and were soon met by the sheriff of the county, who informed them that the people would not allow a radical to speak in Camilla. They persisted, however, and on reaching the Court House they and their friends were assaulted by a mob. Col. Pierce was dangerously shot and Capt. Murphy was badly hurt, and many more of the Republicans were killed and wounded.

A large majority of the Republicans were colored men, who, obedient to Gov. Bullock's proclamation of the 14th inst., had left their arms at home. They were of course beaten and shot down by the Seymour Democracy almost without any resistance. Official reports place the number of killed and wounded at fifty. Among the victims are a colored woman and her infant. These outrages are being perpetrated all over the State.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 25. An official investigation of the Camilla massacre shows that it was even more bloody and atrocious than was at first reported. Capt. Pierce and Mr. Murphy saved their lives by making the Masonic signal. The negroes were hunted with dogs, and when caught they were butchered in cold blood.

Washington, Sept. 24. John H. Surratt was today discharged from custody by Judge Wylie of the Criminal Court.

St. Louis, Sept. 22. Citizens of Omaha and this city held a meeting at Omaha to-day, at which the project of building an air line road to this city was agreed upon.

WHIRLWIND IN MINNESOTA.—A whirlwind visited Nicollet and Le Suer counties, in Minnesota, on the 11th inst., which moved through a narrow section of the country with terrific power. It is thus described by the St. Peter Advertiser.

"A portion of the dark cloud coming up from the west seemed to detach itself from the darker body of this cloud, and commence rapidly whirling and extending towards the ground. The whirling cloud was tunnel-shaped, the small point towards the ground, and whirling with terrible velocity. As it passed over Swan Lake, the point of the gyrating cloud touched the Lake, and the waters of the lake started into the air as if by the power of magic. After it left the lake its direction lay towards the houses of Joseph Searles, Mr. McCollom and Simon Horner, where threshers, some fourteen in number, had assembled. The occupants had only time to attempt to hold the doors and windows from being forced in, when the house itself left the foundation, and was in separate particles circling with this strange power so frightfully inaugurated. In a moment of time the house and barn were gone from their moorings, and timbers lay in utter confusion, over and around the living forms there prostrate. Three persons at this house were outside of the building when it left its foundation. They state that the sight was fearful beyond description. The force of this form of applied power was such that a man was no more than a straw. If by force of muscular power of the arms he could hold on to any fixture in the ground, his body was lashed about as ribbon in the air. Strange to tell, not an individual was killed.

After leaving Swan Lake settlement the tornado moved northeastward on a line of ruin, varying from five to thirty rods wide, as the small point of the pendent instrument descended low to the ground, or hung higher in the air. Its track is marked by the torn forest and field, the prostrate habitations of man, until it reached the Minnesota river between Ottawa and Le Seur, from which point we have not heard as yet. The damage done in Nicollet county would reach some $15,000 or $20,000."

THE GEORGIA BUTCHERY. Further particulars of the massacre of freedmen at Camilla, Georgia., have been received at Washington from Major Howard, of the Freedmen's Bureau of Georgia, and from a sub-commissioner at Albany, Ga. They fully confirm the worst aspects of the butchery perpetrated upon the defenceless negroes. It appears that Pierce, the candidate for Congress, was not hurt. A freedman who took refuge with four others in a swamp, where he remained all night, says that during the early part of the night, the white men were scouring the woods, shouting, cursing and shooting the freedmen. The pursuers, he says, were accompanied by bloodhounds, and he heard the cries and shrieks of the fugitives as they were caught by the dogs and shot. Two of the men near him, becoming frightened, endeavored to escape, and both were shot within his hearing.

The sub-commissioner at Albany writes:

"It was reported as late as 4 P. M. to-day (Sept. 20,) that up to 8 o'clock this morning they were still pursuing the freedmen with horses and dogs. There has been intense excitement in town all day. The town has been filled with freedmen. They have swarmed about my office by hundreds. It has been difficult to restrain them from proceeding en masse to Camilla. I have addressed them, counseling peace and order, telling them that the offenders should be punished and their lives protected. But I have no heart for my work. I felt no assurance that my promises would ever be fulfilled."

MISSION TO ST. PETERSBURG.—Mr. Moran, Secretary to the American Legation in London, has, it appears, gone on a special mission to St. Petersburg. So two of yesterday's telegrams inform us. What is his mission? Does it relate to China, Alaska or the passage of the Dardanelles? It is not for nothing that all Europe has been put in a state of anxiety about an American message. Minister Johnson ought to be able to give us some information on the subject.

Items.

☞ News received at Paris through the French embassy at Berlin gives an unfavorable account of Count Bismarck's health; the Count can only obtain rest by resorting to brandy, and delirium tremens is feared.

☞ Intelligence from Buenos Ayers is to the effect that a storm passed over the city on the 13th of August, the day upon which the terrible earthquakes visited the west coast, and was attended with the greatest loss of life that has occurred there for some time. Numerous vessels were sunk in the harbor and several houses were blown down.

☞ The Hungarians attribute their recent earthquakes to profanity, and are now vigorously prosecuting all persons guilty of that offence.

☞ Swearing on the Bible was first introduced into judicial proceedings by the Saxons, about A. D. 600. It was called a corporal oath, because the witness touched with his hand some part of the Holy Scriptures.

☞ Hawthorne berries are abundant in England, which is said to indicate a severe winter.

☞ Napoleon is arming locomotives with artillery for scouting duty.

GARDENING FOR LADIES.—Make up your beds early in the morning; sew buttons on your husband's shirts; do not rake up any grievances; protect the young and tender branches of your family; plant a smile of good temper in your face, and carefully root out all angry feelings, and expect a good crop of happiness.

—Wicked men stumble over straws in the way to heaven, but climb hills in the way to destruction.

Massachusetts Quarterly Conference.

By invitation of the Second Advent Church in Chelsea, the next State Quarterly Conference of the Society will be held in Chelsea, Mass., at Library Hall, commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 20th, continuing daily and over the following Sunday. It is to be hoped we shall have a general gathering of all the faithful in this region. We will do our best for all, both temporally and spiritually. Come, both ministers and all, that have an interest in the salvation of men at the coming of Christ. Some business of importance will come before us. Preaching the first evening.

E. OWEN, Sec'y.

Conference at Square Pond, Ct.

Notice was given in the last week's Crisis that our State Conference would be held at Square Pond, commencing Sept. 30th, and hold over the following Sunday. As this is our annual meeting, we hope for a general attendance of preachers, and a delegation from every church in the State. Will churches appoint delegates, and send them, and pay expenses, if needs be? Some brethren appointed delegates are poor; their traveling expenses should be met. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

Those coming on the cars from the western part of the State, will stop at Rockville, where conveyance can be had to the meeting, which is six miles from Rockville. Inquire for Jonathan Ladd, who is engaged to carry passengers. Those coming from other parts of the State, will come with their teams.

For the Church, I. B. POTTER.

The New Hampshire Tent.

To the brethren and friends of New Hampshire, in favor of having a tent to carry the gospel of the kingdom into new places, I would say, at the Alton Bay campmeeting it was found that enough had been raised by Bro. D. M. Leavitt, and others, except about one hundred dollars, to obtain a tent; therefore the brethren decided to purchase one at once, and have it in the field, believing the friends would soon send in the remainder. A committee of three was also chosen to see that the tent was judiciously run, and they to receive what the friends wished to give to make up what was lacking. Bro. T. H. Ford of Concord, Bro. John Shorey of East Rochester, and myself, were chosen said committee. Bro. Ford is Treasurer, but money can be handed to either, and we will see that it is appropriated as designed. If it is more convenient to send it by brethren to the State Conference, to be held at Lake Village, commencing Oct. 15th, you can do so.

J. G. SMITH.

Tent Meeting.

The Maine Mission Tent will be pitched in Mt. Vernon Village, Oct. 2nd, and remain over the following Sunday. The small tent, for the accommodation of brethren and sisters to board themselves, will be there also. This is a new place for our faith; yet the friends in the place will do all they can to make the meeting interesting; and we trust our brethren and sisters will come prepared to labor for the salvation of the people. Will you pray for us, dear brethren and sisters, that sinners may be saved. The Farmington and Augusta Stage fare is reduced one third, for those who go to the above meeting. Per order,

H. B. SEVEY.
I. C. WELLCOME.

Dedication and Conference.

The new chapel, built at Province Falls, Freedom, N. H., is to be dedicated the first day of October; meeting to hold over the following Sabbath. Elders T. W. Piper, D. M. Leavitt, D. F. Leavitt, and others, are expected in attendance to preach the word. Come, my brethren, one and all. Come to labor for the good of souls. This house is peculiarly located, being within five minutes walk of two States, three counties, and four towns.

For the brethren, J. S. MOULTON.

N. B.—Homes will be provided for all that will come.

J. S. M.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, the Massachusetts Mission Tent will be pitched at Warren Place, leading from Warren street, Roxbury, Mass., on Monday, Sept. 28th, for meetings afternoons and evenings through the week, and over the Sabbath, and longer if duty demands. Brethren and sisters in Boston and vicinity are invited to come and help. Brn. S. W. Thurber, J. G. Hook, L. Boutell, and others, are expected to be present and preach the word.

ENOCH MORRILL.

P. S. Those coming from Boston will take Warren Street or Grove Hall cars.

E. M.

Tent Meeting.

The last meeting of the season in the New York State Mission Tent will be held at West Barre, Orleans Co., N. Y., beginning Oct. 8th, and continue as long as practicable. We hope to see a general rally from the surrounding country at this meeting. Pray for us, that this may be the best meeting of the season; and yet many are rejoicing in the truth as the result of our meetings through the summer.

WM. A. FENN.
JONAS WENDELL.
EDWARD COTTON.

Conference.

The Lord willing, there will be a conference at Middleton Corner, N. H., commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 8th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Brn. Daniel Churchill, Joseph Spinney, and others are expected to be present to preach the word. Brethren and sisters are invited to come and work for the Lord.

MARK STEVENS.
C. COLMAN.

R. I. and E. Ct.

Our next conference will be held at Lafayette, R. I., commencing Wednesday, 2 o'clock P. M., Oct. 7th, 1868. Remember the delegates and letters, and looking to God, let us expect a precious season.

H. F. CARPENTER.

South Vershire, Vt.

We purpose to commence a protracted meeting in this place, commencing Oct. 7th, and continuing over Sunday. Will friends from surrounding districts come over and help us? Come one and all. Homes will be provided for all.

H. F. CARPENTER.

Advent Christian State Conf. of N. H.

The annual session of this conference for 1868 will be held at Lake Village, N. H., commencing Oct. 15th and held over the following Sunday. Particulars hereafter.

A. W. SIBLEY, Sec.

To Friends in Western N. Y.

The Lord willing, I shall be at home after Oct. 1st. Brethren wishing my labors during the coming fall and winter, will please write to me at South Butler, N. Y.

B. P. STEVENS.

P. O. Address.

Letters may be addressed to me as follows:—La Porte City, Iowa, care of H. J. Preble, until Oct. 7th; then Bascobel, Wis., until Oct. 17th, care of C. B. Sylvester; then Rouses Point, N. Y., care of Elder D. T. Taylor, until Oct. 24th; then Lynn, Mass.

T. M. PREBLE.

Sycamore, Ill., Sept. 10th, 1868.

Notice.

Our meetings in South Boston, for the worship of God, will be held hereafter at "Fraternity Hall," No. 120 Broadway, every Sunday, the Lord willing. Come over and help us.

J. N. BERRY, Secretary.

FOUND.—Found at the Springfield Campmeeting a brown or maroon merino shawl, with fringe. Can be had by sending to the Crisis office.

CHARITY.

"Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal."

Could I fathom ocean's depth,
Scan the earth's remotest bound;
Tell the length, and height, and breadth
Of the vast expanse around;
Every language could I speak,
Every island call by name,
If I have not charity,
I a "tinkling cymbal" am.

India's wealth did I possess,
Could I call the stars my own,
Were I princess of the east,
Or ruler of the world alone;
Of nations could I tell the fate,
Dash the kingdoms at my will;
If I have not charity,
I'm a "tinkling cymbal" still.

Should I let no beggar go
Unprovided from my door;
Should I all my goods bestow
To relieve the suffering poor;
Give my body to the flames,
A willing sacrifice to be;
If I have not charity,
Nothing doth it profit me.

Charity doth suffer long,
Is of heavenly origin;
Envieth not, will not do wrong,
Its import "good will to men";
Unseemly it doth not behave,
Will not wrongfully oppress;
"Faith," and "hope," and "charity,"
Of the three, this is the best.

THOUGHTS ON A FEW THINGS.

ANGER OF THE NATIONS.

"And the nations were angry." So exclaim the twenty-four elders, falling on their faces before God, after the sounding of the seventh trumpet. "And the nations were angry." Well, now then, why? Let us consider and enumerate some of the causes and reasons of this exasperation. If angry, they were not humble. Their will was not conformable to God's. Their plans were not formed according to his purpose. If angry, they were proud. How much better to have learned what was God's will, through his word, and heartily accepted it, and framed and felt and cherished a hope and expectation according to it. I think we shall see that the occasion of their rage and wrath is because it is contrary to their expectations and wishes. It crosses their projects, it defeats their enterprises. It is against their conception and fabric of a future, populous with carnal glories and conquests and enjoyments. Now, in reality, the coming kingdom of Christ is not believed in by them. Why not?

1. Because it is contrary to the popular preaching of the age, whether Catholic, Protestant, spiritualistic, rationalistic, deistic, infidel, or what not. A kingdom mis-pictured, spiritualized, is a kingdom, we fear, almost denied, for it is not what God has taught in the order and nature of it; especially in its introduction. The nations are angry because the kingdom is literal, and not spiritual. It involves a sudden and tremendous change. It is marked as a time of catastrophe. It deranges the political constitutions of men, and ends the political status of governments. It cuts off political intrigue. It abolishes the field of political operations and aspirations. It strikes at the heart of political pride. The great modern idea of government by the people is negatived and shamed. Vox populi, vox dei, is not quite so, after all. That men can and shall govern themselves, while sinners and rebels against God, is found a fable and a failure. (And here just let me put in a parenthesis a fact worth remembering, and that is—the spiritual kingdom of modern theology is, in fact, in no vague or mistaken aspect, a carnal kingdom of men and among men. Whereas, the literal kingdom of Christ and the Bible is the really spiritual one.)

To proceed, this kingdom of Christ at the seventh trumpet crosses the boast of progress. It meets the nations in their rushing, and stops them. It puts a hook in the jaw of pride. It shocks the logic of aspiring civilization. It shows the vast democracy even of the nineteenth century to be but energetically subservient to the prince of the demons. And don't you think it will show a singular enormity in our vaunted Protestantism, which is the giant fable of human immortality out of Christ? O, what a day of discovery, when this huge fallacy is made as visibly as it is inherently hideous. Yes. The hurrying and frenzy of planning and excited myriads will be suddenly checked. The pride of invention, the conquest of elements in nature, seized and subjected to the service of avarice or ease, will be rebuked. God will speak. The false theology of modern times will be tried by a needed and tremendous test.

AN INTERESTING SUGGESTION.

I saw in the New York Times, a few days since, a somewhat ironical reference to a new book, published, I think, in Australia, or by a gentleman residing in that vast and remote island. It was on the subject of the closing age and attending phenomena. The explanation of the mighty catastrophe of the stoicheia kausoumena, or burning and dissolving elements, is to me interesting, and I believe correct. The writer maintains that the earth is about to change its centre of gravity. This might be occasioned by a variety of causes, involving a change in its configuration. The average diameter of the earth is ascertained to be 7912 miles. Strictly, it is an oblate spheroid, whose longest or equatorial diameter is 7924 miles, and its shortest or polar diameter is 7898 miles, making a difference of twenty-six miles. This difference is easily explained as the result of the centrifugal force developed in the revolution of the earth on its axis in a plastic state. The position of the earth is also noticeable, it being inclined to the plane of its orbit, at an angle of 66½ degrees, or. in other words, being 23½ degrees out of perpendicular.

Almost every one has seen some bulky body suddenly change its position in the water, making perhaps one half of a revolution. The motion was due to a change in the centre of gravity. For example, a huge iceberg, weighing a thousand or ten thousand tons, is delicately balanced in the deep sea, but being worn by the attrition of the waves, or wasted by the heat of the sun, changes its figure, until at a given moment it suddenly turns with a terrible momentum, taking a new base. Now it seems to me exceedingly probable that this is the motion which the earth will perform. Let some change occur to affect even but slightly the general contour of the sphere, such as the action of a mighty earthquake, or the profuse and continued eruption of several volcanoes, or the sudden subsidence of seas, or the mighty influence of the approach and proximity of our Lord in glory, and the great globe may in a single and awful moment swing around with prodigious velocity, so as to revolve at a new angle with the plane of its orbit.

What then? Precisely what the apostle has prophesied. The (aerial) heavens will pass away with a great noise (roizedon), and the elements kindle in a fierce conflagration. Although the atmosphere now quietly revolves with the earth at its normal rate of a little more than one thousand miles an hour, or about seventeen miles a minute, let the rate of motion be accelerated two hundred fold, or at the rate of about thirty-five hundred miles per minute, and what amazing results would follow! The atmosphere would appear to rush along with the speed and power of thirty hurricanes; and what movable object could resist the tremendous impetus? Although it would be hazardous and unwise to insist on such an actuality, of which the transferred centre of gravity should be the immediate occasion, yet in the light of such a proposition we can mark the force and propriety of prophetic Scripture. Just read, for example, the 46th Psalm. I quote: "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea. Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof." In contrast with this mighty commotion is presented the peaceful calm of the heavenly city, the New Jerusalem. I will just add that I have formerly supposed that in the millennial state the inclination of the earth's axis would be changed, and I am confirmed in this opinion.

A BIT OF REPROACH.

I believe the laws of New York require that the loose stones shall be kept out of the highway, but it is a law much not observed, if I may speak thus awkwardly. While clearing a piece of track in my neighborhood the other day, along came a friend who sometimes becomes social by stimulation, and abruptly inquired, "What you doing this for, if the world is coming to an end?" "How's that?" "What you doing this for, if the world's coming to an end this fall?" "I don't know that it will; do you know that it will?" "I do not." And so he passed on. The Bible says, "Answer not a fool according to his folly, lest thou also be like unto him." By which I understand—don't answer a foolish question foolishly, or, in replying to a fool's quizzing, be not ribald or vulgar or vile. But "answer a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in his own conceit"; that is, give him something substantial to float in the atmospheric vacancy of his mind, or to brush down the feathered crest of vanity. Now, if he had not immediately passed on, I might have said to him—"Sir! mind, it may come to an end with you this fall." Or again—"It would seem a pity to move any thing out of the road that might obstruct or hinder those who are rushing at a railroad speed on to destruction." But some of the things we would say are after thoughts.

A WORD ABOUT BAPTISM.

There is one suggestion I would like to make, which I think may be worth remembering. It is simply this. The candidate in the act of immersion should not elevate the head. This sometimes occurs, of course involuntarily or unintentionally. But in every such case it becomes necessary to depress the whole body until the face is wholly covered, as it is obviously important that the immersion should be complete. But this, if the water is not deep, or if the candidate is heavy, takes additional time and strength, and sometimes detracts from the impressiveness of the rite. It is at least liable to embarrass even an experienced administrator. But enough for now. Yours truly,

CLINTON COLEGROVE.

REFLECTIONS.

Twilight was gently stealing o'er earth's landscape. My gaze was intently fastened upon the far-off blue heavens. Golden, purple clouds appeared, some stationary, and others floating majestically along. How grand and sublime their appearance, wafting the poor, weary spirit up, up to the great former and source of this beautiful map of the heavens. My mind upon this evening was in a peculiar frame of thoughtful sadness. The past day a poor sleeper had been borne along past my home, with a sad train of sorrowing friends. There seemed to be a connection between this sleeper and the scenes of the bright heaven the following evening.

Will it not be sweet to fall asleep in Jesus? Does not the weary, toil-tossed spirit oft pant for this quiet rest in the city of the dead? to fall asleep in Jesus? We read of the good, trusting fathers of ancient times falling asleep; resting from their labors; resting, waiting for the trump of God to awake the slumbering dead. O what a spectacle! the graves opening, the sleepers coming forth, the sea giving up the millions which for ages have rested upon its cold bosom;—all, all, coming to the judgment, there to be judged according to the deeds done in the body. Let us all, dear brethren and sisters, be prepared for this fast coming event.

ELIZABETH BARNES RICHARDS.

Webster, Mass.

WHAT FAMILY GOVERNMENT IS.

It is not to watch children with suspicious eye, to frown at the outbursts of innocent hilarity, to suppress their joyous laughter, and to mould them into melancholic little models of aged gravity. And when they have been in fault it is not simply to punish them on account of the personal injury that you have chanced to suffer in consequence. Nor is it to overwhelm the little culprit with angry words; to stun him with a deafening noise; to call him by hard names, which do not express his misdeeds; to load him with epithets which would be extravagant if applied to a fault of tenfold enormity; or to declare with passionate vehemence that he is the worst child in the word and destined for the gallows.

But it is to watch anxiously for the first risings of sin, and to repress them; to counteract the earliest workings of selfishness; to repress the first beginnings of rebellion against rightful authority; to teach an implicit and unquestioning and cheerful obedience to the will of the parent, as the best preparation for a future allegiance to the requirements of the civil magistrate, and the laws of the great ruler and Father in heaven. It is to punish a fault because it is sinful and contrary to the commands of God, without reference to whether it may not be productive of immediate injury to the parent or others; to reprove with calmness and composure, and not with angry irritation; in a few words fitly chosen, and not with a torrent of abuse; to punish as often as you threaten, and threaten only when you intend and can remember to perform; to say what you mean, and infallibly do as you say.

It is to govern your family as in the sight of Him who gave you authority, and who will reward your strict fidelity with such blessings as he bestowed on Abraham, or punish your criminal neglect with such curses as he visited on Eli.

"THERE REMAINETH A REST."

"Oh, ye weary, sad and tossed ones,
Faint not, droop not by the way;
Ye shall join the loved and just ones,
In the land of perfect day."

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

"To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts. For if Jesus had given them rest, then would he not afterward have spoken of another day. There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God."

There remaineth a rest
For the poor and oppresst,
Beyond this surging river,—
From the toil, din and strife,
And the battle of life,
Beyond, beyond the river.

There remaineth a rest
For the good and the blest,
Beyond this surging river,—
In the heavenly land,
With the bright angel band,
Beyond, beyond the river.

There remaineth a rest
Where there's none to molest,
Beyond this surging river,—
In Eden's sweet bowers,
'Mid the beautiful flowers,
Beyond, beyond the river.

There remaineth a rest,
It has oft been confest,
Beyond this surging river,—
In the saints blessed home,
In the bright world to come,
Beyond, beyond the river.

"Let us labor, therefore, to enter into that rest," endure hardness, as good soldiers, a little while longer, for "the night is far spent, the day is at hand," and He that is to come will "come quickly." Then the saints shall be heard, as the "voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia, for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come." Then, if we are found faithful, we shall enter into the "rest" that "remaineth for the people of God"; shall have "an abundant entrance" into the kingdom of our God, and "reign ON THE EARTH." Let us watch and be sober, and hope to the end.

POWER OF SECTARIANISM.

Whenever the Spirit of God is grieved by any people, so that truth and righteousness cease to draw a congregation, sectarianism, with the different machinery, will begin to operate in the following way: first get a popular preacher and choir of singers, court the favor of the rich and respectable, bringing every influence to bear in that direction; and if it lacks stimulant, then get up a general sociable for all, and have a good time. Baptize it with a formal popular prayer, and sprinkle it with pretended sacred music, which is a license in these days to go to any length to fill up our meeting-house. This motive power is not to worship God in spirit and truth. If the locality and circumstances are unfavorable for the above machinery to work, another machine is tried: get a man of influence, like an agent of some corporation, to hold out inducements to attend such a meeting, by offering good situations, or wages. This is a very effectual machine in many localities. How far from the practice of old-fashioned religion, which drew people to the house of God by the Spirit of God, instead of the spirit of the world.

It is not a hard matter to decide, when you attend a meeting, what kind of a spirit drew each one there. Their looks and actions speak louder than words. The professed church of God have lost sight of the right motive power to keep up a congregation that will be likely to be benefited by attending meeting. Those that are drawn in by fancy, or driven in by necessity, will not prove to be sound timber, or worship from a sound principle. If they worship at all, it will be a pretense, or a form.

When referring to a portion of the above sectarian workings the other day, a certain church came to my mind that was led by one man. We made the remark that this church went by water power. The same man being on a visit, happened into the meeting, and knew he was the one. He took part in the meeting, and said he was the very man that run that church by water power. "I am the very identical man," said he, with some emotion, "but never had it laid at my door before," or to that import. This was like the bursting of a bomb shell in the congregation. Now that this man was honestly laboring to build up what he supposed to be the cause of God, we have no doubt; but it was building up sectarianism, which all are liable to do, and thus distract the minds of many, and cause much extravagance in churches, and split them up into sectarian factions. This don't look like converting the world into one faith. We see this in the light of God's word, and shall reprove it and warn people against it; for this very thing has always opposed the spread of truth, and vital godliness dies under its influence. Let us, as a people, keep clear from it, and stand alone on the word of God, for we shall be judged by that alone. We see trying times just ahead. The Lord is soon coming, when each will stand for himself.

TO THE BRN. AND SRS.

Dear brethren and sisters scattered abroad: permit me to say a word for Jesus through the columns of our much beloved Crisis. It was through the instrumentality of the Crisis that I had the foundation laid for the faith of the gospel of the coming kingdom. For a long time I had failed to find harmony in the Scripture, as I then understood it, and from this cause was almost an infidel; but thanks be to Bro. MacFadden, of Richmond, who kindly lent me the Crisis. I first saw the harmony of those glorious truths, though I did not embrace them at that time. A little over a year ago I came out into the light and liberty of the glorious gospel of Christ, and had my feet planted on a firm foundation. God by his Spirit, and through his agents, has revealed little by little those precious truths to me, until the word of God has become one complete and harmonious chain. Well, I'm looking for, and hasting unto the coming of our Lord and Savior, when the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ. I feel that I am no more a stranger and foreigner, but a fellow citizen "with the saints, and of the household of God, and built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." God by his Spirit has given an earnest of our inheritance, and by faith we take hold on the promises, and expect soon the "redemption of the purchased possession." Glory to God! Thorns and briers we must expect to find in all our earthly pilgrimage; but there are sweet, fragrant roses, too, which bloom as a reflection of God's own smile, to cheer and encourage us till the coming of the Lord, when the pilgrim's will rest.

God help us, dear brethren and sisters, as laborers in his vineyard, to be faithful, and so toil with pen, voice, or hand, that by his blessing upon the influence they exert, many more may see light in his light, and the Lord be glorified in and through us. Now, dear children, let me say to you, "examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith;" "take heed, . . . lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God." "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that promised; and let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works." Yours in patient waiting,

M. GROVES.

For the World's Crisis.

A FEW THOUGHTS.

O, bless the Lord. We are almost into harbor. We shall soon see the King in his beauty. We are almost to the fair land of beauty and endless delight; almost in sight of the city of love. Yes, methinks I can almost see the gates of pearl stand open for the saints to enter them. O what a happy day to the weary, way-worn child of God, to know that this world of sorrow is not always to last. Soon it will pass away with a great noise, and the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ; and then all these sorrows, griefs and fears, pains and groans, sighs and tears, will have passed away, and

"The glory of God, like a molten sea,
Will bathe that immortal company."

O, is it possible that we poor, weak, frail, finite, sinful creatures can look for such a land, free from all the ills that we meet here on every hand? Can it be that we are so near the end of these sad scenes of trials and afflictions, disappointments, tears and sighs? Yes, it is so.

O come, thou great Life-giver, and end all these trying scenes, and give us eternal life, and bid us to thee come. I am homesick; yes, and heart-sick too. I never so longed for rest as of late. Never so longed to lay my head on Jesus' breast, and be for ever with my Lord. I sigh to be there; I will be there, by the help of my Savior and my God. May both reader and writer be so unspeakably happy as to enter in through the gates into the city, and so be for ever at rest. Thus prays your weary, suffering sister,

No. Dana, Mass. L. B. WEAVER.

A HYMN.

My God, my Father, while I stray
Far from my home, on life's rough way;
O teach me from my heart to say,
Thy will, my God, be done.

Though dark my path, and sad my lot,
Let me be still and murmur not;
And breathe the prayer divinely taught,—
Thy will, my God, be done.

What though in lonely grief I sigh
For friends beloved, no longer nigh;
Submissive still, would I reply,
Thy will, my God, be done.

And should'st thou call me to resign
What most I prize, it ne'er was mine;
I only yield thee what is thine,—
Thy will, my God, be done.

Should pining sickness waste away
My life in premature decay;
In life or death, teach me to say,—
Thy will, my God, be done.

Renew my will from day to day,
Blend it with thine, and take away
Whate'er now makes it hard to say,
Thy will, my God, be done.

A LITTLE ABOUT ANGELS.

WHO IS MICHAEL?

The Scriptures seem fully to substantiate the pleasing idea that a benevolent Creator has provided agents suitable to assist all created intelligences, and also as clearly proves that those agents are angels, and that some angels are higher in authority than others.

In Matt. 18:10, our Savior seems fully to establish the fact that each child of God has an angel, and that these angels always have access to God, to receive orders relative to the management of their charge. In Heb. 1:14, the apostle shows that angels are designed as helpers to God's children, sent forth for the express purpose of ministering to or serving those who shall be heirs of salvation. But as this fact is so generally conceded by professed Christendom, that each child of God has an angel to guide him here, and finally bear him up in their hands to the pearly portals of the New Jerusalem, I will not spend time or space to quote more Scripture on this point; but hasten to confirm the statement, that a provident Creator has prepared angels of different capacities to minister to or serve the different order of beings he has pleased to place on this footstool.

The Scriptures prove Jesus Christ to be a different Being from any that ever existed; having an existence prior to all except his Father; as the Revelator declares, he was "the beginning of the creation of God" (Rev. 3:14; Col. 1:15), and of so high an order of being that upon his entrance into this world the mandate goes forth from the Eternal—"Let all the angels of God worship him." If all the angels worship him, of course all these angels are subject unto him. But I understand by the Scriptures there is ONE angel higher than all the rest, nearer like Jesus Christ, better capacitated to fill the august position of minister plenipotentiary to Him whom the Father has exalted far above every name, principality, power and dominion, except HIM who put all things under Christ. Eph. 1:21; 1 Cor. 15:27.

After Jesus returned on high, God gave him a revelation, which Jesus Christ was to show unto his servants, and he sent the message to John by HIS angel, as he tells us in the first verse of Rev. Then in the last chapter, upon closing up this grand message of prophetic imagery, is another declaration of the same import: "I, Jesus, have sent MINE angel to testify unto you these things in the churches." These expressions favor the idea of Christ's having a particular angel. If the Father has exalted Jesus Christ far above every name, being and power, and made him one with himself, it is but reasonable to conclude that the highest angel should be assigned to him as especially his.

When we look at Jude 9, we shall find the name of the highest angel is Michael. Inspiration denominates him the arch-angel, which adjective means first, or chief. No other angel in Scripture has this appellation; thus we conclude Michael stands next to Jesus Christ in the scale of being capacitated to fill the august offices assigned him.

John, the Revelator, shows us in chap. 12, that Michael is at the head of the army of angels, who would maintain the laws of heaven, as the devil is at the head of those angels who rebelled, and fought against heaven's government. Further proof that Michael is the special angel of Jesus Christ is, that his "voice" accompanies Jesus Christ's second advent to this earth. "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the ARCHANGEL," etc., which we see is Michael. This Scripture seems to forbid the idea entirely, which some have entertained, that Michael is the Lord Jesus Christ.

But that the name Michael signifies "one like God," as Cruden, Kitto, and other learned expositors inform us, is quite apparent. Possibly one reason why some have entertained the idea that Michael is Christ himself instead of his angel is, that when Michael appears in an authoritative position (Dan. 12:1), the dead are raised, and God's people delivered to shine for ever and ever. Paul shows us, in 1 Thess. 4:16, that Michael is with Christ when he comes the second time; and who of us can tell what part of the great work Christ may assign to his archangel minister, whose power was sufficient to help Gabriel in matters of great importance, and who with Gabriel "holdeth" with him in enlightening Daniel relative to the termination of this earth's history in its present form?

Now is it not clear as the sun, that Michael is not Jesus Christ, but chief of the angels? And is not the inference very strong that he is the one whom Jesus denominates HIS angel?

The idea Inspiration gives us of the offices of angels is ravishing, and the promise of being so soon made like them is still more so. God help us to keep our motive pure, and the infirmities of humanity will soon be profitably disposed of.

TO THE PILGRIM BAND.

MY DEAR SISTERS:—Our interview at the campmeeting is still fresh in my mind; and the little prayer-meetings where we assembled each day 'neath the shade of the large pine, where we received the blessing from the Lord, and our songs were lifted to him in praise, do, while separated, remind us of the value of christian fellowship, and of the meeting in the great congregation that ne'er breaks up. I can endorse the sentiment of the hymn sung so much:

"If ever I loved thee, my Jesus, 'tis now";

and if ever I loved God's people, 'tis now. While each of us are in a cold, heartless world, endeavoring by grace divine to be ready for the coming of our Lord and Master, well can we afford to suffer afflictions with the dear people of God, in view of that enduring glory and the beautiful home of which our little meetings were but a foretaste. How precious and refreshing were those seasons, and I trust will never be erased from the memory of those who were participants in the blessings then received. Let us be faithful, live near to Jesus, and manifest his spirit under all circumstances, and never forget the covenant we made with each other.

I hope we may hear often from those connected with the Pilgrim Band, as a few words of comfort and cheer will be gladly received by all those interested. And when the gathering morning dawns, the angels will not forget to find each of us, dear sisters, although scattered in different States; for they shall come from the east, west, north, and south, and sit down in the kingdom of God. May we all be found in that happy company.

ACROSTIC.

Thou messenger of light and truth, go! on the nations call;
Haste! bid them to the Savior come, invite them one and all,
For God, our Father, shall compel his wrath on them to fall.

With words of peace and comfort do thou the suffering seek,
O tell them Jesus suffered, who was holy, pure and meek;
Revive by words of joyful cheer those plunged in stupor deep,
Lest Jesus coming suddenly shall find them all asleep.
Delay not, then, but soon as sent, on thy blest mission go,
Since time is short, and many bound to misery and woe.

Cease not to tell poor sinners of a Savior who has died;
Recite to them the story of the bleeding hands and side;
Invite them while there's time and room, for Jesus they will need,
Soon Christ will cease forever for them to intercede:
Into the "City of their King," if faithful, they will come,
Since Jesus died to save them, he'll surely bring them home.

LUNG COMPLAINTS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, ETC., ETC.

A few weeks ago, I recommended Rev. Edward M. Wilson's prescription (to be obtained of him at Williamsburg, N. FOOD.

BRO. GRANT:—The following, from Dr. Bellows' "Philosophy of Eating," will doubtless interest and instruct many readers of the Crisis. C. H. S.

"So perfectly ignorant are people generally of the laws of nature, that they give to their pigs the food which their children need to develop muscle and brains, and give to their children what their pigs need to develop fat.

"For example: The farmer separates from milk the muscle-making and brain-feeding nitrates and phosphates, and gives them to his pigs in the form of buttermilk, while the fattening carbonates he gives to his children in butter. He sifts out the bran and outer crust from the wheat, which contains the nitrates and phosphates, and gives that also to his pigs and cattle, while the fine flour, containing little else than heating carbonates, he gives to his children.

"Cheese, which contains the concentrated nutriment of milk, is seldom seen on our tables; while butter, which contains not a particle of food for brain or muscle, is on every table at all times a day.

"Bread, light, sweet, delicious, and eminently wholesome, may be made by mixing good unbolted wheat meal with cold water, making a paste of proper consistence, which can only be determined by experiments, pouring or dropping it quickly into a heated pan—that with concave apartments is best—and placing it quickly in a hot oven, and baking it as quickly as possible without burning.

"The heat of the oven and pan coagulates the gluten of the outside, which retains the steam formed within, and each particle of water being interspersed with a particle of flour, and expanded with steam, separates the particles into cells, and being retained by gluten, which is abundant in this natural flour, till it is cooked, the mass remains porous and digestible, and, containing no carbonic acid gas, is wholesome when eaten immediately, and of course equally so on becoming cold."

HOW TO DRESS.

Ever since primeval innocence was lost, decency has demanded some kind of clothing, differing, of course, according to seasons and countries. In the sunny clime of Eden, an "apron of fig leaves" answered well the sad emergency of our first parents; but such a costume would but poorly serve the fur-clad Laplander. Flannels, which conduct heat less rapidly from the system than other fabrics, besides being proof against fire, should be worn as under-clothes, especially by children and aged persons; for such not only require the best kind, but also a larger amount of clothing than those of greater vital power.

One would naturally think that children required less clothing than men; but this is not so. The temperature of childhood is lower than that of manhood, while their power of creating heat is less; and the same is true of such as have outlived the energies of adult life.

Persons with large active brains, full chests, well developed lungs, and active healthy stomachs, well fed, need less clothing than those of an opposite character; for the reason that more heat is generated in the system.

More clothing is needed when any of the vital organs are diseased, as is seen in consumption and dyspepsia; which are attended with paleness and cold extremities, for want of that heat which the debilitated organs fail to furnish.

More clothing is required at night than during the day, because we then have less vitality, and consequently less heat; and besides this, the air is damp and skin moist, which rapidly dissipates the warmth of the body. For this reason when sitting in the open air of evenings, or coming from crowded assemblies, an extra garment should be worn. Laboring men and women would be saved from many torturing rheumatic pains by a wise observance of these suggestions. Persons in action require less clothing than those who do not use their muscular powers, for the reason that action increases circulation, gives an increase of heat; and for this reason we need more clothing when asleep than otherwise, because then the action of both body and brain are suspended.

Clothing should be clean, because its porosity is lessened when soiled, and as a consequence its power of disengaging heat from the system is increased; and garments worn next to the person should be frequently washed, especially those of children. All changes of clothing from heavy to light, should be made in the morning; for then the vital powers are active.

Many young ladies have superinduced fatal diseases, by exchanging the woolen dress and stockings for such light trash as is considered suitable for the evening party or ball-room. Such change is attended with danger at any time; but especially so when occurring at evening, the usual time of party gatherings. Under-clothes worn during the day should be exchanged for clean fresh ones in which to sleep, and re-exchanged in the morning.

The particular style of dress is also a matter of much importance. Male attire has usually maintained a marked similarity, while female costume has been as many different things, as seasons in the year and years in the ages of the past. And many of the styles have been highly injurious to health. That style of dress, which if old father Adam, who named things according to their character, had seen, would have named the long-tailed style, always, whether worn by the rich or the poor, highly indicative of a want of brains, may really be said to cap the climax in human nonsense, and so far as health is concerned, is a most deplorable innovation. To see one of these indescribables, in vain imitation of something queenly, mopping the sidewalk with their flowing trail, and gathering up whatever of wet and dry filth may chance to be in their course, one must have a small development of both mirthfulness and contempt not to laugh and hiss at the same time. We read of the sorrows of mining boys, who, like donkeys, are made to drag coal carts after them, but they are scarcely more the objects of pity than these moonlings who drag a dozen yards or less of dry goods after them. There is a real beauty in the tail of a peacock, and he may be excused for feeling proud of it, for he is only a brainless bird; but when women drag their skirts after them in the dirt, they may not be offended if we call them silly.

There is but one style which can fully subserve the physical interests of ladies, and that is the short skirts and pantaletts. Such as adopt this style are saved the task of carrying an unnecessary burden, besides being free for physical exercise, either in the form of labor or for hygienic purposes, and also have the benefit of the pants which they need more than men, because they have less vitality. None but a practical physiologist is fully aware of the injurious results of bandaging and dragging down the muscles of the waist with an enormous amount of needless skirts. In view of the way in which girls are clothed, the wonder is that any portion of them ever become mature and perfect women.

Away with whalebones and lacing-cords, and throw your hoops into the sea; make your dresses decently short, fitting loosely to the person; keep your feet dry with suitable shoes, your head cool and heart warm; love God and your husband, if you have one; be sensible women, physically, mentally, and morally, and your mission of mercy on earth will be successful.—Free Methodist.

IS CONSUMPTION CONTAGIOUS?

Popular belief has generally been on the side of the contagiousness of pulmonary consumption. In southern Europe it is a part of sanitary legislation to destroy the clothes and bedding of those who have died of this disease. Until recently the opinions of medical men have leaned to the other side. Experiments and observations now being made in Europe seem to show that tubercles introduced by inoculation into the body of a healthy animal will give rise to tuberculosis, or the formation and deposit of the like matter in the tissues and organs. Dr. Gerhard terminates his paper on the treatment of continued fevers by some remarks on the transmission of pulmonary consumption from one person to another, when sleeping in the same bed. He says: "I should set down the probability of consumption occurring to persons thus exposed to contagion, as husband and wife, two sisters or two brothers, sleeping together in close rooms, to be at least three-fold greater than ordinary, if they be long exposed to inhale the exhalations from one patient to another."

RECIPE FOR GRUEL.—Take of unbolted wheat meal two large spoonfuls; wet it in a pint of cold water; stir it smoothly; let it stand a minute; then pour off the top in a saucepan; stir it until it boils and foams. If you like, add milk, more or less, as you please; let it boil again. Oatmeal gruel may be made in the same way.

FEAR NOT.

"Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

Fear not; why should we ever fear
With Jesus for our guide?
He has promised to be ever near,
To comfort us when tried.

Fear not; although the way looks dark,
And our bark is tossed and driven;
We read the way by blood was marked,
The road that leads to heaven.

Fear not, but put your trust in God,
The dark clouds then will flee,
And we shall learn to prize the rod
That chastens to make free.

Fear not, but ever keep in view
The glories of the end,
Whate'er He promises is true,
On them we can depend.

Then let us never, never fear,
Our Father hears us pray,
And Jesus will be ever near,
To guide us on our way.

DID JESUS REDEEM ALL MEN?

It has been said that "our Savior did not die to redeem or bring any out of the grave except those who die in Christ." That "he did not die for the whole world."

This I regard as a great error. In consequence of Adam's "offence" or "disobedience" or "sin," the whole human family—the race of Adam have been constituted sinners in him; subjected to death, and placed in the grave; and all that, without any fault of their own, or any power to avoid it. Proof: "Wherefore as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, in whom all have sinned."—Margin. Rom. 5: 12.—"By one man's disobedience many were made sinners."—Rom. 5: 19.

As the sin of disobedience of one man—the first Adam has constituted the whole race—all men—sinners, and put them into the grave without any fault or disobedience of their own, so by the righteousness or disobedience of one man—the second Adam—the whole race—all men are to be justified or cleared from that one man's sin or offence, by being brought out of the grave to life, (not eternal life) without any righteousness or obedience of their own. Proof, "In due time Christ died for the ungodly." Rom. 5: 6. "That he by the grace of God should taste death for every man."—Heb. 2: 9.

"Therefore indeed as through one offence, sentence came on all men to condemnation, [to death]; so also through one righteous act sentence came on all men to justification of life. For as through the disobedience of one man, the many were constituted sinners; so even through the obedience of the one, the many will be constituted righteous."—Rom. 5: 18, 19. (That is, justified from Adam's sin, for to make righteous is to justify. I quote from the Diaglott that it may be seen that the best version in the world perfectly agrees with ours in establishing this important truth. See also Macknight.) What is it then, to be justified or cleared from Adam's sin through the atonement or death of Christ? Is it to be justified from the guilt of it? No; because we have no guilt in the matter to be justified from. It is simply to be justified or cleared from the consequences of it—death—by being brought out of the grave to life, not to eternal life, for that comes by being justified from our own sins through faith in that atoning blood. That comes through the righteousness or justification which is by faith and obedience on our part. Further proof: "For since through a man also there is death, through a man also there is a resurrection of the dead; for as by Adam all die, so by the Anointed also will all be restored to life."—1 Cor. 15: 21, 22.—Diaglott.

It seems to me it must be apparent to every candid mind, that it is perfectly reasonable and just that as the first Adam's disobedience has put the race into the grave without any fault or disobedience on their part, the second Adam's obedience should take them out without any obedience on their part. That the race should have a "resurrection to judgment" (John 5: 28, 29.—Diaglott) in order that those who are judged worthy, in consequence of having heard the "word of the kingdom," which is the "word of life," and believed and obeyed it, and been justified from their own sins, having on the garment or sin-covering of righteousness by faith, should then and there, "at the resurrection of the just," be recompensed or rewarded with an incorruptible nature, immortality, spirit or "divine nature," and, like the angels, never die again; and in order also that those who having heard the gospel, and rejected it, thus refusing the offer of eternal life, and are therefore judged unworthy of it, may also be rewarded according to their evil deeds done in the body, by being punished with everlasting destruction—the "second death."

Hence, the "Father's gift" is life to the world, which becomes eternal life to as many as believe and obey; thus becoming justified from their own sins, and obtaining an incorruptible nature; or, in other words, the Father's gift is the "free gift" of life to the world, with the promise of immortality, an incorruptible nature (in order that the life may be everlasting or eternal), to all those who seek for it by hearing, understanding, believing and obeying the glad tidings or gospel. Therefore, God has appointed a judgment day, in which (not before which, nor after which, nor at the end of which) both the wicked and righteous dead are to be brought forth and judged, as well as the righteous and wicked living, by that person (Christ) whom God hath appointed. Proof: "The times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent; because he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained."—Acts 17: 30, 31. "If the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?"—1 Pet. 4: 18. Some say they will not appear at all. But let the Word answer: "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad."—2 Cor. 5: 10.

It is evident from this that there were in "the church of God at Corinth" some false brethren, whose evil deeds rendered them bad, and therefore punishable with "everlasting destruction" in the day of judgment to come. "But I say unto you that every idle word that men [not the righteous only, but the vipers and evil men also, referred to in the two preceding verses] shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment."—Matt. 12: 36. "But after thy hardness and impenitent heart, treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God, who will render to every man according to his deeds; for as many as have sinned without law [the Gentiles without the law of Moses, but "not without the law to God."—"1 Cor. 9: 21], shall also perish without law. And as many as have sinned in the law [the Jews] shall be judged by the law, in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men [righteous and wicked] by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel." Rom. 2: 5, 6, 12, 16. "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished."—2 Pet. 2: 9.

Therefore there is to be a resurrection of the unjust, as a dead person cannot be punished. And if those who have never been justified from their own actual sins are reserved unto the day of judgment to be punished, then they have not yet been punished. "And they have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust."—Acts 24: 15. This needs no comment. The resurrection of the unjust could not be more plainly and positively expressed by the English language. If this can be explained away, the whole Bible can on the same principle. "But the heavens and earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day o judgment, and perdition of ungodly men."—2 Pet. 3: 7. And neither does this require any comment; think upon it, ye ungodly men. "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him."—Rev. 1: 7; John 19: 37. "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt."—Dan. 12: 2.

Some have understood that, according to "Macknight's translation," the words, "the unawakened," should come in after the word "some," so as to read, "some [the unawakened] to shame and everlasting contempt." But this is a mistake. The words "the unawakened" are not in the original, nor a part of the translation, as some suppose. . . . . . . They are supplied entire by men. "Marvel not at this, for the hour [or time—Macknight] is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation" [or judgment—Diaglott.]—John 5: 28, 29.

If this can be called figurative language, then the commission to the apostles can be called figurative, and the entire words of Christ can be figured away. "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him; the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day."—John 12: 48. Hence he must be raised to "stand before the Judge." "And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and a judgment to come, Felix trembled." Why? Because he was wicked, and he understood that "the wicked shall be turned" back into sheol, the state of the dead, to "remain in the congregation of the dead" forever. "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses. Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace?"—Heb. 10: 26–29. To be "cast into the lake of fire," which "is the second death," and thus be cut off from life, and lose it forever without remedy, just at the very time when others "shall keep it unto life eternal," by then obtaining the "divine nature," will be a "sorer punishment"—"punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power."—Harbinger.

—Actions speak more forcibly than words; they are the test of character. Like fruit upon the tree, they show the nature of the man; while motives, like the sap, are hidden from our view.

HARDEN NOT YOUR HEART.

BY PROF. FINNEY.

"Wherefore, as the Holy Ghost saith, To-day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts."—Heb. 3: 7, 8.

In speaking from these words I inquire,

I. What is it to harden the heart? It is to commit the will or mind against the claims of God and of humanity. To harden the heart is to commit the soul in a spirit of disobedience, and self-will, and stubbornness, against God and his government.

II. How men harden their hearts.

1. It is always a voluntary act to harden the heart, and a voluntary state when the hardness of heart is continued.

It being an act of the mind or of the will, the mind always assigns to itself some reason for taking this position of self-will, and for maintaining this position of stubbornness against God. It is a matter of consciousness that the will has indirectly a great control of the feelings. If the mind commits itself by an act of will to any position, the feelings are brought to adjust themselves to the will's position; not always directly and instantly, but the feelings will soon come to sympathize with the attitude taken by the will. The reason is very obvious, the feelings are influenced by the thoughts and the thoughts are directed by the will. When the will, then, is committed to a dishonest position, it will always use the intellect dishonestly; and by a dishonest use of the intellect will foster such thoughts as to pervert the feelings. This is common experience, as every one knows who has paid any particular attention to his own state of mind. A voluntary stubbornness always locks up the sensibility, and closes it against that class of emotions that would naturally result from a different attitude of the will. If the mind takes a position against God, it will use the intellect to justify its position, or to excuse it; consequently it will indulge only in thoughts, and arguments, and reflections that justify its position, and therefore that poison and pervert the feelings and bring them into sympathy with the will. Men harden their hearts, then, by an uncandid and selfish use of the intellect, assigning to themselves such reasons for their conduct as to justify their taking this position.

2. Men harden their hearts by indulging prejudice against God. They commit themselves to one-sided view of the whole question of God's claims, and government, and works. They are selfish, and therefore not candid. They designedly take a narrow view of all the questions between themselves and God, and indulge a host of prejudices with intent to justify their rebellious state of mind.

3. They often harden their hearts by indulging prejudices against the church, against the ministry, against the truth. Press them to repent, and you will find in fact that they immediately betake themselves to finding fault with christians and ministers. You will find their minds a perfect nest of prejudices against God's people; and they evidently resort to these as a reason for their position in regard to religion, to justify themselves in neglecting the claims of God. You cannot go and talk with one of these impenitent men without finding that he will instantly reveal to you a perfect nest of prejudices which he harbors in his mind against God's people, and ministers, and truth, for the purpose of strengthening himself in his position of disobedience.

I say these are prejudices—they are prejudgments. There may be some foundation in fact for many things which he will say; but upon the whole you will clearly perceive that it is prejudice. He is unfair, uncandid. Much that he says is not true, though he persuades himself that it is true. He has not fairly and charitably examined the subject. He has jumped to a conclusion from a very partial examination of the facts and is hedging himself in with prejudice. This course of conduct, with those that harden their hearts, is so notorious that you will find it on every side.

When this meeting is out, converse with your impenitent neighbors, and you will find them resorting to these prejudices to strengthen themselves against the claims of God.

4. Men harden their hearts through a pride of consistency. They have taken a stand; they have set themselves against religion and against the claims of God. And it is remarkable to see, if you converse with an impenitent person before others, and especially in the presence of those before whom they have taken a stand and committed themselves against God's claims, how they will instantly gather up their strength, and through pride of consistency maintain their position.

5. Men harden their hearts because they are ashamed to forsake the ranks of the ungodly, and openly confess Christ. They are ashamed of Christ, and ashamed of religion; ashamed to avow themselves the friends of God.

This is truly wonderful, but it is a fact. So true is this that you can scarcely find a sinner with whom you can converse in the presence of his family or friends that will not resist because he is ashamed to manifest any feeling on the subject, or any regard for Christ in their presence. You can scarcely find an impenitent man that will allow you to talk with him in the presence of his wife, without resisting your importunity through his own pride.

You must get him alone, and away from his friends, or he will resist you because he is ashamed to have them know that he has any feeling on the subject of religion. This is almost a universal fact with sinners. I find if I would do them any good in conversation, I need to see them alone. They have scarcely a friend before whom they will be candid enough to acknowledge the truth as they really believe it. So great is the pride of their hearts, that they are ashamed to have it known even to those who are most interested in them, that they pay the least regard to the claims of God.

6. Men harden their hearts through an unwillingness to confess and make restitution where they have wronged their neighbors. They are too proud to confess a wrong to a neighbor; and they are too selfish to make restitution where they have taken an advantage of another in trade, or where they have in their possession that which belongs to another. If, therefore, they have any restitution to make, or any confession to make to man, this consideration will lead them to gird themselves, and to resist the claims of duty and of God. They will often keep themselves for years in an attitude of stubbornness, because they know that if they yield to God, they must make confession and restitution. Now is not this the fact with some of you? Are you not covering some sin that ought to be confessed to man as well as to God? Are you not refusing to make some restitution where you have wronged some one?

Do you not know that if you ever repent, you must confess and make restitution? And whenever the question of repentance comes before you, do you not gird and strengthen yourself in your impenitence? Do you not harden your heart because you know that if you repent you must make confession and restitution? Do you not often resort to cavils and subterfuges, to strengthen yourself in the attitude you hold towards God?

7. Men harden their hearts by yielding to their temper. If you press them with the claims of God, they become angry; and giving way to temper, they take a stronger stand than ever, and gird themselves to the uttermost to resist the claims of duty and of God.

They will sometimes go so far as to affirm, and even to swear, that they will never become christians; they will not yield to the claims of God, do what he may. Have not some of you when pressed by the claims of God, given way to anger, strengthened yourself in your position, and resolved that you would have nothing to do with the claims of God?

8. Sinners often harden their hearts by indulging appetite. For example: they are accustomed to the use of tobacco, or intoxicating drinks; or they are accustomed to indulge in the use of various luxuries. Now if the claims of God are presented to them those claims come directly into competition with appetite. For example: I heard of a man, who, through the use of intoxicating drinks, was likely to lose his eye-sight. His physician told him that he must abandon the use of intoxicating drinks, or entirely lose the use of his eyes. Upon this information he girded himself instantly and said, "Then fare you well, old eyes." Thus he settled the question, hardened his heart, and probably lost his soul.

For the World's Crisis.

ON THE ALTAR AND OFF THE ALTAR:

OR,

Justification and Sanctification.

With some seeking justification, and with others seeking sanctification, it is on the altar and off the altar. Here lies the difficulty, the danger, the downfall, the backsliding, the departure from the first love, the bondage to sin and Satan. By not keeping all on the altar Christ Jesus, unreservedly, and pressing on to the mark of the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, the young disciple loses his justification, and falls into temptation—the snare of the devil. Then follows the neglect of duty, the closet, the reading of God's word, family devotion, pride, folly and fashion.

The holy unction, the hungering and thirsting after righteousness once enjoyed, the love of prayer and praise, the burning zeal for God in the salvation and sanctification of souls,—where are they? Loss unspeakable! The young convert, by not following on to know the Lord, adding to his faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity, meanwhile imparting truth and wisdom as he receives them, is sure to lose what he has gained, and return to the "beggarly elements."

Consecration in the outset was made entire. No one can receive the forgiveness of sins, be adopted into the family of the children of God, without yielding submissively and entirely to every gospel requirement, to the utmost of his knowledge, and make a perfect surrender of all that he has, for time and for eternity, ere pardoning mercy is bestowed, ere the blood of Jesus is applied to his sin-sick soul. "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me." "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon."—Isa. 55: 7.

When all is on the altar, here it must remain evermore. "When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it; for he hath no pleasure in fools; pay that which thou hast vowed. Better is it that thou shouldest not vow, than that thou shouldest vow and pay not."—Eccl. 5: 4, 5. A single item in the consecrating catalogue taken from the altar, for self or selfish purposes, the vow is broken, the pledge of obedience violated, the hold on Christ is for the time being lost. When we have once yielded to the tempter, given loose to passion, appetite or impatience, said things and done things to grieve the Holy Spirit, and caused darkness and leanness to come over us,—what now? Return to God with renewed confession, restitution, and self-abasement? Unquestionably. "Return to me, and I will return to you," saith the Lord. "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you." "And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous."—1 John 2: 1.

"While I concealed my guilt,
I felt the festering wound,
Till I confessed my sins to thee,
And ready pardon found."

Recollect, however, his returning to God from a backslidden state, and the restoration of the first love, is not the blessing of entire sanctification, the cleansing power of grace, the perfecting of holiness in the fear of God. The blessing of perfect love, the casting out of all fear, is a distinct work, instantaneous as that of regeneration. This cleansing of the soul from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, destroying entirely the love and power of sin, renewing it in the likeness of Jesus, or true holiness, is a special, definite operation of the Holy Spirit, and must be sought for definitely. See Memoirs of James B. Taylor, Carvasso, Lady Maxwell, Madame Guion, and Fenelon. Examine also the experience of Isa. 6: 1–6, the apostles previous to the day of Pentecost and after it. Listen also to multitudes at the present day, whose lives speak audibly and momentarily what is in their souls, that gives the fire of redeeming, sanctifying love. Holiness to the Lord is written in their foreheads, and on their door-posts. Every thought, look and action, every moving muscle, speaks for God. They are crucified to the world, and the world to them. God is in all their thoughts. The words of their mouths, and the meditations of their hearts are acceptable in his sight.

Reader, beloved, one special object in this article is, you perceive, to draw the line of distinction between justification and sanctification. Individuals not a few in the full enjoyment of the inner life tell us, that after their conversion, and previous to their reception of this holy anointing or sealing of the Spirit, they were walking in newness of life, in the discharge of every known duty, imparting the light as they received the light, and enjoyed the smiles of Heaven. In a word, they were in a justified state, and yet they saw, felt and knew there was something wanting to qualify them to fight the good fight of faith, to stand boldly for Jesus. The love of the world was not wholly destroyed, nor were the least and last remains of selfishness exterminated. Unbelief was not all removed, nor every idol dethroned—every thing contrary to the law and the gospel crucified. The remains of old Adam, pride, covetousness, sinful anger, the love of reputation, a man-fearing spirit, were found lurking in some corner of the heart, as disturbers of the peace. They had crossed Jordan, entered the promised land flowing with milk and honey; but the Canaanites were still in the land, not entirely destroyed, root and branch. In a word, they were not dead to sin, and alive to God. They could not say with Paul, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless, I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." Gal. 2: 20. On reading these passages—"Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin; for he that is dead is freed from sin." Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him. "But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life" (Rom. 6: 6, 7, 8–22); "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." "Faithful is he that called you, who also will do it" (1 Thess. 5: 23, 24); "That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God" (Eph. 3: 17–19); they saw clearly they were weighed in the balance and found wanting; yet there was hope, joyful hope, that the blessing was for them as well as for Paul, Peter, James and John. God is no respecter of persons. "This is the will of God, even your sanctification."

In reference to this entireness in God, this superabounding grace, they renewed their consecration with deep searching of heart, "presenting their bodies anew a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God." They sought this pearl of great price as for silver, and searched for it as for hid treasure. "The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force." Definite, persevering prayer was made for this very thing, with a full determination not to cease till the windows of heaven were opened, and the witness of the Spirit was manifested; nor was God slack concerning his promise when the conditions were complied with, when all the tithes were brought into the storehouse. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and I will receive you, and be a Father to you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."—2 Cor. 6: 17. 18. Peter when he denied his Master lost his first love, but on confessing his sin with tears of penitence, he was restored to favor; and yet the baptism of the Holy Spirit, the tongues of fire, were not given till the day of Pentecost. Henceforth he was "strong in the Lord and the power of his might."

To show still more clearly and conclusively the difference between justification and sanctification, we cite passages from Paul to the Corinthian disciples. The apostle regarded these as children of God, christians: but were they meanwhile cleansed from all sin, established in grace, rooted and grounded in love? Far from it, Paul informs us that they had been called to be saints unto the fellowship of the Son of God. He thanked God for the grace which they had received by the Lord Jesus. He repeatedly calls them "brethren," and represents them as "babes in Christ." Such expressions can refer to none but christians; for such grace from the Lord Jesus, such fellowship of the Son, such confirmation in the testimony of Christ, such titles as brethren, and babes in Christ, can be predicated of none, save those who are born again, who are the children of God. This point seems very clear.

Paul informed them that he had heard, through the house of Chloe, that there were contentions among them, and he believed it; that such contentions did not evince very deep piety. He represents them as carnal. They had not conquered their appetites. Hence the character of their feasts, eating and drinking inordinately. They had not conquered their selfishness. Hence their contentions about ministers; one for Paul and one for Apollos, etc. They had not conquered their wills. They had not conquered carnality. They were like babes, given to irritability, fretfulness, petulance, marked developments of human nature unsanctified.

These Corinthians were doubtless the children of God in a justified state, but were they sanctified wholly, soul, body, and spirit?

The apostle settles this question beyond controversy, in his exhortation to them, which runs thus: "Having, therefore, these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." Here he addresses them as dearly beloved; an appellation not at all suited to sinners. They have filthiness of flesh and spirit, which is not in keeping with entire purity. This filthiness must be removed before they can perfect holiness, or be perfectly holy, in the fear of God.

These points seem clearly proved from the following:

1. These church members, though acknowledged to be christians, were not pure in heart—were not saved from all sin. They were still carnal to a certain extent.

2. That this state of imperfect purity differs from that state of perfect holiness to which they had been called.

3. The remedy for all this carnality which takes the form of selfishness, willfulness, etc. is perfect holiness, or cleansing from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit.

What more can be said—need be said, in proving the fact, the marked difference between a justified soul and one entirely sanctified, spirit, soul and body? The one is glorious, the other if possible still more glorious. Will you have this tongue of fire, the baptism pentecostal? Is it not your privilege, your duty? What saith the Lord? "Be ye holy, for I am holy." Does not the ministry need it, the church militant, universal? Can the world be saved without it? It is purchased for us.

Yes, brethren, the celestial gift is yours. You are called to receive the heavenly element which spreads an intensity of spiritual life through the understanding and conscience; kindles and feeds the secret fire of devotion; converts, like the warmth of summer, the dark and sterile soul into life, and verdure, and fruitfulness; animates every affection; invigorates for every service; gives vital pulses to the courage, and strengthens in all conflicts; nor terminates its sacred operations till it has purged from the heart of man all its stains of sin, all its debasing alloy of earthliness, and rendered it to God, meet for high fellowship and intercourse with him forever and ever.

"Let us, to perfect love restored,
Thy image here retrieve,
And in the knowledge of our Lord
The life of angels live."

For the World's Crisis.

A TRENCHANT SCRIPTURE.

A destruction in everlasting process of accomplishment, and never accomplished, is made to look like a rather mad and man-made doctrine, in the light of Isaiah 47: 14. If this is not Bible like a sword for error, I have hardly found it any where. Let us have it with the context (a menace of perdition to the patrons and theological vagabonds of Babylon): "Thou art wearied in the multitude of thy counsels. Let now the astrologers, the star-gazers, the monthly prognosticators, stand up and save thee from these things that shall come upon thee. Behold, they shall be as stubble; the fire shall burn them; they shall not deliver themselves from the power of the flame; there shall not be a coal to warm at, nor fire to sit before it. Thus shall they be unto thee with whom thou hast labored, even thy merchants from thy youth; they shall wander every one to his quarter, none shall save thee." Notice here especially four things, in the course of this prophecy, or in what might be called the penal panorama of fire ordered for the courtiers and comforters of the doomed metropolis.

1. The nature and quality of the material acted on.
2. The action of the agent.
3. The result and end of the action.
4. The end of the agent.

Is this difficult to understand? Notice that these official props of Babylonish enormities, astrologers, etc., as heirs of perdition, are likened to stubble. Stubble is notable for being (1) worthless and (2) combustible. That is plain enough. Such are these ungodly dignitaries. That is plain. The declaration is positive that the fire shall burn them. Will the love of eccentricity, or of disputation, or of tradition, lead men to take the onus probandi, or responsibility, of attempting to show that what is both worthless and combustible is not meant to be consumed in the fire? Suppose some madcap should go shouting through the streets and crying at the top of his voice, "Ho! hallo! I have a sight to show! Come and see the bonfire of my wonderful kindlings and shavings! A fire that burns fierce and hot, and burns day and night, and never goes out, and nobody can put it out!" People would at once begin to inquire if some inmate of the county-house had made a violent or clandestine exit. No one ever dreamed of such a property, to wit, of unconsumableness of shavings. Unconsumableness of that which is most consumable! Incombustibility of that which is most combustible! Well, well! that will do for pseudo-theology. That will do for metaphysics out of its head. That will do to go with the philosophy of the Pyrrhonics, who maintained "that nothing is certain, and that no assertion can be made."

Again, the text says they shall not get out of the power of the fire. Observe, here is the fire, here is that which is most quickly and easily burned in the fire, and here is an impossibility for an interference or deliverance out of the fire. Detail in such simplicity seems almost irksome. Only blindness can not see; only unbelief cannot believe. And now to end all, the fire goes out, every whit of it, for "there shall not be a coal to warm at,"—no! not so big as a wren's egg. When will the encumbered theology of the nineteenth century purge itself of its Romish exaggerations? How much longer will men and women, especially those who have had light, betray a contumacious, or conscientious (!) partiality for error?

In extenuation or emasculation of this testimony, it may be urged that this destruction of the prognosticators and merchants (a sort of imperial guard of Babylon's pomp and pride), was to be only a temporal judgment. But in the infliction of retributive woes by Cyrus and his conquering legions, let me ask if these heathen ecclesiastics were burned at the stake, or otherwise destroyed by fire? It is true that many were slain, but, by the references I have at hand,—not by being burned. Hence a declaration so plain and positive as in the text, would cite us forward to that final perdition which awaits the wicked (including these resurrected impostors) in the day of the Lord. Or if the application be made to antitypical Babylon, and the flaming fierceness of her burning, the issue is the same, and that is, extinction of that which is burned, and exhaustion of the consuming agent. "There shall not be a coal to warm at."

Or, again, if upon any testimony of authentic history it is shown that the Chaldean prognosticators were devoured by some appalling conflagration, then certainly they are not groaning and writhing in un-imaginable horrors of torment to-day, after the tremendous agonies of ages, comprehending a period of not less than twenty-four hundred and six years! If they were burned up utterly, that will serve as a picture of the fire of Gehenna to come. We can understand, without any grossness or refinement of exaggeration, what Jude said of Sodom and Gomorrah, as "being set forth for examples suffering the vengeance of eternal fire." And not only what he said, but what he meant. He meant destruction, and an end of life and suffering too. It is an easy thing to see, that a fire emanating from an eternal Majesty, and ending in eternal death; or, in other words, eternal in its origin, and eternal in its effects, is very far from being eternal in its duration. Primitive fire burns to destroy. Torment is an incident of its action; indeed, an incident, but not the ultimate end. Why are not the wicked compared to iron and stone in the fire, burning but never consumed? The righteous are compared to gold in a fire of trial, but only to be made pure, and fit for eternal life.

Now, you champions of the horror of an endless burning, whence came your perversion of Scripture, and your slander against God? Stand up and answer honestly, and acknowledge that it sprung from the dogma of an "immortal soul." Ah! there is the nest egg of mischief, there the root of the blasphemy. There it is! Look at it! And remember, that in the day of God, this ogre of ages will be made base and contemptible, as it is. This foundation of divers vile and foul fabrics will be dashed to pieces, with all the men and things that are then shattered by the hand of Power. But better, oh, ye zealous guard around this lie of Beelzebub, that ye cut loose from it, and bear honest and valiant witness against it, before the hour of testimony is passed forever. "COME UNTO ME."

A christian lady from the country was standing on Broadway at one of the crossings, waiting to pass over. The broad thoroughfare was, as usual, thronged with carriages rapidly rolling along right and left, and making it dangerous for a footman to attempt to proceed. For a long time she waited, yet dared not venture to cross, lest she should be thrown down. Looking over to the opposite side of the street, she saw a policeman standing and beckoning with his finger for her to come to him.

The lady being assured by his uniform and beckoning finger, that his authority was her protection, stepped unhesitatingly down from the sidewalk among the fiery horses. Instantly every rein was drawn up, the rolling carriages stood still, and she walked over, passing through them as safely as if on her parlor floor.

The way to Jesus seems to many beset with difficulties insurmountable. They stand at life's crossings earnestly desiring to go over, but, through unbelief, afraid of the horses. They wait, hoping for a more convenient season, when this evil and that trial, and the other cross shall be taken out of the way, and then they will pass pleasantly over to him. But troubles roll along and never cease. On the other side Jesus stands, having "all power in heaven and in earth," and gently beckoning, "nor lifting up his voice in the streets," he softly says, "Come unto me." Step down from off the curb of unbelief, looking unto him nor fearing in thy heart, and at once all earth and hell is "reined up short," to make thee a safe passage through.—Guide to Holiness.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Oct. 7, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

CHICAGO TENT-MEETING.

Before speaking of our tent-meeting in Chicago, we will say something about the city and the people. There has been no other city in the history of our world that has grown so rapidly as this. It has now probably over three hundred thousand inhabitants. Some eight to ten thousand buildings are erected in a year. A large number of the leading business men are quite young—probably a larger proportion than in any other city in the world. There appears to be a concentration here of the most enterprising business talent in the country. We do not think there is another city in the world, of the same size, where so much business is done in a day as in Chicago. Every thing seems to be done by the wholesale, on the largest scale, and with the greatest possible dispatch. All is hurry, hurry, and minutes are of more value here than hours in most places. Moderation seems all out of place. If there is a spot anywhere upon our earth, where the people need to heed the Savior's instruction:—"Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares," it is in Chicago. It is the place to find those indicated by the following from Jesus: "These are they which are sown among thorns; such as hear the word, and the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lust of other things entering in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful." Satan seems determined the people shall have no time to think or talk of any thing but business. But we found an interesting daily noon prayer-meeting for all who love the Savior. It is held in the building belonging to the Young Men's Christian Association, on Madison street, between Clark and Lasalle streets. They meet at twelve o'clock, and close at forty-five minutes past twelve. We met some there who appeared to be true christians.

The people in C. often give quite liberally for benevolent purposes, but it does not appear that many give with the idea of pleasing the Lord. Scenes of pleasure are crowded, and many of those present are professors of religion. All admit it is a very wicked city. One would be puzzled to tell when the Sabbath came, especially in some parts of the city, unless it was by the increased amount of beer-drinking among the Germans, and their holiday sports. The cars on the northwestern R. R., which pass near Bro. Ramsey's, where we stopped, appear to be as active on the Sabbath as any other day. There is a Sodom-like appearance all around, and but little to lead one to think of Jesus or his coming.

Chicago is noted for its up-and-down side-walks. At the corners of streets, it is common to go down steps from two to five or six feet. The cellars are above ground, and the houses are set on top of them. In the main business part of the city, the side-walks are good, and made of stone, permanently fixed; but most of the side-walks are made of boards, and are only temporary in their arrangement, waiting to have the buildings arranged permanently.

If one wishes to be a missionary, he will find plenty to do in Chicago. He need not go to India to find men and women who are walking in darkness. It is a strong-hold of spiritualism; and as far as that goes, christianity is paralyzed or destroyed. If the business men of Chicago could be persuaded to serve the Lord, and throw their energies into his service, as they have into the things of the world, they would produce a powerful effect upon community. As it is, their influence is against a pure christianity; hence it is a hard place in which to awaken a religious interest.

We arrived in C. Thursday morning, Sept. 24th. Bro. D. S. Clark, from Amboy, Ill., arrived the same day. He is an evangelist, who has charge of the "Shiloh Tent," which is sixty feet in diameter. On account of the wet weather, we were not able to get the tent piched till Saturday, the 26th. Bro. C. C. Ramsey, formerly of Boston, pastor of the church here, had secured an entire square, at the corner of West Lake and May streets, for the use of which one month, he had paid thirty dollars. It is said to be the best lot in the city for our tent-meeting. Bro. Ramsey is an earnest, sincere christian man, who is highly esteemed by the church and people in Chicago, so far as known. He labors daily with his hands, and preaches without compensation. We think it would be better for the church to let them do their part; even if he gave it away again. We found the church all happily united in brotherly love, and ready to go to work for the Lord. We had good prayer meetings Thursday and Friday evenings; and Saturday evening we held our first meeting in the tent. We all felt it was good to be there, and that the Lord was smiling upon us, causing us to feel confident that we should enjoy his presence and blessings during the continuance of our meetings. Friday had been observed as a day of fasting and prayer, in behalf of these meetings, and the Lord hearkened and heard. We found all friendly towards us, and apparently glad that we were to have the meeting.

Sabbath, 27th, we had a good love-feast at half-past nine A. M. Although but little notice had been given of our meetings, we had a good audience in the forenoon, and in the afternoon and evening, the tent was quite full. The congregations were intelligent and attentive. A number of members of other denominations were present, and several took a part in the conference meetings; particularly the one at half-past six o'clock in the evening, which was a precious season of refreshing. We felt a still stronger assurance that the Spirit of the Lord was with us. We conversed with one man and his wife, who said they had not been to meeting before for two years. The husband was already nearly persuaded to be a christian. He was very much pleased with the character of the meetings. A devoted and intelligent Methodist sister was present and took an active part; saying our meetings were like those held by the old fashioned Methodists. She thought she should continue to come. Others expressed a similar feeling. Our hearts were very much cheered by what we felt, saw and heard. We shall be very much disappointed if we do not see a good work in Chicago. We find Bro. Clark a true yoke-fellow, judicious, intelligent, earnest, and self-denying in the cause of Christ.

Monday, Sept. 28th. Our meeting this evening was excellent. Bro. Geo. Needham, the "Irish evangelist," who has recently come to this country, gave us an interesting discourse on the plan of salvation. He is a young man of much promise, who has the charge of one of the city missions. A few weeks since he was married to Sr. E. A. Annable, who has been associated with Bro. Hastings in the office of the Christian. Our readers have often been delighted with her interesting communications. We hope to receive more from her pen. Bro. and Sr. Needham are doing a noble work in this city. They are earnest laborers in the vineyard of the Lord. She is active among the children, and gaining a hallowed influence over them. She is to have a children's meeting in the tent on Friday. We shall expect an interesting season.

The Lord is giving us much favor with the people. There is an earnest desire to hear more in relation to the important truths of the Bible, that have been so long covered up by theological speculation. So far as we can discern, there is great darkness in this city in relation to the plain teachings of the Scriptures. It seems as though Satan had persuaded the people to take all sorts of substitutes for the word of the Lord, until he has led them into the most intricate labyrinths of confusion, where they can see scarcely a ray of true gospel light; and yet they think all is well, because they are in the company of their ministers and the churches. It hardly seems possible that they could have wandered so far from the teachings of Jesus and the apostles, when they had their Bibles in their hands; but when we look at what the Catholic church has done, with all her learned men for guides, we can then see that it is possible for the Protestant church to be led astray also by the cunning wiles of Satan. That they are astray is certain, if we take the word of the Lord for our guide.

Tuesday evening, we had our tent crowded with an intelligent and attentive audience. Those prepared to judge said there were a thousand people present. The interest is rapidly increasing. Some six or eight asked questions at the close of the discourse, and thus helped to bring out the truth more clearly. About three quarters of an hour were spent in asking and answering questions. Among the questioners were those who believe in Spiritualism, Catholicism, Deism, and Christianity; but they were all opposed to the plain word of the Lord, and sustained the lie of Satan—"Ye shall not surely die."

We expect to see glorious results from our meetings here. The field is ripe for the harvest. Unless something is done soon to restore confidence in the Scriptures, the mass of mankind, even in Christendom, will be on the infidel's side. The popular preaching of these last days is so interwoven with fables, that the truth is scarcely perceptible. It is time for the friends of Jesus to awake from their slumbers, before their families and friends are bound fast in the chains of infidelity. It is a sad sight to see what the enemy of all righteousness is now doing. His ranks are continually swelling with new recruits, who are coming in from the first families, and more or less from all churches, in consequence of their backslidings. Christian soldier, will you quietly look on and see Satan capture one after another, and refuse to act, because it may make you unpopular among the children of the evil one? What will Jesus say to such when he comes? Can he say "Well done, thou good and faithful servant"?

During our meetings we have had the aid of Bro. A. S. Calkins, Bro. Marsh, and Sr. Prescott. The Brn. and Srs. here are ready to do what they can to help on the work. They appear willing to make any sacrifice in their power. Thus far, we have had most excellent order. Pray for us.

"PLYMOUTH PULPIT."—This is the title of a publication, to be issued weekly, embracing the Sunday sermons of Henry Ward Beecher. Reported by T. J. Ellinwood, and published by J. B. Ford & Co., New York.

WHAT IS PRAYER?

When listening to some long, tedious prayers, we have thought if all was omitted except what was really prayer, it would be sufficiently short to be listened to with interest. It seems as though some thought, if they did not make a long prayer, the people would think it was because they lacked ability. Prayer is defined as "the act of asking a favor, and particularly with earnestness." If one should go to ask a favor of one who was greatly his superior, it would be quite out of place for him to begin to give an account of passing events, and various other things not connected directly with the petition. The request should be presented in as few words as possible, in a simple manner, with becoming reverence and respect towards the one of whom the favor is expected. Those points should be especially observed in prayer to our Creator, if we would be heard with pleasure by those who may listen. The prayers recorded in the Bible are very short, when compared with most of the public prayers at the present day. Instead of its being a pleasure, it is often very tedious to unite with those who pray on public occasions. One would think they were praying like the Pharisees, to be heard of men. They appear to seek all possible ways to express the same thing; and go on to tell the Lord about things, of which, no doubt, he is better informed than any one else. Many prayers are offered that hardly contain a single petition. It was a beautiful talk about various things, but the prayer was wanting. If all but the prayer was omitted, we think but very few would be over three minutes in length, thus corresponding with those recorded in the Scriptures.

It has often been observed that in revivals, prayers are usually short and fervent; but when a church is in a cold state, then we may expect long, cold and formal prayers, which afford no satisfaction to any one. It is only a kind of religious drudgery, which is performed like a school-boy's task. Such prayers, of course, do not avail much. When we live near to Jesus, prayer is a delight; and is to the christian spiritually as is the breath of life physically. He cannot live without it.

It is to be feared there is a lack of prayer, private, social, and public among those who are professedly looking for the coming of Jesus. In proportion as prayer is neglected we grow weak and faint in the cause of the Lord. Those who have been the most noted for their success in winning sinners to Christ, have been equally noted for spending much time in secret prayer. We do not see how any one can think of living a christian life without at least having a special place for morning and evening prayer, where he can be alone in communion with the Lord. When one gets so far from the Savior as to neglect secret prayer, he may be sure he is in a dying condition.

Let us all watch and pray more, and we shall be more useful in the vineyard of the Lord, and better prepared to meet Jesus at his coming. Short prayers in public and long ones in the closet.

TRANSLATION OF GENESIS.

The American Bible Union society has now translated the book of Genesis, and published it in an octavo volume of 207pp., with notes. Thomas Conant is the translator. He is said to be the ablest linguist in the United States. Gen. 2: 7, he renders as follows:—"And Jehovah God formed the man of dust of the ground; and he breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and the man became a living soul." In his notes he says:

"Here there seems to be no more implied than is recognized in Isaiah 2: 22, where it is said, with probable reference to this passage: 'Cease ye from man, in whose nostrils is breath;' only breath, so frail a principle of life, and so easily extinguished."

He then goes on to speak of the word soul, and says:—

The Hebrew word (nephesh) here rendered soul, includes all beings that have animal life; and hence it is applied to animals of the sea and land, in ch. 1: 20, 21, 24, 30. The English word soul (like the German seele) originally had this extent of meaning, as in verses 20 and 30, in the margin of the common English version. But, as the word is now used, it would misrepresent the meaning in those passages."

Here is a frank confession that the term soul "originally" applied to "all beings that have animal life," whether on the land or in the sea. This corresponds with Dr. Clarke, who says: "nephesh chaiyah" [living soul] is "a general term to express all creatures endued with animal life, in any of its infinitely varied gradations."

Dr. Kitto, in his Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature, renders Gen. 2: 7 as follows; "And Jehovah God formed the man [Heb. the Adam] dust from the ground, and blew into his nostrils the breath of life; and the man became a living animal." He then says: "We should be acting unfaithfully, if we were to affirm" that "an immortal spirit" is "contained or implied in this passage." Cyc. Bib. Lit., vol 1. p. 59.

It will be seen that these noted Hebrew scholars agree in their statements, and that they are in harmony with the views we advocate. Why will they not accept the word nephesh as "originally" used in the Bible, and understood by Bible writers? As Dr. Conant says, "as the word is now used, it would misrepresent the meaning in those passages." The question arises, was the word used correctly at first; or did the Lord use it in a wrong sense when he "applied" it "to animals of the sea and land?" Would it not be well to return to the Bible use of the word, instead of rejecting that for a theological meaning, introduced a thousand years afterwards? When will men cease to put more confidence in the mere opinions of men, than in a plain "thus saith the Lord"?

The time has come at last when many begin to see that they have been taught contrary to the word of the Lord, and been led far away from the simplicity of the truth as revealed in the Scriptures. So long as people believe in the immortality of the soul, they will find it impossible to make the Bible harmonize with itself; for it is certain the doctrine is not taught by any inspired writer. A belief in the entire mortality of man is the only safeguard against that worst of all delusions—Spiritualism. That system could not stand another day, if it were not for the belief that man has an immortal soul that leaves at death, and can return to communicate with former friends. Those who see the light should let it shine before men. It is a christian duty. Though crossing, let us be faithful to our high calling.

NOW READY.

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"HYMNS OF THE JUBILEE HARP,"

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

By the Advent Chris. Pub. Society.

Among the thousands who sing from "The Jubilee Harp," there are many hundreds, especially the aged, to whose eyes the fine print of the Harp is a great discomfort and inconvenience, and who would gladly welcome an edition of the same excellent hymns, in a convenient form, in large, clear type. The above work is issued especially for them, and we trust they will find it just what they want.

There are hundreds also who sing from the Harp, who never use the notes, and who would therefore be just as well and better pleased with a book containing the same hymns, without the music, at a lower price. This book was got up also especially for them, and will, no doubt, be to all such just the thing they desire.

This edition of "The Hymns" is not, by any means, intended to supercede "The Harp." It is designed as a companion to it; and is so arranged, with references, that hymns given out from the one can be readily found in the other.

The whole has been carefully revised and corrected, and a brief supplement of choice and popular hymns appended. The typework was done in our own office, and in a style, we trust, not inferior to that of any other.

It is a volume of 576 pages, containing some 850 Hymns and Anthems, substantially bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, at 75 cents, single copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100. Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9.50 per dozen; $75.00 per 100. It is cheaper by far than any similar work that we know of in the market. When sent by mail, 16 cts. additional postage. AG'T.

DIABOLISM.

Last Sabbath (Sept. 27th,) Capt. E. V. Wilson delivered a lecture in Crosby's Music Hall, Chicago, on "Diabolism," in which he is reported to have said, "The present religion of the day is nothing more than diabolism." Capt. Wilson is known as a Spiritualist, and a bold opposer of the plan of salvation as taught by Jesus and his followers. Says the Chicago Republican (of Sept. 28th) which reported a brief of his lecture:—

"He asserted that diabolism is the reigning 'ism' in the world to-day, and is destined to overthrow all prejudices, and will finally work out the salvation of the universe. He claimed that Jesus was nothing more than a devil, and suffered death on the cross because of his 'ism.' . . . He charged the christian church with teaching deviltry, and said that he could prove it."

One thing is certain, the spirits teach directly the opposite of what Jesus and his apostles taught. If one is right, the other is wrong. The two cannot be harmonized. As the spirits all teach that Jesus was only a good man, and no more the Son of God than any other good man, they make him out the greatest deceiver ever in the world, and unworthy the respect of any good person.

Shall we leave Jesus and unite with his enemies? Shall we give up the truth for lies? Our best friend for a deadly enemy? One who has done every thing for our good, for one who is doing all in his power to ruin us for ever? Let every one say NO. Do you say so? Then let Spiritualism alone, and keep away from it as you would from a den of rattlesnakes.

THE TRIBULATION.

How do you reconcile Matt. 24: 21 with Dan. 12: 1? If the "tribulation" of Matt. 24: 21 was at the destruction of Jerusalem, as it would appear, and was greater than "ever shall be," how could it be said in Dan. 12: 1, when referring to the time when the people should be delivered, whose names were written in the book, or in other words, in the time of the resurrection, there shall be a "time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation"? Was there not a nation when Jerusalem was destroyed? C. S. BOURNE.

We understand that the tribulation in Matt. came upon the righteous during the dark ages, after the saints were given into the hands of the little horn. That tribulation is now in the past. The "time of trouble" mentioned in Dan. 12: 1, we believe is coming upon the wicked, and will not begin till Michael stands up at the second coming of Christ.

THE HERALD OF HEALTH for September came to us with a large number of articles from distinguished authors, all of which will repay a careful perusal. We may mention particularly a paper on "Good Bread, and how to make it." This article contains a large number of new recipes for making wholesome and delicious bread, which ought to be read by every woman. $2.00 per annum; 20 cts. per number. Miller, Wood & Co., Publishers, 15 Laight Street, New York.

☞ Rest is for heaven, toil is for earth. We often speak of being "settled in life." We might as well think of casting anchor in the midst of the Atlantic Ocean, or talk of the permanent situation of a stone that is rolling down hill!

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at the National Campmeeting, Chapin's Grove, Springfield, Mass., Aug. 25th, 1868, the following resolutions were adopted:—

Resolved, That we raise TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year.

Resolved, That our preaching brethren be, and hereby are, requested to act as Agents in this good work, to solicit contributions to the Tract Fund, as often at least as once in every quarter, and forward the same to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass.

ST. LOUIS MISSION.

BRO. GRANT:—By the providence of God, I arrived in this city last Sunday, about two A. M. After leaving Alton Bay, I visited and preached in Worcester, Mass., New York City, and Phila., Pa. It was at Worcester I made up my mind, after years of wandering, to start anew in the service of God. There I found many warm and christian hearts to comfort and cheer me in my affliction at the death of my companion, and also to encourage me to start forth again in the work of the ministry.

At New York, I visited the "Star of Hope" Mission. Was disappointed, after hearing many silly stories about "fine carpets, costly furniture," etc., to find everything of the most plain order, and without style or fashion. In fact, I saw nothing of which any one could complain, except it be for the absence of many things which would greatly add to the comfort of those who are willing to leave all and sacrifice all for the sake of ministering to the spiritual wants of the poor and destitute. So far as I am concerned, instead of having fear or jealousy that others may prosper or receive a larger share of aid than I do, in our mission work, I feel to pray earnestly that God will bless and prosper all, and give to us all just what we need. It is impossible for God to be impoverished by giving. Let us pray for ourselves and each other, that God will divide unto each according to his own good pleasure.

In Phila., I preached five times. Sunday, Sept. 13th, had been set apart for the ordination of Brn. Wm. Ashman of Phila., Pa., and Robert S. Cattell of Camden Co., N. J. The committee appointed by the church reported favorably, and the church voted unanimously. In accordance with which, a sermon was preached in the morning from Matt. 24: 45, 46. The closing part of the sermon was given as a "charge" to the candidates, followed by an ordination prayer by Elder Stuart of Phila. Then to each was given the hand of fellowship, which closed the morning service. The meetings were well attended, and a deep interest was manifested. Were I to labor East, and time to continue, I do not know of so desirable a place in which to locate and preach as Phila. and its surroundings. But our work is almost done.

It was a happy day with us here last Sabbath. Quite a number have been converted during my absence, both white and colored, of whom I will say more hereafter, the Lord will.

I wish to acknowledge the receipt of all monies given me from the time I left St. Louis, Aug. 9th, up to the time of my return, Sept. 20th.

A Bro. and Sr. at Oakdale gave me $7.00. Camp-ground, Springfield:—Bro. J. G., $1. Bro. W. Nichols, $5. Bro. G. Tilley, $10. Bro. N. J. Withington, $1. Sr. Lotta, Manchester, $1. I received from Sr. R. T. Woodbury, Lewiston, Me., a bed-quilt; also an assortment of campmeeting hymns from Geo. E. Lee, Brimfield, Mass., and about five hundred tracts from Bro. S. Hall, Hartford, Ct.

After a week or two, should time continue, I will try and speak of things here. I can only say now, everything looks encouraging. Brethren and sisters, pray for us. Your Bro. in hope of eternal life, H. K. FLAGG.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 22nd.

PRAYER.—Prayer is the rustling of the wings of angels that are on their way bringing us the beams of the great and everlasting sun which shines from the throne of heaven, shedding glory and light around. Tears of penitence lubricate the wheels of the chariot that brings us blessings from the universal sun of creation, anticipating our requests and giving us more than we dare ask and much more than we are worthy to receive. Desire for prayer is a sure precursor of the coming blessing. "Even as the cloud foreshadoweth the rain, so prayer foreshadoweth the blessing."

STAR OF HOPE MISSION.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—Truly the Lord is in our mission, and such meetings as we are having now, it would do your hearts good to be in. The Lord is pouring out his Spirit on all ages and conditions. Our meeting-room is crowded, and somebody rises for prayers almost every night, and the membership is being revived. We have just had our quarterly meeting seasons here, and at Hackensack. They were seasons long to be remembered. It is wonderful how fast they learn the truth; and the truth makes them free. We set apart Friday for fasting and prayer for some special object, and we always get it. We are asking for a revival now, and we believe the Lord will give us the desire of our hearts; it looks like it already.

All you that love mission work, pray for us, that our work may be done, and well done. There seems to be a revival spirit all over this wicked city, from John Allen of Water St., to all the by-ways and sinks of iniquity and crime. O! I am so glad that I live to see this day, when God is working in his own way, and by whom he pleases.

I would say to the brethren and sisters who have been interested in this work,—do not slacken your hands just now, at the finishing up of this great work, but help to the end. We need many things now for the poor, both clothing and nourishment, and must have them. We believe God has them for us somewhere. Hope we shall all remember the words of Jesus, where he says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." May the Lord help us to be faithful, is the prayer of your sister, hoping for a crown of life when Jesus comes, M. E. DOW.

RECEIPTS. From Sister Tout, Cambridge, Mass., $6.50. "Left hand," Portland, Me., 50 cts. H. C. H., Unionville, Conn., $3.00. J. B. Morgan (rent), $1.00. Elizabeth Farnsworth, Groton, Mass., $20.00. A box from Sr. J. M. Moulton, containing the clothing of a mother and infant, who are quietly sleeping in the grave, awaiting the morning of the resurrection. God bless the donor, and help us to be ready to meet the sleeping ones when Jesus comes. M. E. D.

ROCKLAND TENT MEETING.

Our meeting commenced at Blackington's Corner near Rockland city, according to appointment. The location was very pleasant for scenery, yet a little too far from the city to gather the many who might have attended if nearer. But many of the Lord's children from Lincolnville, Hope, Camden, Rockport, and other towns, came in and commenced labor for the Lord in good earnest. Some of the time it was very rainy, which prevented many from attending who otherwise would; yet a goodly number came and listened with great attention to the word spoken. Some of the members of other churches became deeply interested in our preaching and joined in our worship.

We gave out several hundreds of tracts, and circulated a good number of books among the people. The last two evenings the tent was nearly filled, and quite an interest expressed for us to stop longer. We are convinced that our effort in Rockland was not in vain in the Lord. The word was faithfully preached, and much good seed sown, which will be blessed of God to the salvation of souls, and the building up of the saints. Several wanderers were reclaimed, and others convinced that it was time to return to Christ; while others were convicted the day of the Lord is at hand, and that it is duty to watch and be ready for his return.

The message of the Lord's soon return is new to this people, and they were surprised to hear it presented in a scriptural manner, and so differently from the false reports they had heard about us. We were very kindly treated, and enjoyed a precious season in the Lord and in toil. I. C. WELLCOME.

P. S. By the liberality of the brethren, though few in number, and the generosity of the friends, the expenses of this meeting were promptly met. This should provoke others to emulation, who do much less with more means. I. C. W.

SPIRITUALISM AND ORTHODOXY.

The following extracts show how much difference there is in the hope of the two classes in the event of death. While the former discard the Bible, and the latter receive it as their guide and only intelligence concerning the future, it is strange that they should both look for the same glorified state to follow the dissolution of their bodies, and to be enjoyed by their immortal souls.

From the Rhode Island Journal (a Spiritualist paper):—

"Passed on to the beautiful home of the angels, from the residence of her father in Chicago, July 27th, 1868, the spirit of R. B. K., aged twenty-eight years. The subject of this notice was remarkable from childhood for her amiable disposition, and during the latter years of her earth life, for her unwavering faith in the Spiritual Philosophy. Although the subject of a painful disease for many years previous to her departure from the scenes of earth, she never murmured, and while suffering from the most severe pain, she ever manifested the utmost patience. As she neared the Summer Land, her spirit would seem at times to leave the physical form for hours together, and when she again returned to consciousness, would describe with great enthusiasm the beauties of the bright spirit home which she felt she was so soon to realize. When told by her physician that her spirit could remain in the form but a short time, she exclaimed, 'I shall welcome the blessed change.' During her last sickness she was often conscious of the presence of spirits, with whom she could sometimes converse. Her relatives and friends who are left behind are consoled by the beautiful hope and assurance of the heavenly teachings of Spiritualism, and expect ere long to meet the loved one in the beautiful spirit land."

Compare with this the following extracts from the "Guide to and Beauty of Holiness":

"LOVED ONES GONE BEFORE.—Our fathers, where are they? Where are Enoch, Moses, Samuel, David, Daniel, and all the blessed company of prophets, apostles, martyrs, and all the servants of the living God of every age? Where, oh, where are the spirits of the blest made perfect?"

"Do we ask, where are the good who by their lives plainly declare that they sought a better country? We answer, with our eye on the Scriptures of truth, they are not far from those whom they loved on the earth. Of whom is the cloud of witnesses by whom we are surrounded composed? That we are surrounded by living intelligences is just as clear as the Bible can make it."

"Where is that dear father, mother, brother, sister, child, and the beloved relatives and friends who loved to minister to your spiritual advantage while on earth?"

"Does death make any change in the affections? Surely not; think of them as not far distant, but as commissioned by your loving heavenly Father often to minister to you."

Again, speaking of the death of a friend, the writer adds:—

"About ten minutes before his departure, as the veil of mortality began to be drawn aside, his countenance began to gather unearthly brightness, and with an inexpressible look of triumph, he extended his emaciated hand and waved it three times, in token of perfect victory through the blood of the Lamb over death, hell, and the grave, and his happy spirit

'Clapped the glad wing and soared away,
To mingle in the blaze of day.'"

Let us compare a little Bible with the above.

1. Enoch, whatever constituted Enoch, was translated soul, body and spirit, and the object of his translation was that he should not see death. Heb. 11: 5.

2. Moses, we learn, died, and the Lord buried him in the land of Moab. Deut. 34: 5, 6.

3. Samuel died, and was buried in Ramah. 1 Sam. 25: 1.

4. David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David. 1 Kings 2: 10. And Peter tells us that he was still there on the day of Pentecost, and had not ascended to heaven. Acts 2.

5. Daniel was told he should rest, and stand in his lot at the end of the 1335 days. Dan. 12.

How any one could have had their eye on the Scriptures, and tell us that the faithful servants of God are not far from us, but in our midst, ministering to our wants, is more than I can conceive.

Does death make any change in the affections? The above writer says no; but God says their love, hatred and envy are perished when any one dies. Eccl. 9: 6.

EDWIN T. HIMES.

THE WALDENSES AND THE BIBLE.

The Waldenses were more remarkable than any other people on the face of the earth for the large portions of Scripture which they committed to memory. Scripture was their all; and as the Jews treasured the manuscripts of the Old Testament, and carried them everywhere in their wanderings, often, as in the persecutions of Spain, winding them around their bodies, to part with them only with their lives; so these Waldenses laid up rich portions alike from the Old and the New Testaments in their hearts, so that they could not be taken from them. The preparation of their pastors for the ministry consisted in learning by heart the Gospels of Matthew and John, and all the Epistles, and most of the writings of David, Solomon and the Prophets.

It is reckoned, in the eleventh and twelfth centuries, that a fair copy of the Bible, from a convent, would have cost more than sixty pounds ($300) of our mony, for the writing only; and that a sklful scribe could not complete one in less than ten months. Very precious, therefore, was every single portion; and as their enemies seized upon and burnt every copy of which they could hear, societies of young persons were formed in the Vaudois valleys, every member of which was trusted to preserve in his memory a certain number of chapters; and when they assembled for worship, which they did with all possible precaution, from great distances, in some hidden mountain gorge, these new Levites, standing before the face of the minister, would recite, one after another, the chapters of the priceless book, for which they often paid the price of blood. Upon this church of the book came down, for century after century, the heaviest vengeance of the church of Rome.

A striking instance of their devotion to the Bible is recorded of the inhabitants of two valleys, who, on the 21st of January, 1516, having been ordered to go to mass, or be subjected to fire, to sword, to cord, the Pope's three arguments, met to consider what should be done. In the midst of the kneeling people, the ministers pronounced these words: "We here promise, our hands on the Bible, and in the solemn presence of God, to maintain the Bible whole and alone, though it be at the peril of our lives, in order that we may transmit it to our children pure as we received it from our fathers." One hundred and thirty years afterwards, when they returned to the valleys from which they had been exiled, they met again on this very spot, the hill of Sibaond, and renewed the same oath to God and to each other.—Herald of the Coming Kingdom.

GOOD ADVICE.

Young men, read the following, and treasure it up. The advice is good. None will have occasion to repent for heeding it. Most are taking the opposite course, and are fast rushing to ruin. It is a sad fact that but few young men are now in the way to everlasting life.

"It should be the aim of young men to go into good society—we mean not the rich, nor the proud, the fashionable, but the society of the wise, the intelligent and the good. Where you find men that know more than you do, and from whose conversation you can gather information, it is always safe to be found. It has broken down many a man by associating with the low and vulgar, where the ribald song was inculcated and the indecent story told to excite laughter or influence the bad passions. Lord Clarendon attributed success and happiness in life to associating with persons more learned and virtuous than ourselves. If you wish to be wise and respected, if you desire happiness and not misery, we advise you to associate with the intelligent and good. Strive for excellence and strict integrity, and you never will be found in the sinks of pollution, or on the benches of revilers and gamblers. Once habituate yourself to a virtuous course, once secure a love for good society, and no punishment would be greater than by accident to be obliged for half a day to associate with the low and vulgar."

POWER OF CONSCIENCE.—A follower of Pythagoras once bought a pair of shoes from a cobbler, for which he promised to pay him on a future day. On that day he took the money, but, finding the cobbler had died in the interim, returned, secretly rejoicing that he could retain the money, and get a pair of shoes for nothing. "His conscience, however," said Seneca, "would not let him rest," till, taking up the money, he went back to the cobbler's shop, and casting in the money, said: 'Go thy way, for though he is dead to all the world besides, yet he is alive to me.'"—British Workman.

— The man who sees me in an error, and does not try to set me right, is not worthy to be called my friend.

Correspondence.

From Bro. A. D. Flagg.

BRN. AND SRS.:—After taking the parting hand with many loved ones at the depot at Alton, and filling an appointment at Lee, N. H., one at Kingston Plains, and one at Lowell, Mass., and again Sunday, Sept. 13th, at Kingston, Monday, the 14th, I started for my old field of labor, New York and vicinity, with my spiritual strength renewed, and feeling more like fighting the good fight of faith than ever before. We are coming up to the judgment. Are we ready to hail that glad day? Has all hatred, malice, evil speaking, corrupt communication, been laid aside, and the fruits of the Spirit adopted instead? Are we doing all we can to promote the interests of those around us, both saint and sinner? Are our hearts filled with love one for another? If not, let us consecrate ourselves anew to Him. Let us all try and live better christians. Have we as a people done all we could to save perishing men? If not, let us rally now, and the Lord will forgive us our slothfulness, and save us when he comes.

I am now laboring with Sister Smith, trying to compel men to come in and make ready for that great event, so long looked for by the Advent people. And we are called upon to supply temporal as well as spiritual food. We stand as it were between you and the perishing, ready to administer all you provide. Hundreds within a stone's throw of the Mission will soon be crying for bread to eat and clothes to keep them warm. Shall they have your assistance? Shall they be made happy because you who have been blessed with this world's goods do your duty? Go through your closets and chambers; look up your cast-off clothing; search your pockets; and see if you cannot find something which may be the means of saving some poor, sad ones. Do not forget to pray that the Lord will bless us abundantly, and save us all in the new earth, where all tears will be wiped from all faces. A. D. FLAGG.

Star of Hope Mission, N. Y.

From Bro. D. D. Reed.

To the church scattered abroad:—We have just closed one of the best tent meetings that we ever held. Thank God, the holy power was in the tent, and that is what converts sinners,—the truth, preached in the Holy Spirit. I think I never have pitched the pentecostal tent without a reformation.

Bro. Fassett and Srs. Steere and Rowell were with me to labor. The truth of God has shaken the region as it never was shaken before. Fro. Fassett baptized sixteen happy souls. One deacon of the Congregationalist church was baptized. Thank God, the truth will and must be preached. The whole community is waked up to the great Advent truth.

It is getting cold, and I have put my tent up for the last meeting in this country. I expect, if it is ever pitched again, it will be on the shores of the Pacific Ocean. Will you all pray that the blessing of God may go with me? I am going alone to win a bride for my Lord. We have got the last great truth, and I feel it all through my bones. I am willing to suffer and die for this great truth.

Will some good preacher come this way and help? Bro. Fassett labors in this region. They are the best hearted people that I ever saw. While in Prescott with my tent, they came and handed me money, and said if it was not enough, they would pay more. I told them I did not want any more; I did not come after their money, but after them. Here are six or eight churches not far from each other; a good railroad from place to place. Will some man of God come and help? Bro. Fassett, after I leave, will be all alone. This is the healthiest country I was ever in. A good country.

I preached last Sunday about six miles back in the country, in a school-house. Good attendance. Had a good, free time. Will some good man, who has the cause of God at heart, come this way? You never will be sorry. Stop at Bro. Fassett's, in Minneapolis, Minn. He does not live far from the depot. If any of my brethren wish to write me, direct to D. D. Reed, Minneapolis, Minn. In hope, D. D. REED.

Sept. 14th, 1868.

From Bro. H. Pratt.

BRO. GRANT:—Last Sabbath was one of deep interest with us here. Five were baptized into the likeness of His death, to walk in newness of life; and the cause is still onward. Bro. Wm. McCulloch preached to us two evenings, and was rejoicing that his last child was baptized and praising the Lord before he left home. And now Bro. Nathaniel McCullock is rejoicing to see all his family worshiping God with him, the youngest going forward in baptism last Sabbath.

"The prospect, it is so transporting," that we are almost home, I feel lifted above the turbid surroundings to sit with him in heavenly places. How sweet to walk in the smiles of his approbation; how cheering the prospect of speedy redemption; how joyous the assurance of rest. "There remaineth a rest"; rest from care; rest from weariness; rest from journeyings; rest at home. Almost down to the river; tears almost wiped away; almost hearing the "well done." Praise the Lord forever.

Pilgrims, rejoice! Lift up your heads. The morning cometh; it waiteth for thee. "Arise, look around thee." Thou canst watch one hour. "What I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch." H. PRATT.

HORNETS' NESTS IN ZION.

Loose tongues "gadding abroad," in professors of religion, are ever to be bemoaned by all well-wishers of the church of Christ. They are hornets' nests in Zion which ought to be destroyed at all hazards. This matter is so pithily touched off by the editor of the Morning Star, in a paper on purging out the old leaven, that we can not forbear giving our readers the pleasure, and may be the profit of reading it. He says:

Some christians have lawless tongues. They pray well, talk well, give well, are in many things very good, but their tongue is terribly unruly. The imperfections of the whole neighborhood are treasured and repeated. They rattle away at all hours, under all circumstances, to all people. Regular picking-machines they are, sharp, relentless, vigilant. And they make a conscience of it, too. "We are open-hearted," "we must be honest," "we must speak right, and just what we think," "we are no hypocrites," "we are very sorry, but must tell the truth," they say, and then let loose hailstones and coals of fire. This tendency in them is their nature, habit, and passion, and it will cost them a battle to subdue it. But what a scandal they bring upon the gospel! How they dishonor Christ! They do more hurt than a score of infidels. They torment the church, are a hornets' nest in Zion, sting and poison all they touch, and cause the saints to cry out, "From this torment, good Lord, deliver us."—Morning Star.

Obituaries.

STANTON. Died in Nashua, N. H., Aug. 10th, 1868, Sr. Angie M., wife of Bro. John Stanton, and daughter of Bro. Asa and Sr. Martha Avery, aged thirty years.

Also, Sept. 23d, infant daughter of Sr. Angie M. and Bro. John Stanton, aged seven weeks.

In early life our beloved sister knew by experience what it was to love Jesus. Being possessed of an amiable and pleasant disposition, her heart easily yielded to the claims and requirements of the gospel. As she advanced in years, her affections and interests became engaged in worldly friendships and pursuits, and her devotion to religious duties ceased for a time. When the stirring message of the coming of Jesus in '67 came sounding through the land, she with her companion was aroused by the solemn call to prepare for the "marriage supper of the Lamb." She immediately attended to the important work, and consecrated herself to the duties and services of a christian life, and continued in the performance of them until death set its cold seal upon her lovely brow.

Her loss is keenly felt by a large circle of relatives and friends. A lonely and almost broken-hearted companion, grief-stricken parents, sisters and brothers, all feel they have met with a loss which can never be replaced until the grave gives up its sacred dead. May the hand of the Lord sustain and strengthen these mourners, and lead them gently through this vale of tears.

Words of comfort were spoken at the funeral by Bro. L. Kimball, and with many tender thoughts and tears we laid her away in a peaceful repose. A. W. STAPLES.

THOMAS. In Hamilton, Mo., Aug. 15th, 1868, Lydia Jane, wife of Milo D. Thomas, and only daughter of Eld. S. D. and Mary Deyo, and sister of Elder Peter S. W. Deyo, aged forty-one years, eleven months, and twenty-one days.

Sister Jane was born in Seneca, N. Y. She embraced religion at the age of fourteen, under the labors of Eld. Morrison, a Christian minister. She continued a consistent member of that church as long as she lived. She leaves a father, mother, four brothers, husband, and five children to mourn her loss. Of late years she embraced the blessed hope, and looked for the Lord. We hope that soon her last prayer may be answered: "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly." PETER S. W. DEYO.

COBURN. Died in Salem, N. H., Sept. 10th, Willis B., only child of Charles G. and Abbie F. Coburn, aged four months.

Married.

In Benton, N. H., Sept. 23d, 1868, by Eld. A. W. Sibley, Mr. LEVI F. ATWOOD, of Woodstock, N. H., and Miss NANCY J. DROGER, of Benton.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

BAYONNE, 30th. Queen Isabella was accompanied to the frontier by a company of Spanish halberdiers, where she breakfasted at 11 o'clock. She then proceeded to Biarritz, where she had an interview of fifteen minutes with the Emperor Napoleon, Empress Eugenie and Prince Imperial.

The Queen then took a special train for this city, which she reached at a quarter past three this afternoon. Mafori occupied the same carriage with her. The royal party was met at the depot by some members of the late Spanish ministry, including Gonzales Bravo, who had five minutes conversation with her Majesty. Queen Isabella will take up her residence at the imperial palace at Pau. The city of Madrid is reported to be quiet to-day.

MADRID, 30th. The Official Gazette to-day published a proclamation of the provisional Government pronouncing the deposition of Queen Isabella, proclaiming the sovereignty of the people and concluding with a denunciation of the Bourbons.

The leading bankers and merchants of Andalusia have offered to the provisional Government a loan of 160,000,000 reals.

LONDON, 30th. Gen. Paria has arrived here. He was badly wounded in his battle with the revolutionary forces. The royal arms have been removed from the public buildings throughout the city by the soldiery. Citizens everywhere fraternize with the army. Buildings in several parts of the city are illuminated.

ALEXANDRIA, EGYPT, 1st. While the Viceroy of Egypt was visiting an illumination in a narrow street in Cairo, an attempt was made to assassinate him by dropping a steel ball armed with sharp barbs on his head. The Viceroy escaped uninjured. The perpetrator is unknown.

MADRID, 1st. The Provisional Junta has issued a proclamation calling out the national militia.

PARIS, 2d. It is reported that when the Queen of Spain left San Sebastian she took with her all the crown jewels and the Royal regalia, together with 23,000,000 reals.

MADRID, 2d. The elections for members of the new Junta are in progress. Perfect order is maintained.

Gen. Cologne has been arrested and sent to the Fortress of Sontono, where he will be confined until his trial commences.

PARIS, 2d.—Evening. The latest reports from Spain state that Marshal Serano will not go to Madrid, because the national guards, who hold possession of the city, refuse to admit the troops of the regular army under his command.

It is rumored that a republic has been proclaimed at Madrid. A proclamation has been issued in Catalonia, demanding a Federal Republican form of government for Spain.

BREMEN, 2d. The Weser Gazette says the Federal Government of North Germany has made a contract with the North German Lloyd Steamship Company, establishing a money order system between the United States and Germany.

LONDON Oct. 4. A rumor is current that the success of the revolution in Spain has had the effect to induce France to make some important concessions to Italy.

It is rumored that a conspiracy to dethrone Abdul Aziz, the reigning Sultan of Turkey, has been discovered in Constantinople, and that a number of political arrests have been made there.

MADRID, Oct. 3. Marshal Serrano, accompanied by seven Generals of the army, entered Madrid today in triumph. Great preparations were made for his reception.

LONDON, Oct. 3. It is announced to-day that the great powers of Europe will allow their diplomatic relations with Spain to remain in statu quo.

TROUBLE IN ITALY. As an offset to the troubles in Spain which are caused by the profligacy of the Queen and the cruelty of her government, it is said that an insurrection has broken out in Italy, being in the island of Sicily and the adjoining country of Calabria. The declarations of the insurgents are in favor of an Italian Republic, it is said; while it is suggested that the ex-King of Sicily is at the bottom of the plot, his present purpose being to give trouble to Victor Emanuel under the pretense of republicanism—a convenient means of annoyance until the time arrives "when the King shall come to his own again." It may be that this movement may result from the uneasiness of the exiled Princes of Italy, who have been plotting together, it is believed, ever since they were dispossessed of their subjects. But it is quite as probable that the Italian people have really commenced this disturbance, in consequence of their disappointment at the failures of the attempt to get possession of Rome, and the manner in which Il Re Galantuomo contributed to their disaster. All Italy was excited greatly, up to and after the unfortunate disaster at Mentana, and very little would have been required to blow up the flames of insurrection. Since that time the disappointment having worn off, the disaffection has not been so freely expressed, but the feeling against the King has not been extinguished. A short time will be necessary to make us better acquainted with the results and reasons of this new disturbance of the peace in Europe.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Oct. 2. The Roman Catholic Synod in this city have enacted that no absolution must be given to Free Masons, and that marriage must take place in church.

New York, Oct. 3. Dr. Gurley, the beloved pastor of the Avenue Presbyterian church of this city, died in Washington on the 30th ult. His death is a great loss to our city. He has long been considered by all denominations of christians a man of profound learning, deep piety, and of a true catholic spirit.

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL AT ROME.—The committees appointed to prepare the propositions to be debated by the Ecumenical Council are progressing very well in their work, and in the course of October or November the report of the fathers will be submitted by the Pope to an international committee, composed of prelates of those nations, as well as of England, Spain, Portugal, Holland, Belgium and Poland. Finally, the amended and elaborated propositions will be examined by a committee of cardinals, which will give them the shape in which they are to come before the Council. This list includes the following important subjects: The policy of uniting the Catholic and the Greek schismatic churches; the regulation of the relations between the Church and the State, in view of the almost universal transformation of absolute into constitutional governments; the position of the Catholic clergy in general, and particularly of religious communities of women, in presence of the revolution which desolates the Italian peninsula; the best mode of providing religious instruction as a barrier against the atheism of the day, so destructive to faith and morals. Cardinal Pitra, Benedictine, is appointed to plead the cause of the Greek church, and explain the differences which divide it from that of Rome.

KU-KLUX IN ARKANSAS. A Little Rock (Ark.) dispatch of last night, Sept. 29th, says: A dispatch from Batesville to the State authorities says the Ku-Klux, collected from the adjoining counties, are in arms in Fulton county, one thousand strong. The roads are all picketed to near Batesville. Union men call for help. This is where Captain Mason was assaulted a few days ago. Serious trouble is anticipated.

Massachusetts Quarterly Conference.

By invitation of the Second Advent Church in Chelsea, the next State Quarterly Conference of the Society will be held in Chelsea, Mass., at Library Hall, commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 20th, continuing daily and over the following Sunday. It is to be hoped we shall have a general gathering of all the faithful in this region. We will do our best for you, both temporally and spiritually. Come, both delegates and all, that have an interest in the salvation of men at the coming of Christ. Some business of importance will come before us. Preaching the first evening. E. OWEN, Sec'y.

Advent Christian State Conf. of N. H.

The annual session of this conference for 1868 will be held at Lake Village, N. H., commencing Oct. 15th, and hold over the following Sunday.

It is hoped that churches will be represented by delegates, so that we may know the condition of the churches and the cause in New Hampshire. Each church is entitled to send one delegate, and those numbering over twenty-five members can send two.

Arrangements have been made with the Manchester and Lawrence, Portsmouth and Concord, and Boston and Montreal rail roads, so that persons who pay full fare to the meeting may have free return tickets to the stations at which they started. Return tickets will be furnished at the meeting by the Secretary. Those coming to the meeting via. of Concord, must purchase tickets to Concord, and then pay in the cars from Concord to Lake Village. A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

The New Hampshire Tent.

To the brethren and friends of New Hampshire, in favor of having a tent to carry the gospel of the kingdom into new places, I would say, at the Alton Bay campmeeting it was found that enough had been raised by Bro. D. M. Leavitt, and others, except about one hundred dollars, to obtain a tent; therefore the brethren decided to purchase one at once, and have it in the field, believing the friends would soon send in the remainder. A committee of three was also chosen to see that the tent was judiciously run, and they to receive what the friends wished to give to make up what was lacking. Bro. T. H. Ford of Concord, Bro. John Shorey of East Rochester, and myself, were chosen said committee. Bro. Ford is Treasurer, but money can be handed to either, and we will see that it is appropriated as designed. If it is more convenient to send it by brethren to the State Conference, to be held at Lake Village, commencing Oct. 15th, you can do so. J. G. SMITH.

Tent Meeting.

The last meeting of the season in the New York State Mission Tent will be held at West Barre, Orleans Co., N. Y., beginning Oct. 8th, and continue as long as practicable. We hope to see a general rally from the surrounding country at this meeting. Pray for us, that this may be the best meeting of the season; and yet many are rejoicing in the truth as the result of our meetings through the summer.

WM. A. FENN.
JONAS WENDELL.
EDWARD COTTON.

Conference.

If the Lord will, there will be a conference at Week's Mills, China, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 22d, and continue over Sunday. Preachers and all are invited to come and earnestly engage in the work of the Lord, that sinners may be saved and God's name be glorified. Homes will be provided for all. Strangers may call on Geo. Jackson, Albert Chapman, and Alton Doe. For the brethren, JER. CARR.

Notice.

The Lord willing, the New Hampshire Mission Tent will be pitched in Sandwich Centre, Oct. 21st, to continue as the Lord directs. Services to commence at 4½ o'clock P. M. An invitation is given to all to come. If it is bad weather, we will procure a hall. Elds. T. W. Piper, W. J. Hobbs, and others, will be present with the writer to preach the word. D. M. LEAVITT.

Dixfield Tent Meeting.

The Maine Mission Tent will be pitched in Dixfield Village, to begin meetings, Thursday P. M., at 2 o'clock, Oct. 15th, and continue as long as thought best. The small tent will be pitched for the accommodation of brethren who may come prepared to board themselves. I. C. WELLCOME.

Conference.

The Lord willing, we purpose to hold a conference in Bangor, Me., commencing October 29th, and to hold over the following Sabbath. We hope all of the brothers and sisters will come who are willing to work for the Lord.

In behalf of the Church, J. M. JEWETT.

Conference.

The Lord willing, there will be a conference at Middleton Corner, N. H., commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 8th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Brn. Daniel Churchill, Joseph Spinney, and others are expected to be present to preach the word. Brethren and sisters are invited to come and work for the Lord. MARK STEVENS.
C. COLMAN.

Notice.

The Lord willing, the Mass. Mission Tent will be pitched at Lexington Place, Lexington St., near Meridian St., East Boston, Wednesday, Oct. 7th, and the meetings continue afternoons and evenings, over Sunday, Oct. 11th, and as long as may be duty. Brethren and sisters are invited to "come over and help." ENOCH MORRILL.

Tent Meeting in Philadelphia, Pa.

The Lord willing, the Advent Mission Tent will be pitched in Phila., Pa., Tuesday, Oct. 13th, and meetings continue as duty may require. Dear brethren and sisters, rally to this meeting. Come to work for Jesus. Come to save souls from death.

JOHN G. HOOK.
S. W. THURBER.
ISRAEL DAMMAN.

R. I. and M. Ct.

Our next conference will be held at Lafayette, R. I., commencing Wednesday, 2 o'clock P. M., Oct. 7th, 1868. Remember the delegates and letters, and looking to God, let us expect a precious season. H. F. CARPENTER.

South Vershire, Vt.

We purpose to commence a protracted meeting in this place, commencing Oct. 7th, and continuing over Sunday. Will friends from surrounding districts come over and help us? Come one and all. Homes will be provided for all. H. F. CARPENTER.

Notice.

To the brethren and sisters scattered abroad, who are interested in the Star of Hope Mission: Sr. Anna E. Smith, Superintendent, can procure the full report of her labors and expenses for the past twelve months, which is got up in pamphlet form. Single copies 15 cents, by the dozen $1.25. The proceeds, after paying the printer's bills, etc., will go to defray the expenses of the mission. They can be had by sending to ANNA E. SMITH, 14 Laurens Street, New York, or to H. L. HASTINGS, Scriptural Tract Repository, Boston.

Notice.

Wm. B. Bennett, a young man seventeen years old, wants to get a good chance to do chores and go to school the coming winter, in some locality where he can attend meeting. He is now at work in Bro. Hastings' office in Boston, 19 Lindall St. Please address him there immediately. H. MUNGER.

Wm. B. Bennett has been in my employ for some time, and is an active, willing, and reliable young man. H. L. HASTINGS,
Ed. of the Christian.

Notice.

Having been released from all contracts and arrangements of public labor, I am now at liberty to go wherever the door may be opened. Application must be made soon. Address Eld. PETER S. W. DEYO, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

P. O. Address.

Letters may be addressed to me as follows:—La Porte City, Iowa, care of H. J. Preble, until Oct. 7th; then Bascobel, Wis., until Oct. 17th, care of C. B. Sylvester; then Rouses Point, N. Y., care of Elder D. T. Taylor, until Oct. 24th; then Lynn, Mass. T. M. PREBLE.

Sycamore, Ill., Sept. 10th, 1868.

Notice.

There will be a meeting at the Dennett school-house in Bowdoin, to commence Thursday evening, Oct. 22nd, and hold over Sunday. Bro. E. M. Haggett is expected to be there. H. D. REED.

Notice.

The Tent meeting at Rochester Plains, N. H., will continue (D. V.) through the week and over Sunday, Oct. 11th. H. L. Hastings will be present to preach the word.

Notice.

The Maine Mission Tent will continue in Mt. Vernon village over Sunday, Oct. 11th. I. C. WELLCOME.

Notice.

My appointments are all withdrawn on account of sickness. CHAS. GOODRICH.

LOST.—At the Deerfield camp-ground, a bed-comforter and a linen coat. Any one finding the same among their baggage, will please return them to Enoch Morrill, Crisis office, or at So. Deerfield, N. H.

Notice.

Our meetings in South Boston, for the worship of God, will be held hereafter at "Fraternity Hall," No. 120 Broadway, every Sunday, the Lord willing. Come over and help us. J. N. BERRY, Secretary.

FOUND.—Found at the Springfield Campmeeting a brown or maroon merino shawl, with fringe. Can be had by sending to the Crisis office.

PRAYER.

When prayer delights thee least, then learn to say,
Soul, now is greatest need that thou shouldst pray.

Crooked and warped I am, and I would fain
Straighten myself by Thy right line again.

O come, warm sun, and ripen my late fruits;
Pierce, genial showers, down to my parched roots.

My well is bitter; cast therein the Tree,
That sweet henceforth its brackish waves may be.

Say what is prayer, when it is prayer indeed—
The mighty utterance of a mighty need?

The man is praying, who doth press with might
Out of darkness into God's own light.

White heat the iron in the furnace won;
Withdrawn from thence, 'tis cold and hard anon.

Flowers from their stalks divided, presently
Droop, fall, and wither in the gazer's eye.

The largest river, from its fountain head
Cut off, leaves soon a parched and dusty bed.

All things that live from God their sustenance wait,
And sun and moon are beggars at his gate.

All skirts extended of thy mantle hold,
When angel hands from Heaven are scattering gold.

MISSION LETTERS FROM SWITZERLAND.

NUMBER TWENTY-THREE.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—Three months have again passed away since I had the pleasure of writing you a faithful report of my labors in the vineyard of our dear Savior. This is an unusual delay; but the circumstances which have caused it are also unusual and trying. I have been pursuing my missionary labors, traveling day and night from Geneva and Lausanne to Bale; from Bale to Mulhouse (France), back again to Bale; from there to Fribourg, Baden-Baden, Karlsruhe and Stuttgart. I was obliged to return to Switzerland, where I am continually engaged in the great work of our dear Master, Jesus Christ.

Our visit in the city of Bale, famous for the Council of the Pope Eugene IV. against the Hussites, and who was also dethroned and substituted by the old Duke of Savoy, Felix V., was especially blessed. Several good and honest souls were converted to God during our long visit there of nearly two months.

Fribourg (in Briscau) is also a very interesting place, and we hope there may be some good people waiting there for the Lord's coming.

Baden-Baden is famous for its hot springs, where I found about one thousand strangers from different countries; but, unfortunately, all the public halls were occupied, so that it was impossible for me to commence a course of lectures.

When in Stuttgart, I was invited to assist at the departure of Brn. Hardy and Hoffman with their families for Jerusalem, where several German families are already established in the town of Nazareth, for the purpose of preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and wait there for the second coming of the Lord. I was charged to speak in the depot of Weiblingen to an assembly of about two hundred friends, who had come to say their last farewell to the departing Brn. My special remarks were on the great sacrifice these Brn. were making in going to preach the gospel where such great misery abounds, and especially where the great universal war will begin. All present were much moved, even to tears. This circumstance gave me an opportunity of making many new and happy acquaintances in the Kingdom of Wurtemberg, where I hope, providence permitting, to return later. May God Almighty bless his people, and especially our dear friends departed for Jerusalem. Amen.

It Stuttgart, I formed a good alliance with the kind Baptist Brn., who are convinced that the true message of the second coming of the Savior must be proclaimed on the earth especially by this church, otherwise this church will fall. Having been obliged to return to Switzerland, by the grace of God, I was blest even in the cars. Seeing many intelligent faces around me, I took the liberty of opening the interesting subject of the fulfillment of prophecy, and many were willing to listen to our explanations. One gentleman was an evangelist on his way to Smyrna, and was rejoiced to hear the subject of the second coming of the Savior mentioned, believing that his glorious kingdom was near; our alliance was very cordial indeed, and I promised to send him our publications to Smyrna. Another gentleman was from the Hague (Holland), and strongly encouraged me to go and preach at the Hague and in Amsterdam.

When in Mulhouse, several Baptist Brn. received the truth with joy; some rejected it, being influenced by the elders. One dear Swedish brother is departed for Stockholm to proclaim the coming kingdom of the Lord.

From Bale, we were invited to Zurich, on the occasion of the Polish national meeting which was at Rapperswiel, near Zurich, and where were present more than three hundred Polish delegates and several thousand spectators. Count Plater (a Polish exile) has caused a beautiful monument to be erected, on which is written in four different languages:

"L'esprit immortel de la Pologne; par une lutte sanglante et seculaire, proteste contre l'oppression de la force, et sur le libre sol de Helvetie fait appel a la justice de Dieu et du monde."—"The immortal spirit of Poland, by a secular bloody struggle, protests against the oppression of the force, and on the free land of Helvetie appeals to the justice of God and the world."

But as we have nothing to do with the politics of this world, we will only say a few words on what touched our hearts very much; it was the beautiful hymn which was sung by the Polanders in their native tongue: "O God! give us our fatherland," etc. Yes, faith in God is a good principle, and we trust the Almighty will have mercy on this unfortunate people, and will bless them, that they also may receive the glorious message of the everlasting kingdom, the only genuine fatherland. Several very interesting speeches were spoken on the very afflicting subject of the strong persecution, when even the national tongue is now prohibited in the streets. We were very happy to find some one who loved the Bible, and our visit in Zurich was blessed.

But unfortunately our mission in that city was unexpectedly interrupted by the intelligence of the death of a very dear friend in Tramelan, for which place we immediately left, and whose funeral we attended on the 25th of August. The evening of that day we baptized two sisters, and celebrated the ordinance of the Lord's Supper. Sunday, Aug. 30th, Bro. Vuilleumier baptized one brother whom God in his mercy had added to the church; to him be glory for ever and ever.

I had the pleasure of receiving, Aug. 1st, a letter from Brn. Adams and Cunningham, containing a draft for 553 francs 32 centimes, for which I am very grateful. May the God of Missions abundantly bless all the dear friends who have given of their means to sustain us while laboring in this work of the Lord, is our humble prayer. Your brother in the vineyard of the Lord,

M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

For the World's Crisis.

IS THE EARTH LARGE ENOUGH
To contain all who have ever lived upon its surface?

That is a question of great doubt with some persons. I find the following paragraph in the public papers:—

"Statisics affirm the number of human beings who have existed since the creation to have been 66,627,843,273,075,221. Dividing this number by the superficial capacity of the globe, gives each person about one-fifth part of a foot square of terra firma, and in this case the earth is one vast cemetery. By the same calculation the digging of graves for all the dead since the creation would be a work equal to turning over the surface of the earth two hundred and eighty-one times."

I dispute the assertions, and question the "statistics" of the above mathematician, especially concerning the space given to each human being, and the "digging of graves" over the world so many times.

Now the world probably is about six thousand years old. Each generation now-a-days passes off in about thirty years on an average. This gives us two hundred generations since creation. But then, before the flood, generations lived much longer than thirty years. But no matter. I will give it this short time, so as to allow all odds possible in favor of this assumptive paragraph. At present, there are about a thousand million persons living on the earth, constituting this generation. The first generation created consisted of two persons, Adam and Eve. This present generation consists, as above, of a thousand million. This will give an average of five millions to each of the two hundred generations since man's creation. But not so many generations have existed; and all that lived up to the flood—1655-6 from the creation—were then destroyed, excepting Noah's family of eight persons. So when the ark again rested on dry land, and man began life again, only his family of eight lone souls inhabited the earth, and man made a new start in progression.

But not even deducting the number destroyed by the deluge from the dwellers on the earth, I assert that there is room enough for all who ever breathed the breath of life to stand upon the earth at one time. Suppose every generation since creation contained a thousand million souls, as this present one does, which no sane man would claim. Two hundred generations since then would give us two hundred thousand million as the number that have lived on the earth. Allowing four square feet—a space two feet square—as being large enough for each human being to stand upon, would require eight hundred thousand million millions square feet. There are 27,874,000 square feet in a mile. This vast number of persons would then require 28,772¼ square miles on which to find a footing.

Well, now, the State of Maine alone contains about this number of square miles. New York State contains 46,220 square miles. To say nothing of the score and a half, or more, of the other States, some much larger than both Maine and New York combined. So you see by simple figures, that all this fuss, and calculation, and assertion about the world being too small to hold all who ever lived upon its surface, is sheer nonsense, which a school-boy can demonstrate easily in a very short time.

As to the number of human beings who have lived since creation, being as the paragraph quoted at the commencement of this article states, it is sheer assumption; no proof is given, or means shown, whereby the number is gained. I have shown how I get my number, and made every allowance in favor of the largest number that can be supposed fairly to have lived.

Then the idea stated that the earth has been dug over two hundred and eighty-one times to bury all the dead since creation! It is preposterous, and contrary to the commonest kind of common sense. Just look a moment. A grave is six feet long, and about two wide, equal to twelve square feet. Now if every body that ever lived, and all now alive, should be buried, it would only require 86,317 square miles of land for this purpose. This country alone contains enough land to bury about thirty times as many persons as ever existed on the earth. One acre of land is large enough to bury 3630 full grown persons in graves six feet long and two feet wide. Think of the millions of acres of land, and away to the winds the doubts about there being not enough room to bury all the dead, without digging over the ground seven or eight times—as some modestly claim, to say nothing of this statistican referred to in this article—who "calculates" it has been dug over two hundred and eighty-one times! What a calculation!—assertion, rather.

I might go on and on, and show by Bible proof that not all—ah no! not all—will ever "inherit the earth," for they will not be fit to dwell therein forever. They may now rear aloft their gorgeous palaces, and furnish them with oriental splendor, and say by their acts they shall live long—long to enjoy them. But the tears and sighs their ill-gotten treasures have cost the laborers have not been in vain, for the Lord of all the earth will finally do right; and when Justice takes the balance in one hand and the sword in the other, whoever is found wanting at that day will be surely slain; no money or entreaty can turn that impartial One from his righteous decrees. Then scoffers and skeptics, vain philosophers and men of mighty valor, will quail as they never did before; will see what they never would look at before; will believe what they never would before; and will die as none ever did before—the final eternal death!

But may we, dear reader, be on the other side among that multitude that will come to inherit the earth made new, in never fading glory, to live an unending life of perfect health, to be with those who are good—all, every one good—not one there who in any way is impure. May you and I be among those meek ones, for "blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth."

J. N. BERRY.

— Though the word admonishes us that in "pure religion" a man must "keep himself unspotted from the world," yet most of those professing this pure religion would sooner go to meeting spotted as the leopard with worldly spots, than attend with one grease spot.

For the World's Crisis.

A HOME IN THE KINGDOM.

This is what we are seeking; a home in the kingdom of God. Here we have no continuing city, or abiding place, but we seek one to come, whose builder and maker is God. What a glorious thought! How it cheers the hearts of the pilgrims as they wander through this world of sadness. Truly this is a world of sorrow and sighing; sickness and death await us here; but over there, just beyond this world of darkness, all our conflicts and trials will forever pass away. "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."

The thought that that home is nearing gladdens the pilgrim's heart. Soon Jesus will come and take the weary ones home; he will unlock the prison doors and let the captives go free. Many have long been sleeping in the dust of the earth,

"But they'll all be gathered where'er they're lain,
For death's conquering hero is coming again."

Then we shall meet with the saints of all ages, the prophets, patriarchs and apostles; and we shall see Jesus, that same Jesus who was once on this earth, who was slain on Calvary's cross, who suffered death that we might have eternal life in the kingdom; he is coming again to reign forever and ever, and if we are good, if we are really children of the Lord, we have the promise of reigning with him. To see Jesus and be made like him, is ravishing to me. Then we shall feel fully rewarded for this short life of suffering, for the trials that we now have to pass through.

Let us strive to do all we can for Jesus, be faithful to him, and then when he comes we shall hear him say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

CHARITY.

"Above all these things, put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness."—Col. 3: 14.
"Love is the fulfilling of the law."—Rom. 13: 10.
"God is love."—1 John 4: 8.

Behold the divine charity of the blessed Redeemer. He left the glories and happiness of heaven to visit our lost world. Beaming with love, melting with tenderness, filled with benevolence, he came to our relief. He became a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief. Yet see him at his work of mercy. He scatters health around him; he gives eyesight to the helpless blind; he bids the lame to walk; he feeds the hungry; the very dead he restores to life and joy; he beholds the weeping widow, and hastens to wipe away her tears; he visits the house of mourning and fills it with songs of praise.

Behold him ascend the Mount of blessing. Heavenly light shines round him; the majesty of holiness encircles his brow. Love, divine love, looks out from his wondrous eyes; the manna of wisdom drops from his lips; he assembles around him the poor, the persecuted, the mourners, and showers upon them the blessings of an endless life.

O what wondrous love! Who can tell it? "We have no measure wherewith to measure his love, no words to express it. We have nothing similar whereunto we can compare it. It is an abyss over which the angels bend in adoration, without fathoming its depths. It passes knowledge as it passes expression." O, who does not want to follow after Jesus? We are the objects of his love, and he loves us with an everlasting love and "strong as death."

We meet those sometimes whose every expression is expressive of their kind acts of charity. I love to look upon their beaming countenances. The light of love irradiates the brow; the countenance wears the aspect of benevolence; the heart bleeds with sympathy; the hands are strong to save, and are ever extended to the fallen, the destitute and miserable. They pour the balm of life into the wounds of the dying. The widow and fatherless bless them, and follow them with hearts gushing with grateful emotions of praise; for they have been rescued from the gripe of the oppressor; they were hungry and naked, and their wants were supplied.

Love for Jesus obliges all to do the work of mercy; for, "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me." "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God and God in him." His love is perfected in us. H. A. SMITH.

A TRIBUTE OF PRAISE.

"O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, for his wonderful works to the children of men."—Ps. 107: 8, 15, 21, 31.

We can fully adopt this language now, and understand its import; for after eleven weeks passed since my dear companion was so terribly shattered, we find her nearer recovery than we had reason to expect to find her (according to our physician's opinion) in six or eight months. She is a wonder to herself and to all her friends. "It is the Lord's doings, and it is marvelous in our eyes." Except the lameness of her knee, she seems almost as well as ever, and that lameness is rapidly healing and passing away.

From the time that the "elders" were called, and prayer was offered, "anointing" her "in the name of the Lord," she "began to amend," and with such sensible daily improvement that it is certain that prayer was in faith and has prevailed.

The day that campmeeting closed, we dismissed our nurse, who had been constantly with her night and day for forty-four days, and was weary and worn with watching; who was as faithful in her work as ever woman could be, but had little or no faith in prayer as a restorative to bruised and mangled limbs; and in her place was introduced a "sister in the Lord," who knew the power of prayer in her own experience, and whose sweet, subdued, gentle spirit, was exactly adapted to the weak and prostrated condition of my wife; and the change was perceptible at once. Faith sprang up, and was answered with new strength, which in its turn brought new and increased faith. Thus acting and re-acting, the work has gone on, and our house has been constantly full of joy—

"Quite on the verge of heaven."

Every day when weather would permit, since the week of the meeting, she has rode several miles, and is able to walk all over the house, up stairs and down, and out into the yard. Our nurse expected that her services would be required again, but they have not been. Our Physician needs no nurses when he takes charge of a case.

We consider this another instance of the goodness of the Lord, and of his "wonderful works to the children of men"; and desire to record it to the praise and glory of his grace. Knowing the desire of many christian friends to hear from us, I take this method of informing them all, and ask them to unite with us in thanksgiving and rejoicing, at the gracious dealings of our God with us. We do say with full hearts,

"If ever I loved thee, my Jesus, 'tis now."

ARE YOU FOR CHRIST, OR AGAINST HIM?

If this life is a warfare, and every man is enlisted to fight either for or against King Jesus, let me ask you, dear reader, under which king do you fight? Are you fighting in defence of the black flag of the Prince of darkness, or the blood-stained banner of the cross?

The question is not, are you a Methodist? or a Baptist? or an Adventist? but are you a christian? All christians are on the right side; for the Master saith, "he that is not against us, is on our part." Mark 9: 40.

Our views are modified by the influences brought to bear upon us, yet upon the one essential point all true christians are agreed. All must obey the commands of the great Captain of our salvation. We must all cultivate the fruits of the Spirit, which are these: "Love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." Those who bear such fruit are acknowledged as good soldiers wherever they are found. This fruit is what constitutes christian character. This is the practical part of religion.

One practical christian is more effective as a soldier than a score of theorists, who have more knowledge than grace, more head-work than heart-work. The one crowning grace, which is love, or charity, infinitely outweighs all the gifts of eloquence and knowledge, or even faith. See 1 Cor. 13.

If any who read this wish to know the marks of one who is fighting against his God, please read in Romans 1: beginning at the twenty-ninth verse. Also Gal. 5: 19-21. These are horrid marks, corrupt fruits from a corrupt tree. "But, beloved, we are persuaded better things of you, and things that accompany salvation."

Webster, Mass. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

SORROW SWEETNED.

Only where the love of God dwells in the soul, even without a clear consciousness of it, can sorrow lead to God. Have you seen the flowers that, in a close cellar, turn their heads towards the side where the sun appears? So the heart of man is in the night of sorrow when there is a trace of God living within. Through all the night of bitterness it seeks for the crevice through which the eternal life shall fall into the darkness, and drinks, and grows even more thirsty. Only in such hearts, in the silent night of sorrow, does prayer begin to tone forth; only in such hearts is that prayer reached which pours itself out, as the apostle says, in groanings that cannot be uttered.—Thorluck.

Gems.

— God himself alone can know the price at which his Son, Christ Jesus the Lord, purchased our redemption.

— There is a greater depravity in not repenting of sin when it has been committed, than in committing it at first.

— All our removes in this world are but from one wilderness to another.

— No man is free who cannot command himself.

— It is a good thing to obey the law of God, but it is a better thing to love it. The former is to live a new life, the latter is to have a new heart. A slave may obey a master whom he fears and hates, but a child loves the law of a father.

— It is not well to be too hasty in believing, or rejecting what is reported; to be able to suspend our judgment for awhile will save us many an error.

— Two wrongs don't make a right, nor do two rights make a wrong. The thing is often attempted, but with no sort of success. As well attempt to make chain lightning out of clam shells, modesty out of impudence, or gold out of brass.

— First understand, then argue.

— Candor and open dealing are the honor of man's nature.

— Death may remove from us the great and good, but the force of their actions still remains. The bow is broken, but the arrow has sped, and will do its office.

— Man was created on the last day: even the gnat has a more ancient lineage.

— One part of real knowledge is to be ignorant of what we ought not to know.

— If men believe they are superior to beasts, it is astonishing what trouble some of them take to prove the contrary.

— In life a man should always endeavor to suit circumstances to himself, and, failing in this, resignedly accommodate himself to circumstances.

— One of the saddest things about human nature is, that a man may guide others in the path of life without walking in it himself; that he may be a pilot, and yet a castaway.

— The felicity of life is to be free from pertubations, to understand our duties toward heaven and man, to enjoy the present without any anxious dependence upon the future; not to amuse ourselves with either hopes or fears, but to rest satisfied with what we have.

— In the pulpit avoid the queer and the jocose: but indulge freely in the strong, the apt, the striking, the grand and the beautiful.

— We should accustom ourselves to view those above us without admiration or envy, and never to look down upon those below us with contempt. Little souls fall down and worship grandeur without reflecting that admiration is due only to virtue and goodness.

— Good sense is the best equipage men can have.

— Do not be vexed at what people say. Let them speak, while you endeavor to do the will of God. You will never succeed in pleasing men, and it would not be worth the trouble if you could. A little silence, peace, and communion with God, will compensate you for all your injustice of men. We must love our fellow beings without depending upon their friendship, and seek every opportunity to win their love by kind words and deeds, but never by withholding the truth.

— An outcry against others' sins does not always imply an abhorrence for sin; for the man who truly dreads sin, will abhor it most of all in his own heart.

— The cause of truth in the hands of a cavilling disputant is like a jewel of gold in a swine's snout. Who, that loves the truth, could wish it there?

For the World's Crisis.

AN EARNEST APPEAL.

The voice of heavenly wisdom, as recorded in the Proverbs of Solomon, says, "I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me."—Prov. 8: 17. Those who find this wisdom also find eternal life. Will you listen to the voice of wisdom, the voice of God? The voice says, Come, come and live; why will ye die? Come now, ye who are in the morning of life, come to Jesus, believe on him, obey him, and he will give you eternal life.

Do not delay, do not wait for "a convenient season," but hasten now to Jesus. Ask him to pardon you and cleanse away all your guilt. He has laid down his life for you, and now stands ready to save you, and make you fit for a home with him in his glorious kingdom. To-day you have the offer of mercy, to-morrow it may be too late.

The promise is to those who seek early. The present moment is the earliest possible time for you to seek the Lord. Call upon him now in earnest. Ask him to cleanse you in that precious blood which taketh away all sin. If you delay, you may lose all hope of life, and sink down in hopeless despair, into the blackness of darkness for ever. Do not longer run such a fearful risk. Soon the door of hope and mercy will be closed, and then it will be too late.

"Haste, O sinner, to be wise,
Stay not for the morrow's sun;
The longer wisdom you despise,
The harder is she to be won."

Jesus calls you to lay down your heavy burden of guilt, and take upon you the light burden and easy yoke of obedience to him. O give up all to Jesus now. If you do this you will be happy; happy now, and happy evermore. Eternal life and unfading glory is now within your reach. O accept the offered gift without delay.

Webster, Mass. S. S. CHAMBERLAIN.

BENEVOLENCE.

At a missionary meeting among the negroes in the West Indies, it is related that these resolutions were adopted:—

1. We will all give something.
2. We will give according to our ability.
3. We will give willingly.

At the close of this meeting a leading negro took his seat at the table with pen and ink to put down what each came to contribute. Many advanced to the table and handed in their contributions—some more and some less. Among the contributors was an old negro, who was very rich, almost as rich as the rest united. He threw down a small silver coin.

"Take dat back again," said the chairman of the meeting. "Dat may be 'cording to de fust resolution, but not 'cording to the second."

The rich old man accordingly took it up, and hobbled back to his seat much enraged. One after another came forward, and, all giving more than himself, he was ashamed, and again threw a piece of money on the table, saying:

"Dar—take dat!"

It was a valuable piece of gold, but it was given so ill-temperedly that the chairman answered:

"No, sir, dat won't do! Dat may be 'cording to de fust and second resolutions, but not 'cording to the third!"

He was obliged to take it up again.

Still angry with himself, he sat a long time until nearly all were gone; he then advanced to the table, and, with a smile on his countenance, laid down a larger sum of money.

"Dar, now, berry well," said the presiding negro, "dat will do; dat am 'cording to all de resolutions."

Reader, this simple narrative contains in a nutshell the whole formula of benevolence. The first duty is to give; the second is to give according to your ability; and the third, which is equal to all, to give willingly.—London paper.

PUBLIC WORSHIP.

Oh, Jehovah! we would meet thee
On this holy Sabbath day,
And for dying men entreat thee,
Ere their time has passed away.

We behold the restless million
Wandering from the fold of God—
Wandering far from thy pavilion,
All regardless of thy rod.

Wandering far from Zion's tower,
From her pastures fresh and green,
By thy word of mighty power,
Bid their leprous souls "be clean!"

Turn the sun upon their "dial,"
Son of Righteousness return;
Bid them know that self-denial
We from Jesus all must learn.

Oh, display to them Thy beauty,
Which thy sons and daughters see,
Saying by a life of duty—
"Lo! Emmanuel, this is he!"

PULPIT INGENUITY.

A preacher in the neighborhood of Blackfriars, London, not undeservedly popular, had just finished an exhortation strongly recommending the liberal support of a very meritorious institution. The congregation was numerous, and the chapel was crowded to excess. The discourse being finished, the plate was about to be handed around to the respective pews, when the preacher made this short address to the congregation:

"From the sympathy I have witnessed in your countenances, and the strict attention you have honored me with, there is only one thing I'm afraid of, that some of you may feel inclined to give too much. Now, it is my duty to inform you that justice, though it is not pleasant, should always be a prior virtue to generosity; therefore as you will all be called upon in your respective pews, I wish it to be thoroughly understood that no person will think of putting anything in the plate who cannot pay his debts!" It need not be added that this advice produced an overflowing collection.—Ex.

RICHES OF THE BIBLE.

1. It is a book of laws to show the right and wrong.

2. A book of wisdom, that makes the foolish wise.

3. A book of truth, which detects all human errors.

4. It is the most authentic and entertaining history ever published.

5. It contains the most remote antiquities, and the most remarkable events.

6. It is a complete code of laws, a perfect body of divinity, an unequalled narrative, a book of biography, a book of travels, a book of voyages, the best covenant ever made, the best deed ever written.

7. It is the best will ever executed; the best testament ever signed; the young man's best companion; the school-boy's best instructor; the ignorant man's dictionary.

8. It promises an eternal reward to the faithful and believing.

9. But that which crowns all is the Author, "with whom there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."

— The Lord takes none up but the forsaken; makes none healthy but the sick; gives sight to none but the blind; makes none alive but the dead; sanctifies none but sinners; gives wisdom to none but the foolish.

"ARGUMENTUM AD HOMINEM."—A skeptical young collegian confronted an old Quaker with the statement that he did not believe in the Bible. Said the Quaker:

"Does thee believe in France?"

"Yes; for though I have not seen it, I have seen others that have; besides, there is plenty of corroborative proof that such a country does exist."

"Then thee wilt not believe any thing thee or others has not seen?"

"No, to be sure I won't."

"Did thee ever see thy own brains?"

"No."

"Ever see anybody that did?"

"No."

"Does thee believe thee has any?"

FAMILY WORSHIP.—I was once asked to conduct the worship in a family in which I was visiting. I read a short portion of Scripture, and offered prayer. At the close, a bright little boy of six years put his hand on my knee, and, looking into my face, said, "I like to hear you pray." "Do you?" I said,—"why?" "Because you are short. Did you ever hear my father pray?" I told him I never had heard him. "Well," said he, "he is so long—he is terrible long." Here was a child of only six years who had been worn out with family prayers. He was living in daily dread of them. They were "terrible" to him.—Ex.

A STORY FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

HOW A MAN MADE HIS FORTUNE BY A PIN.

"Many people have inherited a great name from their parents and friends; why cannot I make a great reputation by my own industry and perseverance?"

These words were spoken by a young man of respectable appearance, yet really in want, as he walked, one autumn morning in the year 1817, up Antin street, in Paris, and approached the stately house of a great banker. On ringing the door-bell, his heart beat with fear and anxiety, when he was met by a servant in livery, who asked him rather bluntly what he wanted.

"I wish to speak to Mr. Perregaux," replied the young man. "Is he at home?"

The answer was affirmative, and the porter led him up the broad, marble stairway to the upper story, where the young man was admitted into a splendid ante-room, ornamented with paintings and statues. He quietly took a seat in a corner, and had hardly the courage to face the great men who went in and out of the banker's room. He thought of his home in the country, of his departure from his beloved parents, of their prayers and their blessings. He recalled his mother's last words: "What will you do in Paris, my son? Stay here. You have your home, though it is a poor one." And then he thought of his own answer: "Let me try my fortune, dear mother, in order that I may share it with you and my dear friends." "But," answered she, "fortune does not always visit those who seek it." To this he replied: "But it never seeks those who never seek it." "Well, go," said the tender-hearted mother, "go, and if you don't succeed, do not be ashamed to return to us. Your father's house and the arms of your mother will always be open to you."

Mr. Perregaux was reading a letter when the young man was admitted to his presence, and hardly noticed the unassuming stranger.

"Do you wish to speak to me, young man?" said the banker in a friendly way. "If so, tell me in what respect I can serve you?"

"Mr. Perregaux," said the young man, looking plainly and calmly in his face, "I have neither name, nor rank, nor fortune, but industry, strength, and a strong will to work. Can you not give me a place in your great business house?—even the most insignificant one would suit me."

"What is your name?" asked Mr. Perregaux, who could not keep his eyes from the attractive features of his young applicant, and read in his clear eye discretion and fidelity.

"Jacques Laffitte," was the answer.

"Your age?"

"Eighteen years," replied the young man. "I was born on the 29th of October, 1771."

"Are you a Parisian?" inquired the banker further.

"No, sir, I am from Bayonne. My father is a carpenter and has ten children to care for. My object is to find a place where I shall be able to support my father's family."

"A noble undertaking, young man," replied the banker; "but I regret to say that I have no place vacant for you. I am sorry for this. Perhaps a later application would find me able to receive you."

Everything seemed to swim before Laffitte's eyes. He scarcely knew how to reach the door. His knees trembled as he descended the marble staircase, and with a slow step he went down into the street. The refusal was almost more than he could bear. Yet he summoned courage and started off.

Just as he reached the street, he saw something shining in the sand that had collected near the steps. It was only a pin, yet he took it up and stuck it in his coat. This little act, apparently unseen by anybody else in the world, decided his whole future. Mr. Perregaux stood at the window, and without designing it, happened to see the refused applicant pick something up, and wondered what it was. When the young man stuck it in the left breast of his coat, the banker thought it was a pin. Men who have great knowledge of human nature, like Mr. Perrgaux, understand the meaning of seemingly insignificant things, and how far small actions go toward the interpretation of character. So he said to himself:—"The man who will not refuse to pick up a pin must certainly have some habits that will be of great use if he ever has an opportunity to employ them."

He quickly opened the window and called young Jacques.

The young man quickly returned, hastened up stairs, and was soon again in the presence of the banker.

"Do you have the goodness," said Jacques, "to comply with my request?"

"What makes you so decided?" replied the banker.

"From the fact that you have recalled me," was the answer. "I believe you would not have done it if you had not wished to accept my application."

"Quick powers of observation, love of order, and economy," replied Mr. Perregaux, in a friendly way, "will make a good business man Go into my counting-house; I will descend as soon as possible, and give you a little business to attend to."

From this hour young Laffitte was in Perregaux's counting-house. His industry and fidelity helped him in every respect. His punctuality won him the confidence of his employer. His zeal and progress increased from day to day, so that he soon excited the attention and admiration of his companions. In a few years he became book-keeper, and afterwards cashier.

The French revolution broke out, and the new order of things which called Perregaux to the Senate, compelled him to commit his business largely to the hands of some co-laborer. He took Laffitte in as his partner, and as the sphere of the latter was now larger, he had more opportunity to exhibit his business tact and energy. In the last years of the empire a new sphere of life opened to him. In 1809 he was appointed director of the Bank of France. After that he was made president of the chamber of commerce, and thus he came into intimate relations with the most influential people of the country.

The decline of Napoleon's power brought him into honorable political positions. He acquired the confidence of the entire city, and indeed of the entire country, in consequence of his wise and judicious counsel for the Government of the city. His dear parents in Bayonne were still living, and he supported them all the time in the most handsome way possible; and after his mother became a widow, he took her to his house in Paris. Many young men of talent owed their prosperity to him, as he had started them in business. He supported a great many in their studies at his own expense.

When Louis XVIII. was compelled to flee before the advance of Napoleon at the beginning of the "hundred days" he committed his entire private fortune to Laffitte; and Napoleon, too, placed his fortune in Laffitte's hands. Thus the great banker had for some time in his own keeping the property of both rivals to the French throne.

After Paris was captured, in the year 1815, he advanced two million of francs to the state, which was compelled to give that much to the allied hosts. One hundred thousand francs were appropriated to him as director of the bank of France, but Laffitte refused to receive it during the laborious years of his administration.

Nearly the whole time of the restoration he was a member of the chamber of deputies, and one of the most worthy of the number. His parliamentary activity was distinguished by his warm patriotism nobility of character, and acute understanding. He always subjected his own interests to the general good. In spite of the displeasure in which the family of Marshal Ney were, he permitted his only daughter to marry Ney's son, the prince of Modena.

He reached the climax of his political prominence in the July revolution. Without him, Louis Phillippe would never have ascended the throne. His political opinions were very decided, and if we cannot approve of some of them, we certainly cannot help admiring his honor and his integrity. He was a member of Louis Phillippe's ministry, and had charge of the finances of France; yet this lasted but a short time, as his views did not agree with those of the king. He offered his resignation and retired with dignity as a simple citizen of the country.

Laffitte died on Easter-day, 1844, amid universal regret. The French people had found in him a true friend, and his name will ever be held by them in great respect.

HOW TO BE WELL.

Take the open air—
The more you take the better;
Follow Nature's laws
To the very letter.

Freely exercise—
Keep your spirits cheerful;
Let no dread of sickness
Make you ever fearful.

Eat the simplest food;
Drink the pure cold water;
Then you will be well—
Or, at least, you ought to.

CLEAN LIPS.

We know a dear old lady, who, many years ago, taught a little private school in a certain town. Her heart was pure, and therefore her words were sweet. She loved the blessed Savior, and cared most tenderly for the lambs of his fold. She seemed to live in the little children's world, rejoicing and suffering with them. She had always something pleasant to say, and a flower or kiss to give, so that the scholars loved the school-house next best to "Mother's room" at home.

They never had to be sent to school, but run off cheerfully before nine o'clock, that they might speak to her before the little bell rang. She believed what Solomon said about the "rod of correction;" but still, in some way, she got along without using it very often.

Once her heart was deeply wounded by hearing that a little fellow had spoken dirty, impure words while out at play. When forced to punish little ones, she used generally to take them on her lap; but as Master Charley was nine years old, she called him to stand before her. Taking both his hands between her own, and looking into his blue eyes, she asked, "Have you been using wicked words to-day, my dear?"

"I didn't swear," whispered Charlie, with his head hanging down.

"Are you willing to go home and repeat all you said before your mother?"

Charlie hung his head, and colored deeply, and whispered, "No, ma'am, because it would grieve her."

"And have you forgotten, my dear boy, that One, who is far holier than she, has heard in heaven those naughty words which came from those lips of yours, to-day? I am afraid there is something unclean in your heart; but as I cannot reach that, myself, I will ask God to do it. I can reach your lips, and as I am very sure they are not fit to give your mother the good-night kiss, nor to say your prayers, I will clean them for you."

She then took from her desk a bowl of water, a tiny piece of soap, and a small sponge; and bidding Charley open his mouth, she washed it well—teeth, tongue, lips and all! She then wiped them dry with a soft towel, and bathed his tear-stained face, on which she pressed the kiss of forgiveness.

This simple punishment, and the real sorrow of her who inflicted it, made a deep impression on the minds of her scholars. Charlie is now almost a man, but never since that day has an impure word escaped his lips. At the very thought of such words, he fancies he tastes soap, and that he hears again the gentle rebuke of his first teacher.—Ex.

HYMN.

BY HIRAM MUNGER.

AIR.—Dying Christian.

Come, all my dear brethren, and hear what we sing,
'Tis about our dear Savior, salvation he'll bring;
I have read in the prophets about the whole plan,
And believe all their writings they say of the land.

God gave unto Adam the land of the world;
Sin entered the garden, their joys were all spoiled;
But Jesus was offered to atone for the fall,
And Satan was thwarted, and cannot have all.

We see by the Scriptures that they all have died,
Received not the promise,—'tis left for the bride;
But Jesus has promised to see earth again,
And set up his kingdom, forever to reign.

The signs of his coming he long since foretold;
We must always be ready, have grace, and be bold;
The signs are all round us, the fig-trees are green,
The night is receding, and day will soon beam.

The nations are angry, perplexities come,
As Jesus has told us in Luke, twenty-one;
Then, all his dear children, look up and rejoice;
The Shepherd has told us the sheep hear his voice.

The angels are list'ning to hear what we sing,
Awaiting and ready to let the bride in;
Red lightnings are flashing, loud thunders do roar,
While the saints are all rising to see sin no more.

See fathers and mothers, and children, do part,
Because they were wicked and sealed fast their heart;
The Spirit has called them, but they would not come;
How awful the hour when death is their doom.

But mercy still lingers; O, sinner, now come;
You believe in your conscience the sentiment sung;
I see them now trembling, just ready to start,
To join their dear Savior, with us have a part.

When the seals are all opened the trumpet will sound,
And awake God's dear children that sleep in the ground;
The prophets, apostles, and saints, all will come,
And each by his Savior forever be crowned.

The gates are all opened to let the church in;
They now have the vict'ry that saves them from sin;
They are now made immortal, on earth cannot stay;
They will outshine at rising the sun at noon-day.

Earth's scenes are forgotten, new life has begun,
The truth of the Scriptures is proved by God's Son;
So Abram and Isaac, and Jacob of old,
Now claim the promise that God had foretold.

For the World's Crisis.

"COME, . . . AND LET US REASON TOGETHER.—Isa. 1: 18.

It is written (Isa. 41: 21), "Produce your cause, saith the Lord, bring forth your strong reasons, saith the King of Jacob." The natural mind calls for the reason of cause and effect; and when changed from nature to grace, its power to reason is not diminished. The natural man reasons upon natural things, but when attempting to reason upon spiritual things he is wholly incompetent. Worldly wisdom, talent, and position, are unequal to the task. Spiritual things must be spiritually discerned. Human skill could not have given us the prophecy left upon the divine record, neither can it prevent its fulfillment. Says the apostle Peter, "The prophecy came not in olden time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

He who attempts to reason or teach from the blessed Bible, without the aid of the Holy Spirit, compares favorably with him who, having never seen Hebrew or Greek, attempts to enlighten others therefrom. See how the creature compares with the Creator. Isa. 40: 15, 17:—"Behold the nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance. Behold he taketh up the isles as a very small thing. All nations before him are as nothing and vanity." O that all might realize this, and govern themselves accordingly. Much of the reasoning of the present day upon religious subjects is clothed with obscurity and mystery. The arch deceiver, as also his messengers, are at times wonderfully devoted; and to deceive if possible the elect, they clothe themselves with the garb best adapted to meet the wants of the case. Saith the Lord to the patient Job (38: 2):—"Who is this that darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge?" having reference to the mode of reasoning adopted by Job's comforters, and which is emphatically rebuked by the Lord. Job. 42: 7.

Much of the reasoning of these last days upon Bible subjects is after this manner admirably adapted and artfully employed to mislead the honest mind. Honest mind, did I say? Yes, for some of God's dear people are to be the victims, and led by it to a departure from the faith. The sinner can not depart from the faith; he never possessed it. Says the apostle (1 Tim. 4: 1):—"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." Here is an express message to the people of God, and is an utter refutation of the doctrine, "Once in grace, always in grace."

A humble, devout follower of Jesus, asks for light upon a Bible doctrine. A reasoner of the character mentioned proposes to furnish it. He commences a long journey toward the point to be reached, filling up the space with a profusion of suppositions, comparisons, and incidents, interspersed with scriptural quotations, throwing obscurity and ambiguity over the testimony of the divine record, showing its unreasonableness, carefully avoiding the issue at stake; until, at last, his victim, bewildered and confused by his style of reasoning, loses sight of the object sought after, and really has serious doubts whether, after all, it can be proved that two and two make four, or that the Bible is a reliable book. The spirit manifested was so kind, the manner so charming, that success was rendered the more certain.

The first effort of Satan was crowned with success, because of the seductive spirit used, securing thereby complete control over his victim, so kind and agreeable was he; and he has not forgotten how to play the gentleman yet. He adapts himself equally to all circumstances and conditions of society. At the outset he carefully blended truth with the lie, to accomplish his purposes, and succeeded. The Creator commanded, saying:—"Eat not of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, lest ye die"; clearly implying that by eating they would know good and evil. The arch deceiver says, "Ye shall not surely die." This flat contradiction of the divine command was not sufficient to persuade his victim, and he then begins to reason, and to acknowledge a part of the truth. He says (Gen. 4: 5):—"For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." By this strategy he gained his object. His victim was innocent then; he directs his attention to the innocent now. The wicked, faithful in his service, give him no uneasiness. Says David:—"They are not troubled like other men." The devil has not forgotten how to quote Scripture. Read Luke 4: 1-14. See how adroitly he endeavored to ensnare the Son of God by quoting from the divine oracles; but he is met and silenced with the same weapon.

We do well to take heed to this fact, that in these perilous times we are exposed to the greatest danger, from the attacks of the enemy of all righteousness under a religious garb. He is most successfully accomplishing his purpose by this mode throughout the whole world. He is pleased with formal meetings, dead and lifeless; but displeased when the power of God becomes manifest. Great watchfulness is needed, lest while waiting for the presence of a harsh, violent spirit, we be thrown completely off our guard by a subtle, seducing spirit. As we have already seen, it is not necessary for a spirit to be violent and oppressive, to be dangerous.

The people of God are called the children of light, because they believe the gospel of his blessed Son. When necessary, the old serpent will transform himself into an angel of light; commission his messengers with a message of light to the church of God in so plausible a manner as to dispel all fear. An individual purchases a neat package, labelled—"Pure old Java coffee." Experience soon teaches him that a genuine label is no security against a spurious article. So the church of God need to try the light presented for their acceptance by the standard test (Isa. 8: 20), to prove its genuineness. The present is an age of adulteration and apostasy. Satan is concentrating all his powers for a last effort. It will be universal. See Rev. 16: 13, 14. He will exercise a miraculous power, so that the dear saints of God will need to ask for wisdom from above, a spirit of discernment, and walk close with the Lord, to preserve the genuineness of their faith. He becomes a deceiving, seducing, or lying spirit, as the case demands; and by a process of artful reasoning, the lie which at first he seeks to conceal is finally believed.

No reef is so dangerous to the mariner as the sunken one; he knows not how to calculate for it. The rock which stands boldly and prominently above the surface is easily avoided. Destruction to his vessel would be as certain by the one as the other. His safety lies in his knowledge of the one; his danger, in his ignorance of the other. The christian mariner is in greatest peril, while voyaging to the harbor of eternal rest, where perils of a fatal character are covered by a surface of smooth words and fair speeches, and philosophical arguments, falsely so called.

The visible dangers, such as covetousness, pride, hypocrisy, unbelief, drunkenness, pleasure-seeking, conformity to the world, and such like, the true follower of Jesus will shun. He would make shipwreck of faith by yielding to any of these; but his danger lies in being deceived by the false colors of the enemy. He changes his tactics when dealing with the wicked, and to stir them up to greater zeal puts off his apparel of angelic light; comes to them in his real character; stirs up a spirit of strife, hatred, envy, revenge; arrays kings and emperors against each other; involves nations in blood and carnage; sets neighborhoods and communities at variance; exalts pride and worldly mindedness in a lukewarm church, which is married to the world, sustaining only a form of godliness, denying the power thereof,—"from such," says the great apostle to the Gentiles, "turn away."

With all the dangers referred to, the position of the church waiting for the return of her Lord is a critical one. The arch enemy has not spent all his efforts in vain. Among the waiting flock, the effect is lamentable. The armor given for her preservation is found minutely described by the Holy Spirit through the apostle in Eph. 6: 10-18; and it is imperatively necessary that it be put on. It should be studied carefully and strictly obeyed, and the result will be salvation and eternal life.

Many of the honest and devoted followers of Jesus are confused and nearly confounded at the scene presented, and while scanning the situation exclaim in despair, What shall I do? where can I go? In answer I would say, this, too, has been my experience, and I have learned to "cease from man, whose breath is in his nostrils." At this point the arch adversary again proves equal to the emergency. He suggests that it makes no difference what we believe; only keep a good spirit, and all will be well. What a decoy trap is this, when the sole cause of such a condition of things is a want of faith in God and his word. Unwavering faith is the only preservative.

A collection of those who have adopted the above suggestion finds a parallel in the "happy family," formerly collected at Barnum's Museum, N. Y. The visitor beheld in the motley group a striking contrast in physiognomy of the different members as to size and form, color and taste, and lastly, the different tones of voice blended in one inharmonious strain. So those who assemble without any real foundation of faith, may experience an imaginary peace and joy, afforded in the striking contrast exhibited in the uncertainty of the different sounds uttered, none being able to tell whether piped or harped. A union thus formed is of short duration; the compact explodes, and again they are compelled to seek true peace and rest elsewhere.

Many talk about Jesus, and profess genuine love for him, and at the same time reject and oppose the harmonious record of him and his glorious mission to lost man. He is the "chief corner stone" in the christian's hope. The testimony of the prophets and apostles exalts him to that position. They led self-denying and sacrificing lives for his sake. They possessed his blessed Spirit, and spake as moved by it.

Those who profess to love Jesus, and yet reject the testimony of the Spirit of God, through prophets and apostles, or make their testimony void, destroying its original power by a figurative or allegorical interpretation, cannot expect the peace of Christ to abide with them. That figures, allegories and symbols are used in the Bible, we admit, and would treat them as such; but the great plan of redemption devised on account of the fall; Christ's first advent, and the nature of his mission then; his second advent and its object; the manner of his first, and also his second coming, portrayed in vivid and glowing terms, admit of no adulteration. The first house of Israel fell in consequence of rejecting the manner of his first coming; for had they believed the testimony of the prophets, they would have known him by the manner of his coming; they all pointed to the humble and lowly character of that event.

The first house looked too high, and fell. Shall we profit by their example? If so, we cannot estimate too highly the character of his second coming; the testimony of Jesus, of the prophets and apostles, is a sufficient warrant for so doing. His first advent was characterized by sorrow and suffering; his second will be by power and great glory. It will be "the very same Jesus." Glory to God! The tempestuous sea of this life, upon which those waiting for the glory to be revealed are being tossed, will soon be calmed amid the splendor of that glory which is to be revealed, when all flesh shall behold it together. Isa. 40: 5. The surface of old earth will be rent, and forthwith will come countless millions; some to life, and some to damnation.

The fiery upheavals ever and anon from the bowels of a groaning earth, afford a faint idea of the "great and terrible day of the Lord," when the "elements shall melt with fervent heat," as also the earth. Here he who had the power of death, that is, the devil, together with all his works, finds his oblivion in the lake of fire, which is the second death. The dross being thus consumed, the gold will then shine forth, in the redeemed of the Lord, in a world of beauty. Glorious hope! Can we afford to experiment with the various, ingeniously contrived arrangements presented for acceptance at the present day, at the risk of losing it?

Just one visit to the saloon, only one glass, has led many a young man to a drunkard's grave. An emphatic NO to the tempter would have prevented it. The example of the three worthies merits our approbation, when they replied to the demand of the wicked monarch, "We will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up." Their bended knees and feigned worship would have saved the fuel for the fire, and deprived the world of one of the strongest proofs of the power of God upon record. A corresponding steadfastness in the faith may obtain for the faithful children of God in these perilous times the title of bigotry, sectarianism, or narrow-mindedness. The holy Daniel might have refrained from asking a petition of his God for thirty days; but faith triumphed in his obedience to God, not regarding the decree of the king.

Let us imitate their example; be steadfast, but kind; unmovable, but gentle, always abounding in the work of the Lord; and when the contest is ended, the redeemed shall enjoy life unending, with glory unfading, in their beautiful home, the paradise of God.

RELIGION A PRINCIPLE.

The christian is actuated by his religion. In proportion to the amount of religion he enjoys, does his life conform to the life of Christ. If his heart is entirely the Lord's, his whole life will be but an expression of the leadings and promptings of the Holy Spirit. If his affections are divided, his whole christian course is weak and vacillating. We often lose sight of the fact that we are living for eternity; that our lives on earth are but preparatory to that longer and never ending life beyond the grave; and, that as our lives are here, so will they be there. Forgetting these, they will often neglect altogether religion, and set their affections on worldly things. We continue to buy and sell and get gain, and God is not in all our thoughts. And when, by the indefatigable exertions of the Holy Spirit, our thoughts are directed to religious subjects, we are startled and often wonder if religion is a reality. Sometimes, while far from God, we are, by chance, brought in contact with a holy man of God, one who lives continually in the light of his countenance. His walk and conversation testify of the firm foundation on which he rests; and again, while we acknowledge how much better he is than ourselves, we inquire "is religion really sufficient to build upon, and to rest our hopes upon; in short, to make the one, sole, guiding principle of our lives?" It is indeed; and it should be at once taken to us as our life principle, that which should actuate our every thought and action.—The Church.

For the World's Crisis.

A SHORT SERMON.—No. 1.

"Let your speech be alway with grace."—Col. 4: 6.

The common acceptation of the word grace is love, or favor. Hence to bring this text into harmony with that idea, we should read it—"Let your speech be alway with love." The Greek word logos, here rendered speech, occurs in the New Testament two hundred and thirty times, and is rendered speech only six times; and in each of these instances, it could more acceptably be rendered words, or sayings. Then this text might properly be read—"Let your words be alway with love."

Lodged beneath the folds of this text, is that principle of principles which underlies the foundation of all our blessings. It is the chief and ruling attribute of Divinity, and its adaptation to humanity is manifest in all the relations of man. Displace it, and anarchy fills every heart, and the fairest clime is soon converted into a dreary waste. Disrobe Deity of this principle of love, and the purest heart that ever beat within the breast of man would disclose iniquity enough to guarantee its damnation.

Take this principle from Him who is declared to be love, and the annihilation of our race would soon follow. From it flows every blessing. No sane mind, that will allow itself a moment's reflection in this direction, will fail to discover this glorious truth, that "from him cometh every good and perfect gift." This truth is seen pinnacled on every hill-top. For the "cattle on a thousand hills" belong to the Lord. The gilded grain of yonder field bears testimony to the same truth. "For he sendeth the rain and snow down from heaven, and it watereth the earth, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater." It is seen in the flowery garb of yonder trees, while faith rejoices in view of the golden fruits of a coming harvest.

Take from the courts of heaven this transcending principle, and judgments sore would be our constant lot. Let the fountain of God's love be dried up, and every hope of man is blasted at once. Let Him who holds in his fist the waters of heaven withhold the rain for twelve months, and earth's granaries are emptied, and her proud sons soon fall an easy prey to famine's victorious march. Let Him who bade yonder sun radiate his light and heat, spreading every orb with its gilded rays, cover his disk for a year,—and the perpetual night of the polar regions would bear no comparison to the total darkness that would pervade the entire universe of God; as every luminous body would be veiled in impenetrable darkness.

Thus we see the importance of God's love in the perpetuity of temporal blessings. And when we turn our attention to the eternal blessings promised in revelation, we are lost in wonder that the beneficence of a just and holy being should thus be extended to sinful man. The eternal life; the immortal body; the companionship of angels; the reunion of loved ones; the countless congregation of the good; the everlasting reign with Christ amid trees of life, in fields of glory; all earth made beautiful, and delivered up to the King of kings and Lord of lords, as his own rightful inheritance;—can such thoughts fail to disclose the love of God in his dealings with us? Now let us bring the text to a direct application to ourselves, and see if we do not need its savory power in the discharge of our social responsibilities. "Let your words be alway with love." There is no relationship that man sustains to his fellows that offers an excuse for unkind words; and yet where is there a heart that does not feel rebuked by such a statement?

But few realize the importance of words. The wise man has said, "Words fitly spoken are like apples of gold in pictures of silver." "The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails fastened by the master of assemblies." They afford a weapon by which the direst foe may be disarmed, if properly wielded. They are the index of the heart; "for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." They are the garb of thought, without which thought would die unclothed and undeveloped.

Could we but view the joy and peace choice words are sure to impart, how reluctant we should be to speak unkindly to any. How often it is the case when a tempted soul, just ready to yield to the artful foe of man, might be saved from ruin by a kind word. And yet words of bitterness more frequently fall on his ear, under such trying moments, than words of kindness. By some means we are more prone to rebuke than to pity, although doing it is like Satan's rebuking sin; for while we reprove another, we rebuke ourselves.

There is nothing so effective in winning friends as kind words. That ruler need not fear the usurpation of his throne, while he addresses his subordinates with words of kindness. Go to that farmer, who always gets the highest price for his produce, and ever meets with a ready sale; and nine times out of ten he is a man of kind words. So that if policy only were our principle, it were far better to "let our words be alway with love." But when we view ourselves in the light of Christianity, nothing is more unbecoming than unkind words. It cannot be expected that we shall be instrumental in causing our fellows to embrace christianity, as a desirable thing, unless we show its advantages over the natural state of the heart; and if a heart renewed does not develop that in words characteristic of its state, through what medium shall we look for evidence of a change? Does the admonition, "Be ye wise as serpents, and harmless as doves," bespeak aught but kindness?

That christian who indulges in unkind words betrays a spirit foreign to that of Christ. I am not speaking of chastity of address, when I speak of kind words; for the most bitter words may be presented in the most eloquent strains; and the most loving words may flow from a heart whose lips have never been trained in the school of etiquette. There is but one element that will beget within the heart words of kindness. How does that mother win the affections of her child? Is it by unkind words or acts that she becomes the most attractive being on earth to the child? Is it not rather those gentle caresses, and loving smiles, and kindly acts, that clasp the arms of the little one about her neck so closely? That unselfish love, flowing from a mother's heart, does not fail of reciprocation. Are the words of kindness she utters the result of formal teaching? or are they not prompted by the predominating element of love that reigns in her bosom? "He that loveth not, knoweth not God, for God is love." Let this principle rule the heart, and naught but words of kindness will fill the mouth. How sweet to sit in that family circle where this principle predominates. Strangely perverted must be the taste, not to enjoy such a state. Look at that unfortunate one, who in degradation sits with depressed spirits and broken heart. Think you the cause of such ruin rests only on the shoulders of the sufferer? Ah! flatter not thyself thus; awful responsibilities may rest upon the heads of others for that sad state. Had a look of pity rested where scorn was seen; or had a word of kindness enjoyed the place of sharp rebuke, that poor soul might have been saved from ruin.

O that such depth of love,
As cometh from above,
Would reign in this heart supreme;
Then from it should flow,
In heavenly glow,
Salvation's healing stream.

HARDEN NOT YOUR HEART.

BY PROF. FINNEY.

"Wherefore, as the Holy Ghost saith, To-day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts."—Heb. 3: 7, 8.

(Concluded.)

9. Men harden their hearts through the "fear of man that bringeth a snare." You often see cases in which persons are called to the performance of duty, and resist the claims of duty through the fear of man. If in meeting those who are anxious are invited to come forward and take a certain seat, or to go into another room for instruction, if they are aware that certain persons are present, though greatly pressed with the claims of God, they will harden their hearts and refuse to go.

10. Men harden their hearts in obedience to public sentiment. If the claims of God come into collision with the views and practices of men on a large scale, so that public sentiment is strongly adverse to the claims of God, many men will bow right down before public sentiment and harden their hearts against God. They are afraid to take a stand against men, when in their wickedness they will take a stand against God. With most men public sentiment is omnipotent, and has far more power with them practically than all the claims of God. And whenever they are called to resist public sentiment and to sympathize with the claims of God, they gird themselves and resist God's claims.

11. Men harden their hearts by indulging erroneous views of God and his government. In this they are uncandid; but nevertheless they persist in charging certain things upon God, in stumbling at certain things in God's providence, or government, or dealings. They hedge themselves round about with lies, and hide themselves under falsehood, and thus strengthen themselves in their opposition to God.

12. The same is true of religion generally. It is striking and awful sometimes, to see what views men will persist in entertaining of religion. Their perverseness in this respect is sometimes appalling. Hear them talk, and it would seem they must have been assisted by Satan himself to conjure up so much that is false, ridiculous, absurd, and often wicked, and charge it to religion.

13. Men often harden their hearts through a proud determination to receive nothing incomprehensible. They will not believe, they say, what they cannot understand. But this they apply only to religion and the claims of God. They cannot comprehend their own existence; and there is nothing in all nature around them that is not full of mystery, as absolutely beyond them as any mystery in religion. They can swallow an ocean of mystery on any other subject. But come to religion, the claims of God, the high policy of his eternal government, the mode of his own existence, and those great and wonderful things too high for us, where mystery is to be expected of course—there the sinner will stumble; there he proudly entrenches himself, and says, "I will not believe what I cannot understand"—meaning that unless he can understand the philosophy and the how, he will not believe the fact.

14. Men harden their hearts by withholding confidence in God. Unbelief is their great crime. If God takes never so much pains to gain their confidence, they proudly and persistently withhold it, and thus harden their hearts against God.

15. Men often harden their hearts by withholding confidence in man. They seem to throw away their confidence in everybody; and with the Psalmist in his haste, they say, "All men are liars." Now, whenever you find a man who has lost confidence in everybody, you may know that he himself is a wicked man. This is exactly the opposite of of a good man's state of mind. "Charity hopeth all things, and believeth all things." The truly good man may be too confiding. He is himself truthful, and not ready to suspect others of being false. He is himself honest and simple-hearted, and not in a state easily to suspect others of double-dealing and dishonesty. He loves everybody, and, therefore, wishes to think well of everybody. He is disposed to do so, and it is very easy and natural for him to do so. His error will naturally be in the excess of confidence. He will confide sometimes where he has no reason to confide. He has more confidence in man than man is entitled to; and this from the very nature of his simple-heartedness, of his own conscious honesty.

Whenever, therefore, you see a man that has no confidence in anybody, you may know that he deserves the confidence of nobody; he is a wicked man. "Charity thinketh no evil;" is not predisposed to think evil of others, but the contrary. It is a wicked man who hardens himself by casting away his confidence in man. You go to some men with the claims of God—they immediately resist everything you say, because everybody who professes religion is a hypocrite.

16. Some men harden their hearts through a habit of self-will. They have never been governed by their parents; they have never really submitted themselves to anybody's government; consequently they are in the habit of having their own way. To government of any kind they will not submit. Persuade them, especially in the sense of flattering them, you sometimes may, to some extent; but the moment the idea of authority is presented to them, even if it be the authority of God, they resist it because the claim comes in that shape. Their will is always girded; it is up and strong the moment anything comes before them as an obligation—something to which they ought to submit. To moral obligation they have never yielded; and the moment it comes before them in the shape of an "ought," they resist it.

17. Many harden their hearts through a habit of delay. They have long put off the claims of God; they have indulged in this from their earliest childhood; it has become a thing of course. They have heard sermon after sermon, have had the claims of duty presented so often and so long, and have been so uniform in their habit of delay, that now it is a thing of course. You press them never so hard and they will say, "Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season I will call for thee."

Is not this the fact with some of you? Have you not so long accustomed yourselves to put off God's claims that it has become a thing of course? When you came to meeting to-day you expected to hear the claims of God; but did you expect to comply with them, to yield to these claims? Did you not as much expect to set the church on fire to-day as you expected to become a christian, and yield to the claims of God to-day? Did you not as much expect to reject these claims as you expected to hear them presented? You did expect to be pressed with them; but did you not as much expect to delay obedience as you expected to live? Such has been your habit of delay, that when God's claims are urged you instantly repeat what you have so often done; you gird yourself and go your way, resisting these claims.

18. Many resist the claims of God through spiritual indolence. They are too spiritually indolent to make any effort for their own salvation, or to comply with the claims of God. These claims come home upon them, and press them to instant action and decision; but it is easier to resist them, as they have been in the habit of doing so long, than to comply. They have only to gird themselves up, to remain in disobedience. But to rule out every objection, and break down before God, will cause them more effort than they are disposed to make; hence they draw themselves up in the attitude of resistance, and growl out their "nay" to the claims of God.

19. Men often harden their hearts an account of the real or supposed sins of professors of religion. These sins may be real, or they may be only supposed; nevertheless, they are made the occasion of caviling, and of resistance to God's claims. Such a man has wronged them, or wronged somebody else; such a professor has done so and so. He betakes himself to these by way of strengthening himself in his position. He "eats up the sins of God's people as he eats bread, and will not call on the name of the Lord." Sometimes in dealing with them he has supposed them to be selfish. Perhaps they have been so; perhaps they have manifested an unchristian spirit and temper. If they have been wrong; if they have wronged God and dishonored him; strange to tell, sinners will gird themselves, justify their position to God, and will harden their hearts, because God's professed people have dishonored him.

20. Men will often harden their hearts on account of the censoriousness of professors of religion. They have heard professors of religion find fault with other professors of religion, speaking censoriously of them, and thus prejudicing them against professors of religion in general. I have often been struck with the fact that the children of censorious parents are seldom converted.

Especially if the parents are professors of religion, and if they are in the habit of speaking freely of the faults of others, real or supposed, before their children, and particularly if they speak of the faults of professors of religion, and complain of ministers, their children will always harden their hearts. If you approach them on the subject of religion, they have been poisoned to death by their censorious parents. Father, or mother, or both, have said so, and so about their minister, about such a one, and such a one; and this is made by them an occasion of strengthening themselves and hardening their hearts against God. I know a family where censoriousness, I am sorry to say, seems to be the whole of their conversation. The mother, especially, thinks almost all professors of religion hypocrites; particularly those in the place where she lives.

Her mouth is full of complainings of the members of the church to which she belongs; or at least of the church in the neighborhood in which she resides. Her children, consequently, are entirely opposed to religion. They have no confidence in it; they laugh and even scoff at it; and although the mother herself is a professor of religion, by her censoriousness she has taught them to despise it. This is awful, but so it is. Parents cannot do their children a greater injury than by allowing themselves to be censorious.

They really do them a greater mischief than Satan can do them. They are in fact more the enemies of the souls of their children than the devil himself is. They have something to say against almost every professor of religion. The deacons, of course, are all wrong; the minister neglects them, they say; and as for the business men of the church, they are all defrauders or defaulters; and as for the women, they are all out of the way. Nobody is right; the church are all hypocrites; and this their children are taught to believe. Now how could the devil do worse than this? You may almost as well go into a nest of serpents to try to make an impression on them with truth, as into a family where they are censorious. You will find the households from the oldest to the youngest, hardening their hearts, and the moment you approach them, they begin to pour forth their prejudices and their complaints against others.

21. Sinners still more frequently harden their hearts by yielding to their own censorious tendencies. They have a bitter, sour, spirit themselves. They are selfish, and suspect everybody else of being selfish.

Judging others by themselves, they have little confidence in anybody, and are strongly disposed to attribute the worst motives to almost everybody. This is the tendency of some minds; and they often harden their hearts by indulging in this spirit. They grieve and resist the Spirit of God by the free manner in which they let their tongues loose and slander their neighbors.

22. Men harden their hearts by holding fast their schemes of ambition. They mark out for themselves certain courses of life, and propose to accomplish certain ends. These ends are selfish; nevertheless they commit themselves to realize them. The moment you bring before them the claims of God, and they are seen to conflict with the carrying out of their ambitious schemes, they immediately resist.

For a time, I did so myself. Success in my profession was a thing to which I had committed myself; and I was aware that if I became a christian, I might be called to preach the gospel. At any rate, I thought I could not for conscience' sake, successfully carry out my ambitious projects in my profession. This for a time was conclusive against my yielcing to the claims of God. I girded myself, and hardened my heart, and resisted these claims for a season, that I might carry out and realize my ambitious project.

23. Men often harden their hearts through fear of being ridiculed, or persecuted, if they become religious.

Sometimes they have friends to whom they are strongly attached, and to whom they stand committed not to become religious. I have known cases of this kind, where persons were found to be committed to their ireligious and perhaps skeptical friends; and they would withstand the claims of God, and harden their hearts like adamant stone, because of these committals to their ungodly friends.

For the World's Crisis.

JESUS.

Sweetest name ever spoken on earth, or sung by the angels in heaven, is the name of Jesus, to one who has faith in the great atonement, and has by faith received remission of sins. Jesus left his home in glory, and for our sake took upon him our nature. Jesus suffered, being tempted, that he might be able to succor those that are tempted.

He bore all the sorrows of life; was poor, despised, rejected of men, and at last nailed to the cross and suffered death, and all for us. Blessed Jesus! How full of love our hearts should be to him whose love to us cannot be measured. For he says: "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you."

Jesus! there is music in the very name. I love to hear it repeated again and again when it comes from the soul. How sweet the words:

"O Jesus, Jesus, Jesus,
My all sufficient friend,
Come, fold me to thy bosom,
E'en to the journey's end."

And, indeed, he is all, and in all to those that believe. Our greatest joy we find in him, and our greatest griefs are lost in his love. When in trouble, he

"Smooths our sorrows, calms our fears,
And drives away our tears."

It makes this world a happy place when we feel the presence of Jesus. But when the curse is removed, and this earth made new and glorious, with Jesus king over all, we shall enjoy one happy, never-ending day. We may, all that will, be among those that shall rejoice in that day.

You, dear friend, who do not now love Jesus, come and learn his loveliness, "for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved," but in and through the name of Jesus.

Lowell, Mass. C. E. Bailey.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Oct. 14, 1868.

Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

Money Orders.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

CHICAGO TENT-MEETING.

Our meetings in Chicago continue to increase in interest. We have large audiences. Sometimes it is difficult for all to get into the tent. We have the best of order and attention. Several prominent men have been in, and a number from different denominations attend regularly, and are deeply interested in the important truths presented. Some have embraced the blessed hope we love so well, and are very actively engaged in telling it to others. They say their Bible is a new book, which they now read with increased delight, as thousands of others have said when they saw the clear light now shining on the holy Scriptures.

Our meeting last Lord's day, Oct. 4th, was one of special interest and profit. We truly had a feast from the Lord. At half-past nine o'clock, we met in the tent for a love-feast, and have rarely enjoyed a better one. The time was all improved, and the testimonies were excellent. Quite a number from other denominations took a part, and were delighted with the meeting. There was a remarkable freedom in the Lord, much beyond what we expected to enjoy at so early a period. Our tent was crowded during the day, and an intense interest manifested. Our hopes are bright for Chicago. Tears flowed from many eyes, the truth found a warm welcome in the hearts of the people, the weak were made strong, the careless were awakened, and several rose for prayers. The light and truth are spreading in this wicked city, and the powers of darkness are giving away before their onward march.

We have commenced a warfare upon Spiritualism, the greatest of all delusions, and the strongest foe now arrayed against the christian religion and its blessed Author. The Spiritualists have a strong hold in Chicago, and publish two papers here. They are in earnest, and bold in their attacks upon God and the Bible. A portion of the Spiritualists here, who have given themselves up wholly to the control of the spirits, have organized what they call a "New and Divine Government," in which "Church and State" are "combined." Their officers were appointed "by spirit direction." It is claimed that it is a *de facto government, acknowledged by thousands of men and women, who have taken the oath of allegiance." They denominate it "A THEOCRATIC DEMOCRATIC GOVERNMENT, Church and STATE combined." This "new government" is said to be organized "upon Masonic principles," including "both men and women." They propose to have a "Wisdom Bank," conducted on a new system, "based on real estate;" a "NEW NATIONAL ENSIGN," and "a permanent universal currency." All these matters are to be controlled entirely by the spirits, operating through their mediums. Truly, these are strange times!

Sr. Needham, (formerly Sr. E. A Annable) has held two interesting meetings in the tent for children; and Bro. Needham has preached for us three times. He is now acting as city missionary for the Young Men's Christian Association. We learn that his labors are being blest, and sinners are seeking the Savior. He and his dear companion are earnestly at work in the vineyard of the Lord. He came to this continent last spring, and is now much interested in the coming of Christ and the other truths of the Bible which have been so long hid from the people. He is a young and interesting speaker.

We have attended several of the mid-day prayer-meetings, held from 12 o'clock to 12.45. These are under the direction of the Young Men's Christian Association, on Monroe street, between Clark and Lasalle. They are sustained by the most devoted class of business men, ministers, and strangers visiting the city. They are profitable seasons, but they lack the vitalizing power of those great truths that relate to the coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, and the setting up of the everlasting kingdom. Some of them begin to see these things, and to rejoice in the light. They have attended the tent-meetings. We hope to see many come out into the full light and liberty of the gospel of the kingdom. Pray for us that we may be able to win many to Jesus.

* From the fact.

CHICAGO SABBATH.

There are a large number in the city of Chicago who pay no attention to the Sabbath, only to engage more heartily in amusements, drinking and carousing. Besides these, the steam cars on the rail roads are running to and fro about the same as on other days; groceries are open, produce displayed, billiard halls are in active operation, and drinking saloons are crowded.

The following from the Chicago Tribune will give some idea of Chicago Sabbath scenes at the beer gardens, in the suburbs of the city. This represents their condition Monday morning, after their Sabbath debauchery:

"At six o'clock the scene in the main hall was one of the most demoralizing character. A hundred males of the worst description, and as many females of the same sort, held forth as become their natural instincts. In the corners they lay upon the floor, rolling over in each other's arms. They jumped upon the tables, men and women, and while the men howled, the women did no less."

TRANSMIGRATION OF SOULS.

In Eccl. 3: 19–21, we have the argument of the wise man against the doctrine of the transmigration of the soul, as held by the heathen and afterwards adopted by the Pharisees, a sect of the Jews. Solomon declares that man and beast die alike, and that they "all go unto one place. All are of the dust, and all turn to dust again." This corresponds with the account of the creation, as given in Gen. 2: 7, 19: "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground;" "and out of the ground the Lord God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air." Solomon says "they [men and beasts] have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast." "As the one dieth so dieth the other." Eccl. 3: 19. They all live by means of the same breath of life, and all die alike when it is taken away. This is plainly expressed in Ps. 104: 27, as follows: "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled; thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust." But the heathen taught that the spirits of some men went down among the beasts for punishment and correction; while others went upward. Solomon combats this belief as follows: "Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast, that goeth downward to the earth?" The Septuagint of Eccl. 3: 18–21, reads as follows: "I commend with my heart concerning a saying of the sons of men, 'That God distinguisheth them.' Now in order to show that they themselves are beasts, that at least which befalleth man, befalleth beasts; and that which befalleth the beast befalleth man. The same event happeneth to both. As the one dieth so dieth the other. And they have all one breath. What advantage then hath man over the beast? None; for all are vanity. They are all for one place. They were all from the dust; and to dust they shall all return. And who hath seen the breath of the sons of men, whether it ascendeth upwards; and the breath of the beast, whether it descendeth downwards into the earth?"—Thompson's Septuagint.

The Hebrew word ruach, rendered breath in Eccl. 3: 19, is the same that is rendered spirit in the 21st verse, and most evidently means the same thing, and represents all that leaves man or beast at death. This is in harmony with the whole Bible, common sense, reason and sound philosophy. Why not believe it? It is true that this truth spoils creeds and speculative theology, but what if it does? let God be true, if all creeds are ruined for ever. Let us not trample on the word of the Lord, and do violence to good sense, facts, and reason, for the sake of sustaining what our fathers believed; unless we intend to turn Papists.

The following shows the heathen view, which Solomon opposed, and which is contrary to the teaching of the prophets, Jesus and the apostles:

"The Japanese believe in the transmigration of souls, and that the souls of those who die the death of the righteous will take possession of a human body, while the souls of those who die after a life of wickedness will be condemned to reside in the bodies of inferior animals, and the worse the life the worse the animal."

THE REIGN OF DIABOLISM.

Diabolus is the Greek word properly rendered Devil in the New Testament. By "the reign of Diabolism," we mean the reign of the Devil. Where he controls the people, we shall see wickedness abound to an alarming degree, as in the days of Sodom and Gomorrah. When we cast our eyes around the world at the present time, and see the abounding wickedness, it is very evident that Satan is ruling in the hearts of the people as never before since the discovery of this continent. It should be remembered that he teaches lies through his mediums, telling them and their followers the opposite of what is true. Hence at the present time he causes his mediums to say that "the world is growing better." When the devil teaches this, we may be sure it is rapidly becoming wicked. Righteousness is evil to him; and wickedness he calls good. He and all his angels are "seducing spirits," who speak "lies in hypocrisy."

It astonishes us that any candid person can be so blinded by the evil one as to be led to believe that the world is growing better; but such is the case, especially among those who believe in spiritualism. The wickedness of our great cities has now become so notorious, that worldly men and secular papers are alarmed at the awful state of things. While popular teachers have been telling them that a good time was coming, they see the opposite is true; and they inquire with anxiety, What does it mean? We think they will soon discover that they have been listening to fables, instead of the word of the Lord, from those who have been telling them the world is growing better. If it were so, the Bible would be false; for that most positively affirms that men shall "wax worse and worse" in the last days. Such is the case now as facts most fully demonstrate.

The following from the Boston Police News, Jan. 2nd, 1868, furnished us by Bro. S. E. York, will give some idea of the feelings now agitating the minds of careful observers:

"In view of the actual state of affairs, as presented by those unerring records of the world's history, it would be at once trite and useless to comment dryly upon the frightful increase of crime in the land, but we cannot help contemplating it, merely as a dreadful phenomenon, before which we stand, at the same time appalled and fascinated. The reign of diabolism appears to be absolute. With one foot trampling the scales and the sacred scroll of justice, with one hand flourishing aloft the torch of the incendiary, and the other brandishing the deadly stiletto or the pistol, murder stands transcendant in our land, shaking from her ankles and her wrists the brittle chains with which society would strive in vain, by a weak and corrupt legislation, to bind her down, she springs aloft, free and exultant, with the joy-dancer of hell leaping from her eyes, and the infernal halo of her fell purpose surrounding her like a lurid cloud. On every side, whichever way she points, she is surrounded by the terrible lustre of the scenes which she has invoked. Here, the garroter is pursuing his fearful trade. The serpent-like arm has enfolded the throat of the victim; the knotted knuckle of the wrist is being forced into the wind-pipe, and, in a few seconds, the struggle for life and property will be over. Here, again, we have the common bar-room brawl, the hasty stab, or the hastier shot, with death at one end, and the scaffold or the life-long imprisonment at the other. Then the dark pier's brink over the black flowing stream, with the poor suicide, baby in arms, toppling at the verge—

"Mad from life's history,
Glad to death's mystery
Swift to be hurled,
Anywhere, anywhere,
Out of the world."

Then, in the illumination of that lurid smile from the eyes and lips of murder, the fell incendiary, with his secreted flame, creeps to the basement of the tenement-house, ready to involve numerous lives in his villainy, for the sake of picking pockets in the gathering crowd. The knife, the pistol, the slung-shot of the desperado, flung fearlessly out, or the poisoned chalice of the stealthier fiend, all draw their inspiration from the same source; and, in this age of bad legislation, corrupt government, and general carelessness for the public welfare, we must still make up our mind to endure the tyrrany of the Reign of Diabolism."

Another from the same source:—

"Sweeping our eyes around the circle of the universe, we observe nothing but rumblings, noise, confusion, and general disturbance. In the physical world there is the 'the devil to pay,' if we may be allowed to trespass upon the vigorous vocabulary of the vulgar, and his satanship is no less prolific of accounts to be settled in the moral world. The stomach and bowels of the earth are agonized with a terrible flatulency and cholera morbus, while, from the panting and arid regions of Abyssinia to the bleak ice drifts of Arctic solitudes, wars and rumors of coming convulsions fill all mankind with the wildest 'high-stericks.' The heavenly regions are full of celestial and sky-rockets; and the moon persists in wearing her mysterious and portentous 'ring.' Riot, rowdyism, bawdyism, and disgusting frailties, murders, frauds, whiskey drunks, all stirred in the great witch caldron to the tune of fiendish music and horrid songs, make the soul of the good man—like the writer of this—to stand amazed and aghast.

Where and to what are we drifting? Is there to be another overwhelming deluge? If so, would it not be well to begin upon the ark? If we compose our attention upon this mighty metropolis, we find the pandemoniumic picture within in full harmony with the Babel without. Crimes stain the records of justice with a continual flow of blood, which are paid for at the cheapest rates of punishment. Great boiling undamned streams of lust, and greed, and pillage, and murder, flow on continually and in every portion of society; and the startling truth stares us in the face, hissing and hideous, that looseness of morals is the rule, and purity and truth the exception.

Indeed, and finally, it is but too manifest that the end of the world ought to be very near; and it therefore behooves the disciples of Miller, and all who are posted on the Advent doctrine, to be busy with their slates, and let us know, within a 'dog's age' at least, when the wicked are to be consumed like the dry stubble of the field, and the corporal's guard of the unsinning and unsoiled are to take seats on 'the great glass plate.' We feel a lively personal interest in that matter, about this time."

We think the above extracts prove conclusively that wickedness is increasing. We are told frequently, by those that oppose the Advent doctrine, that the world is no worse than formerly; but mark what the writer of the first article says. He speaks of "the frightful increase of crime," "as presented by those unerring records of the world's history." This is the testimony, not of the church, but of the world; and we are willing to allow the judgment of the world's people.

In the second, "The stomach and bowels of the earth are agonized with a terrible flatulency," etc. The recent earthquake proves that the earth is in the last throes of dissolution. From the above evidence, it is plain that we are nearing the time spoken of by the prophet Joel, when he says, "Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe; come, get you down; for the press is full; the fats overflow; for their wickedness is great."

Your Bro. in Christ, waiting for his coming and kingdom, S. E. YORK.

Millgrove, Erie Co., N. Y.

BRO. THURMAN has been very sick for some weeks. He intended to have been at the Alton Bay campmeeting, but was prostrated with fever just before that meeting began, and has been almost in the embrace of death. He is now recovering slowly. He is at Bro. Perkins, No. 7 Sherman Square, Charlestown, Mass. Are there not some who would like to aid him in his affliction? He is needy.

EXTRAVAGANCE.

The extravagance manifested in dress at the present day is beyond any thing ever witnessed before since the continent was discovered. Fashion and folly have run mad, and the world are on the chase to catch up if possible, so as to be in her company.

A Saratoga correspondent of the Boston Journal writes:—

"Formerly a new dress a day was quite the ton; now from two to five dresses of different style and material daily are necessary to stand in the front rank of high life. The dresses are costly and the trains immense in length. The evening toilet is extravagant, and it is impossible to move round in the dance or even to walk in the drawing room without treading on the huge trains that flaunt everywhere in the face. The old bustle gives way to a new fangled arrangement, not unlike a huge blown bladder fastened in the rear, which amounts to a positive deformity."

"WHICH IS THE BEST?"

The following from Bro. I. Damman, in the Voice of the West, is worthy of consideration:—

"We are exhorted all round to be short. 'Consistency is a jewel!' Which is best? a long Bible sermon, or a long account of our journey, mentioning all the particulars that we see or do? Which is best? a good account of the work of God in saving men from death, or a long and particular account of the doings of the conference, that hundreds do not read, telling who presided, who was clerk, and clerk pro tempore; and who made prayer on such a morning, noon, and night, in the absence of some member, and some one was chosen to fill his place?"

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at the National Campmeeting, Chapin's Grove, Springfield, Mass., Aug. 25th, 1868, the following resolutions were adopted:—

Resolved, That we raise TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year.

Resolved, That our preaching brethren be, and hereby are, requested to act as Agents in this good work, to solicit contributions to the Tract Fund, as often at least as once in every quarter, and forward the same to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, BOSTON, MASS.

MISSION BOARD MEETING.

At a meeting of the Board held in Crisis office Friday, Oct. 2nd, 1868, voted unanimously, that Eld. J. V. Himes be authorized to act as agent of the Society to solicit funds to carry forward the great missionary work, and forward the same to the Treasurer of the society.

The Board hearing the Macedonian cry for help coming from every quarter, and knowing the great good that has been accomplished by the efforts and contributions of the Freedmen's Society the past year, at Memphis, under the care of I. I. Leslie and his faithful helpers; also at St. Louis, under the care of Bro. H. K. Flagg and his assistants; the European and Norway missions, as well as the noble efforts of our home missionaries,—all of which receive our attention and hearty co-operation,—feel the present calls are imperative. The cry is heard, and must be responded to. The Board feel that special effort must be made to raise funds, not for salaried agents, but to supply the needs of and help all those who are in the field at work, sacrificing their domestic comfort, their ease, as well as their lives, for the cause. They must be helped. The salvation of dying men demands it. The welfare of the suffering freedmen calls loudly for help. Shall the cry be responded to? The lovers of humanity; the lovers of Jesus; the noble-hearted with their abundance; the great-hearted with their pittance; the benevolent widow with her mites; all, all, with one accord, will say, let the call be responded to at once; send for the needful by your agents, and we will cheer them by our prayers and contributions.

Feeling an assurance of faith in this great mission work, the East and West united, one cause, a unit, and that God is in it, prospering it, and that what a man soweth that will he also reap, and an assurance of your hearty co-operation, dearly beloved, we voted unanimously that Eld. J. V. Himes be our agent to call upon you for funds to be paid into the treasury of the Society for the mission at large. You may expect him in your churches and chapels, at your houses and offices. Open your hearts and hands; bid him welcome to every avenue where the means can be obtained to sustain this heaven-bought cause. This is no one-sided issue; it is the broad, liberal mission work that will aid, under direction of the Board, in the saving of men in the day of the Lord Jesus, East, West, and South, as their needs and duty demand.

All monies collected will be acknowledged in the Crisis and Voice of the West, by the Treasurer, Geo. T. Adams.

In conclusion, let me say to you all, begin speedily to ask yourselves, What can I do for the Freedmen's Mission Society the coming year? and for Christ's sake, and the sake of Christ's poor, be largely liberal, knowing that "inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me"; that as the result you may hear it said in the day of reckoning, "Come, ye blessed of my Father," eternal life and the kingdom are yours forever and ever.

For the Board, L. BOUTELL, Chairman.

Chelsea, Oct. 5th, 1868.

Resolved, That the Board hear with grief of the sudden death of Sister Northrup, our Matron at the Memphis Mission. She was very efficient, and greatly beloved by all who had the interest of the Freedmen at heart; and she undoubtedly came to a premature death by self-denial and labor in behalf of the mission school. We tender her children and friends our sympathy in their sad bereavement; as also Bro. Leslie and his co-workers in their loss of so valuable a helper.

THE MEMPHIS MISSION.

BRO. GRANT:—I write you again from our mission field and home in Tennessee; but they are sad tidings that I must send. Our dear Sr. Northrup is dead! She died Sept. 23d, after a sickness of nearly four weeks.

I arrived here the 25th, two days after her death, and found her unburied, she having been kept in expectation of my coming. It was a dreadful surprise to me, for before leaving home I received letters saying that she was better, and fast recovering. I had anticipated a joyful season in meeting the dear children here and praising God that none had fallen by the enemy in my absence. But, alas! that joy was not ours, for she, the first and most faithful of all, had been cut down at her post, and lay silent in death on my arrival.

Her disease was bilious fever, that which is now so prevalent here. Had she had proper medical treatment, she might have recovered. Yet we can but feel that her work was done, and it was not in God's arrangement to have her live longer. She fell with her armor on, and in the thickest of the battle. No more devoted or faithful missionary and servant of Christ can be sent forth into the vineyard here or elsewhere. She gave all for Christ and these poor perishing ones, who are now left here greatly bereaved.

On my arrival on Friday, at three o'clock, I found her lying in the middle upper room, dressed and ready for her burial. Although having been dead two days she was unchanged, and looked as in life. The coffin had already been ordered, and was brought soon after. We laid her in it, and then carried it down and placed it in the chapel. Here, from that time until the next day at ten o'clock, when the funeral took place, the people came to look upon her and weep around her. She lay here in state, for she was a princess, closely related to the King of kings.

I appointed the funeral to take place at ten o'clock the next day (Saturday). In the mean time Bro. Wilkins and Sr. Valle arrived, and their presence greatly cheered and relieved me of the burden which lay upon me. Bro. Hasty, although hardly able to be up from his bed, had made arrangements in part for the burial. He was greatly assisted by Mr. Southall and others of the colored people, who had done all they could to have Sr. N. buried in a decent manner. It was the request of Sr. Northrup to be buried among the soldiers and colored people at Fort Pickering, and thus avoid the expense of purchasing a grave. I however decided not to carry out this part of her instructions, and for this reason: the land there is confiscated property, and belonged to Gen. Beauregard. It will without much doubt revert to him again, when all buried there will be removed or their graves destroyed. I decided to bury her in Elmwood Cemetery, where if her friends wish her to lie, she can, without being molested.

The funeral was attended by many strangers, and a deep solemnity prevailed throughout the entire services. Tears and cries were seen and heard all around. After reading and singing the 60th Hymn, Prof. Barnum, Sup't of colored schools, read the Scriptures and addressed the people; after which the hymn,

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep!"

was sung, and prayer offered by Bro. Wilkins. A last look was then taken of our dear sister, the coffin closed, the procession was formed, and moved to the cemetery. We laid her in a pleasant spot, although among strangers. Prayer was offered by the writer, and we then left her there to await the morning of the resurrection.

Sweet be thy sleep, thou faithful child of God;
With all thy work well done, rest thee here;
Thou wilt be called, and up the shining road
Wilt hasten when the white throne shall appear.

THE FIRST TIME OUT.

BRO. GRANT:—For the first time, I feel it my duty to venture out into the open field on the subject of time. Notwithstanding there has been so much talented effort to get at the truth on the commencement of the 1335 days, I will venture a few thoughts. Upon summing up the various arguments from others that have been running to and fro, since we have entered the time of the end, when knowledge was to increase on this very subject, we find we are all indebted to some one else for what we know; some one knew it before us; and I am indebted to what others have written upon this subject. My design in writing this article is to encourage others to hold on, and keep searching; for every time a position fails it shakes off some who stumble over time.

There is a time position for commencing the 1335 days, upon which we can see more light than on any other, since all other points have failed except Bro. Thurman's, which will soon be tested; i. e., the 1868 point. But Bro. T. has a stronger point for commencing the 1335 days at 538, as found on page 207. He says: In March 538 the Pope had peaceable possession of the capital of Rome. Justinian's code was instituted, or published, as early as 533, but the provisions of that code could not go into effect at the time they were issued, because Rome was in the possession of the Ostrogoths, who were violently opposed to the religion of Justinian. It was not till the conquest of Rome in March 538, that the Catholic bishops could exercise the power with which they were clothed by the emperor Justinian, in 533; but in 538, we see him in peaceable possession of Rome. The exact time is not given here; but he had the power in March, 538, and had not got it the year before. (See Gibbon and Hale, in answer to Dr. Bend.) In March 538, the Papal supremacy was complete. The dragon had then given to him his power, his seat, and great authority. (See Croly on Phocas being the founder of the supremacy of Rome.) He says the grant of Phocas was found to be a confused and imperfect transaction, scarcely noticed by the early writers, and, even in its fullest sense, amounted to nothing beyond a confirmation of the grant of Justinian. The chief cause of its frequent adoption by the commentators seemed to be its convenient coincidence with the rise of Mohammedanism.

Now, as there is no point established by learned men the other side of 538, why not turn our attention to a greater and later date, when the last roots of the Ostrogoths were plucked up, and the Pope peaceably ascended the throne of the church and state, which was in 538? This Bro. T. cannot object to, as he has the same date as his second point. Why he took 533 was, I suppose, to agree better with his eclipses of the sun and moon, types, jubilees, etc.; but all those, I think, had their bearing and fulfillment in establishing the birth and death of Christ, which he has done without a successful contradiction. God bless him for the light he has dug up for this generation. Taking Bro. Thurman's position in life, and the facilities for his work, some of his writings amount to but little less than inspiration. No doubt God had a hand in it. Every man has his own peculiar notions, but when God speaks through him, we had better be careful how we treat his message. Let us look at all the evidence from all sources. Let all the testimony come in, and like an honest juror reconcile the conflicting testimonies, instead of throwing the whole away, as the foolish will do, when the parable is fulfilled.

The first man out on time was Bro. Wm. Miller. His point for starting the 1335 days was 538; and shortening the 1290 to 1260, brought the time in 1843. This was all permitted to bring out a people that would keep this light before the world, and search for more; for we are the generation that are seeing Christ's signs which were to corroborate the prophetic dates.

One more important sign is the movement of the nations in their prophetic order to their prophetic position; and the wise, or church, will have additional light. The above dates seem the strongest, and will terminate the 1335 days from 538 in 1873. This seems to give room for the nations to wheel into their prophetic time, prepared for the great battle of God Almighty. It does not seem to me that there is time enough for this in 1868; but if it comes this year, or before this is published, I do not feel in my heart to say, My Lord delayeth his coming. But it does seem just at this time, we need another stepping-stone; and there is one just as solid as any other and much larger, and I am willing to step on it and run all risk. There is a great difference of opinion among some of our best expositors about some of the beasts in Revelations. Their character and work will soon be developed so clearly, that all the wise can understand, and the watchmen see eye to eye. We have signs enough and work enough and light enough to see how to do it.

The previous dates have failed, but as God gave us dates, some of them are right. I hope the wiser part of the church will look at the above, and, if they cannot be reconciled with other scriptures, please show the defects. I have been reading for some years, and looking at different arguments on time dates; and this is my first attempt in this direction; but as it takes every body to know every thing, perhaps I may know a little. Please look at it. Light is concentrating to a focal point, when the watchmen will see eye to eye on this subject, and others that are dividing us.

ALNA TENT MEETING.

Our meeting was expected to begin on the morning of Sept. 25th, but it was very rainy and did not commence untill evening. It is a place where the masses knew nothing of our hope. They were shy, and did not come out freely at first, yet some came. The second day gave us another severe rain storm; and as we were flooded with rain and not welcomed by our neighbors, we were obliged to put up several miles from the tent, among brethren, and carry food to eat through the day. But faith and toil, with God's blessing, brought out the people, and gave them ears to hear the word; and the effort proved a decided success. Some of the members of the churches became interested in the gospel hope and signs of the times, declaring that we had preached more Bible than they had heard for twelve or twenty years. They were sure the Lord had sent us there to arouse them and teach them the gospel of the coming kingdom.

We had but few of the brethren of like precious faith with us to carry on our social meetings, but those few were active. We scattered many tracts, and some books. God will bring good fruit from this effort. A few generous brethren gave into the treasury enough to meet the expenses of the meeting.

At this meeting, also, a few brethren began by a liberal subscription, to pay off the old debt on the tent. Others will follow, and this debt will be met. Who wishes a blessing by a share in it? I. C. WELLCOME.

For the World's Crisis.

HOW SHALL WE JUDGE?

"Judge not, that ye be not judged; for with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged."

What kind of judgment is here referred to? Surely not of forming an opinion of others, for not to form one is simply an impossibility, especially when one had any marked characteristic, be it good or evil. Does it not refer to a rash, unkind, censorious judgment?

Christ does not condemn judging as a magistrate, for that, when according to justice, is lawful and necessary. But what he refers to is a habit of forming a judgment hastily, harshly, and without an allowance for every palliating circumstance, and of expressing such an opinion harshly when formed. That God will judge us as we judge others, is evident from Christ's words when he says, "With what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete [measure] it shall be measured to you again." The same rule by which we judge others shall be applied to ourselves. That all err, none can dispute, but it is not for us to point out the failings of others; let each be our own, rather than another's critic. If one does what we think is wrong, we should not be harsh; wait, time will reveal his true character; the motive may have been right, christian virtues lie in the heart, but often fail to come to the surface. In the world rectitude, alas! is not always practised. The innocent often suffer for the crimes of the guilty, while they escape. Law is prescribed for nearly every act of life; if we transgress, suffering will be the consequence; as all are fallible, all must suffer more or less for sins committed. None so free from faults they accuse in others, but that, were they to prove their innocence by throwing a stone at the accused, would, themselves convicted, withdraw, leaving the convicted one alone with himself and God, and feel to have kindness more generously intermixed with their judgment.

The cause of Christ has suffered much harm from this one sad defect in its advocates. The servants of Christ had to spend lonely hours of weeping, and in agonizing prayer seek wisdom to direct the right method of securing peace and quiet, where variance, the result of judgment ill-timed and unwarranted, existed. Shall we not bear a little from others, when Christ bears so much from us? Can we not be patient, let long-suffering characterize our deportment, till the fruit of the tree is sufficiently matured for us to know if it is bitter or sweet?

Be not impatient, for Christ has given us a rule that we may know if our friend, brother, and neighbor, are worthy of christian fellowship. In his sermon on the mount he says, "Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Every good tree bringeth forth good fruit, but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. Again, a good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good, and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil; for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

So let us be patient, bear and forbear, till the fruit is perfected, then may we know who are children of the light, and who children of the darkness. We have authority from Christ to make the tree as is the fruit; either make the tree good, and his fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt. If when fruit has been tested, and it prove corrupt, unpalatable, the tree cannot be good. "As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in me." What, then, shall we, because one professes christianity, pass by many evils, till they go to that extent that they not only disgrace themselves, but throw cold water on the light of the church, till it becomes so dim it is but a stumbling-block to the world? "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered, and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned."

BRO. GRANT:—My husband is prostrated with the typhoid fever, but is under the care of a skillful physician. Will the brethren pray for him? All letters for us may be directed to Horn's Mills, N. H., until further notice. MRS. A. W. SIBLEY.

BRO. GRANT:—We had an interesting time at Dansville, Oct. 4th. Four were baptized. The cause is prosperous there. Bro. Cogswell is loving the cause with all his strength. May the Lord direct our every step and thought and act to his acceptance. Bro. Himes will report from Rochester. His labors last Sabbath were very encouraging to the church.

We have spent a Sabbath in Worcester. Found the church prospering in the truth; baptized five; gave the right hand of fellowship to six, and celebrated the Lord's Supper with about one hundred and fifty. There is a vitality in the cause there worthy of imitation, such as will ever secure success. God bless them. Yours, H. PRATT.

From Bro. B. W. Wilkins.

DEAR BRO.:—I am so poorly off for books for the children in the Sunday School, that I have only two for a class of eight or ten scholars. I hope that those who have old books, all of one kind, either Hilliard's or Webster's, from the First Speller to the Fifth Reader, and enough of each kind to make up a class of ten or fifteen scholars, would send to me. And if our brethren and sisters would be so good as to mix in some old clothes to keep the books from rubbing, it would be a good thing, and would make the children smile, and clap their hands, and praise the Lord. God bless you all. B. WM. WILKINS.

NOTE.—All business letters and communications should be directed to B. Wm. Wilkins, La Grange, Tenn.

BRO. GRANT:—We are ever disposed to look upon the act of a friend, no matter how small the favor may be, with kindness. Feeling under the profoundest obligation to my heavenly Father and to brothers, sisters, and all my personal friends, I beg permission to solicit the indulgence of a brief space in your columns, so that I may perform an act of duty, and give God all the glory; hoping thereby that the church may be edified and strengthened.

It has been a well known fact that, for some few months, my health has been gradually failing. It has often seemed as if my work below had been completed, and soon I would be compelled to say farewell to those I love. Scarcely a day passed but what I fainted once or more. I began to grow weaker each day until I felt that it would be preferable to repose in the cold embrace of hades, rather than to endure the ills of nature. During the summer months I took no trips, I made no visits, though urged to do so by my medical adviser and friends, until Springfield campmeeting.

Thinking, perhaps that the change of air, meeting with friends, socially and spiritually, would be beneficial to me, I at length determined to avail myself of the opportunity and go. In consequence of the disability and indisposition on my part, I was unable to enjoy the meetings so well as I at first ventured to anticipate, though socially, I was exceedingly pleased with meeting brothers, sisters, and indeed all of like precious faith.

August 31st, I returned home, feeling fatigued. I was not in the house three minutes before I was again in a dead faint. At length I was resuscitated and brought back to consciousness. At an early hour I retired. The night was one of pain and wakefulness. All that a kind husband and only son could do was done, still I felt the inward conviction that I would very soon be compelled to lay my armor by. The next morning our family physician was summoned, and pronounced my case utterly hopeless. He gave no orders, and made no prescription, though he visited me daily. During the week, another physician was called in (Dr. Johnson) of Chelsea, Mass, and his decision was precisely the same as the above, so far as human aid was concerned. During the week I lay three days unable to move hand or foot. All the nourishment I received was administered to me with a spoon. Most of the time I lay unconscious.

During the moments I was not in this state, I gave direction in regard to my burial, who should bury me, etc. Saturday night I was evidently failing fast. Sunday morning I called my family around me. For the first time courage failed me, and I seemed a little less resigned. O, I never can forget my agony and feelings, when suddenly, as if the heavens were opened, it seemed as if a buoy was thrown out to me; a beacon light illuminated my room, and I cried out, Will not some person pray for me? All in the room sunk upon the floor, and spent a few moments sending petitions, mingled with sobs and tears, to the throne of mercy. My son then arose, and immediately went to the church, known as Lowell St. Chapel, Boston, and in a feeble manner laid the case before them. Bro. Israel Damman (God bless him) occupied the chair. A season of prayer was immediately held.

I forgot to add that, previous to my son's departure from my bed-side, my limbs from my knee down and from the shoulder to the finger ends became frigid and cold. There was no apparent palpitation of the heart, or perceptible motion of the pulse. The tongue began to grow stiff, and I could scarcely move it unless by severe exertion. During the intervention of time between my son's leaving my bed-side and his return with Bro. Damman, Bro. Bardwell, from Paxton, Mass., laid his hands upon my head, my husband covering the same with his hand, and they both prayed earnestly. I soon felt better, circulation began to take place, and in less than forty minutes my limbs were warmer than the previous administration of hot water, mustard, hot cloths, etc., had made them, for these had not taken any effect whatever.

In regard to the return of Bro. Damman and my son, I would prefer to make it optional with them to tell their own story. Bro. D. prayed that I might then have repose. I was soon in a quiet slumber. He prayed that I might be permitted to rise. After awaking, I called for my clothing, dressed myself, and, while reports were in circulation that I was dead, I was seated in an adjoining room to the one I had previously occupied. Though weak, yet I was more free from pain than I had been for months.

I now submit this, prompted by no insignificant feelings of pride, but from a sense of duty, assuring the brethren and sisters that words are inadequate to express my profoundest and heartfelt gratitude for your prayers, and more than all toward the providential hand that has thus lifted me up. May God bless you all. May his truth predominate supremely, and may we be the instruments in his hand of leading many to the fold of the great Shepherd. Your Sr. in Christ,

Cambridge, Mass. MRS. THOS. TOUT.

From Bro. N. Warner.

BRO. GRANT:—Our beloved daughter Elizabeth is no more. She died last May, very suddenly. She had been unwell some six months, but we supposed she would get well up to the day of her death. She made a profession of religion at nine years of age, and had always lived the life of a christian. During her illness she seemed to enter upon a higher life; her Bible was her constant companion, and she conversed frequently upon the great truths contained therein. She expressed at times doubts of getting well, and said she was willing to die, if it could be the means of saving those near to her.

Her loss is a great one, but we sorrow not as those without hope. We know that God doeth all things well, and believing this we say "Thy will be done." Her age was twenty-seven years. Pray for us, that we may be enabled to bear up under this great affliction. Your Bro. in Christ, NOADIAH WARNER.

Ore Hill, Ct., Sept. 23d.

NEW YORK.

Let us come to New York, the great metropolitan city of the United States, where we find a million inhabitants on twenty-five square miles. Here one hundred thousand persons are every year arrested for misdemeanors and crimes; this being one criminal or vagabond to every ten of the whole number of people. Here is a grog shop for every one hundred inhabitants. Here are one hundred thousand children between the ages of five and sixteen who never enter a Sunday School; of these, forty thousand are unmannerly and filthy juviniles who roam the streets as paupers, vagabonds and heathen.

Here seven millions are annually spent for public amusements—circuses, theatres, etc. Here are ten thousand drinking saloons, gambling hells, ticket swindling shops, lottery dealing shops, houses of ill fame, obscene publishers, bogus hotels, and like places of vice, whose keepers swindle the community out of twelve millions every year. The places of amusement and vice cost fifteen times as much as the clergy, and over two millions are annually paid the police to keep the villians straight, and guard the city.

The cost of licentiousness to the city is ten millions yearly; there are twenty thousand prostitutes, with one hundred thousand persons annually treated by the medical profession for immoral diseases, and the number of persons annually infected by such diseases can not at the present time, according to Dr. Sanger's estimates, be less than four hundred thousand. The immoral and obscene, as well as blasphemous publications, are countless.

There are also five hundred and fifty thousand Roman Catholics, mostly foreigners, whose influence is adverse to true religion; with seventy-five thousand German infidels, also atheists, deists, and rationalists, besides a host of spiritualists, and added to these some forty thousand infidel Jews. The Tribune estimates there are in the city fifty thousand families of infidel and atheistical tendency, without a copy of God's word.

The judicial and municipal government of the city gets worse year by year. The city is controlled by corrupt men, and there seems no hope of remedy. In the words of H. W. Beecher, "All the frame work of society seems to be dissolving. On every side we find men false to the most important trusts. Even the judges on the bench are bought and sold like meat in the shambles. One must go into court with a long purse to obtain justice. The judiciary of New York stinks like Sodom and Gomorrah. Men say they hardly know a court in which to trust a case."

In New York, church-goers have declined thirty per cent., while theatres have increased fifty per cent., all within forty years. Eighty years ago when the population was only twenty three thousand, there was a place of worship for every thirteen hundred and fifty souls; now there is but one for every three thousand souls. In 1850, forty-one of every one hundred persons could be seated in her two hundred and fourteen churches, but in 1860 only thirty-one of every one hundred could be seated in her two hundred and fifty-three churches. Now there are three hundred and seventy-five churches and other places of worship in all the great city. These will seat less than four hundred thousand people; where are the other six hundred thousand? Shut out into the streets. No place to worship if they desired it, and, sorrowful to say, full half a million of these not desiring any. Half the population of the city shut out of God's house both by compulsion and free choice, to associate with irreligion, godliness and vice.

"Here," says the Evening Post, "are half a millon of people who never receive any ecclesiastical instruction, and to whom the preaching of the gospel is as strange as to the inhabitants of New Zealand or Ashantee." "A half a million of Pagans, within sound of the church bells of the metropolis," mournfully echoes the Christian Advocate.

But the most startling fact is yet to be stated. The christians in New York do not equal in number the harlots of London. Rev. Joseph Duryea says there are but sixty-four thousand communicants in all the Protestant churches in this greatest city on the western continent. Sixty-four thousand church members professing christianity at least—though hundreds do not possess it—to one million of people! Only one saved to fifteen or sixteen others who are unbelieving, unforgiven, and unsaved. A little better than London, but alas! the "saved" are indeed "few." Just think of it, over nine hundred thousand judgment-bound souls within a compass of twenty-five square miles, all in their sins and unprepared to meet God.—Ex.

HOBBS. Died, Sept. 25th, 1868, William E., only son of William and Betsey Hobbs, aged fourteen years and two months.

Naturally of a thoughtful but joyous turn of mind, and of a loving disposition, Willie won many friends. To his parents he was a source of comfort and joy, which causes them to feel deeply his loss. The Lord's prayer was understandingly recited by him nightly from his earliest childhood, and this he did until his voice became weakened by the disease from which he died. He believed, because so instructed, the truths which make us a peculiar people. The night before he died his father, while watching by his bedside, heard him murmuring in a weak voice this prayer—

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
Preserve my life till I awake,
And ever more, for Jesus' sake."

Bro. J. G. Hook attended the funeral. He spoke upon the Lord's Prayer.

"Oh when shall come the moment,
When brighter far than morn,
The sunshine of thy glory
Shall on thy people dawn?"

Bro. and Sr. H. believe that Jesus died and rose again, and that therefore those who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

KNOWLES. My dear husband, Elder John Knowles, suddenly fell asleep Sept. 25th, in Lawrence, Mass., aged sixty-three years.

He was visiting at his cousin's, Ransom Herriman. That day he went out as well as usual, said he was going over the hill by the reservoir, and then into the city; but it appears that he sat down to rest before he reached the reservoir, and fell forward on his face, and was found dead. It was thought his death was caused by heart disease, or apoplexy. Providentially I was at home when, in the evening, the dispatch came. O, what sad news! In that unexpected moment I was told I was again bereft of a dear companion, who was so kind and gentle.

He was brought home, and the funeral was attended by Eld. J. Harvey. Text, 2 Tim. 4: 6–8. I ask your prayers in my behalf in my affliction. The Lord has promised to be the widow's God and husband, and I claim that promise to-day.

MARY A. KNOWLES.

ARNOLD. Died in Groton, Conn., Aug. 23d, of typhoid fever, Hannah H., daughter of Geo. H. and Lydia Arnold, aged thirteen years.

Another lovely floweret, just budding into womanhood, is nipped by the untimely frost of death. Hannah was a good child, and like all good children loved her Sabbath school. Though but thirteen summers had dawned upon her pathway, yet she had given her heart to the Savior; and the tendrils of family affection had entwined themselves closely around the darling child, and are now riven with anguish for having been so ruthlessly torn from the loved object. May God sanctify this deep affliction to the bereaved ones, and fit them for a re-union with Hannah, in a land where faded flowers will have burst forth with immortal bloom and beauty. A. E. BENNETT.

WILLEY. Died in Chelsea, Mass., Oct. 3d, of consumption, Margaret A., wife of Frederick W. Willey, aged twenty-three years and ten months.

Sr. Willey professed faith in Christ some eight or nine years since, but subsequently went back into the world and lost her enjoyment in religion; but prior to her death she became conscious of her condition, and sought the Savior anew, and found peace in Christ, dying in hope of a better life at the resurrection morn. She was taken to Portsmouth (her native place) for interment; the funeral service conducted by the writer. Sermon (by request of the deceased) from 1 Cor. 15: 54, 55.

JOSEPH W. WHITE.

POOR. Died in Lawrence, Mass., Sept. 26th, Sr. Abby L. Poor, wife of Alonzo Poor, aged twenty-seven years and three months.

Sr. P. was converted some three or four months since, at Lawrence, where she died in the triumphs of faith, looking forward to a glorious immortality at the "resurrection of the just." She was taken to Dover, N. H., for interment, the funeral services being conducted by the writer. Sermon from Ps. 17: 15. JOSEPH W. WHITE.

COBURN. Died in Biddeford, Me., Sept. 28th, 1868, of typhoid fever, Louisa Coburn, aged twelve years, nine months, and eight days.

This dear child was forsaken by mother and all her relatives when but four years old, but the promise of God was true (Ps. 27: 10), "When my Father and mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up." She was a good girl, loved by all who knew her. The funeral was attended by the writer, who spoke from 2 Sam. 12: 23.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

MADRID, Oct. 6th. The Provisional Junta has requested Marshal Serrano to take charge of affairs until the meeting of the Cortes, and he has consented so to act, with Gen. Prim and Oslezago as his colleagues. The new Cabinet has not yet been completed.

Gen. Esculantra, a Democrat, has been placed in command of the National Guard.

It is daily becoming more evident that the great majority of the people are in favor of a Republican form of government for Spain.

The Duke of Vittoria and Count Cheste have declared that they will support the existing Provisional Junta.

MADRID, Oct. 7th. A Provisional Government has been organized. Serrano and Prim have been made honorary Presidents, and Aguirre acting President, and Itibero and Vigo Armago have been appointed Vice Presidents. Figuerola has been made Minister of Finance. It is said that Moro, formerly of Bravo's Cabinet, has given in his adhesion to the Provisional Junta. Sagosta Itivero, Losenzana and Agato have joined the Ministry.

MADRID, Oct. 8th. Gen. Prim was received in this city with unbounded enthusiasm. The crowd in the streets was so great that many people were crushed. Foreigners, soldiers, sailors and citizens escorted him to the capital.

PARIS, Oct. 9th. The Papal corvette "Concezione" has been ordered to Marseilles, to take on board the Queen of Spain.

MADRID, Oct. 9th. The Cubans in this city demand that their island be represented at the deliberations of the Provisional Junta.

MADRID, Oct. 9th. The Provisional Junta has made a declaration in favor of a civil code and religious liberty. It is recieved with enthusiasm, and extensive popular demonstrations have been made in Madrid—especially in favor of religious toleration.

Large numbers are idle in consequence of the political agitation, which has caused the temporary suspension of industry and labor in this city. But the Provisional Junta assures them that work will soon be provided for all who want it.

MADRID, 12. The United States is the first nation to recognize the new Provisional Government of Spain. The Madrid Gazette to-day publishes such official recognition, made through Mr. Hale, the American Minister.

The Junta has declared in favor of additional reforms, among which are the abolition of the death penalty and the sanctity of private letters and domiciles.

PARIS, 12. The Journal des Debats says that Lersundi, the Captain-General of Cuba, has given in his adhesion to the revolution. The Cubans of Spain will be permitted to choose two members of the Junta.

LONDON, 12. The Direction announces that the cable known as "the 1866 cable," between Ireland and Newfoundland, and was repaired at one o'clock, Sunday afternoon, and is now in perfect working order.

DOMESTIC.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8th. Gen. Sherman has telegraphed to Washington that he must have more troops immediately if the country does not wish to be plunged into a long and disastrous war with the Indians.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 8th. Three distinct shocks of earthquake were felt at Silver Mountain, in this State on the 6th inst., and the atmosphere was almost immediately filled with smoke.

THE RIOT IN LOUISIANA. NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 7th. Lieut. Lee of the Freedmen's Bureau, who was detailed to investigate the troubles in Opelousas, reports that the immediate cause of the outbreak was a personal difficulty between the Editor of the St. Landry Progress, a Republican paper, and their citizens, growing out of the publication of offensive articles. Bently, having been caned, a report was circulated among the negroes that he had been killed, and couriers were despatched to the neighboring plantation, and in a short time negroes, fully armed, were flocking into Opelousas. Several of these were met and persuaded to disperse by moderate men both colored and white. One body, however, led by a negro who called himself captain, refused to disperse when ordered to do so.

A fight ensued, in which two negroes were killed and four wounded. Five or six whites were wounded, two very severely, and a number of horses belonging to whites killed. The negro who called himself captain was killed. Eight of the negroes have been captured and lodged in jail and the balance dispersed. Official orders for disarming the negroes were enforced, though with difficulty, and the arms are in the hands of the authorities. Opelousas is now perfectly quiet. The material of the St. Landry Progress was scattered during the difficulties and a portion destroyed. A white man was killed by three negroes who were lying in ambush. The negroes were arrested and killed.

Another planter is reported to have been shot while sitting in his house. The trouble existed only in the Parish of St. Landry. The adjoining parishes are perfectly quiet. Lieut. Lee reports that as near as he could learn but two whites were killed and ten wounded, and five negroes killed and fifteen or twenty wounded. He expresses the opinion that the number of casualties will exceed these, as the negroes in some instances resisted disarming and had to be overpowered. Bently was the only white Radical who suffered, and he only in the loss of his printing material and the caning he received. No further trouble is apprehended. The white inhabitants of the parish outnumber the blacks. Armed mounted patrols, however, are still kept up.

SUBSIDENCE OF THE SANDWICH ISLANDS. A correspondent of the New York Tribune says the Island of Hawaii is apparently settling slowly into the sea. This uncomfortable phenomenon was first noticed soon after the great earthquakes of last April; but the derangement of level was at first supposed to be temporary and due to the tidal wave, which would recede in due course of time. It soon became apparent, however, that the crust of the earth was yielding and allowing the greater part of the island, which has an area of no less than four thousand square miles, to settle gradually towards the centre. The island has settled on its whole coast line but chiefly on its southern and western shores, where the depression amounts to several feet; elsewhere it is but a few inches, though enough to cause the overflowing of the low lands.—Journal. Oct. 3d.

SURVEY OF THE PENINSULA OF SINAI.—It is proposed by the officers of the Sinai expedition sent out by the British Ordnance Office to make a survey, on a scale of six inches to the mile, of the various mountains which different authorities have held to be the true "Mount Sinai"; and also a survey, on the scale of one inch to the mile, of the country between the head of the Gulf of Suez and those mountains—that is, the country through which the Israelites must have marched as they passed through the Wilderness. The primary object of the expedition will of course be the survey of the country; but the famous Siniatic rock inscriptions will also be carefully examined, and a collection of photographs and impressions of them will be made with a view to their interpretation.

These inscriptions are believed by many persons (says Mr. F. W. Holland, in a letter to the London Times), to have been the work of the Israelites during their sojourn in the wilderness. If they are so, it is a matter of the utmost importance to collect such valuable proofs of the truth of the Bible history.

Items.

☞ The Catholic clergy in Bohemia have taken decided grounds against the Austrian Government in reference to the abolition of the Concordat. The Bishops have issued instructions to their clergy about the new marriage laws, in which the "Catholics living in civil marriage" are called "public sinners;" outcasts to whom no absolution can be vouchsafed, for whom no mass is to be read, and who are in no wise to be admitted as godfathers or godmothers.

☞ Among the wealthy foreign residents of Paris are fifty negro and mulatto families who hold intercourse with a great many aristocratic French families on terms of perfect equality.

☞ The Pope is said to be the only sovereign in Europe who does not smoke.

☞ As a sign of progress the St. Petersburg papers report the gradual abolition of the "hereditary clergy." Up to a recent date every clergyman was forced to send his son to clerical schools and seminaries, to educate him, in fact, for the church, whether he liked it or not. This institution of a clerical caste is now to be abolished.

☞ A Worcester gentleman has picked a second growth of strawberries from his vines this season, some of them fully ripe.

☞ A mandate from the Bishop of Latz against the execution of the confessional laws in Austria was recently seized and suppressed by the Minister of the Interior. It is thought a law will be passed forbidding such publications without the consent of the sovereign. This would be another serious blow to the concordat.

☞ We find it stated that about one hundred tons of rain per acre fell in the month of September.

☞ The Emperor of Russia has issued an ukase, which prohibits the practice of homeopathy in any part of the Russian Empire, under pain of a fine of five hundred roubles and two years transportation to Siberia.

☞ An American (of course an American) is driving an omnibus over the new macadamized road from Jaffa to Jerusalem.

☞ In many of the Swiss cantons the formalities preceding marriage are so onerous that a legitimate union is often inaccessible to modest purses. The Constituent Assembly of Zurich, after having voted by an immense majority the introduction of the optional civil ceremony, has abolished all taxes hitherto imposed on those who wish to be united; the latter in future will only have to pay some trifling fees. The intervention of functionaries and ecclesiastics in the celebration of the rite is to be gratuitous.

☞ The deposed queen of Spain has invested most of her money in England, thus following the example of her mother, who left the throne of Spain with a mighty fortune, and of her cousin Francis II., of Naples, who placed millions enough in foreign countries to make him one of the rich men of Europe.

☞ Prince Napoleon is a strong friend of Gen. Prim's, and the two, with the assistance of the Emperor Napoleon, propose to unite Spain and Portugal under one government.

☞ A Congress of the Deaf and Dumb is to be held in Berlin the present month, the principal object being to discover a substitute for the "finger language."

☞ The Crimean war arose out of a silly quarrel concerning the privileges of certain parties to use one of the holy places in Jerusalem for worship; and now the demand by Russia that the key to the Holy Sepulchre, now held by the Consul of France, be submitted to the joint custody of the representatives of Russia and France, may lead to another war of equally trivial origin.

☞ The desertions from the Papal army have lately been so numerous that a plan of reform has been submitted to the Pope, which provides that only those shall henceforth be enrolled as soldiers under the banners of the church who will take upon themselves the vows of chastity, poverty, and obedience.

☞ Wickliffe, the "Morning Star of the Reformation," fell dead in the midst of a sermon.

☞ In Swedish Lapland one single parish is often as large as some kingdoms. That of Gallivare, for instance, contains one hundred and fifty-two square miles. Many of the inhabitants live at such a distance from their church that they are obliged to start on Thursday to attend divine service on the Sabbath. Thus the complete liturgy is only celebrated once a month. The congregation is then always most numerous. On these occasions the affairs of the world are also brought under consideration; arrangements are made; purchases are concluded—in fact a species of fair is held.

Massachusetts Quarterly Conference.

By invitation of the Second Advent Church in Chelsea, the next State Quarterly Conference of the Society will be held in Chelsea, Mass., at Library Hall, commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 20th, continuing daily and over the following Sunday. It is to be hoped we shall have a general gathering of all the faithful in this region. We will do our best for you, both temporally and spiritually. Come, both delegates and all, that have an interest in the salvation of men at the coming of Christ. Some business of importance will come before us. Preaching the first evening. E. OWEN, Sec'y.

Advent Christian State Conf. of N. H.

The annual session of this conference for 1868 will be held at Lake Village, N. H., commencing Oct. 15th, and hold over the following Sunday.

It is hoped that churches will be represented by delegates, so that we may know the condition of the churches and the cause in New Hampshire. Each church is entitled to send one delegate, and those numbering over twenty-five members can send two.

Arrangements have been made with the Manchester and Lawrence, Portsmouth and Concord, and Boston and Montreal rail roads, so that persons who pay full fare to the meeting may have free return tickets to the stations at which they started. Return tickets will be furnished at the meeting by the Secretary. Those coming to the meeting via. of Concord, must purchase tickets to Concord, and then pay in the cars from Concord to Lake Village. A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

The New Hampshire Tent.

To the brethren and friends of New Hampshire, in favor of having a tent to carry the gospel of the kingdom into new places, I would say, at the Alton Bay campmeeting it was found that enough had been raised by Bro. D. M. Leavitt, and others, except about one hundred dollars, to obtain a tent; therefore the brethren decided to purchase one at once, and have it in the field, believing the friends would soon send in the remainder. A committee of three was also chosen to see that the tent was judiciously run, and they to receive what the friends wished to give to make up what was lacking. Bro. T. H. Ford of Concord, Bro. John Shorey of East Rochester, and myself, were chosen said committee. Bro. Ford is Treasurer, but money can be handed to either, and we will see that it is appropriated as designed. If it is more convenient to send it by brethren to the State Conference, to be held at Lake Village, commencing Oct. 15th, you can do so. J. G. SMITH.

Conference.

If the Lord will, there will be a conference at Week's Mills, China, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 22d, and continue over Sunday. Preachers and all are invited to come and earnestly engage in the work of the Lord, that sinners may be saved and God's name be glorified. Homes will be provided for all. Strangers may call on Geo. Jackson, Albert Chapman, and Alton Doe. For the brethren, JER. CARR.

Dedication Notice.

There will be a two days meeting on Locust Hill, in the town of Windsor, Broome Co., N. Y., Oct. 23d to 25th. A new church is to be dedicated to the worship of God. Dedication sermon to be preached by the writer, Oct. 25th, at 10½ A. M. All are invited to attend. Teams will meet the cars at Great Bend, Oct. 24th. Let all wishing to be met, write to O. B. Wilmot, so that all can be provided with conveyance, and that the brethren may know what trains to meet. C. F. SWEET.

Conference.

Providence permitting, there will be a conference on New Durham Ridge, to commence Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, and hold over the following Sunday. Brn. J. Couch, A. Ross, and others, are expected. We wish to make one more effort to advance God's cause and save the perishing. Let prayer go up to God for his blessing.

For the brethren, J. G. SMITH.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, the meeting under the Mass. Mission Tent at Lexington Place, on Lexington street, near Meridian, East Boston, will be continued through this week, and over Sunday, Oct. 18th. The interest is good. Brethren and sisters in Boston and vicinity are requested to come over and help us. ENOCH MORRILL.

Conference.

The Missouri A. C. Quarterly Conference will be held at the Advent Christian Hall, corner of Fifth and Biddle streets, commencing Saturday, Oct. 24th, at ten o'clock A. M., and continue two days, Saturday and Sunday.

By order of the Board, HIRAM BEADLE, Sec.

Notice.

There will be a meeting of days at Hollis Centre, Me., commencing Thursday evening, October 29th, and continue over the Lord's day. T. P. S. Hampson, Wm. H. Mitchell, and others, are expected to preach the word. Come all that can to this meeting, and homes will be provided for all.

TIMOTHY S. CARLL.

Notice.

I would say to the brothers and sisters who may be looking for me, that I shall be unable to attend my meetings now, as I am called home to take care of my father, who is sick with a cancer in his side. H. S. MITCHELL.

Notice.

The Lord willing, the New Hampshire Mission Tent will be pitched in Sandwich Centre, Oct. 21st, to continue as the Lord directs. Services to commence at 4½ o'clock P. M. An invitation is given to all to come. If it is bad weather, we will procure a hall. Elds. T. W. Piper, W. J. Hobbs, and others, will be present with the writer to preach the word. D. M. LEAVITT.

Dixfield Tent Meeting.

The Maine Mission Tent will be pitched in Dixfield Village, to begin meetings, Thursday P. M., at 2 o'clock, Oct. 15th, and continue as long as thought best. The small tent will be pitched for the accommodation of brethren who may come prepared to board themselves. I. C. WELLCOME.

Conference.

The Lord willing, we purpose to hold a conference in Bangor, Me., commencing October 29th, and to hold over the following Sabbath. We hope all of the brothers and sisters will come who are willing to work for the Lord.

In behalf of the Church, J. M. JEWETT.

Notice.

There will be a meeting at the Dennett schoolhouse in Bowdoin, to commence Thursday evening, Oct. 22nd, and hold over Sunday. Bro. E. M. Haggett is expected to be there. H. D. REED.

Notice.

To the brethren and sisters scattered abroad, who are interested in the Star of Hope Mission: Sr. Anna E. Smith, Superintendent, can procure the full report of her labors and expenses for the past twelve months, which is got up in pamphlet form. Single copies 15 cents, by the dozen $1.25. The proceeds, after paying the printer's bills, etc., will go to defray the expenses of the mission. They can be had by sending to ANNA E. SMITH, 14 Laurens Street, New York, or to H. L. HASTINGS, Scriptural Tract Repository, Boston.

Notice.

Wm. B. Bennett, a young man seventeen years old, wants to get a good chance to do chores and go to school the coming winter, in some locality where he can attend meeting. He is now at work in Bro. Hastings' office in Boston, 19 Lindall St. Please address him there immediately.

H. MUNGER.

Wm. B. Bennett has been in my employ for some time, and is an active, willing, and reliable young man. H. L. HASTINGS, Ed. of the Christian.

Notice.

Having been released from all contracts and arrangements of public labor, I am now at liberty to go wherever the door may be opened. Application must be made soon. Address Eld. PETER S. W. DEYO, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

Notice.

Our meetings in South Boston, for the worship of God, will be held hereafter at "Fraternity Hall," No. 120 Broadway, every Sunday, the Lord willing. Come over and help us.

J. N. BERRY, Secretary.

Notice.

Those at the west wishing books, tracts, or charts, can be supplied at Rochester, N. Y., by addressing Dr. J. Metatrore, (Eagle Block) Rochester, N. Y.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

JUST AS THOU ART.

Just as thou art—without one trace
Of love, or joy, or inward grace,
Or meetness for the heavenly place,
O, guilty sinner, come.

Thy sins I bore on Calvary's tree;
The stripes thy due were laid on me,
That peace and pardon might be free;
O, wretched sinner, come.

Burdened with guilt wouldst thou be blessed?
Trust not the world, it gives no rest;
I bring relief to hearts oppressed—
O, weary sinner, come.

Come, leave thy burden at the cross;
Count all thy gains but empty dross;
My grace repays all earthly loss—
O, needy sinner, come.

Come, hither bring thy 'boding fears,
Thy aching heart, thy bursting tears;
'Tis mercy's voice salutes thine ears,—
O, trembling sinner, come.

"The Spirit and the Bride say, come";
Rejoicing saints re-echo, come;
Who faints, who thirsts, who will may come;
Thy Savior bids thee come.

For the World's Crisis.

A PEEP INTO THE EVERY-DAY LIFE OF A CHRISTIAN FAMILY.

"Joined by God in wedlock's holy bonds, they walk no more alone,
Each shares the sorrow and the joys, the labor and reward."

It is sweet to have fellowship and communion with those we love, and all who love God seem very near and dear to each other; but this holy union of husband and wife is more sublime and perfect than any other union of mortals; and when based upon the precepts of the Bible, there is joy, beauty and power. No jars or want of confidence, no disposition to go on or act alone in any matter; neither thinks it beneath their dignity to consult with or be influenced by the other in anything; all is harmony and good will, as in the family of my friends A—— and E——, who have given their hearts to Jesus, and to each other, and are just setting out on the journey of married life.

"This will be the beginning of days to us, my dear wife, as we are to establish a home alone by ourselves. Is there any thing in it unpleasant to you, E——?"

"O, no! I anticipate nothing but happiness in my husband's pleasant society, and the sweet spirit of Jesus."

"I am glad you feel so; and lest I may fail to be all I should be, both to God and to you, let us seek the blessing of God, and the righteousness of Jesus Christ."

"O, my dear husband, it is so good of you to anticipate my every wish. I was feeling away down in my heart a strong desire to commit this, with every other way, unto the Lord, that he may direct our paths, and go with us wherever we go. Together, then, we'll seek first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness." And their prayers were as sweet incense before the throne of God.

Seated in their comfortable carriage, on an early spring morning, they set out for their new home.

"Dear A——, we had such a sweet time with God in prayer this morning, it makes me wish that every one would taste and see that the Lord is good."

"Just so, my dear wife; and we will see what we can do to bring sinners to Christ. Yes, and if the Lord will go before us, we will do well to follow."

"Yes, E——, and how comforting to know that when our Savior putteth his own sheep forth, he goeth before them. We will have time to drive around the outskirts of our neighborhood, and get some knowledge of its inhabitants."

"Indeed, A——, I would like it very much."

A pleasant drive they had through several lanes and by places; spoke a kind word to many persons; told them of their residence, and invited them to call in and get acquainted. Thus an opening was made on the first day for doing good. They went to their future home full of love to God and man, communing by the way, till their hearts burned with a holy zeal. On entering their new habitation, they retired to a private apartment, and together bowed their knees in humble prayer and thanksgiving, dedicating their house and themselves anew to the service of the Lord.

"Well, wife, I think this day has been not very pleasant, but a profitable one. Truly, these You must be tired, and should rest; while I can with J—— (their hired man) help make things comfortable for the night, and in the morning, I think we will have no trouble in finding some one to help you in the house."

"Yes, A——, some tired, but not too tired to put our sitting-room in order for family worship, and for receiving any one who may call. We have J——, you know, to begin with."

"True, dear, and I propose that this very night the family altar be set up in our house."

"That is just my mind; and I can not express the joy I feel in finding you anticipate my wishes. Have you any plan, A——, for conducting these seasons of worship?"

"Well, yes, I think the very name family worship implies that all should so engage in it as to get and do good; and you, my dear wife, select and sing or read a hymn first, then all present join in reading a verse or two in turn from the Bible, with such remarks as are edifying; then all kneel in prayer, yourself showing quite often that access to God's throne is free to all, by taking part in vocal prayer; and let us do all we can to lead all who come under our roof to take a part with us."

"So I will; I like your plan, and will do all I can to make it a blessing to all. Is J—— a professor of religion?"

"From a remark I heard him make, I think he is an opposer. He may not like to meet with us in family worship; but all who live with us must conform to the rules of our house."

"What had we better say to him to-night?"

"Let us in our hearts commit this to the Lord, while preparing our simple repast."

When all were seated, the blessing of God was asked, in words so simple and yet with such power, that J—— was quite taken by surprise; and the cordial good will with which he was served, mingled with manifest interest in his comfort and welfare, so far disarmed him of his prejudice, that he complied with our friends' wishes, when told that it was to be a rule in their family that all who lived with them should share in the privileges of the family altar, which they were now going to set up.

"You will please have a seat with us in the sitting-room; and here is a copy of God's word. Will you please to accept it as a gift from myself and wife?"

The sweet lines beginning with—
"God's tender mercies follow still," were then sung, and so pressing an invitation for J—— to take a part in the 23d Psalm, which followed, that he could only excuse himself by saying he would read next time.

"And you will kneel with us in prayer to-night?" urged E——.

J—— answered in the affirmative, before he had time to consider how at variance such doings were with his previous determination; but the promise was made, and J—— bowed his knees in prayer for the first time for many long years. That act, and the short but earnest appeals to the God of heaven and earth, made such an impression on his heart as to destroy his peace, and he left with a feeling of awe at the power of religion entirely new to him.

"Come, E——, let us sit by this window in this beautiful twilight, and recount the mercies of the day. I think it was a word in season when you asked J—— to kneel in prayer to-night. There is some reason for believing the Holy Spirit is at work with him. I trust ere long good results will follow our humble endeavors to obey God's word."

"It does seem, dear A——, as if the Lord had gone before us to-day, and directed all our way."

"Let me tell you, E——, what a struggle I had about enjoining it upon J—— to attend family worship. I had seen enough of him to know he is a strong-minded and resolute man, able and apparently willing to do good service; just what we particularly need, you know. So fearing we might lose him, I was strongly tempted to set aside our rule in his case; but, 'thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ,' in the little time we were to spend in silent prayer, while arranging our food, I was enabled to lay all upon the altar, and trust in God."

"Truly, husband, we will praise and thank the Lord and take courage. Do you not see that lad slowly repassing our yard? May be he wishes to speak with you. I will light the lamp, that he may know we are here."

The lamp was soon lit, and presently a low knock was heard at the door, and this same lad was invited in.

"I came," he said, "to see if you wished to have my sister to work for you?"

"We are strangers here, and know nothing about your sister; but I think, wife, we would like to see and talk with her about it. Shall we invite her to come in, in the morning?"

"I would like well to see her. You may tell her this. Will you give us your name?" said E——.

"My name is P—— F——, but that is not my sister's name; since she was married her name is S—— D——."

"Your sister, then, is much older than yourself?"

"Yes, ma'am. Good night."

"Come in again. Good night."

"Well, A——, it seems almost as if we were to have help without even asking for it; but ought we not to consider this matter a little?"

"Well, my dear, what have you to say?"

"I was thinking I might do the work for our small family, by occasionally hiring a day's work; and then, you know our expenses would be less."

"And would it not keep you at work nearly all the time?"

"I suppose it would; but I am young, and able to do a good deal."

"Yes, E——, and I know, too, that being so closely confined to household duties, you will lose many opportunities in the way of winning souls to Christ, and you may not have leisure for our own mutual improvement in ways which you know are of almost daily occurrence. I think we had better curtail expense in almost any other way, than rob ourselves of the many blessings it is our privilege to enjoy."

"True, A——, and I am willing to live as simply and unpretending as will please you."

"See here, wife, let us consider this a little. I think our means will allow us to use, this year, $—— for expenses in the house, including hired help; and I wish to be relieved of all the care which of right belongs to my wife. You know it is for you to guide the house. You will greatly oblige me by taking full charge of this amount, and 'guide the house' according to the 'ability which God giveth.' And here are $—— for us to use in acts of charity; and let us add to it, as the Lord shall prosper us."

"I like that, and I assure you, dear husband, it gives me pleasure to share and relieve your cares; but I almost fear to take this responsibility without your co-operation and advice."

"My dear, you shall have it. We will consult each other with the greatest freedom. This is put into your hands, that you may lay your plans without embarrassment, and carry them out understandingly. I felt that my heart could safely trust in you before we were married, and I more than feel it now."

"It makes me happy, my dear husband, to be thus honored, and it shall be my study to show myself worthy of it. I wish now to 'enter that closet,' which I have chosen for my place of secret prayer, and commit this to the Lord; and then let us go to rest."

"Do so, dearest, while I will profit by your example, and take the opposite one for the same purpose." And with a "kiss of charity" they enter their closets and shut to the doors, and pray to their Father who seeth in secret, and their Father who seeth in secret rewards them openly; and they go to rest in "perfect peace."

Happy in the Lord and each other's love they behold the morning, refreshed and ready "for every good word and work." E—— is dressed in "modest apparel," and A—— with careful reference to the anticipated business of the day. Just as they had finished reading in family worship, the sister spoken of came and was kindly received by E——, who soon told her, "We love the great God who made us, and we make it our first business to seek his blessing; will you come and join us?"

As they enter the sitting-room, A—— greets her kindly, and in few words gives a reason for their thus honoring God, and invites every one to come "and make known their wants by prayer and thanksgiving." Then all knelt in prayer. A thrill of holy longings shot through the hearts of J—— and S—— as they listen to those two short, simple but earnest prayers from the hearts of our friends. This ended, S—— said,

"I was intending to go far from this place to-day; but when I heard you talk so kindly to my folks yesterday, I thought if I could live with you, it would be better for me than to go away, and I have come to see if you will hire me."

"Were you ever hired out any where?"

"Yes, ma'm, three years in one place before I was married, and over a year for Mrs. ——, since my husband went off, and I have never heard from him since; but I can get no comfort for my poor heart in that place. Now if you may please to hire me, I will try to do you good service. I can do nearly all kinds of work."

A——, a little one side, "I believe, wife, you will like her."

"Then, husband, I think I will try her."

"Well, and I will leave you to arrange this, while I go to my work in the garden."

"Mrs. —— gave me $—— a month, but I will serve you for a trifle less," said S——.

"No, S——, I will hire you one month for that, in which time we will become acquainted, and may wish to make another contract."

It would be very pleasant to follow our friends, as they go on from strength to strength, their influence widening. As a pebble cast upon the smooth lake produces eddies which enlarge until they reach the shore, so their influence is felt for good to the end of time. The wife is a "crown to her husband," and he obeys the apostle Peter: "Likewise, ye husbands, dwell with her [your wife] according to knowledge, giving honor unto the wife as unto the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life; that your prayers be not hindered." Their "children are an heritage from the Lord," and as "olive plants around their table." They are "diligently" taught the words of God, both by precept and example. The wife loves to "reverence her husband," and feels a pleasure in obeying him. Their hired help soon learn to love the God they love,—feel at home with their employers, and continue with them, as "faithful and wise stewards" in this christian household. They honor God with their substance, and "seek that honor which cometh from God only." The Lord goes before them and directs all their way; cares for them, and provides for all their wants.

Here we see it exemplified that "wisdom's ways are ways of pleasantness; and all her paths are peace."

E. A. B. B.

For the World's Crisis.

"A LITTLE THING."

A WORD TO FASHIONABLE PROFESSORS.

"O germ! O fount! O word of love!
O thought at random cast!
Ye were but little at the first,
But mighty at the last."

A little thing, is it? Well, friends, if it be a little thing, why not give it up? Is is not easier to give up a little thing, than a great thing? But how can you call that a little thing which the Lord forbids? The wearing of gold, pearls, or costly array are forbidden in Scripture as positively as that of covetousness, theft, or fornication, and yet you violate this positive precept, and call it a little thing? See 1 Tim. 2: 9; 1 Pet. 3: 4. "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams: for rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry." 1 Sam. 15: 22.

2. Nor does the evil stop here. Aside from this disobedience, this open rebellion against God, your example of wearing gold, ornamental and costly apparel, is pernicious, a stumbling-block to others, an unsafe precedent—grievous! This example of yours, instead of being salutary, on the side of virtue, gospel purity and simplicity, is on the side of vice and impurity.

And what saith the Lord to him who offends, or causes others to stumble? "It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea." Matt. 18: 6. Paul says: "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." 1 Cor. 8: 13. The example is bad every way. If the wealthy wear jewelry and costly apparel, the poor will endeavor to follow the example. How many have been led into dishonesty and crime by such examples!

"Fond pride of dress is sure a very curse,
Ere fancy you consult, consult your purse,
Or else consult your heart with care, and see
Before your God, if guiltless you would be."

3. Again it is a criminal expenditure of property over which God has placed us as stewards, and for which we must soon render an account. The amount of these gay and costly ornamentals, worse than useless, calculated to gratify self-love, cherish sentiments of vanity and pride, might be disposed of for benevolent purposes, in honoring God in the salvation of souls, "to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, relieve the sick, enlighten the dark-minded, disseminate the Holy Scriptures, spread the glorious gospel throughout the world."

"To tents of woe, to beds of pain,
Your cheerful feet repair;
And with the gifts your hands bestow,
Relieve the miseries there."

4. The wearing of fashionable adornments greatly injures you in the estimation of all the truly wise and good. It is evident to them there is more or less of pride and vanity in your heart: they see it and are grieved at your folly.

5. It greatly lessens your influence for good. What influence in the salvation of souls have you, while tipped off in jewelry and gay artificials? What awakened or dying sinner ever solicits the prayers of a proud, fashionable, worldly-minded church-member? The prayers and exhortations of such an one, are "as the crackling of thorns under a pot."

Ungodly sinners say, "We don't see but that these christian men and women love to follow the fashions as well as we do." Who does not know that this leads many to infidelity?

6. By following the fashions you are tempting God to give you up entirely to a worldly spirit. President Finney, alluding to this wicked, worldly conformity, says: "There are many now that have followed the world, and followed the fashions, till God seems to have given them over to the devil for the destruction of the flesh. They have little or no religious feeling, no spirit of prayer, no zeal for the glory of God, or the conversion of sinners, the Holy Spirit seems to have withdrawn from them."

Finally: "Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy." 1 Cor. 3: 16.

"Adorning self with so much art
Is but a savage show;
Or like the polishing of a dart,
Too apt, before, to kill."

— With men you keep accounts; every item is entered in your day-book that it may not be forgotten; but what you do for one of the least of Christ's disciples, if it be giving no more than a cup of cold water, is entered in God's book of remembrance, "and shall in no wise lose its reward."

NEWS FROM ROME.

We take the following from the Catholic Standard of Oct. 3d:

General Garibaldi's refusal to join any longer in the parliamentary action of Italy is evidently a cover to other and more active modes of obtaining the object of his party. For some time past the presence of the iron-clad fleet in the waters of Caprera has been a subject of comment, and the enmity evinced by the General to the Admiral de Viry, who commanded it, went so far as to induce him to refuse a visit, and Menotti Garibaldi did the honors of Caprera to the Admiral. "Were I twenty years younger" said the General, "the iron-clad fleet would do little towards keeping me here." The Figaro publishes a letter from Mazzini and Garibaldi, saying that the hour of action is very near, and is certain that the party are reorganizing their forces for a final blow.

The Italian Government on the other hand, is doing all in its power to obtain the removal of the French troops from Rome, and especially has put in requisition the services of the representatives of the great heretical or schismatical Powers—Prussia and Russia. It is said that Menabrea has also earnestly requested Lord Stanley to repair to Florence after his visit to her Majesty at Lucerne, to study the question on the spot. If our able Minister of Foreign Affairs has ordinary facilities for doing so afforded him, he will see the utter impossibility on the part of the Italian Government of avoiding a financial, and, consequently, a political catastrophe, and that the sole element of order and stability is contained in the little territory which still acknowledges the sway of St. Peter.

The present system of high-pressure taxation, of conscriptions far beyond the measure of even the most warlike countries, and the utter negation of honor and honesty in public men of every department are ample reasons for fearing a national disaster of which the physical results will be the least terrible. The fathers of families of even the most revolutionary type are forced to withdraw their sons from the Lyceums, where they state in public journals nothing is taught save vice, and where study itself is sacrificed to the ceaseless military exercises exacted from the pupils. The education now being given to thousands of unhappy youths is the most terrible feature in the whole business; what the next generation of Italians will be it is awful to contemplate, and would be even more so were it not for the ceaseless efforts of the religious bodies to establish, even under every sort of difficulty, the means of furnishing a christian education to the youth of Italy. The Jesuits' colleges of Feldkirk in the Italian Tyrol, of Maddragone, and Civita Castellana, in the Roman States, are filled with the sons of Italian families of the revolutionized provinces.

These are among the many motives which make one hope that the triumph of the church may be accomplished soon, and at any cost of life. The loss of souls, which is inevitable if the present state of things continues, is so dreadful as to make every reflecting Catholic shudder at what his indifference, his want of zeal, and of love of the church is permitting, and this consideration should move many who merely regard the temporal power and the restoration of the Pope as political and open questions. Every year that passes sees so many atheist schools—so many shameless academies of vice and impiety—opened in Italy; and this is a matter which, once effected, there is no repairing. Those who remember what was the state of religion in France after the revolution, will best realize what is preparing for Italy, and will best judge of the importance of a prompt and vigorous course of action among the Catholic people of Europe to stem the tide which is certain sooner or later to overwhelm every land which has encouraged it in other countries.

General Kanzler has ordered the raising of the camp of Rocca di Papa for considerations of health, and the Zouaves will consequently return very shortly to their quarters in Rome, and the country garrisons.

Cardinal Reisach's affair continues to afford great food for comment to the Italian journals, but it is scarcely probable the legal proceedings will be carried out, as the results of the inquiry already instituted by the Royal Procurator is that Cardinal Reisach was invited to Magliano by the municipaliiy itself, with the full knowledge of the Florentine authorities, and in concert with all the principal inhabitants of the province. His Eminence has visited Monte Rotondo and the other towns of the Sabine diocese, and has been admirably received in all. Everywhere he has distributed the most generous alms, and visited the hospitals, the poor schools, and the other pious establishments.

Although out of my sphere of correspondence, I may mention, on undoubted authority, that orders have been given this week by the French Minister of War to clear away all the cottages, barns, and hedges within the zone of the Fortress of Metz. This is a certain indication of war, the order not having been given since the invasion of France by the allies in 1814. Metz, being on the Russian frontier, is in the first zone of fortifications. In Franche Compte, Lorraine, and Alsac, war is looked on as a certainty.

Such an eventuality will, of course, affect Rome, and it is more than probable that a Garibaldian raid, of a most formidable description, backed by the Italian army, would ensue almost immediately. It is then that France will, if she knows her own interests, re-occupy Ancona in the name of the Pope, and restore the right of recalling Francis II. to the southern provinces. The object of the visit of the Count and Countess of Girgenti to Paris is understood to be an alliance between Spain and France to aid the Holy Father and the deposed princes, in case of an alliance between Prussia and Italy.—Cor. of the London Weekly Register.

THE SICK ROOM.

Often in the experience of a life-time we hear words repeated which it is said the inhabitants of "the better land" shall never say, to wit, "I am sick." Some are sick all the while; poor, bed-ridden, suffering ones, whom God has "chosen in a furnace of affliction." Some are suddenly prostrated by fever, when the cheek is flushed, the eye dull and heavy, and the blood, like a burning fiery flood, rushes madly through its channels; or some other of the thousand "ills which flesh is heir to" seizes poor humanity, and the victim is obliged to be confined to the sick room. Hence no question is of more importance—except that which queries how to keep well—than that relating to the proper care of the sick and the sick room; that they who suffer may get well. Hence we have taken our pen to say a few words with reference to the matter; to offer a few suggestions, hoping to excite more interest in the careful attention to this matter, since

"On such a brittle thread
Our poor weak life is hung."

Some understand this question so well, they do not need to have their duty even "hinted" at, while others need "line upon line, and precept upon precept; here a little, and there" much, very much.

The following simple rules will present the case as fairly as we wish to present it, and will answer our purpose.

RULE 1. The room itself should be as roomy as possible; clean, and well ventilated, that the patient may have pure air without exposure to strong currents of air, or extremes by sudden changes, or by having at any time the room as "hot as an oven," and at another "as cold as a barn"; but simply a steady, temperate heat, when the weather will admit of it. There is no reason why the sick room should be a close, hot, stifling place, the air fetid and offensive enough to make a well person sick; neither is it necessary to have the room lumbered with whatever may chance to get into it. The room should be kept clean; only such furniture in it as is necessary to the comfort of the sick one, and every cloth of every description, table covers, etc., absolutely clean.

To illustrate the matter we state that we have a friend who was for years an invalid. Her kind, careful mother, so fearful lest a breath of air should reach the invalid, and she take cold, kept heavy quilts hung at all the doors leading out of the room, every window carefully and securely closed, and a fire sufficient to keep the room more than temperate, and the heated air sultry and close. The good mother died after a time, and then the quilts were taken down, the invalid left more to the care of others, and was allowed fresh air. Ere long she began to recover, and although in those years her prospects of future usefulness were under a cloud, she is now strong and well, with the care of a farm-house, with its dairy, etc. The change no doubt is attributable in part, at least, to the hygienic treatment she received.

It is sometimes difficult to regulate these matters owing to circumstances; but although the family should be crowded away in a corner room, or driven to the barn, even, and the sick one allowed the largest room, or the only room in the house, there must be attention to these matters; and after giving the room as thorough a cleansing (if it is not at first clean and neat) as water and air can make it, let the sufferer occupy it, and let it be kept pure by disinfectants, flowers, and the like.

RULE 2. The bed should be thoroughly clean, and kept so. Nothing uncleanly about a sick bed should be tolerated. If the clothes of well persons need to be frequently changed and cleansed, those about a sick person need to be much more. Filthy garments are enough to breed disease in well persons, and they will certainly aggravate it in the sick. Change your sheets every day, and be careful to have all fresh clothing about the bed free from dampness and cold; just right to produce a pleasant sensation when the patient enjoys them after being put in bed. If the patient is too sick to sit up, some means should be devised for a change. Have, for instance, two beds in the room, and keep the extra one in readiness. Lift the sick one on sheets and transfer to the clean bed; this will be practicable, at least with some, and then if the patient cannot sit up long enough to have the bed made, he can enjoy the comforts of a change. The clothing of the patient should be simple, and so made as to be easily changed without discomfort or worry, and a daily change must be attended to.

RULE 3. The patient should be bathed often. A sponge bath of tepid water should be used, and after this with a dry sponge wipe the moisture from the body, and then, and frequently at other times, use the hand, and by gentle, brisk manipulations, induce circulation. This will remove obstructions from the skin, make it soft and roseate, and produce healthy action, by exciting the stagnant secretions to act through the proper channels.

RULE 4. Let a demeanor of quiet pleasantness characterize those who are attendants, or nurses to the sick. Too much bustle is injurious, and may be fatal. And so also of a spirit of impatience, or fretfulness. Let the patient be what he may, or as he may, the steady uniformity of such a course is advisable, and will lead to the best results. Those who have the care of the sick should understand their work, and know just what to do; not being mere bunglers, but able to comprehend the situation, and naturally fill their proper place. Hence there should be a sympathy with the patient, such as will lead the nurse to self-sacrifice, and unremitting, solicitous efforts to make the sick bed and room as comfortable as possible; and none but those who feel this and will do so, can properly understand what is required of them. Soft, soothing words, or silence, are often better than medicine; and the nurse, when what he or she should be, is of more importance to the recovery of the sick than the best physician. We should recommend all who occupy the place to be faithful christians, and fully devoted to their arduous task. We admire the heroic wife, whose husband was near the gates of death. Her own heart was bleeding and broken, but she carefully avoided while in his presence any show of her grief or anxiety. She was unwearied in her attention, and nothing that affection and tenderness could suggest or do was left undone. And when at last the cold sweat stood on his brow, and death came, she closed his eyes and lips, and just as the last spark of consciousness went out, she stooped and imprinted a kiss on his lips, and cheerfully said, "Good bye, Georgie." But when he had breathed his last, overcome by the blow, and her efforts to overcome her emotions in the trying hour, she sunk weak and fainting to the floor, and was borne away to another room.

Whether the nurse has such trials as this, or otherwise, all should be done in the sick room that can be, so that every life may be saved that possibly can be, whereas now and always many precious lives have been sacrificed on account of the neglect of these rules, that might otherwise have been saved.

USE OF TOBACCO AND WINE.

BY REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

There are many liberties that men may take for themselves which, it seems to me, a wise consideration of their influence upon those around about them should lead them to avoid. I rank among these the use of tobacco and the use of wine, as matters of pleasure and of indulgence.

I honor my father's memory. I remember, from my earliest childhood, that at a time when it was the custom of every minister, almost, habitually to smoke, and occasionally to drink—the occasions sometimes coming very near together—my father was remarkable for abstinence from the cup, and for total abstinence from the use of tobacco. And every child of my father by my mother—every one of the eight oldest children—has walked in the way he should go, and has not departed from it when he has grown up. And there has not, perhaps, been an ounce of tobacco consumed by my father and the children of the first family. Nor has there been one of them that has not been strictly and conscientiously temperate. I can not tell how much I owe to my father, I cannot express my sense of obligation to him, in this respect.

When I grew old enough to be foolish, I wanted to smoke because other boys smoked; and I did at last bestride a cigar; and I got my first reward. I remember that the experience was followed by something sharper than narcotic influence, or unconscious influence. I remember feeling separated from my father. I revered him; I almost worshiped him, although I was not much of a worshiper; and I threw away the weed. My first experience was substantially my last experience. From that day to this I have never touched tobacco, in any form or method. And I thank my father for it.

Now, I perceive a great many men that are employing narcotics in their families, excusing themselves because it does not hurt them; and they are bringing up white-skinned, celebrated children as the result. We are living in an age in which, by constitution, children receive an overplus of nervous influence. We are living in a climate that is stimulating. We are living under institutions that tend to acuminate every nerve and intensify all cerebral influences. We are just the people that do not need any added stimulus. And yet, I see a great many parents who are bringing up their children so nervous that if one or two things of this kind be added, their destruction or injury will be sure; and they will not put them away. They will have no consideration of the influence which they are exerting upon their children. I am satisfied that the fathers themselves in many of these cases are strong enough to maintain a moderation in the use of these stimulants; but, ye that are strong, bear with the weak.

I perceive the same thing taking place sometimes among clergymen. I am happy to believe, however, that the custom is going out of use. I do not believe that a clergyman can be thoughtful—at any rate, I cannot conceive how one can be thoughtful on these things—and not suppose that his example will be a temptation and bewilderment to those that are weak.

Do you say, "I am not going, because there are weak men in this world, to deny myself of my lawful and proper pleasure?" Then you are not fit to be a preacher and a disciple of the Lord Jesus Christ.

We ought to lay aside every thing that will provoke any body; but any thing that will lead a brother to stumble; that will corrupt his stomach; that will defile the secretions of his body, that, above all, will fire the nervous system in such a way as to take hold almost certainly on other stimulants, and as likely as not lead to intoxication and utter destruction—this, we ought by all means to lay aside. The risk of not doing it is more than any one ought to take on himself who is a follower of Christ. It is a perilous thing for a man by his example to fire arrows which he knows will poison whomever they hit. And it would be a sweet and blessed thing if, in addition to all a man's positive works of good in life, he could say, when he comes to die, "I have not consciously done a single thing, in eating or drinking or pleasure, that I thought had a tendency to mislead or stumble to their destruction any of those who are around about me."

Now, it seems to me, that, in the present state of the world, and in the present state of life, it must be a matter of utter thoughtlessness on the part of any persons that would offer on such a day, for instance, as New Year's day, to the young, the means of intoxication—knowing, as they do, that there will be many, who, coming to their houses, and to scores of other places, and being tempted to drink, will turn that day into a disgrace to themselves and to their friends; knowing, as they do, the unutterable mischiefs that spring from intemperance; knowing, as they must know, what torments and evil experiences are going on about them. I can not conceive how any such should spread upon their tables these means of destruction for the young.

I would not, for the price of my life, turn out in my parlor a whole box of adders, saying, "If men will keep their eyes open, and be moderately careful where they step, they will not be bitten." And yet, I could as easily justify myself for doing that as for putting wine on my table and offering it to the young. "At last it biteth like a serpent," is written of strong drink. But that is not the whole of the truth. It does not always wait to the last. It often bites at first, and all the way through to the end. If you say that the reason is thoughtlessness, I reply that that is not the general reason, nor is it a worthy one. I do not think you put wine on your table for a reason of real hospitality. I fear that most persons put wine on their table from quite a different motive. For the most part, we are not a wine raising, nor a wine bibbing people. It is a matter of fashion and of infinitessimal vanity, ordinarily. Men put wine on their tables as a matter of show, as a matter of fashionable compliance. There is but little distinction between these reasons. They are a great vulgar mass. None of them will bear examination. None of them spring from feelings that are worthy.

But it seems to me that there is one motive which should rule in these matters. Whether you eat or drink, do it to the glory of God. Can you glorify God in any way that will be so acceptable to him as by taking care of his little ones? Can you glorify God so truly as by setting an example that shall heal and reclaim and save, rather than tempt and mislead and destroy?

Mother, suppose one should take your child, suppose one should take that sweet-faced flower, and with superior eloquence and witching wiles fill her ear with things that should not be heard, and her heart at last should burn with flames that are of death, could any excuse be rendered to you for the destruction of that child? Father, should that now pure and noble son of yours, whose impulses are all generous, and whose sympathies are all right and true, be taken by some one that you have trusted—a false friend—and little by little tampered with, till he loved to hear salacious stories, till he loved the sparkle of evil wit, till he begun to love the evil things of which he heard, and you found at last that the bottom of morality was destroyed in him, could any apology be made to you? Could any thing be said that should stand between the indignation of your heart and the seducer of your boy? And should you let your example, even in things allowable, debauch and destroy a child of the Lord Jesus Christ, for whom he died—could you ever make an apology for it? When you have destroyed a man, is there any excuse that you can give? Will it be enough in the judgment day to say, "I did not mean to?" Was that all the care you had? Was that the whole of your duty? Will you, by your word or example, cause men to stumble and destroy them? and then will you cover their griefs and your responsibility with no broader vail than this—"I did not mean to?"

Young ladies, women, the worst use to which you can put your beauty, your attractive manners, and the fascination of your sweet dispositions, is to tempt your young companions and friends to indulgence. Woman, who has suffered so much of man's vices; woman, who has been the victim since time began—she can not afford to tempt men. Every interest of purity and dignity and honor should lead every woman and every maiden to set her face, and her whole sweet and strong example, against every thing that is of the appetites, passions, every thing that is of the appetites, that the young may strengthen their good resolutions. Dehort them from indulgence. Take them by the hand, and let them feel that they rise in the court of love in proportion as they forswear everything that is unmanly and every thing that is gross, and it can not but be that in the end you will reap joy abundantly.—Herald of Health.

THE DYING THIEF.

High on the rugged wood three victims hung,—
The thieves, and Jesus, dying side by side;
Below the mocking throng did him deride,
And one above poured curses from his tongue.

The other, with a stern rebuke, replied,
"We suffer justly for our wickedness;
But lo! this man hath nothing done amiss";
Then turning to the patient Christ he cried—

"When thou shalt come to reign, remember me"!
And there was inspiration in his prayer,
And penitence and mighty faith was there;
Or how could he the distant kingdom see?

And mark how Jesus turned his loving eyes
To look with pity, and in haste to say,
"So let it be; I promise thee to-day,
That thou shalt be with me in paradise."

O! promise full of prophecy sublime;
What the first Adam lost, Christ will regain,
And with the good in paradise will reign,
Beyond the withering curse and wasting time.

THE CHRONOLOGICAL PERIODS OF DAN. 8 AND 9.

BY L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

The author of the following would specially call the attention of Adventists who adopted the time for the second coming of Christ, as advocated by William Miller (and were disappointed in their hopes,) to a candid review of the premises on which their expectation was based; and a re-examination of the chronological periods recorded in Dan. 8 and 9. The writer believes there are reliable data from which to reckon those different periods of time, and that these are of great interest to all that love the word of God.

We are aware of the uncertainty that pervades many minds as to arriving at any correct conclusions concerning the ending of the prophetic periods; and this is mainly traceable to several attempts to calculate those periods which have proved fallacious. There has ever been a natural aversion to knowing definitely when we should look for the Lord to come, growing out of the unprepared state of the heart to meet him. Whatever may be our feelings or condition, they will not change the truth or affect in the least what God has revealed in his word about the time of the second coming of Christ. If, as says the apostle Paul (2 Tim. 3: 16, 17,) "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works," then are the prophetic measurements of time for us to understand; as we cannot be instructed or profited by that which we cannot understand. The principle that will ignore the prophetic periods will do away with any other part of the Bible. This should not be done by any one that expects to meet the approval of the Judge of quick and dead in the day of his appearing.

REVIEW OF THE FORMER POSITION.

We will now call attention to a brief review of the former position on the time argument, based on Daniel 8 and 9. It was assumed by the late William Miller, that the 2300 days, the 70 weeks, the 69 weeks, and the 62 weeks of Dan. 8 and 9 commenced in the seventh year of Artaxerxes, king of Persia, 457 B. C.; that the 69 weeks terminated at the baptism of Christ; the 62 weeks (with the addition of half of the one week) ended at his crucifixion; also the 70 weeks, at that time, or three and a half years subsequently; so that the 2300 days would end in 1843–4. The correctness of the termination of the above periods according to the time specified depended on the evidence of "the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem" in the seventh year of Artaxerxes. Time has proved that date for the going forth of the commandment incorrect. Besides, there is no evidence of any commandment having been issued to restore the Jews from their Babylonian captivity in the reign of any king of Persia, except that of Cyrus, the first king. Those that will take the time to examine Ezra 7, where it was assumed that such a commandment was to be found, will see there is nothing said in the decree of Artaxerxes in reference to building Jerusalem, or the temple; it simply gave permission to the people of Israel, which were so "minded of their own free-will, to go up to Jerusalem." Ezra was "sent of the king and his seven counsellors to inquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem, . . . and to carry the silver and gold which the king and his counsellors have freely offered unto the God of Israel." With the silver and gold that Ezra could find in the province of Babylon, "with the free-will offering of the people and of the priests," he might "buy speedily with this money bullocks, rams, lambs, with their meat offerings and their drink offerings, and offer them upon the altar of the house of your God which is in Jerusalem." Also the king decreed that the "treasures which are beyond the river" should provide Ezra with what he should require of a specified amount of silver and wheat, wine and oil, etc., "and whatsoever is commanded by the God of heaven; . . . for why [says the king] should there be wrath against the realm of the king and his sons?"

According to Thucydides (b. 2, c. 49) there was at that time a plague raging throughout the whole Persian Empire, in consequence of which the king became alarmed, and having some knowledge of the God of the Hebrews, he desired Ezra to beautify the house of God in Jerusalem (Ez. 7: 27,) and offer such sacrifices on the altar in Jerusalem as should be the means of turning away the wrath from the realm of the king and his sons.

From the foregoing evidence it is certain that this decree of Artaxerxes had nothing to do with the fulfillment of Dan. 9: 25. Besides, the decree to build Jerusalem had been given fifty-five years previous, in the first year of Cyrus, king of Persia. (2 Chron. 36: 22–3; Ez. 1: 1–11.) By following the literal statements, and the easy and natural interpretation of the prophecy of Dan. 9: 24–7, it will be seen that that there are four separate and distinct measurements of time given, neither of which commence or end simultaneously. The only period that refers to the cutting off of the Messiah is the 62 weeks: and instead of this number commencing with the commandment to build Jerusalem, it was not to commence till after the street and wall were built, in troublous times (Dan. 9: 25–6,) which was accomplished in the thirty-second year of Artaxerxes, in the month Elul. Ez. 6: 15; 13:6. This was eighty-two years after the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem, by, and in the first year of, Cyrus, whose first year was 488 years before our A. D.

The proof of this is seen in the fact that Cyrus was the person expressly named by the prophet Isaiah, more than a hundred years before Cyrus was born, as the one that should build God's city, Jerusalem, and let go his captives from the Babylonian captivity. See Ezra 1.

Now all may see by these plain statements of Scripture, that no other person but Cyrus could or did issue the commandment to restore the Jews from their captivity in Babylon, and to build Jerusalem. Then it follows that there could be only 483 years from the first of Cyrus to the birth of Christ, or 488 to our A. D.; as Christ was born before the death of Herod, in the fifth year before our A. D. For we reckon time from the vulgar era, and not the true year of the birth of Christ.

Having proved clearly that the 69 weeks, or 483 years of Dan. 9: 25, are to be reckoned from the first of Cyrus, instead of the seventh of Artaxerxes, it follows they are no part of the 2300 days of Daniel 8; and, consequently, the 2300 prophetic days could not terminate in 1843, so far as having any connection with the 69 weeks is concerned. The main reason why chronologers have fixed upon the seventh or twentieth of Artaxerxes from whence to reckon the periods of Dan. 9: 24–7 is, because of their receiving as authority the canon of Ptolemy, so called. The said canon places the first of Cyrus B. C. 536–8, more than 500 years before the birth of Christ. What has been said in the foregoing pages proves Ptolemy's canon unreliable; as we have shown from the word of God that only 483 years elapsed from the first of Cyrus to the birth of Christ, instead of 536. There is also historical evidence proving the so-called canon defective.

Having now cleared away the rubbish by which the failures for the last twenty-five years to calculate the time correctly are traceable, we will proceed to examine this question on a basis that we think will bear the closest scrutiny. In Dan. 8 we have recorded a vision that appeared to the prophet, in the third year of the reign of Belshazzar, king of Babylon. Daniel says he was "at Shushan, in the palace, which is in the province of Elam. . . . by the river Ulai." The first object he sees standing before the river is a ram with two horns. He says "the two horns were high, but one was higher than the other, and the higher came up last." The angel explains the ram with the two horns to represent the kingdoms of Media and Persia. The higher horn represents the Persian line of kings. Says Bishop Newton: "The empire was formed by the conjunction of the Medes and Persians, and is often called the Medo-Persian. Cyrus, the founder of this empire, was son of Cambyses, king of Persia, and by his mother Mandane was grandson of Astyages, king of Media; and afterwards marrying the daughter and only child of his uncle Cyaxares, king of Media, he succeeded to both crowns, and united the kingdoms of Media and Persia. Under Cyrus the Persians gained and maintained the ascendant. Thus the Persian horn was the higher, which came up last."

Daniel "saw the ram pushing westward and northward and southward; so that no beasts might stand before him, neither was there any that could deliver out of his hand: but he did according to his will, and became great." v. 4. This is the first action of the ram that Daniel notices—"pushing in three different directions, so that no beasts might stand before him." The general view of expositors of this pushing of the ram is, that it was against the neighboring kingdoms, and that they all fell under the dominion of the Persians; that the Persians did according to their will in subduing all opposition, being victorious in their various expeditions. This interpretation of the "pushing of the ram" is not in harmony with the facts of history. Instead of the ram doing "according to his will" in the instance of Cyrus the first king of Persia, in his expedition against the Massagetæ, instead of conquering them, the greater part of the Persion army were slain, and according to Herodotus, Cyrus himself fell, and Tomyris the queen ordered his head to be thrown into a vessel filled with human blood. Herod b. 1, c. 214. Cambyses and Darius, successors of Cyrus, in their expeditions against the Ethiopians and Scythians, were obliged to return without accomplishing their purpose, after losing large numbers of their armies. Herodotus relates other instances wherein the Persian kings were not successful in their expeditions. These instances prove that the "ram" did not do "according to his will" in subduing other nations or kingdoms.

We will now give what we regard as the true application of the "pushing of the ram." This pushing is, as we have observed, in three directions, "westward, northward, and southward, so that no beasts might stand before him." The term beasts here is from the Hebrew word ghahy, and occurs 509 times in the Hebrew Scriptures, and is rendered "living," "life," "life-time," "liveth," etc., 412 times, and might be thus rendered and make sense in the other passages. This being the meaning of the word, it will be seen that it cannot refer to civil governments or kingdoms, but the pushing was for the entire destruction of the Jews. This prophecy properly rendered should read: I saw the ram pushing westward and northward and southward, so that no living might stand before him. This is an important point, as it gives us data from which to reckon the 2300 days, the length of the vision.

This "pushing" for the entire destruction of Daniel's people was by the instigation of Haman, an Amalekite, who had been promoted to the position of prime minister at the court of Persia: and out of hatred he bore to the Jews, under the pretense of Mordecai's not bowing to him nor doing him reverence, but more probably on account of what his nation had suffered from the Jews, by the command of God in the days of Moses and Saul—for God declared to Moses that he would blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven—therefore he thought to be avenged on the Jews, and falsify the word of God. We will now compare the prophecy with the fulfillment in the history, as given in the book of Esther.

PROPHECY.

"I saw the ram pushing westward and northward and southward, so that no living might stand before him."—DAN. 8: 4.

FULFILLMENT.

"And the letters were sent by posts into all the king's provinces, to destroy, to kill, and to cause to perish, all Jews, both young and old, little children and women, in one day, even upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month."—EST. 3: 13.

This was in the twelfth year of Ahasuerus, alias Artaxerxes, king of Persia. Est. 3: 7. From this twelfth year, the vision of the 2300 days stretches on through the history of Persia, Grecia and Rome, till the sanctuary is cleansed.

The plot of Haman in instigating Ahasuerus to destroy all the Jews is very vividly symbolized in Dan. 7: 5, where the kingdom of Persia is symbolized by a bear, with three ribs in his mouth, and between his teeth. These three ribs say to the bear, "Arise, devour much flesh!" They symbolize the remnant of some people; as three ribs are a small portion of an animal. So the Amalekites, which had been "the first of the nations," were now reduced to a mere remnant, and they in the mouth of the bear ready to be crushed at a given signal, when God turned their plot to destroy his people to their own entire destruction, and has made that point an epoch whereby his church may obtain a clue to the time from whence to reckon this vision.

We have said more on the point of the "pushing of the ram" than we otherwise should, because many regard our application as a novel one, not having been discovered till within a short time, We read that in the time of the end knowledge was to increase (not diminish, as in the case of some): "The path of the just is as a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." Those that are "seeking for truth as for hid treasure" will appreciate every earnest and honest attempt to obtain more light on our whereabouts on the great ocean of time, or to learn with what definiteness our chart points out when we shall arrive at the port of endless glory and rest.

The next symbol is that of a goat that "came from the west" with such velocity that he appeared not to touch the ground; and he had a notable horn between his eyes. He comes against the ram "in the fury of his power," and breaks his two horns," "and casts him down to the ground, and stamps upon him;" that is, he entirely overthrows and conquers the ram. The goat is explained by the angel (v. 21) as the king, or kingdom of Grecia, and the great horn between his eyes the first king—Alexander the great, who with amazing speed conquered the Persians; for, as says the historian, "he flew with victory swifter than others can travel, often with his horse pursuing his enemies upon the spur whole days and nights, and sometimes making long marches for several days, as he did in the pursuit of Darius, of near forty miles a day, for eleven days together."

The leopard in ch. 7, with four wings of a fowl, represents the same power, and the velocity of his conquests. Alexander with an army of forty-seven thousand men defeated the Persian army of six thousand in the battle of Issus; and at Arbela more than a million were driven before him; but in the hight of his power and glory he suddenly died in a drunken debauch at Babylon. Thus "the great horn was broken, and for it came up four notable ones toward the four winds of heaven," which the angel explains (v. 22) to be four kingdoms to stand up out of the nation, but not in his (i. e., Alexander's) power; for, as says the historian, "in the space of about fifteen years all his heirs to the throne were murdered."

These four horns represent the same kingdoms as the four heads of the leopard in ch. 7. "Four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power;" i. e., they were kingdoms of Greeks, but not of Alexander's family. These were to extend toward the four winds of heaven. "Cassander held Macedon, and Greece, and the western parts; Lysimachus had Thrace, Bithynia, and the northern regions; Ptolemy, Egypt and the southern countries; Seleucus, Syria and the eastern provinces." "Out of one of them came a little horn, which waxed exceeding great," (v. 9,) which the angel (vs. 23–6) explains to be a king, or kingdom, of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences; to stand up, to be mighty in power, but not of his own; to destroy wonderfully, to prosper and practice, to destroy the mighty and holy people; to cause craft to prosper in his hand; to magnify himself in his heart; by peace to destroy many; to stand up against the Prince of princes; finally to be broken without hands; i. e., at the coming of Christ to judgment.

This little horn that waxed exceeding great is evidently the Roman power, on the territory of the goat, especially the eastern division; for it subdued Macedon and Greece, Syria and Egypt, and extended its conquests into Asia. It was to destroy "the mighty and the holy people." Rome has done this to both Jews and Christians. They destroyed Jerusalem, broke up the Jewish nation, scattered them everywhere; persecuted christians unrelentingly; signed the death warrant of Jesus Christ; Roman soldiers pierced his side after nailing him to the cross. But Rome is now soon to be broken by the power of Christ at the judgment.—Voice.

For the World's Crisis.

THE HARVEST OF THE EARTH.

"And I looked, and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle. . . . And he that sat upon the cloud thrust in his sickle on the earth; and the earth was reaped."—REV. 14: 14, 16.

The vision of the harvest is a very interesting and instructive portion of the Revelation. The holy seer upon Patmos was here favored with the closing scenes of this world's history. This scene is the end of all earthly strife, the carnage of nations, and the suffering of saints. He had beheld the strange history of the world; saw the persecutions of God's people under the iron heel of the Papacy; he had seen the glorious triumph of the church in contrast with its wilderness state; and it is not to be wondered at that he should also be favored with a view of their being gathered from the bondage of corruption, and redeemed from the fiery darts of Satan, to which they have long been subject.

The first thing that attracted John's attention was a white cloud, upon which sat the Son of man. Though Christ is spoken of as "one like unto the Son of man," yet, no one will assert that it was not Christ, for in the Scriptures he is often represented by this figure of speech. He comes in the clouds of heaven. This is a literal coming. It cannot be spiritualized without making the passage void of meaning, and destroying the beauty and harmony of the Scriptures; for the manner of his coming is always represented as in the clouds of heaven. Daniel "saw in the night vision, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven. . . . And there was given unto him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed."—Dan. 7: 13, 14. He comes in the clouds of heaven, and there is given unto him everlasting dominion, and a kingdom, as Daniel describes it. He comes with the clouds all radiant with glory,—such glory as never met mortal eyes; arrayed in his own glory, the glory of the Father and all the holy angels. This is the event that has gladdened the hearts of all the saints of God for nearly six thousand years, and to-day they are lifting up their heads in rejoicing that it is an event near at hand.

John describes him as coming forth as a king. Upon his head is a "golden crown." This is symbolic of his kingly power; for when this event transpires he will have ceased to be our High Priest, probation will have closed, and he will become our king. He is to receive a "kingdom that shall not be destroyed." "Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."—Matt. 25: 34.

Again, as well as his coming forth as a king, John describes him as a reaper, "having in his hand a sharp sickle,"—the symbol of his power over the harvest. The duty of a reaper is to gather the harvest at the appointed time, but not till it is fully ripe. Though Christ is represented as a reaper, yet he is "lord of the vineyard," and uses agencies to accomplish his task. The "field is the world," in which the good and bad seed grow together until the harvest. "The harvest is the end of the world; the reapers are the angels."—Matt. 13: 38, 39. Thus Christ has the power over the harvest, and the angels are the messengers that gather the "good seed" into the garner (the New Jerusalem). The good seed, he tells us, are the "children of the kingdom." Then as a king he is to gather the subjects of his kingdom,—those who have been accounted worthy by obedience to all of his commands, and have thus shown their love to him,—who are now strangers and pilgrims in an enemy's land, and is to forever reign over them in a land made glorious by his presence, and flowing with milk and honey.

The reaping is to be done at the appointed time, when in the vision John heard a loud voice declare, "Thrust in thy sickle and reap, for the harvest of the earth is ripe,"—i. e., the condition of the earth is such as to be ready for the reaper. What was to be the condition of the earth when Christ should come? It was to be one of excessive wickedness; "evil men and seducers were to wax worse and worse"; a cold, faithless state of the church; and a great and perplexed state of the world, with distress of nations, is the Scripture description. But let us look at Christ's words, for he describes this reaping time very clearly: "For as in the days before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."—Matt. 24: 38, 39. This shows clearly the condition of the harvest field, or the world, when the harvest is ripe and the time is come to reap.

Dear reader, look upon the world! Do you not think that the harvest is ripe? The time has come to reap. The prophetical landmarks have been passed, and the moral condition of the world is an exact picture of the divine description of the time when the Son of man shall come. Heed the warning while you may, and prepare for the judgment. It is said of the antediluvian world that they knew not until the flood came and took them all away. Why did they not know? They were warned, and an equal chance given them of escaping. They were heedless, and would not believe the warning; but when the flood came it was too late, and they all perished.

The reaping of the earth will be a sudden work. "He that sat upon the cloud thrust in his sickle on the earth, and the earth was reaped." "As the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. . . . And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."—Matt. 24: 27, 31.

Says Paul, when dwelling on this matter,—"Behold I show you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed; for this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality."—1 Cor. 15: 52, 53. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a voice of the archangel and the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

This is the reaping of the earth. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years."—Rev. 20: 6. If we would share in the first resurrection,—the harvest of the good seed,—we must have our hearts "cleansed from all unrighteousness," and be followers of God as dear children, and walk in love as Christ hath loved us. Holding the truth will never save any one, but we are commanded to be sanctified through the truth. Jesus is soon coming. This is a truth that ought to stimulate us to separate ourselves from the works of the world, and to prepare to meet our King, and have him say, "Well done."

"Awake! shake off thy slumbers! put thee on
Thy beautiful garments, let thy lamp be trimmed,
For lo, the cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!"
Is ringing in the air. Then come thou forth,
Forth from the world with all its vanities;
Forth from the world with all its vileness;
Forth from the world that hates thy Lord and thee;
Make thyself ready, lo, he is at hand."

Rochester, N. Y. WM. H. SPENCER.

HUMILITY.

Humility is an indispensable ingredient in the christian character. Whatever else he may have, if he is destitute of this, he has no reason to conclude that he is in a state of salvation. Graces of person and manner do not necessarily imply saving grace. The teachings of the Bible on this point need not be misunderstood. Our Lord commences his sermon on the Mount with saying, "Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 5: 3. But poverty of spirit is only another name for deep humility. If the "kingdom of heaven" belongs to the poor in spirit, then those who are destitute of this grace cannot enter the kingdom. The last sermon which Christ preached in person, corresponds with the first. It was addressed to a popular church. "Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked."—Rev. 3: 17. . . .

The apostles enjoined humility just as explicitly as did the Master. Paul writes to the Romans: "Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate."—Rom. 12: 16. To the church of God at Corinth—one of the most refined cities of that age—he says: "oFr ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things of this world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea and things which are not, to bring to naught things that are; that no flesh should glory in his presence."—1 Cor. 1: 26. James says: "Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up." James 4: 10. Peter writes: "Likewise ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble. Humble yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time."—1 Pet. 5: 5–7.

If anything more is needed to enforce upon every christian the necessity of humility, we have it in the example of our Lord. His whole life affords us a lesson of self-denial and deep humility. "He was rich, but for our sake, became poor, that we, through his poverty, might be rich." He by whom all things were made, resigned the honors of the Godhead, and took upon him the form of a servant, and patiently endured the revilings of those whom he came to save. His companions were chosen from among the lowly of earth, and for them he performed the office of a servant, and left us this injunction: "If I, then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, ye ought also to wash one another's feet.—John 10: 10. . . .

The age in which we live is by no means favorable to the cultivation of true humility. The church has become wealthy and strong in material resources. Tall steeples, frescoed ceilings, painted windows, artistic music, and a congregation arrayed in gorgeous apparal, do not have a tendency to bring us down in the dust at the foot of the cross. Their silent, but powerful influence, is quite in the contrary direction. He who can resist this influence, and keep down where salvation flows, must be more than human. He must have God to help him. Paul appeared to think that the only safety for a true christian, under such circumstances, was in a precipitate flight,—"Heady, high minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away.—2 Tim. 3: 5.

O ye who pride yourselves on anything which, however innocent or even good in itself, a graceless soul may possess, see your danger, and make haste to humble yourselves before God and man. You must come down or perish forever. You may reckon your wealth by thousands; but you are not one whit better, or more deserving of one particle more of consideration on that account. "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble." Let you appearance, your demeanor, your associates, all be of that character that will help to bring you down, and keep you down, in the depths of humility before the Lord. "For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith."—Earnest Christian.

For the World's Crisis.

A SHORT SERMON.—No. 2.

"Let your speech be alway with grace."—Col. 4: 6.

There can be nothing more productive of good, that is so easily performed, as the utterance of right words. Visit yonder hovel, whose inmates at once tell you that poverty abides there. Speak to those saddened hearts words of love and sympathy, and gild them with deeds that well compare. Soon you behold every face radiant with joy, and the sunshine of peace seems for the time to convert that hovel into a palace. Perhaps the father and companion may be in yonder field, beneath a scorching sun, where the wages of a day laborer but poorly meet the demands of an invalid wife and helpless children. But on his return home, when yonder sun is hiding his face for the night, those words of kindness you uttered are repeated, the deeds of love you performed are exhibited; and could you see that care-worn face, as it lights up with joy, and behold those tears of gratitude as they chase each other in quick succession down those furrowed cheeks; surely you would be thankful for a heart that bids you speak only words of kindness.

And then listen to the conversation that follows the first introduction of the events of that day. The husband inquires,

"Did you tell them how long you had been sick? did you tell them my health was poor?"

"Yes."

"Were the children crying?"

"No, every one was filled with joy and surprise. But I have not shown all the presents. See here. There is a dress for me, and one for Dollie, and some shoes for Lizzie, and pants for Johnnie, and a new hat for Charlie"; and the astonished man exclaims,

"Good God! what am I, that I should be thus favored?"

This would not be an isolated case, were all that profess the love of Christ in possession of it. Many a desponding and sinful heart would soon be made to feel the glow of heavenly love.

"Let your words be with love." Is there a divine injunction less heeded by the mass of professors than this? And yet there is not a saying in all the book of God more potent with good than this. And we see no way to avail ourselves of the blessings this word unfolds, save by a close adherence to the principles inculcated in this text. Why will men torture themselves with a half-hearted religion? Better by far to eat, drink, and be merry, and enjoy all the good of this life, and get no more than damnation, than to half crucify self, be doubting and halting, take no comfort here, and none hereafter.

The majority have just faith enough to make them miserable. Their confidence in a coming judgment is sufficient to keep their consciences stirred up, and yet too weak to beget hope; and so they are tossed to and fro from the furnace of trials to the gardens of pleasure. Being unhappy themselves, they only envy those who are happy.

The system of redemption is one of design; the principles of cause and effect are as manifest as in the rules of mathematics. To disregard a single rule produces a false result, and leaves disjointed the whole catalogue of figures; and to omit a christian duty will disrobe the heart of its needful strength to perform another. The weaver might as well expect the desired flower on his carpet, while he throws his shuttle the reverse of right, as for a christian to expect the light of divine love while known duties are disregarded.

Is it presumed that divine wisdom would dictate a system of faith, and look with indifference upon subjects who are to be regulated thereby? In other words, is the gospel a dead letter, to be viewed as convenience shall dictate? Were the apostles the only men in all the gospel dispensation required to adhere to principles of right? Let these questions be proved in the affirmative, and there may be some chance for those who are living in reckless disregard of the precepts of holy writ. But should the sequel of man's probation disclose the fact that "God is no respecter of persons," we then might feel the importance of a jealous watch-care over ourselves, lest by some neglected duty we are forever shut out of that heavenly kingdom. No trivial excuse will screen us when once arrryed before heaven's tribunal. But while the realities of truths we now but faintly realize shall unfold the mingled scenes of the awful and the grand, so that we "see as we are seen, and know as we are known," then it will be too late to develop this principle.

Could we but half feel the worth of words, how guarded would be each utterance. What are words? They are the faculties of man stereotyped, and placed beneath the press of interchanging thought. They come forth again, wafted on every breeze to earth's remotest bounds; and they never change their character. As they leave the womb of thought immortalized, they ever revolve. Rightly adjusted, they go forth bearing the sweet fragrance of heavenly love, only to bless humanity. They are susceptible of mighty effects. By them the sword of conflict may be sheathed, and a nation saved from ruin. By them an offended brother may be restored, or a wayward son saved. By their magic power a multitude may be awed to silence. Let them be uttered in tones of pity, and how quick the sobs of grief are hushed. Let them fall on the ear of the sinful in gentle reproof, and his heart responds to virtue.

The same cause existing in the heart that begets right words will prompt righteous acts. And words of love are powerless, except attested by comparative deeds; or it is possible that their sincerity may be disclosed in style of utterance. Our words usually bear the character of the spirit that possesses us at the time we speak; hence it is well for us to know what manner of spirit we are of.

Go pick from yonder ditch that wretched man; place him upon a soft couch, with a pillow of rest beneath his head, that his slumbers may be undisturbed till the stifling effects of that damnable liquid be gone; and then, in words of kindness, point out the certain ruin to which he is hastening; and if reformation is a practical thing in his case, such a course will be effectual. But should you fail to restore him, rest assured that your acts of kindness are not robbed of their virtue by the failure, but will, with other like deeds, insure to you the blessed consolation of those words so full of hope—"Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

For the World's Crisis.

FORGIVENESS.

If we are exercising an unforgiving spirit, the Lord has plainly declared that our prayers will not be heard. Mark 11: 25, 26; Matt. 18: 35. This is one great reason why many professed christians at the present time do not prevail with God in prayer. Some are unconscious of this great obstacle which exists in their own hearts, and so they wonder why it is they fail to obtain those blessings for which they have been praying a long time. It is for the benefit of such I pen these lines.

All will admit that it is our duty to forgive those who have wronged us, when they request us to do so. But there seems to be a misunderstanding with many as to what forgiveness is, or, in other words, they do not appear to understand how we are to forgive.

I would call the attention of all who may read this to the plain teachings of the Bible upon this point. In the prayer which Jesus has taught us to offer unto the Father, we find the following request: "Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us." Here we call upon God to deal with us just as we have dealt by others. Suppose our heavenly Father should have granted this at times in our experience, when we have repeated it before him; what would have been the result? Why, instead of finding mercy at his hands, the judgments of God would have descended upon us.

Let us just reverse this request in the Lord's prayer, and we will learn how we are to forgive those who have injured us. Forgive those who trespass against you, as God hath forgiven you your trespasses.

Yes, we are to forgive as God forgives. How does God forgive? "I will remember your transgressions against you no more." When we have been wronged, perhaps we may not be able to blot the occurrence from our memory; yet we have no right to again bring the matter up against them. When we from the heart forgive a person, then the whole affair is buried, and we are to feel and act towards them just as we did before they injured us.

There are many who formally forgive by the word of mouth, but the number of those who forgive from the heart, remembering their transgressions against them no more, is very small. If we forgive as God forgives, then upon all occasions, when we meet the offending one, he is greeted just as cordially as before, and we do not feel at all disposed to turn the cold shoulder to him.

Beloved brother or sister, how do you feel towards those who have sought your forgiveness? How do you treat them when in their company? Do you seek to convince them by kind words and acts that you have heartily forgiven all? or do you rather mar their peace by reminding them in some manner of what you have suffered on their account? O for grace to forgive as our heavenly Father does.

Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

Money Orders.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

THE TIME ARGUMENT.

It is well known to our readers that some of our dear Brn. and Srs. have expected to see our Savior this year. Two years ago, we thought there was much reason to hope for the coming of Jesus before this time; but for the year past, we have had strong doubts, because events, which we expect before the coming of Christ, have not advanced as rapidly as we expected. But the passing of any set time, given as the result of human calculation, does not in the least weaken the general evidence which proves we are in the last days of this dispensation.

When we review the past history of the world, as foretold by the prophets, and now written out by historians, we think there is no reason to doubt that the day of the Lord is at hand. The events must come in the order laid down in the Bible, and the closing ones are the next in order, and near at hand. We never felt more confidence in the evidence that goes to show we are near the second coming of Christ than we do now. We can see no chance to come to any other conclusion. The light grows brighter and brighter. As certain as the Medo-Persian kingdom followed the Babylonian, the Grecian the Medo-Persian, and the Roman the Grecian, so certain it is that the prophetic history of the Roman power is about run out, and the kingdom of God must follow next.

The signs of the times are most ominous of the end. They are unmistakable. They are just such as the Lord said should appear in the last days, even in the last generation. It is very evident we are now living "in the time of the end," very near the close of this dispensation. Great events are at hand. Let us watch and pray lest we enter into temptation. All who are not ready to meet Jesus, have no time to waste, if they intend to be prepared for his coming.

THE SOUTH.

The doors in the South are wide open for the reception of the truth; very much as they were in New England twenty-five years ago. The first class of people are now ready to hear and embrace the truth. They are greedy after tracts and books on the subject of the Lord's coming, and we hear of their sitting up all night to read them. Shall they be supplied? The South is now a most important missionary field. What shall be done? Shall we let them cry in vain for help, when we can send them aid? Probably there is no other place in the world where so much could be accomplished in a given time with judicious labor, as in the Southern states. But it is well known that if we go to hold meetings among the colored people, the whites will not come to hear. There is such a wide difference between the two races, that the white population will not yet mingle with their servants. If we preach to the whites, some of the freedmen will come and listen, and get hold of the truth and tell it to their companions. They are noted for picking up the news. During the war, it was a remarkable fact that the slaves knew about as well as their masters concerning the progress of events. It was often a mystery how they obtained their information.

Another fact should be kept in mind: although the slaves are set free from their masters, they still have respect to their opinions. If they learn that "massa" is opposed to the preacher and what he preaches, they are shy; but if they find "the old massa" all interest to hear the preaching, they think it is surely worthy of their attention; for they well know that their masters are better informed, and are better prepared to examine new things in religion than they themselves; for this reason, it is important that we first gain the confidence and support of the white population; then we can more easily persuade the colored people. Besides, it is well known to those who have been among them, that the freedmen need the restraining influence of the members of the white churches, to keep them from being led astray by the temptations that surround them. If left to themselves, they are very liable to fall back into their former bad habits of drinking, improper conversation, and general unchristian conduct.

As the door is now open in the South for the gospel of the kingdom to be preached by faithful men, as never before, is it not best to make an effort to respond to the Macedonian cry? Shall we not do much more good than to spend all our means and energies upon the freedmen? Who has a heart and means to assist in sending true men to the South the coming winter, who shall go there as at the North, and preach the reasons of our hope as did Brn. P. A. Smith, and R. W. Wilson, in Florida last winter? There is the best of reasons to believe that great good would result from such an effort. Now is the time. The harvest is all ripe. Where are the laborers? Brn., let us pray over this matter, and ask the Lord to send the men, and means to sustain them. It is a favored hour, and we may never expect its like again before the coming of Jesus. Who is willing to take his life in his hand, and go forth with the precious word of the Lord, to tell the white people in the South that Jesus is coming soon to raise the dead and set up his kingdom? Who?

CHICAGO TENT-MEETING.

Our tent-meeting in Chicago, thus far, is a glorious success. The interest is rapidly increasing. We have made bold assaults upon Spiritualism, and have seen good results. Some who were nearly absorbed in the delusion have had their eyes opened to see their danger, and are now seeking Jesus. The Spiritualists have a stronghold in this city. They are earnestly engaged in spreading their views. Their zeal is worthy of a better cause. If the professed christians were as much engaged, Spiritualism and other forms of infidelity would not gain ground as they do now.

We have also been obliged to combat popular theology, and show that man is a mortal being, who knows nothing when dead. On this subject a number of questions have been asked, and deep interest awakened. It is now a common remark among those who have attended our meetings that the Bible never looked so plain and harmonious before as it does after looking at it from our stand-point. They can now read it with delight, because they can understand it. Before it was full of mystery and apparent contradictions. Now it is beautiful harmony, and easy to understand. Some active and devoted members of other churches are overjoyed at the sight of the truth and light they have received, and speak out boldly on the subject. Persons who have not been to meeting for ten or twelve years, till the tent was erected, are now seeking the Lord.

Yesterday (Sabbath, Oct. 11th,) was a blessed day. We had our love-feast at half-past nine o'clock, and preaching by Bro. Clark at half-past ten A. M. Preaching again at half-past two P. M., prayer-meeting at half-past six, and preaching at half-past seven, when our tent was crowded with a very intelligent and attentive audience. The people seem eager to hear on the great truths of the Bible that have been so long hid from their view by the mystical teaching of these last days; when, instead of the truth of the Lord, fables have been presented as a substitute. As in other places, they wonder how they could have been so blinded by the teachings of men, when the Bible is so plain. They feel like young converts, just brought into the liberty of the gospel.

The Spirit of the Lord was with us in power yesterday (the 11th,) and some six or eight requested prayers. They seemed in earnest. Others are almost persuaded to be christians. We expect they will start to-night. The tide of interest is rising rapidly.

Yesterday afternoon some remarks were made by the preacher against the use of tobacco, showing that it injured men spiritually, physically, intellectually, morally, and financially. Happy results followed. Several decided to abandon the use of it at once. One noble-hearted, intelligent man, well known in the city as a prominent business man, and a lover of Jesus, arose with tears in his eyes, and with choked utterance said, "My tobacco has cost me one hundred and fifty dollars a year. By the help of the Lord, I will now abandon it forever. Pray for me." Others followed with stirring testimonies, coming from the heart, and making deep impressions on other minds.

After the close of the meeting, a fine young man lingered to talk with us, and remained till after all others were gone. Said he, When these meetings began, I was pretty well into Spiritualism; but what has been said has caused me to reject that entirely; and now I desire to be a christian. He went on to say that he was brought up under religious influence, but when he began to think for himself, he could not believe that a being like our heavenly Father would torment the unsaved eternally; and on this account, he had been full of doubts concerning the truth of the Bible; but after hearing the preaching in the tent, all was now plain. He saw clearly that man is not now immortal, and will not be till after he is raised from the dead. What was once to him dark and mystical in the Scriptures was now all plain. He said he had begun to pray. We expect to see him soon happy in the enjoyment of love for our dear Savior. Others are in a similar condition. We still ask prayers for our meetings in Chicago.

THE WEST.—The cause of the Lord in the west is in a prosperous condition, and the truth is spreading in all directions. Good men are in earnest to scatter the light. They are making noble sacrifices for the welfare of their fellow men, and the results are glorious. The people are becoming more and more anxious to hear the reasons of our hope. The living members of the various churches are hungering after something that they cannot get from the popular preaching of the day; and when they can hear about the coming of Jesus, the resurrection of the dead, the saints' inheritance, and the other great truths of the Bible, which have been kept back from the people, they cry out for joy. This is just what we have been sighing for in our starving condition. When they see it, they feel like young converts. Brn. and Srs., let us do all in our power to get the reasons of our hope before the people.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.—Bro. Storrs wishes us to say that the article on "The Lord's Supper Question," in the Crisis of the 30th ult., taken from the Herald of Life, is not indorsed by him as the Editor of that paper. It was written by Bro. R. Wendell.

CHICAGO PRAYER-MEETINGS.

We have attended several of the noon prayer-meetings in the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, and found them to be seasons of refreshing. It is pleasant to find in a great and wicked city like this, one spot where all christians can meet as the friends of Jesus every day, to sing, pray and exhort. We find here some true disciples of our Savior, who love to speak of him, and who delight in his service. We would recommend all who come to the city to attend these meetings. They continue from 12 to 12.45. The time is well improved. Usually, one must move promptly to get a chance to speak or pray. We met a kind reception from those who attend the meetings, and were invited in turn to preside in them. We felt quite at home, because the Spirit of the Lord was present. Some of the testimonies are heart-stirring, because they come out of warm hearts. People cannot talk effectively who do not live near Jesus. A cold heart produces cold, formal prayers and exhortations. The words may be well chosen, the ideas good; but unless prompted and baptized by the Holy Spirit, they will not warm the hearts of others. It may be said of talk from an unsanctified tongue, as was said of a certain popular minister: "He snowed upon the people; he snowed beautifully, but it was cold."

How much we need men and women all on fire with the love of God, with a burning desire for the salvation of sinners. One real living christian will do more good towards saving men than a score of half-hearted professors. Indeed, the latter are usually only stumbling blocks in the way of sinners.

PERSONAL.—We met Bro. R. W. Wilson, from Rochester, N. Y., in Chicago, at our meeting last Sabbath (Oct. 11th.) It will be recollected that he spent last winter in Florida with Bro. P. A. Smith. He is still earnest in the cause of Christ, and has a heart warm with love for Jesus and the perishing sinner. It was a feast to meet and greet him again. He remarked in meeting that he never had greater peace and joy than when in the South scattering tracts, and talking to the people there about Jesus and his coming. He has learned the important lesson that the way to be happy is to be useful. The idler in the Lord's vineyard is not the happy man, nor the one who has the bright evidence of his acceptance. Only laborers receive wages. But he who gives up all to Jesus is filled with "perfect peace." Such have a continual feast of heavenly manna. Brethren, let us all go to work for Jesus.

SR. PRESCOTT, from St. Louis, has been with us at Chicago and rendered efficient aid in our meetings. She is an earnest and devoted laborer in the vineyard of the Lord. She intends to return home to-day (Oct. 12th), but we hope she will be able to come back soon.

We learn that Bro. D. D. Reed, who has been holding tent-meetings in Minnesota during the summer, intends to go to California soon with his tent, and continue meetings during the winter. We are glad. We think it is a good movement.

THE STATE OF EUROPE.

There is no improvement in the condition of Europe. A dark cloud hangs over it, indicating a terrible war storm. It approaches slowly but surely. The kings and emperors dare not stop their gigantic preparations. While they profess peace, their acts deny their words. Napoleon holds the reins of power in his hands. It is evident he is making an effort to increase his power so that no one will dare fight without his permission. He wishes to become the prince of peace, and be accepted as such by the nations of Europe and the world at large. His success in securing political power is without a parallel, and is still on the rising tide.

A Paris correspondent of the Chicago Tribune under date of Sept. 19th, says:—

"That which is most serious is that Prussia, while, like France, pretending to disarm, keeps on preparing for war. The term of service is made a year longer. Bavaria, under Prussian influence, had organized its army on the pattern of the Prussian one, so that, if necessary, it could easily form an integral part of it. The experiments in artillery firing are increased, and the fleet, on which they are steadily working, is to consist of fifty-five steam and sailing vessels, which, with a flotilla of thirty-six gunboats, will carry five hundred and seventy-three guns."

JOHN ALLEN.

The papers have abounded with incidents connected with John Allen, "The Wickedest Man in New York." It is now announced that he is not yet converted, and it is feared he will lose all his serious feelings. There is no doubt but that he has been thoroughly convicted, but is not yet willing to yield himself fully to obey the Lord. As the result, he is strongly tempted to go back to his old business. The following is from the New York Sun, Oct. 5th:—

"The latest accounts from Water street are not encourageing to those who believed in the repentance and reformation of John Allen. Within the last few days Allen has boasted of his success in deceiving the gentlemen of the Howard mission and everybody else who believed his promise to abandon his evil ways; he has gone so far as to announce an intention of resuming the dance-house business, and to boast that he will make more money by the notoriety he has obtained. The sign on the front of the building was painted out last week, and some of the prayers and scriptural quotations that adorned the walls of the dancing-room have been removed. Captain Thorne has notified Allen that if he resumes his disgraceful business he will arrest him and his employees every night, so long as he persists in his determination. From the first day of the revival movement, Capt. Thorne has denounced John Allen as a man without the least principle, and says his present action is quite in keeping with his character, or lack of character.

Notwithstanding the discouraging result of the attempt to improve the life of this man, the gentlemen of the Howard mission are persevering. They have leased the house adjoining Allen's, and are preparing to establish a permanent mission in Water street. On Saturday evening Mr. Dyer and some of his co-laborers called upon Capt. Thomas, and were assured of his assistance so far as he could give it."

NOW READY.
NEW HYMN BOOK.

"HYMNS OF THE JUBILEE HARP,"

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

By the Advent Chris. Pub. Society.

Among the thousands who sing from "The Jubilee Harp," there are many hundreds, especially the aged, to whose eyes the fine print of the Harp is a great discomfort and inconvenience, and who would gladly welcome an edition of the same excellent hymns, in a convenient form, in large, clear type. The above work is issued especially for them, and we trust they will find it just what they want.

There are hundreds also who sing from the Harp, who never use the notes, and who would therefore be just as well and better pleased with a book containing the same hymns, without the music, at a lower price. This book was got up also especially for them, and will, no doubt, be to all such just the thing they desire.

This edition of "The Hymns" is not, by any means, intended to supercede "The Harp." It is designed as a companion to it; and is so arranged, with references, that hymns given out from the one can be readily found in the other.

The whole has been carefully revised and corrected, and a brief supplement of choice and popular hymns appended. The type-work was done in our own office, and in a style, we trust, not inferior to that of any other.

It is a volume of 576 pages, containing some 850 Hymns and Anthems, substantially bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, at 75 cents, single copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100. Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9.50 per dozen; $75.00 per 100. It is cheaper by far than any similar work that we know of in the market. When sent by mail, 16 cts. additional postage. AG'T.

CAUTION.

We are living amid the perils of the last days, when covetousness is so strong that men resort to all possible means to secure money to carry forward their wicked designs. Those who travel are in danger of pickpockets in all situations. A few days since we read of a widow lady who was robbed on the cars of three thousand dollars, her all. The one who robbed her, first administered chloroform. The following is another case, which will give an idea of the manner by which such persons accomplish their diabolical schemes:

"A new and alarming danger menaces ladies traveling alone on the cars. The Columbia Republican, of Hudson, explains its nature: 'A young lady residing in this coutry was returning home a few weeks since by one of the principal lines of railway and, in order to make certain connection, was obliged to prolong her ride through the night. In the course of the evening a gentleman of fine exterior appearance and pleasant manners, took a seat beside her and soon after engaged in intelligent conversation, which, though not encouraged, was occasionally responded to by the lady. After a while, wearied by her long journey, she turned from him towards the window, and leaning her head upon her hand, appeared to be asleep. This was not the case, however, as she was by far too well experienced in travel to sleep under such circumstances. But it was not long before she became conscious of chloroform rising beneath her face, and instantly the real character and intent of her would-be companion flashed upon her. Waiting a moment in calm self-possession, she distinctly heard the motion of the villain's hand, which had found its way behind her, compressing a rubber vessel, from which the deadening fumes were arising, and then suddenly throwing open the window she breathed the fresh air before her senses had become affected. Being a lady of strong nerves and great presence of mind, she thus rescued herself from the spell that was being thrown upon her, and bestowing one significant look upon the thwarted rascal, left him to his own reflections. He soon left the car, and rather than be subjected to the delay that would be caused by seeking an exposure of the attempted villainy, she proceeded on her way.'"

THE HEALTH REFORMER.—We adopt the following remarks from Now and Then concerning the Health Reformer:—

"This excellent monthly is under the direction of an editorial commitee of twelve physicians and ministers, and is published at the Health Reform Institute, Battle Creek, Michigan, at the very low price of $1.00 per year. Dr. Trall, the world-wide renowned champion of the Hygienic medical system, and author of the "Hydropathic Encyclopedia," and some twenty other valuable works, has a special department, and will be a constant contributor. He has discontinued his own journal, in order to devote more time to popular lectures, his vegetarian colony in Ohio, and to finishing the great work (of several thousand pages) on the "Hygienic System," upon which he has been engaged for several years. The Health Reformer is a journal for the times, and everybody who wants to understand nature's laws, and wishes to know how to secure the greatest exemption from disease and premature death, should take it, read it, obey it, have it bound, and then do good by loaning it to his neighbors. We will gladly forward all subscriptions intrusted to our care."

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

BRO. GRANT:—Another Sabbath in Worcester has greatly confirmed me in the fact that, as a church, they are whole-hearted in the work of God. Their zeal for the truth is highly commendable, while their alms-giving is admirable. Besides the expenses of their meeting yesterday, they remembered Bro. Thurman with a donation in the morning of some sixteen dollars, and Sister Smith in the evening with a contribution of about fourteen dollars. Such acts tell on God's record more than the fig-tree that had "nothing but leaves." I shall be with them next Sabbath, the 25th.

Yours, H. PRATT.

Theology is a science; religion is a spirit. The mere theologian may prosecute his task in a logical and exact manner, but the system he erects may be as dry and lifeless as a statue or a skeleton.

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at the National Campmeeting, Chapin's Grove, Springfield, Mass., Aug. 25th, 1868, the following resolutions were adopted:—

Resolved, That we raise TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year.

Resolved, That our preaching brethren be, and hereby are, requested to act as Agents in this good work, to solicit contributions to the Tract Fund, as often at least as once in every quarter, and forward the same to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, BOSTON, MASS.

THE MEMPHIS MISSION.

BRO. GRANT:—I am here again in the midst of the work of saving souls; and the Lord is still with us and ready to help. O the work to be done here! Would to God there were more laborers in this field. And there might be many if the hearts and hands of God's people everywhere were open. What do many of our dear brethren want of so much of this world, when it is certain that they can not be here long enough to use it? If the Lord is coming soon (and is he not?) why act as if he was far away in his coming? The world will not believe us unless we act out our faith.

There is much sickness and destitution throughout this city among the colored people, and the calls for help are more pressing than ever before since I came here. There are causes for all this suffering, which I will not now name; but sin is the origin of all, and until this is removed this state of things must exist.

We have a blessed church here, but it is passing through the furnace and being tried. It has met with much persecution, but it grows firmer and purer daily. It is being added to weekly. I baptized three dear souls last Sabbath, and more will be ready next Sunday. Our monthly church meeting was held night before last, and was a very exciting one, as the church excluded two of its members for disorderly conduct. This is the only church in the city where a strict discipline is enforced, and a thorough watch-care kept up over the members. We are determined to have many in this church ready when the Lord comes.

After our meeting closed, a woman, a stranger, who had been present during the exercises, came to me and said, "I desire to join your church. I came in from the country a few months ago, and have visited every church in the city to find a home, and this is the only one where the members are ever turned out for bad conduct. I believe this is a good church, and I want to join you. I have been a Methodist, but now want to be baptized and make this my home." She will be baptized next Sabbath with others.

We have met with a great loss in the death of Sr. Northrup. But Sr. Valle of New Jersey is here, and doing well. We are looking daily for Sr. Byam of Rochester, N. Y., and Sr. Boide of N. Y. City, whom the Board have appointed to come. There is work here for all, and the seed sown is sure to spring up and yield a harvest. Bro. Wilkins is with us yet, not being well enough to go on to labor at La Grange. He is getting better, and will leave us in a few days for his post and field of labor. We all ask to be remembered by those having the prosperity of the cause at heart. Soon we all shall be called from the field. Our work every where is almost done. I doubt if I ever see my friends at the North again in this life. May we meet in the coming one, eternal. I. I. LESLIE.

ALL FOR GOOD.

As saith the Lord, "All things shall work for good," etc. God's power to bring good out of intended evil has been lately manifested in the events at Locust-hill, Windsor, Broome Co., N. Y. There are a few believers, who have been in the habit of meeting in the school-house weekly for worship. This has greatly disturbed some of the opposition, and especially so when there was preaching; so that the house has been locked against them, and stoned in time of preaching, saluting the preacher through the key-hole with "That's a lie," threatening tar and feathers, etc., until Jan. 30th, 1868, when an attempt was made to keep us out by guarding the door of the school-house, and thus preventing the people from going in to worship. But we all went in without violence or molestation, otherwise than the protest of rowdies and drunken trustees.

On Dec. 23d, 1867, at a regular and legally called meeting, the district unanimously voted, and so recorded on the district clerk's book, that said house "shall be free for all religious meetings." But those with whom such a covenant was nothing, being determined to shut out "these Advents," and break up their meetings, and frighten their preacher out of his wits, went to Binghampton, and swore out a warrant for me and seven others, making an oath that we "violently assaulted them" in entering the house on the aforesaid 30th of Jan., 1868; then obtaining a constable (a brother of the house-stoning trustee, who was also a Wesleyan Methodist), on Feb. 2nd they came into my meeting (it being Sunday evening) in the midst of the sermon, and interrupted by saying he had a warrant for eight persons, and he demanded the assistance of the whole congregation in taking the prisoners. After hearing the names called (my name being first on the list), I told him I would attend to him after meeting. He and his company protested, but I said to the people, Be quiet, and I will finish my sermon. I spoke some fifteen minutes after being arrested. The singers then sung—"Am I a soldier of the cross," etc., with spirit. I then knelt down by the constable and prayed as directed by our Lord for our enemies. On rising up, I pronounced the benediction, and then gave myself up to the powers that be, as did all the rest who were arrested.

The final result was, the Lord brought good out of the evil; for it cost the complainants $15.00 to my $1.00, and also so excited the righteous indignation of the unsectarian part of the community, that our brethren, with their aid, are putting up a free house, worth some five or six hundred dollars. But they are poor. Shall they be crushed by the enemies of God and truth on that account? No, never. Does not every reader of the Crisis say, "No, never"? Never let them be crushed because they are poor.

Well, I propose a plan to help them to $100, and that is to divide it into shares of twenty-five cents each, and then take ten shares myself, and ask every reader of the Crisis, except poor widows and others that are really poor, to take stock in this house of God. Shall I call in vain? Shall I plead for these poor children of God, and to no purpose? I think not. Now, who will take one, four, ten, or even twenty shares in this good work? If any will help, let them send as soon as possible, and as much as God may move your heart to give to build the house of God. Direct to C. F. Sweet, Albion, Orleans Co., N. Y., and I will do the business for the brethren at Windsor, and forward your donations to the same. C. F. SWEET.

P. S.—After doing all they are able, they lack about $200.

THE DAY IS NEAR.

Do you believe it? The day of the appearing of the great and glorious King is at hand. "The great day of the Lord is near; it is near and hasteth greatly, even the voice of the day of the Lord."—Zeph. 1:14.

As one point of time after another passes by, let no one settle down into carnal security, which is a state of stupor and lethargy from which, if you are not aroused, you will sink into eternal despair. You have had warning upon warning; the signs have been fulfilled before your eyes and the eyes of the generation now living; and what excuse have you if that day shall come upon you as a thief and find you unprepared? I trust that a few are truly ready; but oh, how many are utterly unprepared!

If our blessed Lord wept over Jerusalem, in view of the impending doom of that devoted city, have not the saints still greater cause to weep over a world lying in wickedness, persisting in rebellion, and rushing madly to destruction? The Lord himself hath no pleasure in the death of the wicked; he entreats them to turn from their evil ways, that they may escape the coming wrath, and find eternal life and unending bliss in the glorious home prepared for all who love and obey him. And the prophet said, "O that mine head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people."

The saints do not look with indifference upon the tragic scene which is so vividly foretold, and which is now imminent and impending. O, careless sinner, you do not know the earnest desire, the agonizing and unutterable longing which God's people have for your eternal welfare. God himself pleads with you, and his people plead with you to turn, repent, and live.

And even the angels are not indifferent, for there is great joy among them over even one sinner that repenteth. And let me assure you that no living saint knows a sweeter joy than that which thrills his whole being when he sees a sinner enter the ark of safety, and take shelter in the Rock of ages. If there are any so far gone in the madness of delirium that they will turn a deaf ear to all the entreaties of God, angels and men, we must sadly leave them to their fate, for we are assured that unless they repent they must perish.

But I know there are some whose hearts are tender, and who seem to be just ready to decide the great question, and take their stand on the Lord's side. We appeal to such to hasten, and we would take you by the hand, even as the angels took Lot out of Sodom, and would say to you, delay not, but "escape for thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed."

For the Lord is coming in glory and majesty, "to shake terribly the earth." Already we hear the sound as it were of his chariot wheels, in the reports that reach us of the terrible earthquakes in South America, and in the islands of the sea. Such a fearful scene is beyond description, when the earth opened and swallowed up whole cities, and while the sea and waves were roaring, giving evidence to all of the power of Him who has already begun to "shake terribly the earth."

Reader, are you quite ready for that great day? If not, do you ever intend or hope to be ready? There are many in the churches, there are some even among Adventists, who are not quite ready, nor quite willing that the Lord should come now. Have you prayed for a little delay, a little more time for preparation? Your prayer has been answered, but be sure to improve the precious moment, the accepted NOW, for you have no assurance of a more convenient season.

"Now redemption long expected
See in solemn pomp appear;
All his saints by man rejected,
Rise to meet him in the air.
Hallelujah!
See the day of God appear."

Webster, Mass. F. W. CHAMBERLAIN.

TACT IN CHRISTIAN WORK.—We use tact in business, why not use it, in leading others to Jesus? One friend of mine asked a watchman, in New York, the way to a place in the city. After receiving direction, he hands him a little tract, "The Way to Heaven," and, with the kindest looks, and a gentlemanly manner, and with a heart burning for the salvation of souls, said: "You have kindly showed me the way; now let me show you the way to a better land. We have but little time here, and must soon go there. I shall follow your directions may you follow mine. Good evening!" and was gone. In the still, lone hours of night, the watchman stands by the lamp-post reading the directions to a better land, left by the stranger. The kind face, the gentle words, that burning love for Jesus, and the title of the tract, will all burn deep, though the book were torn to fragments and scattered to the winds.—The Christian at Work.

For the World's Crisis.

MT. VERNON TENT-MEETING.

This meeting began Oct. 2d. The people came out well to hear the gospel of the kingdom. Much of our preaching was new doctrine to them, and some, like the Bereans, began to "search the Scriptures to see whether these things were so." Several of the Baptists and other denominations came, and became much interested in the faith. Our brethren and sisters came in from the surrounding country, during some part of the time, ready to work for the Lord, who blessed the work. The sweet spirit of peace and union pervaded all our meetings, and the bond of love was truly manifest. Our social meetings were "heavenly places in Christ."

The preaching was set home to the hearts of many, and they confessed that these things must be so. Some Universalists confessed that they had "always felt perfectly secure for many years" in their views, but our preaching had destroyed their foundation. One lady, ninety years old, of good faculties, formerly a Baptist, but stumbled by Calvinism, had fallen into Universalism and Spiritualism, came out and was greatly blessed, confessing that what we had preached had shaken her foundation all up. Another lady of influence and intelligence said,

"I never heard the doctrine of the immortality of the soul disputed before. I believed I had an immortal soul, and it was a part of God, and I never had a doubt but I was safe; but your preaching has taken away my foundation entirely. I had heard you were an ignorant, low, deluded set of people, and I was sorry to see your tent set up; but I have heard you preach more of the gospel than all I ever heard before in my life. I am thankful the tent is here."

She is now intelligently seeking the Lord and his mercy. We are confident she will find him. Many others are doing likewise. Thanks to God. Many are thankful that the Maine Mission Tent came to Mt. Vernon. The Lord has made a mark there that the devil cannot rub out. Much good will follow. We were treated very kindly by the people, and had the sympathies of the mass of the citizens of the town.

A MOB.

Our meeting closed Sunday evening, Oct. 11th, a little past nine o'clock, when all dispersed, leaving our faithful Bro. Griffin in charge of the tent. About eleven o'clock he heard the footsteps of a company of persons in the road near by. On looking out he found them in consultation. They soon separated into two divisions and surrounded the tent. They cut off one main guy rope. Bro. G. immediately tied it. They then cut the second and the third, he following, expostulating and tying the guys. Bro. G. then went and called for help from a house near by. When he was returning to the tent they had all ranged on one side of the tent, seven in number, and with one stroke each, cut the last main guy, and six smaller guys, then ran from the field of action. Bro. G. tied the ropes, and the tent stood. They threw a heavy stone at him, which fortunately did not hit him.

The next morning as the news spread through the town, a spirit of sadness and mortification pervaded the public mind, and many came to see the work of these poor, miserable, misguided young men, who had so disgraced their parents and their town. The names of these wretched young men are known. Some of them belong to the first families, and of pious and respectable parents and worthy citizens, while others may have had less advantages. These desperadoes made frequent efforts to disturb our meetings by bad conduct, but reserved their worst till the meeting had closed. The Lord has graciously preserved us from all serious injuries, and planted the truth of our message in the town, and this vile act of young men brought up under church and Sabbath School influences will be an increase of evidence that we preached the truth, and the harvest is nearly ripe. If the civil law is enforced it will take these seven young men to their proper home, the State lodgings at Thomaston. The proper course of proceeding is yet to be considered. May the Lord lead them to repentance and salvation, is our prayer.

For the World's Crisis.

CHRIST OUR LIFE.

For centuries the philosophers and wise men of earth have been endeavoring to find some method by which to explain the origin of earth and man, but thus far without success. We do not now purpose to discuss the various theories presented, but make the bold declaration that unless we accept the Bible account we have not a shadow of an argument on which to base a theory.

The Bible represents man as the last in the order of created intelligences, and only differing from former creations in his superior mental powers. His perpetuated existence was made dependent upon obedience to certain laws given by God his Creator. The penalty affixed to disobedience was death. As God was a perfect being, his laws were of course perfect. To argue that the nature of the penalty might be changed, is to accuse God of imperfection. When, therefore, God had established a law of death, it became necessary that there should no longer be ability on the part of the transgressor to escape its penalty; consequently our first parents, being mortalized, could not impart to their posterity any higher nature than they themselves possessed, and thus we must die. Without a Christ, extinction of being must necessarily be the result.

All men fall into this condition, and those who die become extinct to all intents and purposes. In this condition of things a Savior is provided. It was necessary that such a being should be holy, harmless, undefiled. He should be more than mortal. He should be of such a nature and character that death could have no claims on him. Such a being was found in the person of the Son of God. He was dwelling in the glory of his Father before the world was. He was the beloved Son. He relinquished his high position, and came to earth and died. Ah! now may all hell rejoice, and the devil sing a triumphant song. The Son of God is dead, and who shall shield the sons of men from the execution of the law or from infernal wrath?

But hark! What means this tumult around his grave? Who has rolled away the stone from the sepulchre's door? Who has smitten the guard of soldiers so that they have become as dead? Who are these that enter the tomb and make it resplendent with the glories of the heavenly world? Who is this coming forth from the grave, having broken the power of death, and opened a door, through the which at his bidding all mankind shall come forth? It is the Son of God, who was crucified, not for the good, but for offenders; and was raised again, not for the just, but for our justification. He died for all, then are all dead. He lives for all, then shall all live. Himself hath taught us that there shall be two classes in the resurrection; the one to life, and the other to damnation. The antagonism of conditions presents an equal antagonism of characters. All that are in him must be as he is; all that are out of him have no claim on life, and thus he becomes OUR LIFE. The apostle says, "Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Then will we sing in sweetest strains and highest notes the song of deliverance. If when he ascended upon high the heavenly choirs could sing, "Be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors, and let the King of glory in," how much more shall a ransomed earth rejoice when its King, immortal in beauty, shall come to reign for ever. D.

THE RESURRECTION A NECESSITY.

"Flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God." These words were earnestly spoken a few days ago, just as the body of an esteemed citizen had been lowered into its last sleeping place. They were intended for consolation and instruction. The occasion was a solemn one, and the minister's remarks made each bystander feel the importance of his subject. But there were those present who could not accept the immaterialistic construction of those solemn words—"Flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God." They felt confident that the pious man who slept at their feet would at the last great day rise to inherit the kingdom. Not because the faults he had were overbalanced by so many virtues, but because Christ died that all who chose might have eternal life. They believed that he would have part in the resurrection of the just, and that he now sweetly sleeps in Christ.

Flesh and blood cannot, and yet we have the assurance that some flesh and blood will inherit the kingdom of God. There is no contradiction here. Theology may not explain, but the Scriptures do reconcile the seeming discrepancy. They also declare, "neither doth corruption inherit incorruption," and yet directly after affirm that "this corruptible must put on incorruption." Neither is there incongruity here. Flesh and blood is the "corruptible," and it is the corruptible which must put on incorruption. This "natural" body must become the spiritual body. The being who dies is the "mortal," and it is this mortal which must put on immortality. See 1 Cor. 15th chap.

Man might have lived forever in incorruption, but he sinned, did not eat of the tree of life, and the penalty is—DEATH. He must return to the dust, out of which he was taken. He can not as he is inherit the kingdom of God, because he forfeited all his right and title. Corruption does not inherit incorruption, because man is corruptible and must suffer corruption. Flesh and blood inherit mortality, iniquity, corruption, death. Christ came to save, because this is a lost world.

And some will be saved. Some corruptible bodies will nevertheless put on incorruption. Some natural bodies will, notwithstanding, be raised spiritual bodies. Some mortals will indeed be crowned with immortality. As Christ, the great leader and representative, was redeemed from the power of the grave; so will "many" now sleeping in the dust awake in his likeness. Said that patient patriarch, Job—"All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer. If I wait, the GRAVE shall be my house. And though, after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet IN MY FLESH SHALL I SEE GOD."

And not alone Job, but all the redeemed will in their flesh see God. The promise is that the righteous shall be like the "second MAN," who "is the Lord from heaven." Christ after his resurrection said, "Behold my HANDS and my FEET, that it is I myself; handle me, and see; for a spirit (Griesbach has it "phantasma, phantom," in the margin—an imaginary being) hath not FLESH and BONES, AS YE SEE ME HAVE." Thus he ascended, and in LIKE MANNER will he return.

Though flesh and blood cannot by nature, or by its own merit, inherit the kingdom of God, yet surely the righteous will be raised like Christ, and, like Job, will in their flesh see God. There is certainly one way in which corruption can inherit incorruption, and flesh and blood can become heir with Abraham of the world to come. In fact the phrase "flesh and blood" is a mere idiom, used to represent the corruptible state of the human race. The same idea would be expressed by the words "mortal man."

But comparatively "few" of the mortal race will ever get into the kingdom. The masses travel the broad road that leads to eternal destruction, and do not seek for immortality by patient continuance in well doing. They are lost, because flesh and blood can not—save by a victory through our Lord—inherit the kingdom of God. Even the righteous, whether dead, or alive, must first be changed, because flesh and blood in its present state cannot inherit the kingdom. But it is not a transformation from materiality to immateriality. It is not a change from substance to a mere fleshless shadow. It is not a metaphorzation from corporeality to a mere boneless nonentity. The "world to come" will be as real and as tangible as our own, and as analogy and astronomy teach, as are the countless worlds in the heavens around us. We are not capable of realizing the glory of the "new heavens and new earth," but it is just as true that the most gifted have never half appreciated this.

"IN MY FLESH WILL I SEE GOD," is a Bible doctrine, and should be in every christian creed. The resurrection is a necessity, and what advantageth even the righteous if the dead rise not? No, the grave is now the house of our departed friend. Worms may destroy his body, yet in his flesh will he see God. He has "borne the image of the earthy"—the depraved "flesh and blood"—but he will also "bear the image of [Christ] the heavenly." He has gone the way of ALL the earth, and now rests from his labors in the silent grave. When God calls, he will answer.—Now and Then.

— Two hearts which mutually love, are like two magnetic clocks; that which moves in one must also move in the other, for it is the same power which acts in both.

Correspondence.

From Bro. C. B. Reynolds.

BRO. GRANT:—Under the blessing of God, the little flock baptized into Christ by dear Bro. Wm. Fenn, at Yorkshire (the result of the tent labors of Brn. Fenn and Wendell last June), left to the pastoral care of that most earnest and worthy laborer in the vineyard, Bro. Clinton Colegrove, have enjoyed most blessed meetings; and the twenty have now become fifty-nine, and are still increasing at almost every meeting. The power of truth and God's blessing thereon is manifest by sinners enlisting under the banner of Emanuel. Very many of our little band have been brought from infidelity and skepticism by the light of Advent truth, and now can happily realize the perfect and complete harmony of God's holy word. May God in the infinity of his mercy pour boundless blessings on his faithful servants, who, despite the frowns of men, boldly declare the truth. May joy and peace crown their self-sacrificing labors, till He who shall bring their great reward appears.

Bro. W. A. Fenn is most anxiously looked for here in Arcade by many who are yet in darkness. By those joyous in possession of the light of truth he will be right warmly welcomed. All hope and expect, under the blessing of God, his coming will induce very many to discard their immortal-soul notions, and strengthen the little flock at Yorkshire, who now with dear Bro. Colegrove are laboring zealously for the cause of truth, looking for and hastening toward the day of our reward,—the appearing of Jesus. Yours in the hope that day may come quickly,

CHAS. B. REYNOLDS.

From Bro. I. Damman.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—It is well known that I have spent the most of my time this season in the Western States. I would here say that it has been one among the best of my life, although I did not see as many converted as I have seen in the same time. But I saw good done, some converted, and others reclaimed; in particular, one of my dear brothers in the flesh was restored to the favor of God and hearty communion with the saints, looking for Jesus. This I speak of as something very precious to me. I trust his companion and a number of his children will embrace the Savior. I think I am not able to tell the joy that the saints felt. But we will tell it when we get into the kingdom of God.

My visit in the town of Clayton and vicinity was attended with some interest,—I hope the salvation of some. Hope to meet some of those dear ones in the "perfect day." God bless the seed sown.

My journey home was attended with gratification, while meeting so many of my old brethren and friends on the camp-grounds at Springfield and Alton Bay, to know that God's blessing was on me as well as others in preaching the word of God, and that God heard prayer and raised up the sick. Praise God for his grace. The power of healing is in the church yet, and will be till Jesus comes, in spite of infidelity. My faith in the Bible never was stronger than now, and in the faith that Jesus will come in a few years; and I I think in this generation, which has seen the signs Jesus gave in Luke 21.

I. DAMMAN.

BRO. GRANT:—I have recently had a second surgical operation on my eye, to remove the tumor, and it bids fair to recover if the tumor does not grow again. I am still much affected with heart disease; but, on the whole, my health is slowly improving, and I am preaching all I dare to—not half as much as I wish to. Hope to do more soon. W. SHELDON.

Obituaries.

BARKER. Died in Salisbury, Conn., Oct. 8th, 1868, Sister Sarah A., wife of Bro. George A. Barker, aged forty-six years.

Her sickness was severe. For forty-nine days she suffered, yet without a murmur. With a bright hope she looked forward to a resurrection to immortality and eternal life, and sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, to wait till he comes to wake the saints and take them home. She leaves a husband and five children to mourn her loss. The prayers of God's dear children are requested in their behalf. The occasion was improved by the writer, who spoke from Heb. 11: 35. C. W. BAKER.

BABCOCK. Died in East Greenwich, R. I., Sept. 13th, 1868, Bro. Charles Babcock, aged seventy-six years.

Bro. Babcock embraced the Advent doctrine in 1843, as taught by Bro. Miller, and has held fast the faith through all the varied changes of the past twenty-five years. "Like a shock of corn fully ripe, and fit for the master's use," he wrapped himself in the mantle of his faith, and sweetly and calmly fell asleep in Jesus, looking for speedy and eternal redemption at his appearing. May God comfort and bless, the surviving widow and children. Funeral from his residence, East Greenwich, Sept. 16th. Words of comfort by the writer, from Rev. 14: 13. A. DURFEE.

JOHNSON. Died in New Durham, N. H., Sept. 8th, 1868, of cholera infantum, Edna May, daughter of Lorenzo A. and Helen F. Johnson, aged two years and twenty-two days.

"It is well with the child."

Your little one is sleeping
In quiet, dreamless rest;
While you are sadly weeping,
She slumbers with the blest.

A bud of fairest promise,
Blighted ere it could bloom;
How lovely will the flower be
In the bright world to come.

. . . .

With gentle, meek submission,
Waiting till Jesus comes;
When you will clasp your darling,
Forever safe at home.

MARTHA S. HORNE.

PHETTEPLACE. Died in Blackstone, Mass., Oct. 10th, 1868, of dysentery, terminating in congestion of the brain, Josie, only child of M. R. and L. R. Phetteplace, aged sixteen months and twenty days.

She was sick very nearly four months, and for the last few weeks was a great sufferer. A strong love nature and great patience in life, she sleeps peacefully in the care of the great Shepherd in death. Eld. H. Pratt spoke words of comfort and faith to us on the funeral occasion.

M. R. PHETTEPLACE.

GRAY. Died in Stoneham, Aug. 21st, Nellie M., daughter of Hiram and Maria E. Gray, aged nine months and twenty days.

Words of comfort were spoken at the funeral by the writer. May this severe stroke be sanctified to the afflicted family, that they may meet little Nellie in the resurrection morning. JOHN G. HOOK.

KIMBALL. Fell on sleep in Amherst, Maine, Sept. 27th, 1868, Mary E. Kimball, daughter of Bro. George and Ann Kimball, aged twelve years, ten months, and six days.

LIBERTY WETHERBEE.

SIMES. Died in Milton Mills, N. H., April 5th, 1868, Frank A., son of William and Sarah E. Sines, aged eight years, ten months, and fourteen days.

Also, Sept. 17th, James E., son of Wm. and Amanda M. Simes, aged one year, nine months, and nineteen days. W. S.

FULLER. Died in Willimantic, Conn., Oct. 26th, John Grant Fuller, youngest child of Henry L. and Mary J. Fuller, aged eleven months.

The Republicans have commenced an agitation in Barcelona. They protest against the acts of Gens. Prim and Serrano.

DOMESTIC.

NEW YORK, Oct. A letter from Lima states that earthquakes continue in Arequipa and Arica, but there was nothing left to be destroyed. Sanitary measures have been taken at Lima and Callao to prevent the recurrence of yellow fever.

At Valparaiso fears were entertained of another earthquake, as premonitory symptoms were observable.

A SINGULAR NAME.—Rev. Dr. Newman of New Orleans, on a visit to this city a few weeks since, attended the camp meeting at Sing Sing. While there benevolent friends gave him $359.50 for the Orphans' Home and Asylum, of New Orleans. For this act of kindness and benevolence the Doctor promised that on his return the children should sing a song of praise, and that the first boy sent to the Home thereafter should be named Sing Sing. On reaching New Orleans he hastened to the Asylum, when the little ones expressed great joy at his return, and on being told of the donation of benevolent friends in the North, sang sweetly the doxology. But who of the number was ever thereafter to bear the honored name of Sing Sing? Standing at his side was a little boy six years old, in a rude suit of brown linen, but well formed, his features regular, and his face unusually intelligent. That day one of the City Recorders had sent him to the "Home." His parents were Roman Catholics and were dead. He at once placed the little fellow upon a chair, and, baptizing him in the name of the Trinity, called him Sing Sing. After the baptism several speeches were made by the boys, and Sing Sing was among the speakers.—Correspondence Journal, Oct. 3d.

VELOCITY OF THE TIDAL WAVES.—The speed of tidal movements so vast as those which recent earthquakes have caused is almost incredible. The great earthquake wave of April 20 was transmitted from Hawaii to the shores of Mexico, California and Oregon, a distance varying from three thousand to five thousand miles, in five hours' time, as indicated by the government self-registering tide-guages at San Francisco and Astoria, which recorded its arrival on the evening of the same day in which it had desolated the coast of Puna and Kau.

☞ The French Government displays an extraordinary eagerness to extend its possessions in Asia, Africa, and Australasia. An interesting illustration of the means by which this result is brought about was recently seen in the South Sea Islands. The King of an island not far from Tahiti, and whose independence has been guaranteed by the United States, as well as by England and France, was compelled by a French officer to go on board a French steamer, and while there he was compelled to sign a treaty favorable to France. The French Governor in Tahiti seems to be a desperado who cares nothing about international law; but unless some of the other Great Powers enter a energetic protest against this high-handed measure, it is not likely that France will disavow it.

☞ A National Christian Convention is called by the officers of the American Christian Commission and a large number of prominent ministers and laymen, to assemble in New York city Nov. 17th, and continue in session four days. The topics proposed for discussion are akin to those that have been so well discussed but so little exhausted in the state conventions.

Massachusetts Quarterly Conference.

By invitation of the Second Advent Church in Chelsea, the next State Quarterly Conference of the Society will be held in Chelsea, Mass., at Library Hall, commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 20th, continuing daily and over the following Sunday. It is to be hoped we shall have a general gathering of all the faithful in this region. We will do our best for you, both temporally and spiritually. Come, both delegates and all, that have an interest in the salvation of men at the coming of Christ. Some business of importance will come before us. Preaching the first evening. E. OWEN, Sec'y.

Conference.

If the Lord will, there will be a conference at Week's Mills, China, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 22d, and continue over Sunday. Preachers and all are invited to come and earnestly engage in the work of the Lord, that sinners may be saved and God's name be glorified. Homes will be provided for all. Strangers may call on Geo. Jackson, Albert Chapman, and Alton Doe. For the brethren, JER. CARR.

Dedication Notice.

There will be a two days meeting on Locust Hill, in the town of Windsor, Broome Co., N. Y., Oct. 23d to 25th. A new church is to be dedicated to the worship of God. Dedication sermon to be preached by the writer, Oct. 25th, at 10½ A. M. All are invited to attend. Teams will meet the cars at Great Bend, Oct. 24th. Let all wishing to be met, write to O. B. Wilmot, so that all can be provided with conveyance, and that the brethren may know what trains to meet. C. F. SWEET.

Conference.

Providence permitting, there will be a conference on New Durham Ridge, to commence Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, and hold over the following Sunday. Brn. J. Couch, A. Ross, and others, are expected. We wish to make one more effort to advance God's cause and save the perishing. Let prayer go up to God for his blessing.

For the brethren, J. G. SMITH.

Notice.

The Lord willing, the New Hampshire Mission Tent will be pitched in Sandwich Centre, Oct. 21st, to continue as the Lord directs. Services to commence at 4½ o'clock P. M. An invitation is given to all to come. If it is bad weather, we will procure a hall. Elds. T. W. Piper, W. J. Hobbs, and others, will be present with the writer to preach the word. D. M. LEAVITT.

General Conference at Buchanan.

There will be a general social conference of believers in the speedy advent of our Lord Jesus Christ, at Buchanan, Mich., commencing Monday, Nov. 23d, and continuing over the following Lord's day. Elder John Couch, of New Hampshire, will be present to preach the word. Also, Elds. J. V. Himes, Wm. Sheldon, Frank Burr, and many others of our western ministers. We invite all our friends, north, south, east, and west, to be in attendance. Those purposing to make visits east or west this fall or winter, will do well to arrange to stop here during the whole or a portion of the conference. Provision will be made for all who attend. Our hearts are large enough, and our homes are open. Come, and bring a blessing from the Lord with you. Many have long wished for an opportunity to visit this place. Embrace this occasion, and it will do, not only us, but your own soul good.

The General Ministerial Conference will hold an adjourned session at the same time, which will add greatly to the interest of the occasion. Come to the feast. In behalf of the church at Buchanan,

D. R. MANSFIELD, Pastor.

WM. L. HIMES, Secretary.

General Ministerial Conference.

The Western General Ministerial Advent Christian Conference will meet at Buchanan, Mich., Thursday, Nov. 26th (in connection with the Social Conference), as decided by a vote of the General Conference at its last session. This meeting is not to be regarded as a special meeting, but as a continuation of our unfinished meeting at De Kalb; hence, all ministers having a good standing in any of the Western Advent Christian Conferences can take part in our deliberations, as specified in the primary call. Let the watchmen rally. We represent a noble cause. Let us honor it in earnest efforts for its promotion.

WM. SHELDON, Secretary.

I HAVE A FRIEND.

I have a Friend, a precious Friend, unchanging, wise and true,
The chief among ten thousand; oh, I wish you knew him too!
When all the woes that wait on me relax each feeble limb,
I know who waits to welcome me; have you a friend like Him?
He comforts me, he strengthens me; how can I then repine?
He loveth me; this faithful friend in life and death is mine.

I have a Father true and fond; he cares for all my needs,
His patience bore my faithless ways, my mad and foolish deeds;
To me he sends sweet messages—he waiteth but to bless;
Have you a Father like to mine in such deep tenderness?
For me a kingdom doth he keep; for me a crown is won;
I was a rebel once,—he calls the rebel child his son.

I have a proved, unerring Guide, whose love I often grieve;
He brings me golden promises my heart can scarce receive;
He leadeth me, and hope and cheer doth for my path provide,
For dreary nights and days of drought; have you so sure a Guide?
Quench not the faintest whisper that the heavenly Dove may bring,
He seeks with holy love to lure the wanderer 'neath his wing.

I have a home—a home so bright its beauties none can know;
Its sapphire pavement, and such psalms none ever saw below;
Its golden streets resound with joy, its pearly gates with praise,
A temple standeth in the midst, no human hearts could raise;
And there unfading fountains flow, and pleasures never end;
Who makes that home so glorious? It is my loving Friend.

My Friend, my Father, and my Guide, and this our radiant home,
Are offered you; turn not away, to-day I pray you "come."
My Father yearns to welcome you; his heart, his home, to share;
My Friend is yours, my home is yours, my Guide will lead you there;
Behold One altogether fair—the faithful and the true;
He pleadeth with you for your love, he gave his life for you. —Selected by Kate N. Chaffee.

FASTING AND PREVAILING PRAYER.

There are few people who know the real benefit to be derived from fasting. Many do not care to know. You would not catch them to go without a meal of victnals. No! not they. They don't believe in going hungry. I don't know as they would if by so doing they could prevail, and be the means of saving souls from death. There are others who realize that Jesus fasted "forty days" and overcame every temptation, and they love to follow his example, so far as in their power.

No man or woman ever truly fasted before the Lord, without great benefit to themselves and of prevailing with the Lord. God wants earnestness in his service. Jacob prayed and wrestled all night long, and prevailed with God. The anger of his brother whom he was to meet on the morrow was turned aside, and he met him in peace.

Look at the case of Esther and Mordecai. There was a man whom king Ahasuerus had prospered and promoted, and he was terribly important. Some people cannot bear prosperity. When they are put ahead at all, they want every one to go at their nod.

Haman was one of this class. He was the largest man in the king's one hundred and twenty-seven provinces; but there was a Jew sitting in the king's gate who would not take off his hat to him when he passed. How contemptible! He strutting around in his pomposity, and there was one who would not bow to him as he passed along the street. Poor fellow! He then puts his wits to work to try to get the Jews destroyed, and so remove that contemptible fellow out of the way. He tells the king—"There is a certain people scattered abroad and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of thy kingdom; and their laws are diverse from all people; neither keep they the king's laws; therefore it is not for the king's profit to suffer them. If it please the king, let it be written that they may be destroyed; and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver to the hands of those that have the charge of the business to bring it unto the king's treasury."

The thing pleased the king, and he signed the decree, little realizing that it involved the death of his own wife. The decree was sent by posts into all the empire, that "all Jews, both young and old, little children and women, be caused to perish." Mordecai went to weeping and lamenting. He sent a message to the queen for her not to hold her peace, for she, being his cousin and a Jewess, must suffer the same fate with the rest. Instead of figuring and conniving, she sends back word to Mordecai, saying, "Go, gather together all the Jews that are present at Shushan, and fast ye for me, and neither eat nor drink three days, night or day. I also and my maidens will fast likewise; and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to law; and if I perish I perish."

The third day they prevailed. The God of heaven had been mindful of it all and worked for them. Men may make their plans, but God can bring them to naught. The decree had gone forth from the king, but the order was countermanded in great haste, and instead of the Jews falling before their enemies, their enemies fell before them. PRAYER prevailed, and he who sought their ruin had to escort Mordecai through the streets as "the man whom the king delighteth to honor," with the best robe on, and riding the king's horse. He had caused a gallows to be erected fifty cubits high, upon which to hang Mordecai, and was hung upon it himself; proving the scripture true that saith, "He that diggeth a pit for his neighbor, will surely fall into it himself."

People in their ambition little realize that there is a God in heaven who will prove his word true every time. It is not in vain to trust in him. He will do as he promises, if he has to cause water to gush forth from a smitten rock, or the waters of the Red Sea to wall up on either side to let his people over dry shod; or if he has to bring his three children out of the fiery furnace, without even the smell of fire upon them; or if he has to stop the mouths of hungry lions, while his prophet stays all night with them.

It was prevailing prayer that brought Daniel's deliverance. It was fasting and prayer that brought the dream and the interpretation of the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, which to us is such blessed assurance that we are now in the toe nails of the image.

How many instances of prevailing prayer there are recorded for our encouragement. Prevailing prayer is something more than mere formality. It is earnest, heartfelt pleadings. There are very many prayers said, but very little praying in these days. Paul and Silas, with their feet fast in the stocks in the inner prison, prayed, and the Lord delivered them. The church prayed for Peter's deliverance when in prison, and they were united in asking, and God must answer, if he has to send an angel from glory to open the prison doors and thrust Peter out. These are recorded for our encouragement.

The same God who has heard and answered the earnest prayers of his people in the past, hears prayer in these days, and has lost none of his power or willingness to answer. Jesus says, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you"; and he means just what he says. Can we not believe it? "Lord, increase our faith." A. P. MOORE.

"WHERE IS THE CITY?"

Such is the very peculiar title of a book, quite recently published by Roberts Brothers. In the Introduction we are informed that Israel Knight opened his Bible at Ezekiel 48: 35, and read:—

"And the name of the city from that day shall be, 'The Lord is there.' Closing the book, he reflected. At length he said, 'O! that I might find the city with that name!' Somewhere, there is a church, a peculiar people, whose name is rightly 'The Lord is there.' Being a youth who lacked a little of his majority, he addressed his guardian the following:

'RESPECTED SIR:—I hope I am a christian. As I have had but little experience, and have examined few books except those used in my classes, I am undecided what church I had better select with which to connect myself. Please advise me upon this important subject, and oblige Yours obediently,
ISRAEL KNIGHT.'

His guardian wrote in reply:—'He that doeth His will shall know of the doctrine. Love the Lord your God with all your heart, and your neighbor as yourself, and you will find the truth.... God is good. He gives wisdom to all who seek it with a humble mind. Therefore, look for yourself; but my advice is—look on all sides before you cleave to any.... Yours truly,
EPHRAIM STEARNS.'"

Israel is now quite perplexed; a great work is before him; how shall he perform it? "Shall I have recourse to a religious cyclopedia?" he asked himself. Then he thought of the words "books as affected are as men," and decided to pursue a different course of investigation. Business calls him to a distant part of the State, and while on his journey he began to read the Greek Testament. By the time he had arrived at the village of his temporary destination, he had examined into the third chapter of the Gospel by Matthew. At the eleventh verse he stopped short, for here he found a note written in the margin by the paternal hand: "In water, upon repentance. Or, according to the paraphrase of Grotius, 'upon that profession of repentance which you make.'"

He puts up at a hotel on Saturday evening. The proprietor is a Baptist. Sunday morning he informs Israel that there has been a great revival lately, about twenty souls are to be that day baptized, and he had better go and see them. Most gladly the invitation is accepted. On the way, the landlord discourses of the antiquity of his sect, and its superiority above all others. After speaking of the minister's prayer, which made a deep impression because of its brevity, depth of feeling and marked reverence, he remarks that in the earlier years of his ministerial career he had often indulged himself in roundly-worded and excursive prayers. He seemed to be striving to obey the injunction of the prophet, "In the beginning of the watches pour out thy heart like water before the face of the Lord." But he made a mistake and poured out his head. Hence, much was as if spilled on the ground, and could never be gathered up. Had he poured out his heart, it would have been otherwise.

We think there are many who have fallen into a similar mistake, and poured out of the head more than from the heart.

We are next favored with a sketch of the minister's sermon, in which he dwells very largely upon the subject of baptism, and argues the question with clearness and ability. His description of the baptismal scene is very beautiful, and Israel's heart is deeply impressed.

Next we have a sketch of the afternoon sermon, which was from another divine, who had been invited to preach on the subject of restricted communion. In this sketch, various Baptist authors are quoted, in order to present the views of this denomination on this point of theology. He afterward has a talk with the minister, and states his difficulties and objections, but seems to be almost converted to this system of doctrine. In the chapter devoted to the History of the Rise and Progress of the Baptists, much information is afforded respecting this sect.

Israel is fully satisfied that immersion is the only correct mode of baptism, and writes his guardian to this effect, and that he is about to join the Baptists, when, lo! a letter from "Ephraim" brings him to a dead stand:

"What do you mean by being a Baptist? There are, as I presume you know, at least nine different divisions of this sect in our own country [which he names], in all comprising about one million and a half members. If you mean a Regular Baptist, are you sure that you fully endorse their views upon other points of doctrine, as this one of immersion? Have you looked on all sides of this, at present, your favorite denomination? Remember that the wrong side of every sect you best get from the opposition...."

So Israel, acting upon this hint, goes among the Congregationalists, and in a Bible class hears the question of baptism discussed, himself being a prominent speaker among them. His first strong point, viz., the origin of baptism, or rather of Christian baptism, based on the example of Christ, is set aside by the teacher, who holds it to be unimportant, since Christ was not baptized, to found a rite, but to observe one long established. He did not say of his baptism as of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, "This do in remembrance of me," but, "Suffer it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness," signifying the necessity of answering an established law of practise. He came to fulfill the law and the prophets.

The seal of circumcision is then presented by the teacher, and the baptism unto Moses is touched upon, a baptism upon dry land, though passing through the sea. They discuss Paul's language, the figures employed, pro and con, in which the Congregationalist makes out quite a plausible argument, especially when he enforces it by the Greek en for in, and apo for out, referring to Christ's baptism; and where it is said that the eunuch went down into the water, the Greek word is eis; and out of the water is ek. He then enumerates the number of times in which these words are used in the original.

Israel is hard to satisfy, and brings forward his strong points one after another, but the teacher overrules them all one way or another. In the afternoon he beholds the rite performed by aspersion, the candidates, a babe, and a boy of three years. The infant wore a long dress of white cashmere, wrought heavily with silk; the little boy a blue coat, much braided. The first reminded Israel of the cherub of cunning work in the tabernacle; the other, of Hannah's child, who appeared in the temple in a new coat.

And now another candidate appears. An aged woman, clad in the habiliments of mourning, comes forward, leading by the hand a grandson of seven or eight summers. His father, the last prop of a widowed mother, had starved to death in Andersonville. It is a touching scene, and tears fill many eyes as the minister tenderly applies the water to the forehead of the child.

After this follows a talk with the pastor, who reads for his benefit quotations from Tertullian, Origen, Robinson, and served up the "Five Points" of Calvinism; and as the result of this conference, Israel had many thoughts. Of one thing he was sure, that he could not join a church with a Calvinistic creed, until he had at least examined further.

— The deepest waters are the most silent; empty vessels make the greatest sound, and tinkling cymbals the worst music. They who think least commonly speak most.

— It is usual with obstinate persons to regard neither truth in contradicting nor benefit in disputing. Positiveness is a certain evidence of a weak judgment.

— Do not be troubled because you have no great virtues. God made a million spires of grass where he made one tree. The earth is fringed and carpeted, not with forests, but grass. Only have enough of little virtues and common fidelities, and you need not mourn because you are neither a saint nor a hero.

— As flowers never put on their best clothes for Sunday, but wear their spotless raiment, and exhale their odor every day, so should the christian, free from stain, ever give forth the fragrance of the love of God.

— There are many reasons why we should obey the will of God, but none so potent as that embraced in the words, "For Jesus' sake."

— Some men think religion bears the same relation to life that flowers do to trees; that the tree must grow through a long period before the blossoming time. But the Bible represents religion not as the latest fruit of life, but as the whole of it—beginning, middle, and end.

HOW TO STUDY THE SCRIPTURES.

Success in any given enterprise depends largely upon knowing how to begin. Especially is this the case when applied to the study of the word of God with a view to intelligently comprehending its teachings. "How readest thou?" is a very proper question to propound, at the outset; and then follows another equally important inquiry, "understandest thou what thou readest?" The Bible is to many an obscure book, in which they can see but very little to interest them. Hence many persons who have been old Bible readers have said to us after learning the truth that the "Bible was a new book to them." Not that the book itself was any different, but that they had come to see the beauty and harmony of its teachings.

It is supposed by many honest and sincere persons, that the word of God must be interpreted in a two-fold way, viz: literally and spiritually. That its language is not to be read and understood the same as any other book; but that there is a kind of hidden and mystical meaning in its language, peculiar to itself; and that it must not be understood to mean always just what it says. Now, all such ideas are false; and no man holding them, be he learned or unlearned, can ever make progress toward truth.

The writings of prophets and apostles claim to be a revelation of the mind of Deity—designed to make known to mankind those things which, according to the wisdom and goodness of God, are calculated to comfort and otherwise benefit all who are mindful of their instruction. We should not, therefore, open the Bible as a revelation from God, and at the same time think it so enigmatical and mysterious in its nature as to preclude the possibility of our understanding it. When the Lord speaks to man he means to be understood. He, therefore, uses language which man can understand. Nevertheless, Deity designs that his people shall study, and search for the truth. He has endowed man with intellect—the faculty of reason and the power of reflection, that he may be able to study and comprehend the deep things of God. The stimulative effect of this study is not to intoxicate and craze the brain, but rather to strengthen and invigorate man's mental capacity, and to intensify and exalt all the nobler feelings of his nature.

The purpose of Deity concerning this planet and its inhabitants, as made known to the prophets, Jesus and the apostles, is a theme truly sublime and glorious; and its contemplation opens up before the human mind, a boundless, but inviting field of thought. Who does not feel a desire to explore this field? We remark, then, in the outset, that in order to make progress in studying the Scriptures, it is necessary to adopt what is termed the literal system of interpretation, that is, according to the letter of the text, just as you would proceed to read the history of England, the biography of Washington, or any other book. But some one will say this cannot be done, because of parables, symbols and figurative modes of speech, which are frequently employed by the inspired penman; and, therefore, a departure from the literal interpretation is absolutely necessary. By no means—these do not constitute the rule; they are exceptions to it, and even here, where the general narrative may be parabolic or figurative, the language employed is used literally. Words are signs of ideas; and while they may be used figuratively in order to give buoyancy, beauty and force to language, they nevertheless must be understood literally. Whenever we attempt to interpret the language of the Bible otherwise, we at once make it a confused and contradictory book. If it does not mean what it says, who can tell what it does mean? One man may interpret it one way, and so on without end, if we depart from the literal system of interpretation.

Parabolic and symbolic narratives are nearly always explained, and a little patient study is all that is necessary to understand in outline, if not in detail, whatever may be properly termed a parabolic illustration or a symbolic representation. Take for example the parable of the sower, recorded in the eighth chapter of Luke. In the subsequent explanation the sower is the Lord Jesus, the seed the "word of the kingdom" which he proclaimed throughout all the villages and cities of Israel. The four kinds of soil spoken of in the parable are four different classes of persons, and the good soil spoken of "are they who in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with patience." Now, the exposition of the above parable is so full and explicit that a little child can hardly mistake its import. Symbolic representations are also explained, so that the diligent Bible student may be able to comprehend their import. We say the diligent Bible student, for we mean such. God will have his people to labor for eternal life. They are to experience a pleasure and delight in meditating upon the Spirit's words. And the more they meditate and study, the stronger they grow. Instead of being exhausted and wearied by their efforts, they become more vigorous. They drink in, through the Spirit's words, a portion of the inexhaustible vitality of God, and are therefore being constantly re-supplied with the energy and life powers of him who is above all—the infinite and eternal. He who refuses to study the word of Deity is unworthy of the reward he has promised. The way of holiness is the way of truth, which makes the knowledge of truth essential to holiness of character. Those who love truth and revere God are diligently studious to learn all that the Lord hath spoken by the mouth of his holy prophets and apostles. They read his word not for a pastime simply, but because they are exceedingly anxious to know what the Spirit has said. They do not take up the Bible with a heavy heart, or with a disposition of lazy indifference, as do thousands of persons who understand not what they read, but with a lively interest and quick perception they search the Scriptures with all the avidity of a miner who seeks for the golden ore, or the costly diamond.

Again, another very essential point in the study of the Bible is to "rightly divide the word." Many persons read the Scriptures to no purpose all their days, just because they fail to "rightly divide the word of truth." A man may begin with the book of Genesis and read the Bible through every month in the year, and in the end know but very little indeed concerning the "way of life." In the first place, the books of the Bible are not arranged in chronological order; and in the second place, no one writer confines himself to any one topic in particular. For this reason reading the Scriptures through in a routine manner is no evidence at all of a superior knowledge or understanding of what the "Holy Spirit" has spoken. "No prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation."—2 Pet. 1: 20. It is necessary to compare scripture with scripture, if you would learn the "mind of the Spirit." Do not attempt to interpret a text, passage, or even a prophetic narrative, privately, or by itself alone; but compare it with all that other writers say upon the same subject, and thus get the testimony of all combined. To study the Bible, then, by subjects, is the proper way. Rightly divide the word so as to create harmony instead of discord. Paul charged Timothy to "study to show himself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." To avoid the danger, therefore, of perverting the truth, as well as to succeed in having our minds quickened by its life-giving power, it is necessary to rightly divide it. And to live by the truth, and attain unto the righteousness of obedience, it is necessary to keep it in memory.—Herald of the Kingdom.

For the World's Crisis.

HYMN.

Arise, ye saints of God, and sing
The praises of your Savior, King;
Salvation's joyful news proclaim
Through all the world, in his dear name.

Tell men of love, surpassing love,
That dwelt in him, when from above
He came to calm the tempest-tost,
And save the poor, the low, the lost:—

Who bade the prisoners all go free,
From sin and death to quickly flee;
Nor let the cares of worldly strife
Preclude the joys of endless life.

Go, tell of Him of humble birth,
Who yet was king of all the earth,
And went about the sick to heal,
The dead to raise, and life reveal.

Yes, tell of Him who, poor, despised,
Was crowned with thorns and crucified;
Who freely shed his precious blood
To save us from the fiery flood.

O yes, spread this glad news abroad,
That men may love and fear their God,—
Lay up their treasures far above,
Where all is safe and all is love.

And when your noble work is done,
The welcome plaudit, "faithful son,"
Will then be heard, as freely given
By all on earth and all in heaven.

REPORT OF CONN. A. C. CONF.

Met according to notice, Wednesday evening, 7 o'clock P. M., at Square Pond. Discourse by Eld. L. S. Luddington, from Matt. 18: 4, 5, which seemed to arouse a feeling of interest in the minds of the hearers. Thursday, 9.30 A. M., met for business. Reading of Scriptures and prayer by Eld. W. S. Campbell. Minutes of previous conference read and accepted. Usual committees appointed. Missionary matters were talked over, and after due deliberation the following brethren were appointed Missionary Committee:—L. S. Luddington, New Britain; G. W. Denny, New Haven; to stand for the conference year. The subject of a campmeeting for the State of Conn. was suggested, and after a few remarks upon the propriety of such a thing, and all concurring in the opinion that it would be beneficial, the following brethren were appointed a committee of three to attend to the matter, viz., I. B. Potter, West Stafford; Bingham Taylor, New Britain; M. J. Dunham, New Haven. A State Mission Tent was suggested, and the following committee appointed, with instructions to procure a suitable tent, viz., G. W. Denny and B. St. John.

Reports of delegates and preachers, all of which were very interesting and encouraging. This being our annual meeting, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Pres., B. Hitchcock; Vice Pres., I. B. Potter; Sec'y, L. F. Moore; Treas., B. St. John.

Preachers present: Elds. W. S. Campbell, B. Hitchcock, B. St. John, I. B. Potter, W. J. Ripley, L. S. Luddington, L. F. Moore, A. Morse, and Bro. J. L. Wood. Delegates present: M. J. Dunham, New Haven; B. Taylor, New Britain; I. Lewis, Square Pond. The usual reports of Sec'y and Treas. were given and adopted.

Thursday eve., discourse by Eld. I. B. Potter, from Matt. 25: 10. After preaching two came forward to be prayed for, and indeed it was a melting time.

Friday, nine A. M., prayer and conference meeting. It was blessed to be there. At 10½ A. M., Eld. W. S. Campbell gave us a good discourse from a part of the first chapter of Hebrews. Friday evening, social meeting, which was moved by the power of God, followed by preaching by Eld. B. Hitchcock, at the close of which three came forward for prayer. Truly God is at work. Give him the glory.

Saturday A. M., prayer meeting. It was a feast, followed by a discourse by Eld. B. St. John. P. M., preaching by Eld. B. Hitchcock, and in the evening also; after which eight came forward to the anxious seat, seeking Jesus. It was indeed a time of rejoicing and weeping.

Sunday. Meetings as usual. Eld. B. St. John supplied the desk. Lord's Supper at six o'clock P. M., followed by a prayer meeting, at which time twelve were inquiring, "What shall we do?" I am sure we have no cause to be discouraged, brethren, for God was with us at Square Pond.

With this report, I would say to the churches in Conn., remember the conference in your prayers, that it may be instrumental and successful in promoting the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ in our State.

The brethren at S. P. made ample provision for all who came, and we were treated very kindly. Adjourned to meet at New Haven, by invitation of church at "Day's Hall," the first Wednesday in January, at seven o'clock P. M. L. F. MOORE, Sec.

CHRISTIAN COURAGE.—Chrysostom, before the Roman emperor, furnishes us with a most impressive and beautiful example of true christian courage. The emperor threatened him with banishment if he would still remain a christian.

Chrysostom replied, "Thou canst not, for the world is my Father's mansion; thou canst not banish me."

"But I will slay thee," said the emperor.

"Nay, but thou canst not," said the noble champion of faith again; "for my life is hid with Christ in God."

"I will take away thy treasures."

"Nay, thou canst not," was the retort; "for in the first place, I have none that thou knowest of; my treasure is in heaven, and my heart is there."

"But I will drive thee away from man, and thou shalt have no friend left."

"Nay, and thou canst not," once more said the faithful witness; "for I have a Friend in heaven, from whom thou canst not separate me. I defy thee. There is nothing thou canst do that can hurt me."

CRITICISM.

I wish people who criticise would use their hearts as much as their heads, and remember that just criticism implies praise as well as blame, and the latter is often less needed than the former. Honest, merited praise, and kind recognition of work well done, is not flattery; it is only encouragement. Yet in every relation of life there are excellent people who consider it a duty to correct blunders, reprove errors, and make you painfully conscious of your inefficiencies, deficiencies and depravities, who would be mortally afraid to praise you to your face, even for the most heroic toil and unselfish sacrifices in good work. The consequence is, that some of the most modest and beautiful natures struggle through years of doubt and discouragement, with but little hope of success, and that, too, when doubt and depression are not needed, are in no way a condition of healthful development, but are a hindrance to it.

But, say you, our best friends tell us of our faults. So they do; but if they are wise they tell us of our redeeming traits too, so that we may have courage to battle with our weaknesses, and have faith to believe that we shall overcome them. Let your criticism be keen and bright, and as true to its aim as a Damascus sword. But let it be manly and just, and be not afraid to praise as heartily and more gladly than to disapprove.

So when our minister preaches a grand good sermon, I manage to make him feel that it was good. I sometimes take him warmly by the hand, and looking into his honest eyes, tell him that I shall be better and truer for having known him. And when my wife does a particularly good or charming thing, I tell her she is one of the best and dearest little women in the world. I am sure that more young ministers, young writers, weary women, and world toilers every where are injured by stern recognition of their faults and failings than by pleasant recognition of their merits and successes.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

SAVE THE DEAD LEAVES.—If every horticulturist and farmer would think for a moment on the nature of fallen leaves—which contain not only the vegetable matter, but the earthly salts, lime, potash, etc., needed for the next season's growth and fertility—and that, too, exactly in this way, by the decomposition of these very fallen leaves, that nature enriches the soil, year after year, in her great forests, it would hardly be possible for such a reflecting horticulturist or farmer to allow these leaves to be swept away by every wind that blows, and finally lost altogether. Nor would he give them away, as many now do. He would rather collect, from week to week, the leaves that fall under each tree, and by digging them under the soil and about the roots, where they will decay, provide in the cheapest manner the best possible food for that tree. If this plan should be tried, we should not see old orchards dying out for want of nourishment; but they would, in this simple manner, receive all the enriching they required. Pear trees, and doubtless the peach, would be greatly benefited by this procedure.

In certain vineyards in France and Italy, the vines are kept in the highest condition by simply burying at their roots every leaf and branch that is pruned off, or falls from the vines at the close of the season. Will not some of our farmers of inquiring minds give this simple process a trial this season?

It is a well known fact that no manure is more eagerly sought for by the florist than leaf manure. It enters largely into the compost prepared for potting. Leaves, collected and mixed with barnyard manure, greatly enhance its value. Therefore gather up the leaves that nothing shall be lost.

CIRCULATION OF THE BIBLE IN RUSSIA.—The Temoinage says, that there are now in Russia several men and women who are voluntarily distributing Bibles from house to house. One of them writes, "My work is very cheering. All classes of society gladly receive the New Testament; but in no place has our success been greater than in A——, where several of the priests favor the movement. During the first week of my sojourn there, they came almost every evening to ask for copies of the New Testament. The Bishop purchased no less than 3,000 for a religious library recently established, and the priests, of their own accord, are thinking of procuring a colporteur to distribute the Bible in all the houses of the town. One day, as I was passing the shop of one of the principal tradesmen, I felt constrained to enter, and not only did the purchasers buy the New Testament for themselves, but also mentioned to me families where I ought to call, and everywere I met with a hearty reception." This is a remarkable fact.

BURIAL IN TUSCANY.—Among the middle and lower classes in Tuscany the process of burial is as follows: A pit or excavation, a hundred feet deep, is made, and the sides walled up, covered with a stone, and made air tight. The privilege of burial in these pits or wells is bought at any age for a certain sum paid down and a sum paid annually until the death of the future tenant of the vault. Into these the bodies, enveloped in linen sacks and without coffins, are lowered by a rope. All who pay for the privilege are buried, without regard to sex or family, in the well in use until it is full. When all have thus been filled, the first well is reopened, the bones of its occupants removed and burned to ashes, and the ashes placed in urns, and the well is used for the next applicants in order.

"THY WILL BE DONE."—"I have been forced," said Fletcher, "by many disappointments to look for comfort in nothing but in the comprehensive words, "Thy will be done." A few more trials will convince you experimentally of the heavenly balm they contain to sweeten the pains and heal the wounds that crosses and afflictions may cause.

The experience of every christian who has been afflicted has corresponded to that of Fletcher. To one who is mourning over the loss of his first-born, how far from reaching the case are the topics of consolation often suggested by unskilful friends! All utterly fail till the mourner can say from the heart, "Thy will be done." Then they are not needed.

A QUIET LIFE.—For my part, seeing the victims of fast life falling around me, I have willingly abandoned the apparent advantages of such a life and preferred less popularity, less gains, and the enjoyment of a sound mind in a sound body, the blessings of a quiet, domestic life, and a more restricted, but not a less enjoyable circle of society. I am now approaching my seventy-fifth year. I cannot, indeed say, vigorous as I am, that I have reached this age without the assistance of doctors, for I have had constant attendance of those four famous ones—temperance, exercise, good air, and good hours.—Wm. Howitt.

— Dr. Kane, finding a flower under the Humboldt glacier, was more affected by it because it grew beneath the lip and cold bosom of the ice, than he would have been by the most gorgeous garden bloom. So some single struggling grace, in the heart of one far removed from divine influences, may be dearer to God than a whole catalogue of virtues in the life of one more favored of heaven.

ANECDOTES OF WEBSTER'S BOYHOOD.

When Daniel Webster was a little fellow at school, the master, one Saturday, held up a new jack-knife, and told the scholars that the boy who would commit to memory the greatest number of verses from the Bible, and recite them on Monday morning, should have that knife. Many of the boys did well, but when it came to Daniel's turn he recited sixty or seventy verses, and said that he had several chapters more. The master gave it up. Daniel got the knife.

When about seven years of age, his father kept a "Yankee tavern," and young Daniel used to entertain the guests by reading to them some of the Psalms of David. Even the rough teamsters, when they pulled up their horses before the house, would say, "Come, let's go in and hear a psalm from Dan. Webster!" His voice at that time was deep, rich, and musical. But, as a schoolboy, he was no elocutionist, or rather his sensitiveness was such that he could not practice. His first effort at fourteen was a failure, for the moment he began he was embarrassed, and burst into tears. He tried it many times, preparing himself carefully, but when his name was called, and he saw all eyes turned upon him, he could not rise. So much for this great orator. Let not timid boys be discouraged.

When he entered school he was behind the other boys in his class; all was new and strange, and he was much depressed. "New boys" often feel the same difficulties. But his teacher encouraged him gently, urged him to think of nothing but his books, and soon all would come out right. Before long he was promoted, and at the close of the second quarter was thus addressed: "Get your cap and books!" He did this in some surprise, and the tutor continued: "Now report yourself to the teacher of the first class, and you, young gentlemen, will take an affectionate leave of your classmate, for you will never see him again."—Sunday School Advocate.

A THRICE BLESSED BOY.

A crippled beggar was striving to pick up some old clothes that had been thrown from a window, when a crowd of rude boys gathered about him, mimicking his awkward movements, and hooting at his helplessness and rags. Presently a noble little fellow came up, and pushing through the crowd, helped the poor crippled man to pick up his gifts, and place them in a bundle. Then, slipping a piece of silver into his hand, he was running away, when a voice far above him said, "Little boy with a straw hat, look up." A lady, leaning from an upper window, said earnestly, "God bless you, my little fellow; God will bless you for that." As he walked along, he thought how glad he had made his own heart by doing good. He thought of the poor beggar's grateful look; of the lady's smile, and her approval; and last, and better than all, he could almost hear his heavenly Father whispering, "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." Little reader, when you have an opportunity of doing good, and feel tempted to neglect it, remember the "little boy with the straw hat."

ONE BRICK UPON ANOTHER.

A boy watched a large building as the workmen from day to day carried up bricks and mortar.

"My son," said his father, "you seem much interested in the bricklayers. Do you think of learning the trade?"

"No," he replied; "I was thinking what a little thing a brick is, and what great houses are built by laying one brick upon another."

"Very true, my son; never forget it. So it is in all great works; all your learning is but one lesson added to another. If a man could walk all around the world it would be by putting one foot before the other. Your whole life will be made up of a succession of moments. Learn from this not to despise little things. Be not discouraged by great labors. They become easy if divided into parts. You could not jump over a mountain, but step by step takes you to the other side. Do not fear, therefore, to attempt great things. Always remember that the large building rose by laying one brick upon another."—N. W. Presbyterian.

THE LITTLE DRAWER.

"Where did you get your orderly habits?" I asked of a lady who had never to waste a moment in hunting for things out of their place.

"When I was four years old," she answered, "mother gave me a little drawer to put my clothes in. 'Make it your business, my dear child,' she said, 'to keep that drawer neat and tidy. Let me never find it in disorder.'

"Once she sent for me to come home from a party of little girls, in order to put away a pair of stockings carelessly left on the floor; and I used sometimes to think mother was hard on me; but now I see I owe my good habits to the care I was made to take of that little drawer when I was four years old."

You see how early habits are formed. It is never too soon to begin a good one—Child's Paper.

WAITING.

Long years we have been waiting,
Since first we heard the cry,
"Behold Messiah cometh!
Redemption draweth nigh."
Long years of pain and trial,
Long years of hope deferred,
But still, though faint and weary,
We've trusted in his word.

We've watched the signs that tell us
The Lord will soon appear,
Plainly as budding fig trees
Foretell the summer near;
We've seen the scoffer walking
In unbelief and pride,
And heard from lips unholy,
The word of God denied.

Now wrong and evil triumph,
And make their haughty boast;
While right and truth and justice
Are trampled in the dust.
We've reached the days of peril,
By holy ones foretold,
When men have turned to fables,
And faith and love grow cold.

Long years we have been waiting,
And still we wait in hope,
While earth is wrapped in darkness,
And men in blindness grope;
Still shines the word prophetic,
A light upon our way,
To warn us of its dangers,
And guide us to the Day.

Long years we have been waiting,
And we will wait until
Messiah reigns in glory,
Enthroned on Zion's hill;
We'll watch the signs around us,
With truth our hearts we'll gird;
And while we walk in peril,
We'll trust His holy word.

THE CHRONOLOGICAL PERIODS OF DAN. 8 AND 9.

BY L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

(Concluded.)

We are assured by the angel (v. 26) that "the vision of the evening and the morning which was told is true;" that it was to be "shut up [or sealed"]: "for it shall be for many days [or a long time."] This brings us to an investigation of the chronological period connected with this vision. This period is given in answer to the inquiry, How long the vision, the daily, the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot? The answer was, "Unto two thousand and three hundred days: then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." (We have left out the words supplied in the text by our translators, as we think they make the text more ambiguous.) The question is, How long the vision? or, How long shall the vision last? or, How long shall these powers represented in the vision continue? i. e., the Persian, Grecian, and Roman. And he said, "Unto 2300 days."

Now it is evident that 2300 literal days cannot span the duration of these three kingdoms, for either one of them has continued more than forty times that period literally understood; therefore they must symbolize years. Besides, the symbolic character of the vision requires this interpretation. If God takes the less to represent the greater, if he takes a beast to represent a kingdom, he may with the same propriety take a day to represent a year. It appears that Daniel was deeply interested as to the meaning of the vision. (v. 15.) He sought for it. So should we if we regard the honor of God, or our own welfare. After Daniel had sought for the meaning of the vision, there stood before him as the appearance of a man, and a voice from between the banks of Ulai, i. e., over the river, "called and said, Gabriel, make this man understand the vision." "So he came near where I stood; and when he came, I was afraid, and fell upon my face; but he said unto me, Understand, O son of man; for at the time of the end shall be the vision" (v. 16, 17;) that is, it shall reach to the end of all that is embraced in the vision.

The angel then says, "Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation; for at the time appointed the end shall be"—at the expiration of 2300 years. Here Daniel is informed that this period of time runs through the whole history of the treading under foot of the host and sanctuary.

It appears from the last verse of this chapter that Daniel fainted, and was sick certain days by reason of what he had seen in the vision; for he says he was astonished at the vision, but none understood it; or, literally, none were explaining. (Whiting's trans.) According to the last clause of this verse, Gabriel had not yet obeyed the command in v. 16, to make Daniel understand the vision. But he had explained all the parts of the vision but one; he had not yet given Daniel a clear and distinct explanation of the 2300 days, or years. But Daniel fainted; so Gabriel left him for a season; but after he recovered from his sickness, he continued to revolve this communication of Gabriel in his mind, till it led him to search books, toward the close of the seventy years' captivity. He found that God had revealed to Jeremiah that Jerusalem was to be desolated seventy years. So he began to pray in reference to Jerusalem, and the sanctuary that Gabriel said should be cleansed after 2300 days.

The course Daniel took to obtain more light was an excellent one. I hope we may all follow his example, and meet with similar success: i. e., obtaining light on the time of the Lord's coming. Although Daniel was a little mistaken about the application of the vision, supposing that it related to the restoration of Jerusalem (as his prayer clearly implies,) as he was earnestly seeking for light he says: "While I was speaking in prayer, even the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision, being caused to fly swiftly, . . . informed me and talked with me, and said, O Daniel: I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding, . . . and am come to show thee: for thou art greatly beloved; therefore understand the matter, and consider the vision." (ch. 9: 21–3.) Then he says: "Seventy weeks are determined [or cut off] upon thy people, and upon thy holy city, to finish [or restrain, marg.] the transgression, and make an end of sins [or seal up sins, marg.,] and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the most holy." (v. 24.)

By this instruction of Gabriel, we see that he was obedient to the command to make Daniel understand the vision. Now if seventy weeks, or 490 years, of the vision of 2300 have been cut off upon Daniel's people, and holy city, there are but 1810 years more from the time the work of destruction commenced on the Jews and the holy city Jerusalem to the cleansing of the sanctuary. Josephus says the war broke out on Jeruslaem in the twelfth year of Nero." (Wars, b. 2, c. 14, s. 3.) Dion Cassius says Nero began to reign Oct. 15, A. D. 53, which fixes his twelfth year in A. D. 65, in which year the war against Jerusalem commenced. Here the seventy weeks, or 490 years ended. This is the period of time through which the transgression was restrained from desolating Daniel's people and holy city. Reckon back 490 years from A. D. 65, and we reach B. C. 426, the twelfth year of Ahasuerus, or Artaxerxes, where the "pushing" commenced against the Jews. Gabriel tells Daniel that his people and city would continue 490 years from that point; that God would restrain the power that attempted to destroy them at that time.

The 490 years ending in A. D. 65, we have but 1810 years more to complete the 2300, which must consequently end in A. D. 1875. We wish now to call the attention of the reader to the expression, "finish the transgression," in Dan. 9: 24. The word here rendered finish is from the Hebrew word kahlak. It occurs eighteen times in the Old Testament. It is defined, (1) to shut up, to confine; (2) to withhold, to retain, to restrain. (Gesenius.) The word is not rendered finish in any other place in the Scriptures; and here the marginal reading is restrain. In all the eighteen passages where the word occurs it has this only signification; that of withholding, or restraining. Therefore the Pagan abomination was restrained from desolating the Jews 490 years from B. C. 426.

We think the Holy Spirit has referred to this point three times in the book of Daniel: (1) in ch, 7: 5, where the ribs are represented as saying to the bear, "Arise, devour much flesh;" i. e., destroy all the Jews. (2) In ch. 8: 4, where the ram is represented as "pushing westward, and northward, and southward, so that no living [or life] might stand before him," where the same work of destruction is symolized as in ch. 7: 5. (3) In ch. 9: 24, where the desolating power, or transgression, is declared restrained 490 years. In these three instances we have a clue given from whence to reckon the seventy weeks, and the "2300 days," or years.

We think enough has been said, and evidence presented, to convince all that the 70 weeks ended A. D. 65, and that the 2300 days will end in 1875. The reason of the confusion and darkness that has formerly existed as to the true point for the termination of the "2300 days" has risen from the attempt to end the 70 weeks at the cross, in A. D. 33, which is contrary to the express language of Gabriel to Daniel. (ch. 9: 24.) The same is true also of the 69 weeks, and 62 weeks. (ch. 9: 25, 26.) All these periods were formerly assigned a common commencement, and made to end at or near the "cross." We will admit there would be some plausibility in ending the 69 weeks at the baptism of Christ, if there was any legitimate starting point that agreed with that supposition. The expression, "unto the Messiah [or Anointed] the Prince" (ch. 9: 25) can only refer to his birth. For an example see Matt. 1: 17—"from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ," etc.

The former application of the 62 weeks, or 434 years (ch. 9: 26,) with the assumed starting point in B. C. 457, was illegitimate. For how can the 62 weeks, or 434 years, commence B. C. 457, and end in A. D. 30 or 33? The only way this could be made to appear was, to take 49 years of the 483, contained in the 69 weeks, and add them to the 434 years, thus using 49 years twice without warrant. But with this presumption the case could not be made out, for they were really in want of seven years more to make the period reach to the crucifixion of Christ; so the one week was taken from v. 27, and cut into two parts, and by a very unwarrantable process the attempt made to adjust it to the time the Messiah was cut off. Such a process being the work of learned men, it was sanctioned as being all right. But now when the simple statement of the Holy Spirit is understood, and a harmonious termination of the different chronological periods is the result, some are ready to sneeringly inquire, "Who is the author of this new chronology?"

We now come to consider the one week of v. 27: "And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week." Who is "he" here introduced? We think it is the prince of the Romans, the people of whom it is said (v. 26,) they are to "destroy the city [of Jerusalem] and the sanctuary," etc. "And he [the Roman prince) shall confirm the covenant with many for one week" [i. e., seven years,] which was the length of the war that destroyed Jerusalem. We think this is the covenant brought to view in Deut. 28, where blessings and cursings are laid before the Jews; blessings for obedience, and curses for disobedience, which are in ch. 29: 1, called the words of the covenant. And the Jews accepted the curses, even all of them, when they rejected Christ, crying, "His blood be on us, and our children!" So the Lord made the Roman prince the special rod in his hand in confirming his word in the one week, or seven years' war in which Jerusalem was destroyed.

"And in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease"—which was fulfilled A. D. 70 when the temple was burnt, and all Jewish sacrifices ceased forever.

We will here present a few comments from the Cottage Bible on Dan. 9: 26–7, on the expression, "But not for himself." "The expression is certainly elliptical. . . . Our translators following the Jews have here placed only a colon; but Dr. Boothroyd and others (in our opinion very judiciously) a full point; here ending the prophecy, so far as concerns the Messiah. 'And the people of the prince.' This certainly ought not to be applied to the Messiah, but to Titus and his army, for the city was not destroyed by Christians, but by the Romans. The wrong pointing led to a faulty division of the verses, confounded two parts of the prophecy perfectly distinct. The Romans destroyed both the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof was with a flood, attended with nothing but desolation and destruction, till the nation was destroyed, or scattered through the earth. 'And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week'—that is, of years. Boothroyd, in explanation of this, remarks: The Romans made a league with the Medes, Parthians, and others, that they might be at liberty, with all their strength, to prosecute the war with the Jews. They did so, and in the midst of this period, A. D. 70, all Jewish sacrifices ceased forever. The reckoning days for years and weeks of such years, is not peculiar to the Scriptures. Varro says he was entered into the twelfth week of his years; i. e., his 84th year. (Quoted in Bp. Chandler's Def.")

From the above quotation, we see there are some grammarians and scholars that interpret these verses aside from the Messiah.

I will now notice a criticism of Dan. 9: 26, bearing on the clause: "And after threescore and two weeks." It is claimed that the proper translation of this is, And after these "sixty-two weeks"—making it appear that the same measurement is mentioned again, instead of giving a new one, reaching to another event. All we have to say to this foolish criticism is, that the clause in v. 26, "threescore and two weeks," is the same in the original as the similar clause in the preceding verse, where the seven weeks and threescore and two weeks are introduced: so if the word these should be introduced in v. 26, it should also be in v. 25, which would make nonsense of the Scripture.

There are two more points to which we wish to refer the reader before we close our remarks. We have proved that the 2300 days end in A. D. 1875. The points that we wish to prove briefly are, first, that the 6000 years from the creation will close with these 2300 years.

From creation to the flood are	1656	years.
From the flood to the call of Abraham	428	"
From the promise to the law, by Moses	430	"
Wilderness	40	"
Joshua	25	"
Arnarchy	18	"
Judges	450	"
Samuel	12	"
Kings to captivity	509	"
Captivity	70	"
Cyrus to 12th of Artaxerxes	62	"
From the creation to Artaxerxes' 12th year	3700	"

From this point 2300 years carry us to the end; and 2300 added to 3700 makes just 6000, also making 1875 the beginning of the seventh thousand year of this world's history. —Voice.

THE IMPLEMENTS OF SATAN.

Not being fully posted in regard to all the tools used in Satan's workshop, in these latter days, I can give only a partial list, and more particularly of those that have been in vogue many years. These tools are not adapted for useful work, and the workshop might as well be called a play-house. Let us take a hasty glance at the various implements to be seen here.

For the younger apprentices, we see pieces of board with straight lines and squares drawn upon them. One is for "fox and geese," and is quite suggestive. The fox represents the proprietor (Satan), and the geese, those who enter his service. You may remember that the Book of unerring wisdom describes him as "seeking whom he might devour." Another of these articles is called a checker-board. This seems a more general favorite than the first-mentioned, and, slightly improved, becomes adapted to chess and back-gammon. This word is also suggestive, and would naturally tend to put one on his guard against imposition, yet the apprentices seem to be blindfolded, and quite indifferent and reckless in regard to the result of their labors in this workshop.

But we can hardly stay to notice the many other implements in use here. We see cards and dice in great abundance; roulette tables, billiards, bowling alleys, with rows of glistening decanters, with various colors, all containing "burning fluid," that at the last "biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

In the literary department we see countless multitudes of loathsome and disgusting stories of crime, bound in yellow covers, and in other styles also. There is great versatility of talent displayed in this department, from Shakspeare and Byron down to the last "new sensation."

We hardly dare to venture into the department of "modern spiritualism," but some very "innocent" little playthings are becoming so common, that we will just mention the name of planchette. In regard to this, as to all the other evil inventions sought out by wicked men, aided by more wicked demons, you can have this good advice gratis, and you will do well to heed it: Keep away from every thing of the kind!

All these things are in the path of the wicked; and the wise man says, "Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men. Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it and pass away."

THE GOSPEL LOOKING-GLASS.

"But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves."—James 1: 22.

True position of faithful hearers and doers of the word.	False position of nominal professors and the world.
They deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and live soberly, righteously, and godly. Titus 2: 12.	They profess godliness, but by their fruits and works appear eager for the world as ever. Matt. 7: 20.
Looking for that blessed hope and glorious appearing. 13, 14.	Looking for death to realize their hope. Matt. 7: 26, 27.
Deny themselves of the riches, honors, and pleasures of the world. Forsaking all for Christ. Luke 14: 27, 33.	Holding on to the world, striving to keep in the current, to serve God and mammon. Matt. 6: 24.
Love not the world, spiritual minded, seek the honor which comes from God only; avoid contentions, strife, political affairs and carnal warfare. 1 John 2: 15; Rom. 8: 6; 1 Cor. 3: 21–28; Gal. 5: 22, 25.	Love the world, carnally minded, seek honor one of another, engage in political strifes, contentions, carnal warfare, etc. Gal. 5: 15–26; Rom. 8: 6.
"Lay aside every weight, and run with patience the race set before" them. Heb. 12: 1.	Adorn themselves with gold, pearls, and costly attire. 1 Pet. 3: 3; 1 Tim. 2: 9.
Build plain church edifices, with free seats, where the poor have the gospel preached to them. Matt. 11: 5.	Build expensive decorated church edifices with rented slips, which exclude the poor. 1 John 2: 16; James 2: 3, 2.
Preach and warn the world of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come. Acts 24: 25.	Mix truth with error, and preach to suit their creed, sect or party. 2 Tim. 4: 3, 4; Titus 1: 10, 11.
Preach that saints and sinners are not rewarded until the second coming of Christ, resurrection and day of judgment. Ezk. 18: 4; Job 21: 30, 32; John 5: 28, 29; Rev. 22: 12.	Preach that saints and sinners have immortal souls which go to heaven or hell at death. John 3: 13; John 13: 33; 1 Tim. 6: 15, 16; 2 Pet. 2: 9; 2 Tim. 3: 7.
Lay not up for themselves treasures upon earth. They seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and rely on the promises for temporal and eternal good. Matt. 6: 19, 21, 26, 33.	Seek for what they shall eat, or drink, or wherewithal to be clothed. Matt. 6: 19, 31; 1 Tim. 6: 9, 10, 11, 5. Heaping to themselves treasures for the last days. James 5: 3.
"Let no corrupt communication proceed out of (their) mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying." Eph. 4: 29.	Indulge in jesting, joking, idle, vain, worldly conversation. 1 Pet. 2: 1; James 4: 11.
Preach and advocate Bible holiness, perfection, and being dead to sin. Rom. 5: 2, 22; Matt. 5: 48; 1 Thess. 5: 23; 1 Pet. 5: 9; Phil. 3: 14–17; 1 Thess. 4: 7; Jude 24.	They speak ill of those who advocate living holy, perfect, or without committing sin. 1 Peter 2: 21; James 4: 11; 1 John 4: 5, 8; 3: 8, 9, 15; James 3: 14.
Endeavor to do good as they have opportunity, especially to those of the household of faith. Gal. 6: 10; 2 Cor. 9: 1, 9.	Pass by like the priest and Levite on the other side. Luke 10: 37; Matt. 25: 41–45.
Discern the signs of the times, take heed to the sure word of prophecy as a light that shineth in a dark place. 2 Pet. 1: 19; Matt. 24: 32, 33; Luke 12: 35, 36.	Do not discern the signs of the times; "despise prophesyings"; "willingly are ignorant"; "put far away the evil day." Luke 12: 56; 2 Peter 3: 5; 1 Thess. 5: 3.
"Know perfectly" by the tokens and signs from the light of prophecy, when the day of the Lord draweth near. 1 Thess. 5: 2–6; Luke 21: 30–32; 1 John 2: 18, 20, 27.	Classed with scoffers, saying, "Where is the promise of his coming? all things continue as they were since the beginning of the creation." 2 Pet. 3: 3, 2; Jude 16, 18, 19.
They watch, look for, and hasten unto the coming of the Lord. Luke 12: 37; 2 Pet. 3: 12, 14; 1 Pet. 4: 7, 13, 14, 19.	Do not watch, therefore will not know; and that day will consequently overtake them as a thief in the night. Rev. 3: 3.
Proclaim the coming of Christ draws near; "give the household meat in due season." Matt. 24: 44–46.	They say, "My Lord delayeth his coming"; smite their fellow servants, and in festivals, fairs, public suppers, etc., etc., are eating and drinking with the drunken. Matt. 24: 48–51.
They keep the words of Christ's patience, and are kept from the hour of temptation, which should come on all the world to try them that dwell upon the earth. Rev. 3: 10, 11, 12, 22.	Say they are rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and know not that they are wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked. Rev. 3: 17–20.

A SHORT SERMON.—No. 3.

"Let your speech be alway with grace."—Col. 4: 6.

The elevating effect an adherence to this text would produce, is of itself a sufficient reason why we should respond to its demands. No heart can entertain the principle here unfolded without being moulded thereby into a character in harmony with such a principle. When the fountain is sweet, the stream thereof will be sweet. The waters of a pure fountain may be rendered bitter, should there not be precautionary measures taken to guard against it. So the heart must be curbed and guarded, lest the bitter streams of vice flow into it, and render it productive of the blasphemous and foul-mouthed utterances that disgrace almost every circle in which man acts. The heart is toned and tuned, to a great degree, by its own productions; and when it sends forth words of love, they vibrate with other chords, producing a harmony that finds response only in the pure, the holy, and the good.

However much may be developed in the heart as the result of human culture, we need the direct influences of the Holy Spirit to give melody and grace to our words and deeds. Let a heart be tuned by the concert key of God's eternal Spirit, and every strain chimes with the music of heaven, lifting the soul above earth's dreary wastes, and causing it to drink in the spirit of eternal things.

While the eye of faith views the eternal regions of glory, and sees the verdure of a renewed earth, tinged with the golden hues that light up the eternal day, the ear of faith does not fail of being charmed by the music that blends its matchless strains in one great, grand, universal concert, in which angels and men harmoniously unite, singing redemption's song. This faculty, by which man seems to throw off the chains of mortality, and lose himself amid the visions of future glory (though deceptive in its character), is one of the most pleasing with which he is endowed. Disrobe him of this, and you destroy all pleasure to him but the present. No anticipated joy will ever lift him above the groveling cares of this present life; consequently his feelings, his aspirations and hopes, are narrowed down to the limited range of passing events and present joys. The hand which formed him, in the wonderful image of heaven's Ruler, has so blended each faculty of his being with the ultimate design of his existence, that the realities of present joys only beget within his heart desires for future happiness. By what he really knows of the present, he is enabled to anticipate the future in its wonderful, glorious and transcending developments. Hence the purer his thoughts, words and affections, the more perfect the vision he will enjoy of the future.

The faculty to think and to reason may be reckoned second to that by which we give utterance to thought. Thoughts uttered are doubly reflected upon the mind and heart; so that, while we indulge in evil thoughts, we train the heart to love vice; and the utterance of those thoughts will render it doubly vicious. It becomes us to let our "words be alway with love."

An objection to my position may arise in the mind of some, because it partakes largely of progressive culture. This objection is the result of misapprehending the nature of Christianity. While man is saved by grace alone, he is at the same time saved by humanity alone. For a christian is but a man with the faculties of his being balanced, corrected, and re-adjusted, so that he may occupy a standpoint where he can view in a true light the relationship he sustains to his fellows and his God. The difference between a saint and sinner is, the head and heart of one is level, while the other is not.

Man by nature is like an old, dirty watch, all out of repair. The index hand of his morality may point down, while it should point up. He runs, but he goes wrong; and if you are governed by him, whatever his fate is you will share. He needs cleansing, adjusting, and regulating by some perfect standard; and then he is reliable. Then when he speaks you are rightly instructed, and when he acts the world is blessed. Christianity does not rob man of the functions of his natural being, and transform him into some angelic creature, but it regulates him. No faculty, power, function, or law, that legitimately belongs to him by nature, is rendered dormant by Christianity. If they have been perverted, they must be set right, but not destroyed. The natural heart is enmity against God, so that man by nature is God's enemy. This is the result of perverted affections. He must be corrected, and learn to love God; and proper instruction is the only way by which this can be accomplished.

The means used to instruct are various. It may be by words of men; or it may be by the word of God; and it may be by the influences of the Holy Spirit; or, by all these combined. The circumstances of the individual will develope the appropriate means to be employed. The thunderings of Sinai may be needful to attract the attention of some; while the gentle whisperings of the Spirit will move the hearts of others.

There is nothing so well calculated to soften the heart of man, mellow his disposition, and refine his affections, as kind words, whether he speaks them himself or hears them uttered by another. The suppression of a harsh word not unfrequently saves your fellow a blow, and yourself disgrace; while the indulgence of unkind words often results in the most deadly strifes. Your heart is moulded to a great extent by the music of your own voice; and while it speaks the melodies of love, and gives utterance only to words of kindness, you are forming a character that will eventually emit without exertion all the fruits to which grace is heir. Every sentence you utter only paves the way for another of like character; and every deed you perform but fits you to repeat it with greater ease, whether it be in the direction of good or evil. Your words are not spent when uttered, but created, and set in motion; and it is no easy task to tell their range, unless committed to the trust of some friend who will lock them within the recesses of his heart in safe keeping; yet such a friend is scarce. But unrestrained words, whether of love or hatred, once pencilled upon the canvass of thought, are unlimited in their range.

We have as yet hardly glanced at the importance of words. Words do not grow, but they are manufactured from material treated as worthless; yet amid the transparent folds of which is lodged the life of the world. Thought unclothed is as gold undeveloped, or a diamond unfound; or may be as the poison of asps, or the sting of an adder. Better to ever remain in the sack nature has provided for it than to pain the victim who unfortunately disturbs the slimy den. Words, too, are manufactured with a wonderful machine, wrought with Divine skill, and so elaborately and ingeniously constructed, that it will adjust itself to the requisite form of all kinds of words; so that it will produce hards words, or soft words; bitter words, or sweet words; long words, or short words; cheering words, or terrifying words; consoling words, or disheartening words; profitable words, or destructive words; words of praise, or words of blasphemy; words of prayer, or words of complaint; words of love, or words of hate; words of kindness, or words of envy; besides all other kinds of words, both proper and improper; presenting them in Hebrew, Greek or Latin; German, French, or English; and when the world is filled with them, there is room for as many more; and the material of which they are composed is not diminished by the boundless ocean created thereby.

No wonder words are considered cheap; yet what would life be without them? Silence would reign where now the air is filled with harmonious sounds. Sorrow would sit brooding where now joyous notes drive it from the heart. Vacancy would be felt where fulness now dwells. Hearts now joyous, would break for the want of comfort. Ignorance would darken the world, where knowledge now enlightens it. Inactivity would be the marked characteristic of all. The wheel of science would cease to rule, and the hum of industry would die away in a noiseless atmosphere; while the confused throng would with astonished gaze scatter in hopeless despair, so that the history of Babel's tower would fail as an illustration. Without words, confusion would take the place of order. They constitute the instrument of power by which the worlds are made. God spake and it was done. He commanded, and it stood fast. By their magic power nationalities are created, and multitudes are swayed at the will of the speaker.

They come to us as heaven's example of imitation. God talked with man in Eden; his ear caught the sound, and the organs of speech began to play; and man in speaking was called to imitate his Maker. Notwithstanding words are so easily produced they are of priceless worth. The issues of life are dependent upon them. If adjusted in righteousness they will furnish paths of peace and plenty, and finally unbar heaven's door, with an abundant entrance.

Where do they go? They go where they are sent, and they may be sent where they should not go. On the pinions of faith they are winged to heaven, and by them we hold sweet converse with our Maker. They are the whisperings of the heart going forth to bless, or to curse. Borne on the palms of confidence, they enter the hearts of our friends, sending back the evidence of reciprocated love. These may go forth as a beam of light, causing all to smile with joy. They may be sent to the stricken in heart, bearing the precious ointment of consolation. They may go to the cell of the unfortunate as a reprover, yet so mingled with love, as to wring repentance from the flinty heart; or they are susceptible of being converted into arrows of death, so that with their barbed edges we can tear the mantle of charity in pieces, or storm the very citadel of life.

By them we may spread our track with ruin, and leave behind naught but grief and sorrow. We may speak so that terror shall fill the hearts of all that hear, and make of our whole being an image of disgust. We may say that which will disrobe our own hearts of peace, and set in motion the fires of hell. We may so frame our words as to disperse would-be friends, and create a multitude of enemies. We can send forth the invisible messengers, so that to feel them begets love, or we may clothe them in such form, as to stir up hatred alone. We may varnish the furniture of the humblest cottage with them, so that contentment shall fill the hearts of its inmates, or we may so stain the outset of a palace by them, that a king may be sorrowful. Our words may go forth with such sweetness of tone, and beauty of arrangement, that the sharpest reproof shall be received with profit; or they may come with that roughness of form as only to harden the subject to whom they are addressed.

They can be made to fall upon our fellows as showers of blessings, or rush upon them as an avalanche, only to bury and freeze them. They may carry the balm of rest to the weary, or they make weary the strong. They may furnish a meal to the beggar, or rob a king of his dinner. They may sheath the sword of conflict, or drench a nation in blood. They may fill a community with virtue, or stir up the depths of iniquity. They are susceptible of causing admiration to spring up in the heart of the savage, or of converting the land of Canaan into a wilderness. Wrong words have caused a race to fall, but right ones responded to result in salvation.

— Idleness is the sepulchre of a living man.

WHICH IS THE GREATER DIFFICULTY.

It is a little remarkable that in the modern efforts in the school of "Liberalists," to exalt God as manifested in nature, and to decry him as proclaimed in the Bible, that they should not see that almost every moral objection they bring against God as represented in the Bible, lies with much greater weight against God as manifested in nature. Indeed it is much more difficult to reconcile the goodness of God with the manifestations he has made of himself in nature, than to reconcile his goodness with the Bible.

According to our estimate of goodness, all law should discriminate between deeds done by infants and irresponsible persons, and those done by reasoning adults. That human law would be deemed quite monstrous that made no distinction between an act done through the thoughtlessness of a babe, and that same act done by a thinking adult. And were the Bible to represent God as making no distinction between the acts of these two parties, punishing each alike, there might be some apparent cause for finding fault with it. But God as manifested in nature makes no distinction between the acts of a thoughtless babe, and those of a thinking man. The man who knowingly violates a physical law is, we think, punished justly, but an ignorant babe that thrusts its hand into the flame of a candle, thinking to grasp an innocent plaything, is as inflexibly and severely punished as if it had fully known the law it was violating. This is God as manifested in nature.

Again: it is deemed noble and just that under some circumstances man should forgive an offender. It would be deemed wrong in that man who made no distinction between one who having done wrong gloried in his sin, and one who having done wrong earnestly repented of that wrong. To show no more mercy to a repentant sinner than to an unrepentant one, would be deemed hard and unjust; and yet God as manifested in nature shows no discrimination between the repentant and the unrepentant sinner. He who sins against the laws of nature, even though he were to repent weeping tears of blood in his sorrow for his deed, all this would not avail to secure the least mitigation of the penalty. Is it more difficult to justify God as set forth in the Bible, than as thus manifested in nature?

Again: Human law does not propose to make the innocent child suffer the penalty justly visited upon the guilty parents. But God as manifested in nature often does cause the innocent child to suffer equally in the penalty which is due only to the parent; as for instance where the parent by violating the laws of health causes a disease in his own person which he transmits to his offspring. Is it any less difficult to harmonize this with the goodness of God than any thing said in the Bible of God?

And once more: A careful gardener takes pains to remove the weeds, but leaves the good plants. But God as manifested in nature, plucks the good and bad away from this life almost indiscriminately. What more common than to see the good man stricken down by God in the operations of nature, whilst the bad are allowed to remain, to blight all around them as with a moral pestilence. Is this less easy to explain than what is asserted of God in the Bible? The fact is, that in quite every instance where the Liberalist brings an objection against God as taught in the Bible, an almost exact counterpart may be found against God as manifested in nature.

Thus it is objected, that the Bible teaches that God sent a deluge upon the earth that destroyed the guilty and innocent alike. Does not God in nature do precisely the same thing? In 1277 the God of nature visited Holland with a flood which swept into eternity the inhabitants both old and young of forty villages. Ten years later another deluge swallowed up 80,000 of the inhabitants of that land, whilst in the 15th century 100,000 persons of all ages perished there in like manner. If God in nature should do this thing in Holland, is it a thing incredible that he should have done likewise in Central Asia as recorded in the Bible?

It is likewise objected against the Bible that it represents God as destroying the cities of the plain with fire in which guilty and innocent perished alike. But has not God done precisely the same thing in nature? In A. D. 79, God in nature overwhelmed with fire and ashes two cities in Southern Italy, by which a great multitude of all ages were destroyed. Is it then quite unreasonable that this same God should have done the same thing to two cities in the valley of Palestine? Whatever explanation then may be given which reconciles God's dealings in nature with his goodness, will answer equally well to explain and harmonize God with what is said of him in the Bible. These free-thinkers are all agreed that God as revealed in nature is a good God; with how little reason then can they find fault with God as set forth in the Bible? And yet indeed the fact is that the manifestations of God in nature, are almost infinitely harder to reconcile with his goodness, than what is said of him in the Bible. So far then from the Bible being harder to understand than the book of nature, the truth is, the Bible opens its lips to justify God when nature stands dumb.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

— The prayer which Socrates taught his disciple Alcibiades deserves a place in the devotions of every christian: "That he should beseech the supreme God to give him what was good for him, even though he should not ask it, and to withhold from him whatever would be hurtful, though he should be so foolish as to pray for it."

TENT-MEETINGS IN CHICAGO.

Our tent-meetings in Chicago continue to increase in interest. The happy results are beyond what we expected. Before we began, some thought it would be almost useless to attempt to do anything in this city, especially when the political excitement is at its highest pitch; but we felt it would not be wise to wait for Satan to do all his work before we began. We thought it much better to start an opposition line in the name of the Lord. When we consider that Chicago is the hot-bed of political excitement, business enterprise, fashionable wickedness, and that it abounds in formal religion, we have reason to wonder at what we have seen accomplished in the tent-meetings for the past three weeks. Our audiences are large, attentive and intelligent. On account of cold nights, many who wished to attend dare not; yet we frequently have our tent crowded. We have now got up two stoves, which make the tent quite comfortable.

Yesterday (Oct. 18th) was a day of deep interest. We could all say it was good to be there. We have never seen better attention, and the order was excellent. Indeed, everybody treats us with respect. We are much pleased with the kind spirit of the people in Chicago. They are noble-hearted, generous, and remarkable for their earnest zeal in whatever they undertake. If they can be real christians, we may expect to see a great work accomplished in C. The prospect is now bright.

Since our last report, a number have been converted; several backsliders have been reclaimed, and a goodly number are seeking the Lord. The truth is spreading, theology trembles, and saints rejoice. We trust that what we have seen is but the beginning of what we shall see. At the close of the afternoon meeting last Sabbath several requested prayers, and others in the evening. They are astonished at the simplicity of the word of the Lord, and wonder why their ministers do not see it. Some dare not trust their own senses; and because their teachers do not see the light, they conclude we must be wrong, and so turn away, being willing to risk all on what their minister says, rather than believe the Lord means just what he says, when he contradicts their preacher. It is hard reaching that class. But there are many who have moral courage to embrace the truth as fast as they see it, regardless of the speech of people. We find much of this independence in this city, which is a very encouraging feature. The clergy do not rule the people here as much as in most other cities. The people in Chicago are rather noted for doing their own thinking; but many of them can find no time to think about things that relate to a future life. They are all absorbed in the present. It is truly astonishing to see the amount of business performed in this city in a single day. It seems as though every thing was done by the wholesale, and that men would make more trades here in a day than in a week anywhere else. They dash business like an experienced auctioneer. Men become rich in a short time, and accomplish more in five years than most do with the same means in other cities in a single lifetime. A few of this class of men are turning their attention to the blessed hope. One of them has just bought us a meeting-house on Green street, near Madison, in the central part of the city. He paid between five and six thousand dollars for it. It is well located, and will seat some four hundred persons. It was bought of the First United Presbyterian church. It is to be vacated after next Sabbath (Oct. 25th,) when we expect to occupy it. We have reason to believe that this noble-hearted man and some others, have but just begun to help in the great work commenced in Chicago. They feel anxious to see the whole city aroused to an investigation of the evidences of the speedy coming of Jesus, the resurrection of the dead, and the setting up of the everlasting kingdom.

We have been aided in our meetings by the labors of Brn. G. W. Foster, Collins, Schneider, E. Royce, C. C. Ramsey, D. S. Clark, and others. Bro. Ramsey, who will remain as pastor, is highly esteemed by the church for his faithful and judicious labors. Bro. Himes is in the city to-day, and will preach this evening. He is in good cheer, and earnestly engaged in spreading the glad tidings that Jesus is soon coming.

Bro. Collins, to whom we have referred, has just been dismissed from the M. E. Conf. for embracing the Bible doctrine of the destruction of the wicked. Those who know him speak in much praise of his christian character, and as a faithful minister of the New Testament. He is also looking for the speedy coming of Jesus. We have good reason to commend him to all the churches, as a man worthy of their sympathy and support; both of which he needs at the present time. He has given all for Jesus, and is ready to go forth without the camp bearing reproach like his Master. He may be addressed at Evanston, Ill. We hope others will have courage to follow his noble example. It is too late in the day to seek to save a reputation at the expense of the truth. This is the hour for action. Men of heroic courage in the Lord are needed at this time, who will not make the least compromise with Satan, or any of his followers, if it costs them their all, and even life itself; but who will on all occasions "STAND UP FOR JESUS," and warn a wicked world of the great truth that the King of kings is at hand to come and set up his kingdom. Who is willing to take the front ranks in the coming conflict with the powers of darkness?" It will be no place for cowards, or those who are afraid of losing their reputation; but it is a noble position for a true follower of Jesus. Will you be one of the christian heroes?

THE GRAND LODGE; OR, "THE DIVINE ORDER."

These are titles assumed by the Spiritualists to indicate their association, formed under the direction of the spirits. They also call it a "Temple of Principles—a Masonic Order," and it is intimated we shall "all be drawn into one common interest and sing one song at the same time and shout 'glory.'" They propose to have "church and state combined." They admit that "many . . . declare themselves to be the great I Am."

A class of Spiritualists, who have given themselves up fully to follow the spirits, have had a fourteen days convention in Chicago, where "some three hundred individuals took direct active part in the ceremonies." One special object of the convention was to devise means to form "a new church and a new state."

A spirit says:—"There is to be a change in the administration of your government. Human government has obtained in this and other nations, but they are now at an end—a Divine government is to be inaugurated." Satan would like to make people believe that the government which he proposes to establish is really a Divine one, a "Theocratic Democracy." But the God of this new system is defined as follows:—"God is principles," God was produced by principles."

SPIRIT MUSINGS.

In the Banner of Light, for August 15th, 1868, we find the following:—

"Yes, the stars as they fly through the infinite sky, Foreshadow this lesson, that MAN shall not die."

Yes, that is what Satan said, when he began teaching his lies to the human race. It is strange that so many have been persuaded to believe what he said. It is still more strange that believers in the Bible, and even those who preach the gospel, should help spread the great error that man is naturally immortal. It seems as though it was their darling doctrine, to which they cling with a dying grasp.

BRO. A. A. PHELPS.

Our readers have been interested in the "Notes, Queries, and Objections," from Bro. A. A. Phelps, Rochester, N. Y., relative to the nature of man, and his final destiny. Bro. Phelps has been a prominent minister among the Free Methodists, an earnest and devoted body of christians, very much like the old fashioned Methodists, who have separated from the Episcopal Methodists, because they could not tolerate Free Masonry, and other secret societies, in connection with the fashionable follies and amusements that are now so common among the professed followers of Jesus. During the last year, Bro. Phelps has been examining the Bible with much care relative to its teachings concerning the state of man in death, the final destiny of the wicked, the coming of Christ, and the saint's inheritance. As the result of the examination, he has become convinced that popular theology is not in harmony with the Bible. As this fact became known to his brethren, they endeavored to put on handcuffs, but were unsuccessful.

In a private note to us he says [Bro. Phelps, please pardon us for making this extract from your letter]:—

"I am not yet fully settled on some doctrinal points, but I see much light in the direction of the final destruction of the wicked. I am willing to walk just as fast and as far as the light shines. God knows I am an honest man, and am willing to sacrifice all for his dear sake. I have paid something of a price for the liberty of conscience I now enjoy. I cannot be a slave. I will not be a bigot. I am God's free man—'out on the ocean sailing'—awaiting the clear revelation of my Father's will. I know he has a work for me to do, and I am anxious to get into just the right notch. . . . .

Christianity seems a thousand times more precious to me than Churchanity. I am wonderfully saved from a narrow, seven-by-nine sectarianism. I want to be good, get good, and do good. I welcome the truth. I hail the light. I glory in the cross. I rejoice in a present salvation from sin. Praise God."

Bro. Phelps is well educated, and has been the corresponding editor, and some of the time acting editor, of the Free Methodist, published at Rochester, N. Y. Let us ask the Lord to lead him in all things. We trust he will never regret the step he has taken, which will be understood by reading the following, from the Free Methodist of Oct. 8th, 1868:—

FAREWELL MESSAGE.

To whom it may concern.

It becomes my duty to record the fact, already known to some, that I have dissolved my connection with the Free Methodist Church. A few parting words may serve to prevent false impressions and unprofitable conversation. Perhaps nothing will answer so good a purpose as to state the simple facts that have now passed into history.

A year ago last August, while residing in the city of Lockport, N. Y., I received a cordial invitation to preach for the Adventist brethren in Rochester, as soon as I could find it convenient to do so. I replied as follows:

"DEAR BRO. SPENCER:—Your letter of invitation was received yesterday. I dare not refuse you, as God commissions me to 'go into all the world.' If you are doing a good work, you need encouragement. If you are a bad people, you certainly need some gospel preaching. I shall try to publish the simple, saving truth, without any attempt at doctrinal discussion. I hope to do good and get good. If you please, I will endeavor to be with you on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, Sept. 3d and 4th. I am glad to hear that sinners are getting saved."

I met the aforesaid engagements, and enjoyed the freedom of the Spirit in preaching two sermons in the Advent Hall. I soon learned that this act was considered especially objectionable, and some of our preachers expressed an intention to arrest the passage of my character at the ensuing annual conference. When the time arrived, I was closely catechised in regard to my belief in the immortality of the soul. I confessed that I was investigating the subject, but had not yet reached any new conclusions. I also expressed a determination to continue the investigation, and stated that I should want at least a year to become perfectly satisfied and settled. Thus my case was allowed to pass; though some judged it worthy of greater severity than the majority were disposed to inflict. I was stationed in the city of Rochester. I labored hard during the succeeding year, and could not find time to read and study as much as I desired. However, I carried forward the investigation to some extent, earnestly praying that the Spirit of divine illumination would lead me into all truth. I attended the Advent meetings several times during the year, and on one occasion joined them in partaking of the Lord's Supper.

Another annual conference at length arrived. Met at Parma Centre, N. Y., Sept. 24th, 1868. When my name was called, in the examination of ministerial character, there was a strong desire to know my position on certain doctrines commonly advocated by the Adventists. I replied as follows:

"I deny your right to catechise me in regard to my private opinions. I am a public man. My acts and utterances are before the church. If these are in harmony with the Bible standard of christian character and ministerial duty, there is no just ground of complaint. If they are not, let the evidence be adduced."

My case was laid over, for further consideration. When it was called up again, the following resolution was presented, discussed, and adopted:

"Resolved, That the course pursued by A. A. Phelps, in fraternizing and communing with a sect called Adventists, who deny the natural immortality of the soul, is condemned by this conference."

The Lord sweetly blessed and kept me all through the discussion. I had no feeling of ill-will, and no disposition to complain of the above resolution. Viewing the whole subject from their stand-point, the brethren acted according to their honest convictions. I felt, however, that I had no right to barter my liberty of conscience, by letting others decide just what I should believe, and with whom I might affiliate in paying my devotions to God. I could not conscientiously cramp myself into the narrow limits prescribed for me; therefore, in good faith and good feeling, I presented the following paper:

TO THE GENESEE ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE FREE METHODIST CHURCH.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Since I espoused the cause of Christ, I have endeavored to maintain my integrity as an earnest, consistent christian. Beginning at the early age of seventeen to herald the tidings of mercy to perishing men, I have tried to be God's faithful mouth-piece during the fifteen years that have succeeded—seven years as a local preacher in the M. E. Church, and eight years in the Free Methodist itinerancy. In both christian knowledge and christian experience, I trust I have not remained in statu quo. I have an ardent love for truth, liberty, and goodness, wherever I find them. Much of the bigotry of other days has been replaced in my heart by that gospel charity which "rejoices not in iniquity but rejoices in the truth," by whomsoever promulgated. Since all cannot see exactly alike, I believe christians ought to incorporate in their platform as much liberty as we find in the words of an ancient writer: "In necessariis, unitas, in non-necessariis, libertas; in omnibus, caritas." "In essentials, unity; in non-essentials, liberty; in all things, charity." An application of this rule would banish from the churches that narrowness which cramps the conscience and divides the christian world into so many partisan cliques and clans. Much of the mischief doubtless results from the substitution of human creeds for the New Testament of our Lord Jesus Christ. Tradition is often largely interwoven with those creeds, and too much stress is laid upon a perfect agreement in doctrine, as a condition of church membership. I believe that christian experience, character, and conduct should constitute the test of membership in any ecclesiastical organization. The church belongs to Christ; and every Bible christian has a right to a place within her pale. Head religion will do to make bigots, but it takes heart religion to make christians. "If thy heart be as mine, give me thy hand."

A careful and prayerful study of the Scriptures has led me to these conclusions:

1. Men will be judged, before they are rewarded or punished.

2. Jesus Christ will come the second time before men are judged.

3. "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

The discrepancy between the views herein expressed and those entertained by the Free Methodist Church, and the unwillingness you feel to have anything said in the direction above indicated, suggest the propriety of my withdrawing from your connection. It should also be stated, as an additional reason for taking this step, that there are several things in the polity and administration of the Free Methodist church which I cannot fully endorse.

In taking my peaceful departure, let me say that there are some principles and many persons connected with your movement, for for which I entertain a profound respect. I shall still advocate those principles and love those brethren with whom I have stood shoulder to shoulder in fighting a common foe. Should any of you, on the contrary, feel it your duty to treat me coolly and suspiciously, and so cripple my influence with the poisoned arrows of slander, I shall try to love you still, and pray that God will "lay not this sin to your charge."

"I go out, not knowing whither I go." I have no definite plans for the future. I mean to be good and do good, according to my ability, and the openings of a kind Providence. Eternal life is the blissful goal for which I am running. As God has graciously saved me from the spirit of sectarianism, I desire to be recognized hereafter simply as a Christian. May I share, with you, the fadeless glories of immortality, when all the saints get home! 'Finally, brethren, farewell!'" A. A. PHELPS.

I stated by way of explaining the first proposition, that my mind was not fully settled on the state of the dead; but I could not admit the doctrine that people, at death, go into a glorious heaven of happiness, or sink into a hell of terrible suffering. This would be receiving rewards and punishments before the parties are pronounced innocent or guilty. I could not believe such a process consistent with the character of a righteous God.

In explanation of the second proposition, I said: "I believe that Jesus Christ is coming, literally and personally, the second time; that when he comes he will raise the dead, judge the world, and establish an everlasting kingdom wherein dwelleth righteousness; that his second coming is near at hand."

On the third proposition I remarked: "I am not fully decided how much ground this proposition ought to cover. My faith in the doctrine of unending torment is jostled. I have serious doubts as to the eternity of evil. It certainly had a beginning; it may have an end. The universe of God may yet be divested of everything contrary to purity and love."

My paper of withdrawal alludes to some things in the polity and administration of the Free Methodist Church from which I dissent. Perhaps I ought to enumerate the following points:

1. Too much reliance upon a human creed. Here is where the conscience is likely to be cramped.

2. Too much "one-man" power. I impugn no man's motives, but am forced to dissent from the policy which the majority so heartily approve, of investing any one—even an angel from heaven—with so much authority and responsibility as attach to the general superintendency in the F. M. Church. Let the burdens and blessings be divided.

3. Too much partyism and division. I have grieved to witness such developments, and longed to see a change for the better. Sometimes the omens have been cheering, but the element of jealousy and uncharitableness too largely prevails, in both the laity and the ministry of the Church.

4. Too much of the spirit of carnal warfare, and too little regard for the precepts of Christ and the principles of the apostolic church on the subject of war and bloodshed.

5. Two orders in the ministry. I regard this as neither scriptural nor sensible. The difference between a Deacon and an Elder, according to Methodist polity, is so slight, that it seems perfectly childish to maintain a distinction. It is assmed that one of the sacraments is more sacred than the other. A Deacon may baptize, and assist in administering the Lord's Supper; but he must not consecrate the elements. I most heartily dissent from all such unscriptural gradations in the ministry.

The conference very kindly and unanimously voted me the following certificate:

"This certifies that the bearer, Rev. A. A. Phelps, has been an acceptable traveling preacher in the Genesee Annual Conference of the Free Methodist Church from its organization, eight years ago. He has filled the office of Secretary during every session of Conference hitherto, with great acceptability. On account of some difference of views on doctrinal points and ecclesiastical policy, he now voluntarily withdraws from the Free Methodist connection. As a conference, we express our entire confidence in his moral integrity and character, and sincerely regret to part with him. Our prayers and best wishes will attend him."

The readers of the Free Methodist will see my name replaced by that of Rev. J. W. Reddy, as Corresponding Editor. I shall rejoice in the prosperity of all who love our Lord Jesus Christ. May our footsteps be guided by unerring wisdom, and our labors be crowned with the richest blessings of heaven. Yours in christian love,

A. A. PHELPS.

NOW READY.
NEW HYMN BOOK.

"HYMNS OF THE JUBILEE HARP,"

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

By the Advent Chris. Pub. Society.

Among the thousands who sing from "The Jubilee Harp," there are many hundreds, especially the aged, to whose eyes the fine print of the Harp is a great discomfort and inconvenience, and who would gladly welcome an edition of the same excellent hymns, in a convenient form, in large, clear type. The above work is issued especially for them, and we trust they will find it just what they want.

There are hundreds also who sing from the Harp, who never use the notes, and who would therefore be just as well and better pleased with a book containing the same hymns, without the music, at a lower price. This book was got up also especially for them, and will, no doubt, be to all such just the thing they desire.

This edition of "The Hymns" is not, by any means, intended to supercede "The Harp." It is designed as a companion to it; and is so arranged, with references, that hymns given out from the one can be readily found in the other.

The whole has been carefully revised and corrected, and a brief supplement of choice and popular hymns appended. The type-work was done in our own office, and in a style, we trust, not inferior to that of any other.

It is a volume of 576 pages, containing some 850 Hymns and Anthems, substantially bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, at 75 cents, single copy; $7.00 per dozen; $55.00 per 100. Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $9.50 per dozen; $75.00 per 100. It is cheaper by far than any similar work that we know of in the market. When sent by mail, 16 cts. additional postage. AG'T.

UNITARIANISM.

The Unitarianism of these days is but a human system of salvation, substituted for the divine. It is modified Spiritualism, and proposes to save all men by persuading them to follow nature, insisting that it will finally work its own cure, some as cider becomes clear after a process of fermentation. If the purification does not take place in this life, it will in the next. Some of the most popular Unitarian preachers, like Robert Collyer, assume that all will progress in the world to come,—some growing better, and others more wicked, until they will become sick of sin, and then give it up and become good. The trouble is simply this: it is utterly opposed to the teaching of the Holy Scriptures. It sets Jesus aside as a Savior, and makes man his own Savior, just as the demons teach. People seem very anxious to devise some new plan of salvation by which they can avoid the cross of Christ.

The following, from The Advance, will give a glimpse of the current of Unitarianism:—

"The late National Unitarian Convention in New York witnessed a lively struggle over a resolution offered by Robert Collyer, which particularly proposed to let down the last slight bar between the denomination and the numberless cliques of free thinkers, and welcome all to fraternity, with no common creed whatever. Dr. Bellows opposed, begging them not to throw themselves into the arms of infidelity. Robert Laird Collier threatened to secede if the resolution was not adopted. A substitute of a modified tone was finally passed."

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at the National Campmeeting, Chapin's Grove, Springfield, Mass., Aug. 29th, 1868, the following resolutions were adopted:—

Resolved, That we raise TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year.

Resolved, That our preaching brethren be, and hereby are, requested to act as Agents in this good work, to solicit contributions to the Tract Fund, as often at least as once in every quarter, and forward the same to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, BOSTON, MASS.

CONFESSING CHRIST.

To be a consistent follower of the meek and lowly Jesus, we must confess him in all his offices, and by all our words and actions, either by word, pen, or influence. But how many do we see at the present day who make a great bluster about religion, and seem to wield a mighty influence, but are very careful to avoid an open confession of Christ in his present relations to the church, and the proximity of his personal appearing.

In looking over the various religious papers, how seldom do we see anything in relation to this subject, unless it is a slur or ridicule of those who are holding up this truth. We do not know but Christ will say to such, Well done; thou hast confessed me before men, and I will confess thee before my Father. We know the press wields a mighty influence, and those who direct this engine for good or evil are just as responsible for what they print as though it was uttered by the mouth; and just as culpable by neglecting to publish to the world what will please Christ and glorify God, as to neglect it by word of mouth. To whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required.

Almost every one is glad to confess Christ as a Savior of the world. The Universalists are as loud in this as any, and we know there are many who receive him as a Savior, but not as a king; they admire his virtue, his fortitude, his self-sacrifice upon the cross, and scoff at his coming.

The commands which say, "Thou shalt," are just as imperative as those which say "Thou shalt not." We read that "to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin"; yet we know there are many who are careful not to commit any outbreaking sin by transgressing the law of God, but are remiss in obedience to all the requirements of the gospel. We must conclude by this principle that omission of a known duty is a sin. David says, "Thy commandment is exceeding broad"; and so broad that many will not comprehend its requirements, and stumble into perdition.

Let us be consistent, and confess Christ in all his offices, that when he comes he will confess us before the Father and the holy angels. To confess Christ and please him will cost us all our pride and high-mindedness and self-will. He says, "He that is ashamed of me and my words, of him will I be ashamed." There is a meaning in this sentence, "ashamed of my words." D. N. SMITH.

For the World's Crisis.

DID CHRIST DIE?

Welcome to every believing heart are the words of Jesus. Be it his stern rebuke of possessing demons, the royal authority by which he expelled the crafty traders and hypocritical money changers from the Jewish temple, the gracious invitations and promises of salvation through faith to the perishing, the matchless love he showed by suffering in bearing the sins of a ruined world that he might bring us to God, or the triumphant exclamations of conquest and victory over his foes,—all are precious to, and treasured by, the Christian heart. But as the last words of a friend are treasured with a peculiar affinity of affection and retentiveness of memory, so the last utterances of the Son of God in the last inspired book of the sacred Canon should be the constant companions of our thoughts, shedding light upon our pathway, and breathing faith into our hearts. When next his voice is heard, he will shake not only earth but also heaven.

The references to Christ in the Apocalypse are not meagre or few. He is brought to view either in the first, second, or third person more than one hundred and fifty times. There are not less than seventeen peculiar expressions of himself and his work of grace. We purpose to notice one of them.

"I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death."—Rev. 1: 18.

Jesus Christ "was dead." This is his testimony. We are told that the Son of man died and went into sepulchral rest; but the Son of God lived, and on spirit pinions went to Paradise. It must be admitted,

1. That whatever was denoted by the personal pronoun "I" was "dead." This pronoun when unlimited denotes the whole man. In this instance there are no limitations; hence we conclude that the whole man, divine and human, died. He does not say, I am he whose body was dead; but, I am he who was dead.

2. The salvation of every or any inhabitant of this mundane sphere depends upon the death of the divinely anointed and only begotten Son of God. If only his human nature died, then we have had but a human sacrifice. Human nature in Jesus was the same and no more than human nature elsewhere. According to this nature he was subject to human ills and affliction; he experienced the keenest bitings of hunger. Human woe rolled its grief surges over his heart. Physical weariness must have been the constant companion of his ceaseless toil; and how his heart must have heaved with anguish when in Gethsemane's lone garden the bitterest of bitter grief pressed from him the bloody sweat. If human nature is depraved, his was polluted, for his pedigree were sinners having Adam for their father according to the flesh. And if only his human nature died to redeem man, the death of John Baptist could have redeemed him as well. On this supposition his atonement becomes a myth, and salvation by his blood a sublime failure.

The germ-life of every child is from the father. Not to deny his pre-existence, we believe the divine Record that he was the Son of the Highest through the agency of the Holy Ghost. And if that divine life or nature did not expire upon the cross, you and I and every doomed son of Adam must die eternally in spite of any remedy yet prescribed by Jehovah. But did the Christ of God die? How breathless millions hang in suspense as they await the answer! But they need not wait long. Amid the splendor of the scenery of the Apocalyptic visions, a voice from the throne says, "I am he that liveth and was dead." Blessed words of my salvation. That one sentence—how full it is of everlasting blessedness. How it changes the destiny of earth and man. How it pours the light of life into the grave. How it rolls off the life-long burden of those who have been in bondage through fear of death. How it flashes the light of salvation into many dark, sin-chained and death-doomed souls. How in its final results it brings the mighty multitudes of earth into one vast, judgment-bound congregation. How it lifts the sable curtains of mortality and lets the light of immortality stream in through the portals of death. How it lets the music of angels fall upon my ravished ear. And thou Jerusalem, how shall I ever win a home in thy golden palaces? Sweetly falling upon my ear, I hear in heavenly accents a voice saying, "I am the way." I will walk in thee, blessed Jesus, though I go through the gloom of the grave, for thou hast lain there and made its sleep tolerable for me. Blessed Jesus, how I love thee, for thou hast loved me unto death.

Harmonizing with this statement is the prophetic declaration of the Psalmist, "He hath poured out his soul unto death."—Isa. 53 : 12. Even the Roman soldiers who had charge of the crucified ones brake not his legs, for "he was dead already."—John 19 : 33. After his resurrection he confessed he had not been to his Father, where he certainly would have gone if his deathless soul had left this tenement of clay. And Peter affirms that he was "put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit."—1 Pet. 3 : 18.

1. His body died.

2. The "He" that was in the body died also.

3. Both the flesh and that which was in the flesh died. "HE was put to death in the flesh."

4. He was quickened by the Spirit of God his Father. "Whom God raised up, having loosed the pains of death."—Acts 2 : 24.

The death of our Lord in the gracious results which flow from it, is the moral centre of the universe. Sinners, that purple flood flows for your cleansing. It is your life. Believe it. Its washing shall be your everlasting health. Seek it. Its covering shall make you a secure hiding place in the day of storms and destruction. Flee to it. Destruction for sin and sinners is coming. God shall soon tread his enemies beneath his feet. The fiery billows of the second death shall consume them all. God shall purge his universe from all unrighteousness. Death shall die, and God shall be all in all.

"WHERE IS THE CITY?"

(Concluded.)

After Israel finds that he cannot adopt all of the Calvinistic theory, he goes to the Methodists, where there is altogether too much noise; and while he finds much to commend in the spirit of love and zeal manifested, yet on the whole he is more dissatisfied with them than any other, and so he tries the Episcopalians, but they occupy the opposite extreme; too much formality, and too strong a tendency toward Romanism; then he passes on to the Quakers, where he found some very nice people, but after attending one of their silent meetings, and conversing with some of the fraternity, and reading "Quakerism, or the Story of my Life," he decided that the "City" for which he sought was not there.

He next goes to the Swedenborgians, and obtained a knowledge of their doctrine; thence to their twin sister Spiritualism, where he attended sittings, had interviews with "mediums," read their paper, and argued with "believers." Israel argues nobly against their sophisms, and repels their infidelity with the "sword of the Spirit," thrusting the word of prophecy home upon them with an able hand. He next visits the Universalists, hears some good preaching, approves of many of their principles, but thinks their doctrine on the whole has an evil tendency when "gone to seed," and concludes that Origen was right when he said that if true that all men were to be finally saved, it "ought to be kept secret among such as may be fit to receive it, and not publicly exposed."

He next goes to the Unitarians, where he heard a great many excellent exhortations to good works and practical duties, but found them so far in error respecting the grand, fundamental doctrine of the atonement through Jesus Christ, and regeneration, that he could not believe the "City" was among them. Some sentiments given under this head, though put into the mouth of a Unitarian, are worthy of note.

In reply to Israel's inquiry, "You believe, then, in the progress of ideas of Christian truth?" the clergyman says:

"Most certainly. We glory (if the term is ever admissible) in our scope of liberty of thought and enlightenment in the domain of truth. This, though sometimes abused by our people, we hail as our precious, inalienable right. Were I bound to a creed made by any man, I should feel as if chained to Ixion's wheel. There is no bondage like that of the soul in chains of religion. Man's spiritual nature having come from God himself, is allied to the infinite. Hence all attempts at its prescription and limitation are nothing short of positive tyranny, as cruel in its sensations as it is fatal in its capacities for growth. I often think of what that good man, John Robinson, wrote to the Congregational church, which he had founded, after their departure for Plymouth, New England. Here it is:

"'For my part I can not sufficiently bewail the condition of the reformed churches, who are come to a period in religion, and will go no further than the instruments of their reformation. The Lutherans can not be made to go beyond what Luther saw. Whatever part of his will our good God has revealed to Calvin, they will rather die than embrace it. And the Calvinists, you see, stick fast where they were left by that great man of God, who yet saw not all things. This is a misery much to be lamented; for though they were burning and shining lights in their times, yet they penetrated not into the whole counsel of God; but were they now living, would be as willing to embrace further light, as that which they first received. I beseech you, remember it is an article of your church covenant,—that you be ready to receive whatever truth shall be made known to you from the written word of God. But I must herewithal exhort you to take heed what you receive as truth. Examine it, consider it, and compare it with other scriptures of truth, before you receive it; for it is not possible that the Christian world should come so lately our of such thick antichristian darkness, and that perfection of knowledge should break forth at once.'"

The conversation between the clergyman and Israel has many excellent sentiments advanced on both sides, and we think that our inquirer is sound in good gospel faith. He accepts the divine inspiration of the written word, and that the Spirit is the true interpreter, "which does not work by any private interpretation vouchsafed to a Calvin or a Wesley, but is as free to all as the air we breathe. He that doeth his will shall know sufficient doctrine for all purposes essential to a good life and a good death. And that will is found in the Bible."

Failing to find the "city" for which he was searching among either of the nine denominations he visited, Israel settles down in this resolution: "Henceforth I will seek to be a disciple of Christ. I will love all men, though they love me not. In whatever place I find a true worker for the good of his fellow men, I will be to him a brother."

The book, as may be inferred, is not very profound; it will never be popular, yet it contains much that is truly valuable. The writer, whether man or woman, is no doubt a member of some one of the churches mentioned, very likely the Congregationalist, and takes this method of bringing out the doctrines and usages of the various denominations; and we think that, with one exception, they are treated with much candor. He teaches that elements of truth are found in all, yet none are free from error. The duty of making love to God the basis of union, is made prominent.

Israel made a mistake in the outset in thinking the "city" was to be found among any of the sects; a mistake of which he became convinced at the last, yet he thinks he had found it in the adoption of the principle we have quoted. We hope he may indeed find the city of God when it descends in all its grandeur and glory upon a renewed earth. M. D. W.

PATIENT IN TRIBULATION.

To be patient in tribulation is a great attainment. Christians often pray for more patience, and God answers their prayers by sending them trials; for "tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope; and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts." Paul understood this. He gloried in tribulation, and was willing to be a fool even for Christ's sake. And why was he willing to suffer thus? Because he knew that God's people were to be a tried people; they were to be purified, and fitted for the kingdom for which they suffer.

The Christian is not exempt from all the ills of life. He is liable to disease. His friends sicken and die. He meets with losses and disappointments in common with the rest of mankind. It is true God has a watchful care over his children, and shields them from many things which might sadden and afflict them; but still they are in a world of sin and sorrow, and must suffer the common lot of man.

In addition to this, being of Christ's body, they must be treated as he was treated. It must be so if they belong to him. "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution"; and this may come upon them when they are doing the best they can. Truly, under such circumstances they have need of patience.

Jesus tells us to "count it all joy" when we "fall into divers temptations; knowing this, that the trial of your faith worketh patience"; and "let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing." There is no time, perhaps, when we can better glorify God than being patient in tribulation, lying passive in his hands, waiting his loving will. Helpless, we can only love him and suffer for his sake, knowing it is a Father's hand that chastens us; it is his love that chides us; and out of these trials he will bring us at last, fitted and prepared "for the rest that remaineth." The process is painful, but the result will be glorious.

Correspondence.

From Sr. M. E. Otis.

DEAR BRN.:—I have been laboring continually since I last met many of you at the Alton campmeeting, and I trust my labors have not been altogether in vain. I went from the Alton meeting to New Durham, where I spent a few days, speaking one evening at the chapel on the Ridge. Here I met Sr. Buswell and Bro. Stevens. Thursday afternoon we had an interesting time in that place. After listening to an interesting discourse from Eld. J. G. Smith, and a few stirring exhortations from the brethren and sisters, we repaired to the water's side, and witnessed the baptism of a young woman who has lately espoused the cause of Christ.

From New Durham I went to Groton, Vt., and remained two Sabbaths, holding meetings through the week. Here I found quite an interest to hear the truths of the gospel. Bro. F. E. Lang has labored some in this place, and baptized quite a number within a few months, and among them a number of young men, who seem to be steadily journeying on towards the kingdom. A few rose for prayers while I was here. Left Groton for Topsham and preached there one evening; thence to East Montpelier and held two meetings; next to Calais, where I preached one Sabbath and one evening. While here one man went forward in baptism,—a companion of one of the women that went forward in the summer, whom I mentioned a few weeks ago. The companion of the other woman that went forward seems to be in a lamentable condition, and is hardening his heart against every thing that is good. He was absent from home in Mass. at the time his wife was baptized, and on his arrival home, when he learned the step she had taken, great was his wrath against her, and also against myself and the one who performed the ordinance. He at once forbade her going to any more religious meetings, and seems to take delight in persecuting her for her religion. I was informed that he had written me a letter and forwarded it to Worcester, before he knew that I was on my way to the place, saying that his curses should rest on me for ever for what I had done towards leading his wife astray.

The Lord is at work in this place, and the devil is mad and doing what he can to overthrow the work of the Lord.

Left Calais for Wolcott, and while there attended what was designed to be a small tent-meeting, but on account of cold weather the meeting was held in a school-house. Elds. Wheelock and Durfee were present to speak the word, besides some others.

From Wolcott returned to Calais and held a few more meetings. Some backsliders started anew for the kingdom. Have never seen a better state of feeling there than I found at this time. Regretted to leave the place, but as I had other engagements felt that I must go. Returned to Topsham, and preached through the day, Oct. 11th. After the afternoon meeting left for Groton, where Bro. Lang had preached through the day. At his request spoke in the evening. He has now gone from this place, but will return to baptize some next Saturday.

Last evening I spoke in a hall at Groton village, some five miles from where Bro. Lang has been laboring. Here is great prejudice existing in the minds of people, especially among the Methodists, against the truths held by the Advent people. I spoke from Rev. 6:17. Some left the hall when I began to give them some evidences showing that the day of wrath was near at hand. I have heard from one professor that they liked till I got to that part, and then they left. I expect to remain in this place over the Sabbath, and then intend to visit East Canaan and Danbury, N. H., and then return home to rest for a short time.

Dear brethren and sisters, my heart is in the work. The Lord is coming, and there is work to be done to get people ready for that great day. Who among you will enter into field, and work nobly till Jesus comes, and then receive a penny? Pray for me, that I may stand for the truth, and be the means of getting some light before the people as I go from place to place. Your sister in Christ,

Groton, Oct. 15th. M. E. OTIS.

From Sr. F. M. Shimper.

BRO. GRANT:—Permit me to acknowledge, to the praise and glory of God, his tender mercy and great goodness to us through the series of meetings in South Vershire, from the seventh to the twelfth of this month.

Bro. Carpenter and family came, and were most gladly welcomed at Bro. J. Harding's, and were cordially invited and received by several other families during the week. Various hindrances prevented the many from abroad and round about, we had earnestly desired should come; but the inhabitants of So. Vershire turned out well, and gave the "word" a candid and interested hearing; thus proving themselves men and women of the "Berean" type. Praise God for a few of this class in Central Vermont. May they speedily be increased manifold.

But the best of all is, God was in the midst, by the power of his Spirit and word. He who had begotten the cry, Lord, help! Lord, glorify thyself! Lord, set thy seal to thy truth! failed not to answer. His servant was especially aided in presenting the glorious gospel of the Son of God. He shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God—the nature of man, the promised kingdom, the prophetic word, etc.; and in its clearness and beautiful harmony commending itself to every one's conscience. O, how was the God of the Bible honored, while earnest listening and falling tears witnessed to the power of truth.

The meeting increased in interest until its close, when some deep feeling manifested, with other previous expressions, gave reason for humble, believing trust that some seed fell into good ground, which will spring up and bear fruit unto eternal life.

Dear brethren and sisters, especially those scattered abroad, who know how to feel for the lonely ones, will you praise God in our behalf, and also pray for us? Pray that the good work may go on; that God's truth may be magnified, and his ever blessed name be honored by its reception and saving power more fully among us. Your sister in the love of truth and hope of eternal life only through Christ, F. M. SHIMPER.

Vershire, Vt., Oct. 18th.

BRO. A. J. TITUS, Westerly, R. I., Oct. 10th, 1868, writes:—"I am satisfied that your doctrine is right and true, and wish to bear my labors in this field, with the brother preachers. I have been a Methodist minister, but feel to go with those true people who are looking for our coming Savior. I preach in Westerly and Charleston, for the Adventists."

SR. A. E. SMITH writes, Oct. 18:—"The Lord is with us doing a great work. Sinners are coming to Christ. We have meetings every night in the mission, and such blessed times as we have. Glory to God. Pray for us, that we may have a great harvest this winter."

For the World's Crisis.

WORCESTER.

Oct. 26th, we had another good day in Worcester. Some seventy dollars were raised for mission and other purposes, for scattering the truth, making in all about $100 for a free-will offering for yesterday. This looks like doing, as well as suffering, the will of God. May it provoke to love and good works many others whose treasure otherwise is soon doomed to the flames. Two started in the race for the life to come. May they "so run as to obtain." H. PRATT.

SINGULAR CIRCUMSTANCE.—On Wednesday last Mr. A. C. Warner, a farmer and resident of Woodbridge, N. J., and a visiting acquaintance, were the witnesses of a singular phenomenon which occurred in a meadow in the vicinity of Mr. W.'s house. While conversing they were startled by a loud report, as of an explosion, and on turning their eyes in the direction from whence the detonation proceeded, a moving column of smoke, having the appearance of a whirlwind, was visible. In the progress of this marvellous body it encountered a flock of poultry, which it raised entirely from the ground and carried gracefully along for a number of rods. Geese, hens and turkeys gobbled and cackled their protest and consternation, and made vigorous resistance, but were powerless. The witnesses of this interesting marvel attribute it to the explosion of a meteor, although it left not a trace behind.

QUICK TELEGRAPHING.—A dispatch sent from Boston, Sept. 26th, at 11.30 A. M., was received in Smyrna in two hours and twenty minutes.

BATEN. Fell asleep in Jesus, Oct. 17th, after an illness of six years, with consumption, Herman Baten, son of Bro. and Sr. Baten of Rochester, N. Y., aged eighteen years.

They mourn not as those who have no hope, for he would often throw his arms around his mother's neck, and exclaim—"We shall meet by and by in a better land than this, where parting will come no more." He often expressed a desire to be baptized, but his feeble health would not permit. At the funeral I read the 14th chapter of Job, and tried to comfort the hearts of the afflicted with the blessed assurance that there was hope in the death of their son. N. McCULLOCK.

HILL. Died in North Adams, Mass., Sept. 28th, 1868, of canker rash and inflammation of the brain, Lizzie Rosa Lena, adopted daughter of James H. and Olivia Hill, aged two years, six months, and twelve days.

Words of comfort were spoken by Bro. Wm. I. Blanchard, from 2 Thess. 1:7. Lizzie was a lovely child, intelligent far beyond her years. We mourn, but not as those who have no hope; for we expect to see her again in a little from this.

How we miss thy joyous laugh,
And shouts of childish glee,
And listen oft with throbbing heart
For thy footsteps light and free.

And oft in slumber shall we meet
Thy small mouth's rosy kiss,
And awake with a bitter pang
Thy twining arms to miss.

O. A. HILL.

PHELPS. Died in Westfield, Mass., Oct. 11th, Nellie E., only child of Bro. Enoch and Sr. Sarah Phelps, aged six years.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

PARIS, Oct. 21. Gen. Serrano has written a letter declaring in favor of a monarchy, as best suited to the state of Spain. He says, however, that the leaders of the revolution have resolved to act entirely in accordance with the voice of the people as to what form of government shall be adopted.

There is a report that Ferdinand has accepted proposals to come forward as a candidate for the throne of Spain.

MADRID, Oct. 22d. The Central Provisional Junta held its last session yesterday. Resolutions were adopted urging the abolition of capital punishment, the removal of convict prisons from Spain to Africa and the Phillipine Islands, and the formation of volunteer rifle associations throughout the country. After recommending all local Provisional Juntas to follow their example, the Central Junta dissolved.

LONDON, Oct. 22. The Prince and Princess Gergenti have arrived at Brighton, and the Queen of Spain is expected at that place.

MADRID, Oct. 23. A large meeting was held here to-day, at which speeches were made and resolves adopted in favor of the abolition of slavery throughout the Spanish dominions.

LONDON, Oct. 24. Dispatches received to-day state that the authorities of Sydney have positive proof that the shooting of Prince Alfred was the result of a deeply laid plot, the details of which will be given to the public in a few days.

Oct. 25. Great Britain, France and Italy have recognized the revolutionary government of Spain.

Dispatches received to-night from Madrid report that the people in Alicante have proclaimed a Federal Republic.

Disturbances have broken out in Malaga and Grenada, and troops have been sent from Madrid to the latter place.

DOMESTIC.

San Francisco, Oct. 21. A heavy shock of an earthquake was felt here at 7.50 this morning. The motion was east and west. Several buildings on Pine, Battery and Sampson streets were thrown down, and a considerable number badly damaged. The ground settled, which threw the buildings out of line, and at the present writing (9 A. M.) no estimate can be made, though it is considered comparatively small. Several severe shocks have followed at intervals since, creating a general alarm among the people. The shock was felt with great severity at San Jose, where a number of buildings were considerably injured.

Oct. 22. A few slight tremors of earthquake have been felt to-day. The casualties do not exceed thirty. Only five persons were killed, though a few more may die.

A survey of the City Hall showed the walls badly cracked and the arches mostly ruined. The Custom House, in which the Post Office is located, was found habitable, and has been reoccupied.

Oct. 23. Another severe shock of earthquake occurred this minute and has sent the people shrieking with terror into the streets. It is impossible at present to ascertain whether any further damage has occurred to the shattered buildings or whether there has been any further loss of life. The streets are thronged with persons in their night clothes, who are waiting in fear to see what shall come next. The atmosphere is thick and the weather warm and sultry.

Some details of the destruction of property in the interior of the State, by the earthquake of the 21st inst., have been received. Alameda county suffered most. The damage to property in Alameda extended in all directions. Back of the town of San Leandro, in the northern part of Alameda county, are numerous fissures in the earth, from some of which issued a cloud of dust, and from others volumes of water. San Leandro creek which has been dry for a month, as is usual at this season of the year, is now a rapidly running stream. In some places hot water and steam rushed from the ground. The village of San Leandro and Hayward's are almost in ruins. The villages are fifteen or twenty miles apart.

The brick buildings are all thrown down, and a hundred tenements have been rendered uninhabitable. Numerous wooden structures were also much damaged.

At Hayward's there is only one building remaining uninjured. The towns of Almeda, Brooklyn and Oakland all suffered severely, and the destruction of property in the towns of San Jose and Redwood was very great.

The damage done by the earthquake will not be less than $3,000,000. Persons in the country noticed an upheaving and opening of the earth in several places. Large masses of rock several tons in weight were detached and rolled down the hill and mountain sides. Trees were violently shaken and water made its appearance where all was dry before. From some streams bubbles containing inflammable gas have risen to the surface.

New York, Oct 22. Mail reports from Peshawus, India, dated the 20th of August, announce that at 7 o'clock that morning Peshawus was visited by an earthquake, at first gentle, but afterwards a very violent one. Bastions were shaken down and sentries buried beneath the wall, but were yet alive. In the city, towers and walls fell in numerous instances, but no lives were lost.

Oct. 23. A Sandwich Island letter confirms the reported subsidence of the southeastern shore of the Island of Hawaii. The Rev. Mr. Coan states that the subsidence is plainly shown by trees which were once on dry land being now in the sea, and rocky islets, once five feet out of water, being now submerged.

The Tribune's special from New Orleans, Oct. 23, says outrages and murders are increasing in great numbers throughout the State. This morning a large number of white men crossed from here. Gen. Rousseau stopped the ferry boats and sent a company of infantry to assist the one hundred policemen, who were there, in preserving the peace. The Evening Star says: "The long impending conflict seems fairly commenced. Gen. Rousseau has requested two additional regiments. At nine o'clock an armed mob of four hundred men ordered the Metropolitan police to leave Gretna."

A Panama letter states that all the ports are closed. The Government could not raise $12,000 to charter a steamer to take troops to Chiriqui to suppress the rebellion there. An armed force took possession of the American newspaper, The Chronicle, and were supposed to be looking for the editor. Some three hundred stand of American arms—the property of a New York firm were seized by the authorities on the 11th, and carried to the barracks.

Australian letters state that the tidal wave caused considerable damage to shipping, and slight shocks of earthquake were felt. The solar eclipse was visible on the 19th of August, and meteors and electrical phenomena were observed all through the month. A meteor fell over the stern of a ship at Crondy Head, on the night of the 19th, and burst, killing the steersman.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 23. A dispatch from Hay's City, Kansas, says Col. Carpenter and Capt. Gorham, with the 10th Cavalry, had a brush with 700 Indians—Cheyennes and Arrapahoes—yesterday, at Buffalo station. They killed nine savages and wounded thirty. Our loss was three wounded.

THE GRASSHOPPER PLAGUE IN TEXAS.—Immense colonies of grasshoppers are again sweeping over Texas. A letter dated at Belknap describes the advent of the pest. On the 15th ult., at three o'clock in the afternoon, the writer saw in the distant west what he supposed to be the smoke of an immense fire, but which a few minutes observation showed could not be smoke. In about two hours it had approached near enough to show that it was a dense mass of moving matter. From the ground upward as far as the eye could see, on account of their denseness, was an almost solid mass of living, moving insects—grasshoppers. All who saw the sight agree that for every square inch of surface over which they were flying, there must have been no less than one bushel of grasshoppers. This body of insects was moving ahead of a northwest wind. They were some three miles wide, and as long each way as the horizon. They passed in a northeast direction, but left millions behind.

FEMALE SUFFRAGE IN ENGLAND.—At the Sittinbourne revision court the revising barrister for East Kent has allowed forty-eight more ladies the privilege of the franchise. Their names were placed on the lists by the overseers, and he (the barrister) said that he possessed no power to strike them off, no objection having been made against them. Eighty-one women are now entitled to vote in East Kent.

DISCOVERY OF A SUPPOSED BURIED CITY.—A letter from the City of Mexico says that in the village of Tayahualco, situated among the lava fields of the valley of Mexico, some workmen digging below one of the large lava fields discovered not only well preserved houses, but even dried up human bodies, which made them believe that a city had been buried there similar to Hurculaneum and Pompeii. A scientific commission is going thither to examine the spot.

Remarkable Phenomenon in Tennessee.

August 14th, last, a strange and terrible spectacle was witnessed in Cheatham County, about nineteen miles from the city, on the line of the Nashville and North Western Railroad.

"About one o'clock, while the men employed on the plantation of Joshua Fulgham were going into the field to pluck fodder, the sun being hidden behind clouds at the time, and a general gloom pervading the sky, they were much frightened and confused by the apparent opening of the clouds, judging from the description of the phenomenon, not more than five or six degrees north of the zenith. They judge the cloud to be about three quarters of a mile high. The strange sight attracted their notice. A brilliant whiteish red glare overspread an immense mass of black clouds, in the centre of which appeared a funnel-like aperture about four or five feet in diameter, the sides f which presented the appearance of ragged flames, darting like fiery tongues, and licking and lapping at a large white hot object passing with inconceivable rapidity down through the apreture. When it left the mass of clouds it did not seem to fall in a perpendicular direction, but sloped at an inclination of some ten or fifteen feet from a plumb line, and grew more intensely bright as it approached the earth. It swept down like a bright angel of destruction. It struck the earth with a sound like a sudden and terrific clap of thunder, and seemed to make the surrounding hills quiver to their foundations. Great numbers of trees on their rocky sides fell, and continued falling for several minutes afterward, making noises like the prolonged reverberations of thunder among the rocky cliffs. The men were about four hundred yards from the place where the firry missive from the sky struck, and were afraid to go and examine the place for several hours afterward. They took courage however, and being joined by numbers of the people from the surrounding neighborhood, they proceeded to the place, and found that it had struck upon a flat ledge of rocks in a wagon-way leading from a farm house to the public road. The fragments of stone were thrown around for several rods in all directions; the ledge, which is said to be three feet thick, without any seams, was disturbed for a distance of about fifty feet, split, and torn up into fragments; the soil which was spread in thin layers all over it, looked as if it had passed through a sieve. At the point where the strange body came in contact with the rock there appeard to be no storm at all, but a very fine, white, floury sort of paste, which was quite hot, and a steam ascended out of the hole in which it had buried itself which was too hot to approach."—Nashville Press.

A correspondent of the Nashville Press and Times says, under date of Aug. 19th:

"The place where it struck remained hot three days, but a copious shower of rain having fallen, which temporarily swelled the streams and water courses, a large flood poured down on the place from the neighboring hills, sending up a constant and immense column of steam. The earth around the place for several yards was quite hot. This gave the idea that the ærolite which had struck must be of great size. The column of steam continued to ascend all night, and presented a weird spectacle amid the gloom and in the silent depths of the woods. It could be seen from the surrounding hills, like a tall ghost, changing its position betimes, and its form, and gradually, as morning approached, melting away in the light of the rising sun. At ten or eleven o'clock that day, we organized a squad of about ten, with drills and other quarrying tools, and commenced the work of excavation. We found great numbers of rents and cracks in the rocks as we descended. Not much powder was needed after the first blast. We did not propose to work all round the hole, but began five or six yards away from the lips of the orifice and continued to work on that side alone; when we reached a depth of about twenty feet we came to the ærolite, or mass of metal, still hot, and covered outside with a slight film or coating of oxide. It is wedge-shaped, the heavy end being upward. We cannot account for this except on the supposition that it was globular as it descended; but the contact with so dense a body as a mass of limestone, while in a soft condition, pushed backward the mass as it passed through and gave it the cone-shape which it has. It had passed entirely through the ledge of limestone and was embedded in a stratum of the bluish, tough, putty-like clay, very closely packed and impervious to water. This bed of clay, or marl, runs, sloping up the hill, to what extent or distance I don't know, but at the point where the excavation was made it has that inclination. The ærolite we found to measure about seven feet from apex to base, and, at the grratest circumference, about ten feet round. It is specifically very heavy, and the lump cannot weigh less than five or six tons."—Ex.

☞ Gen. Prim, the Spanish revolutionist, it seems, is a terrible fellow, whose threats are always carried out to the letter. His famous menace addressed to Queen Isabella two years ago, "Change your system now, madame, or I swear that you shall flee from Spain," terrified the Queen at that time so much that O'Donnell was scarcely able to dissuade her from acceding to Prim's request.

☞ The appointment of the Dean of Cork, (Dr. Magee) to the bishopric of Peterborough is a great ecclesiastical innovation. Many Englishmen have, at different times, been raised to the Irish Episcopal bench, but there are few, if any, instances on record of an Irish clergyman having been appointed to a bishopric in England. The present is believed to be the first case since the Union.

☞ One of the royal generals in Spain recently condemned a child only five years old to be shot, as the son of a rebel. The child, not understanding the situation, moved about, and by extraordinary luck was not touched. The general then cooly threw it an orange, and while stooping to pick it up, a second volley stretched it dead. If this is true, the brute should suffer, wherever he may be found.

☞ A French paper remarks that, if Count Bismark has stirred up the revolution in Spain, he has done good service to France, for it is impossible that what has happened across the Pyrenees should not suggest to Napoleon III. some wholesome reflections. Mission Tent for Florida.

Shall the Maine Mission Tent go to Florida on a mission during the coming winter? Bro. Griffin, who is a good and faithful manager, proposes to go with the tent, provided the committee consent and the friends of missions will provide the means. Who that has abundance of means, can do better than to aid such a work? One thousand dollars would sustain such a mission during the winter. We have brethren in the State who could do it single handed, if they would. It remains for them to say what they will do at once. I. C. WELLCOME.

The Maine Annual Conference.

Where shall it be held? We have been constantly engaged with the Mission Tent, and could not arrange for the conference. Will those who would like it at their place, notify me at once? Please do it as soon as you see this notice, and we will arrange to have it in November, at the place which seems most proper, as you suggest. Direct to me at Yarmouth. I. C. WELLCOME.

Notice.

There are many persons who are too feeble to work hard, others cannot obtain employment that affords much pay. We would say to such that if they would like to canvass for works that are excellent and very saleable, we will put them on the right track if they will write us with a stamp to pay for answer. Men and women both can be supplied. Receiving as we are new subscription books from various publishing houses, we know the merits of the works we are prepared to recommend. M. D. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

General Conference at Buchanan.

There will be a general social conference of believers in the speedy advent of our Lord Jesus Christ, at Buchanan, Mich., commencing Monday, Nov. 23d, and continuing over the following Lord's day. Elder John Couch, of New Hampshire, will be present to preach the word. Also, Elds. J. V. Himes, Wm. Sheldon, Frank Burr, and many others of our western ministers. We invite all our friends, north, south, east, and west, to be in attendance. Those purposing to make visits east or west this fall or winter, will do well to arrange to stop here during the whole or a portion of the conference. Provision will be made for all who attend. Our hearts are large enough, and our homes are open. Come, and bring a blessing from the Lord with you. Many have long wished for an opportunity to visit this place. Embrace this occasion, and it will do, not only us, but your own soul good.

The General Ministerial Conference will hold an adjourned session at the same time, which will add greatly to the interest of the occasion. Come to the feast. In behalf of the church at Buchanan,
D. R. MANSFIELD, Pastor.
WM. L. HIMES, Secretary.

General Ministerial Conference.

The Western General Ministerial Advent Christian Conference will meet at Buchanan, Mich., Thursday, Nov. 26th (in connection with the Social Conference), as decided by a vote of the General Conference at its last session. This meeting is not to be regarded as a special meeting, but as a continuation of our unfinished meeting at De Kalb; hence, all ministers having a good standing in any of the Western Advent Christian Conferences can take part in our deliberations, as specified in the primary call. Let the watchmen rally. We represent a noble cause. Let us honor it in earnest efforts for its promotion.
WM. SHELDON, Secretary.

Notice.

Providence permitting, the adjourned meeting of the believers in the speedy coming of the Lord, which was held in Enfield Sept. 24th, will meet at Paradise Hall, in Bristol, Conn., on Thursday, Nov. 5th, at seven o'clock P. M., and continue through the week and over the following Sunday.
For the brethren, E. M. CURTISS.
J. W. WHITING.

Conference.

Providence permitting, there will be a conference on New Durham Ridge, to commence Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, and hold over the following Sunday. Brn. J. Couch, A. Ross, and others, are expected. We wish to make one more effort to advance God's cause and save the perishing. Let prayer go up to God for his blessing.
For the brethren, J. G. SMITH.

Notice.

There will be a meeting of days at Hollis Centre, Me., commencing Thursday evening, October 29th, and continue over the Lord's day. T. P. S. Hampson, Wm. H. Mitchell, and others, are expected to preach the word. Come all that can to this meeting, and homes will be provided for all.
TIMOTHY S. CARLL.

Conference.

The Lord willing, we purpose to hold a conference in Bangor, Me., commencing October 29th, and to hold over the following Sabbath. We hope all of the brothers and sisters will come who are willing to work for the Lord.
In behalf of the Church, J. M. JEWETT.

Notice.

The first quarterly meeting with the church at Woodhull, N. Y., will commence Friday evening, Nov. 27th, and continue over the Sunday following. All are invited to attend. J. W. TAYLOR.

Notice.

To the brethren and sisters scattered abroad, who are interested in the Star of Hope Mission: Sr. Anna E. Smith, Superintendent, can procure the full report of her labors and expenses for the past twelve months, which is got up in pamphlet form. Single copies 15 cents, by the dozen $1.25. The proceeds, after paying the printer's bills, etc., will go to defray the expenses of the mission. They can be had by sending to ANNA E. SMITH, 14 Laurens Street, New York, or to H. L. HASTINGS, Scriptural Tract Repository, Boston.

Notice.

Having been released from all contracts and arrangements of public labor, I am now at liberty to go wherever the door may be opened. Application must be made soon. Address Eld. PETER S. W. DEYO, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

Notice.

Our meetings in South Boston, for the worship of God, will be held hereafter at "Fraternity Hall," No. 120 Broadway, every Sunday, the Lord willing. Come over and help us.

COMMUNION SERVICE.

Cool waters to the thirsty soul
How sweet!
The parching earth looks up with eager eyes
The first bright drops that glitter from the skies
To greet.

A cooling draught has cheered me
On life's way;
My soul is strengthened to begin anew—
My spirit moistened with a heav'nly dew
To-day.

Father, I thank thee for the joy
Of meeting here;
Oasis on life's desert-strand,
To cheer us in a weary land
So drear.

Dear Savior, here thy dying love
I taste—
Here I each solemn vow renew—
Oh! keep me faithful all life's journey, through Life's desert waste.

I know that storms and shadows still Must dim my day;
The fire must burn, the tempest beat;
But still I know my Savior guides my feet
Along the way.

The thorns and briars have torn
Thy weary feet before;
Thou know'st how much I need sweet heav'nly dew
To cheer me on my journey to
The golden shore!

Be Thou my strength, my guide, my stay,
My daily light;
And when death's portals I have passed,
Ah! crown me with the white-robed throng at last,
In mansions bright.

THOUGHTS ON A FEW THINGS.

STILL INCREDULOUS.

How gladly one would find access to the columns of religious and even secular journals, to notify and admonish the incredulous public of the gathering tempest of trouble; but, alas! how reluctant are the managers to admit photographs of impending peril. How greatly and faithfully the people need instruction. Prophecy alone can give a sure account of the situation and the prospect. What exciting dispatches we may soon see; what surprising rumors and revolutions we may hear; what puzzled comments and perplexed cogitations observe. I was just talking with my sister from Buffalo, and I asked her,

"What comments did your ministers in the city make on the great earthquake?"

"None, that I know of," she said.

"Is it possible, that such an extraordinary event could pass without pulpit comment; an event of such fearful significance?"

"I heard of no particular reference to the subject, by any of the ministers."

Ah! with what an awful silence are the lips of religious instructors sealed. Still there is doubtless, here and there, an earnest note of alarm. It seems to me precisely as if the whole force and fury of coming revolutions and judgments would begin to break on the world, aye, and on the church too, before they will believe; and then that the cry will arise indeed, and in earnest, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh!"

THE TEMPEST THICKENS.

It is manifest enough that a diluvian, or an ante-diluvian, heedlessness characterizes the masses. Fashion is still lugging on her vanities and enormities. My sister just gave me a pencil sketch of that new detestableness (at which I gazed with a kind of mixed feeling of wonder, pity, and ridicule), called the Grecian bend. There you have a pretty frolic of fashion. That is a modern phenomenon. There is one embodiment of the spirit of the age! Just take planchette, and the Grecian bend, and you have two of the peculiar evolutions of the time. Exclamations and exclamation points bristle up in one's head at such strange sights and signs. And this may be said to the credit of some of the wise ones, even in Buffalo, that they answer, when interrogated, "Beware of planchette! Keep clear of it. It is mysterious and sinister. Let it alone." Yet this does not prevent the strange implement from going abroad into ever so many even out-of-the-way places; and thousands on thousands, through its agency, are like to be busy and fervent at devil-worshiping.

And now how goes the whirl of the great world in politics, revolution and war? Every thing is ominous. What shall we say of the South? Ætna, Vesuvius, Popocatapetl (figuratively),—such are the volcanic heaps that rear their smoking apices throughout this unhappy realm. A deadly ferocity is seen among the Indian tribes, and the war-fever is firing their merciless bands. What means the revolution in Spain? I will tell you. This is one of ten kingdoms, whose kings are to be chosen by elective franchise; or, at least, so I believe. Democracy and monarchy are thus allied, and the iron and the clay of the toes in the metallic image show that maturity of the doomed shape when the mountain stone shall shatter it. Let us see if there are not more to come almost immediately. (And Christ coming as a thief, too!)

A BOMB-SHELL AMONG THE BAPTISTS.

Perhaps you have not noticed the surprise and alarm excited in the Baptist ranks by the action of Alexis Caswell, of Providence, R. I., who occupies of all men at this moment, probably, the highest position officially in the whole denomination; as he is President of Brown University, and also of the Missionary Union. At a late session of the Warren Association, he denied any "thus saith the Lord" for the invariable precedence of baptism to the Lord's Supper; thus seeming to shoot an arrow into the joint of the close-communion armor. It has brought and will bring some hailstones around the head of the venerable President. Whether his tall form will stand still erect amid the tempest, time only can show; or whether he will yield to the demand, to resign his high official honors, or recant his implication of an unscriptural rigor in the long time order of restricted communion.

JESUS CHRIST ON HIGH TITLES.

I confess it has seemed to me just a little curious how the edge of one scripture is dulled in our day; and that is, "Be ye not called Rabbi." But there is a way by which a good many learned teachers and ministers manage somehow not to remember this little counsel, or else they understand it a little differently from the letter of the text. Now, you may think it bold and plain to say, though I am sure you will agree with me perfectly, this reception of titles is an open door to many mischiefs. It is positively contrary to Christ's command, and, as a consequence, great darkness has been coming into the church for a long time. It may be an agreeable distinction to nestle in one's imagination, or to hold fast with the grasp of conscious possession; but is not coveted, and made conspicuous? But look at the great scale of operations, among the colleges and universities, in the distribution of titles and degrees. Who gave authority to a group of christian men to override the prohibition of Christ? Who said to the most learned man living, that he might be a casual or temporary exception to the great rule? How came he to get special license to be made or called a Rabbi? What messenger has ever come down from heaven, more august and authoritative than Jesus of Nazareth, by whose permission a man may innocently or lawfully receive a certification that he is henceforth Doctor Divinitatis? "Produce your strong reasons."

Now let us ask honestly if this is not all wrong? Is it not one of the most alarming signs of the times? Is it not a mark of apostasy? Is it not a fearful bar to faith? How can these, who honor one another, "believe"? How can they shake off the old subtlety of the serpent, that a sinner is immortal? Ah! the wily deceiver has got a loop over them, in causing them to champion the lie, that it is not the blessed and only Potentate, who only hath immortality.

DOCTRINAL AND PRACTICAL.

And that leads me to say a word of the oft-repeated protest against so much doctrine. "Give us practical preaching. We want practical religion. It is not so much matter how we believe, if we only do right." But it is matter how we believe. Believing right is the very first step towards doing right. The popular perversion of doctrine, the mis-believing, and the mis-preaching, are perfectly shameful. Just for one moment notice what is God's idea of the value and virtue of right doctrine. "Give attendance to doctrine." "Take heed to thyself, and to the doctrine.' "Let the Elders have double honor, who labor in word and doctrine." "All scripture is profitable for doctrine." "In doctrine showing incorruptness." "I give you good doctrine." "My doctrine shall drop as the rain." "Speak things which become sound doctrine." And much more.

Fifty-five times in God's word is this word "doctrine" used, and in what varied and almost infinite phraseology is the importance of right teaching set forth. Doctrine is the very beginning and foundation of all right doing; and it is the miserable neglect and perversion of doctrine which has led to untold mischiefs throughout Christendom. As for the word "practise," it is used seven times in the Bible, and always in an evil sense. The fact is, by the various and plain verbiage of doctrine, teaching, testimony, gospel, scripture, word, truth, saying, wisdom, knowledge, instruction, and so on, we have such an emphasis laid on the dignity, the magnitude, the virtue and necessity of right teaching, as we can, I apprehend, be in no danger of over-rating. The fact is, a man can scarcely do the first thing truly pleasing to God, without previous instruction. He certainly will get on at a poor rate toward the heavenly kingdom, without some seeds of truth lodged in his mind.

Therefore I say, give us doctrine, pure, true, divine. The children will grow by the milk of the word. Flies floating in the milk, or sediment piled up at the bottom, will make it nauseous to pure eyes and a pure taste. Out with the flies and the sediment! Or, rather, let no such naughtiness in.

MORAL COWARDICE.

He who has not sufficient courage to face the fire of a battery, or the rush of a cavalry charge, is pronounced a coward. If his legs, as Sydney Smith expresses it, get the better of him, and carry him in the opposite direction to the battle, the wits ridicule him, and his officers threaten to shoot him. This shrinking from danger is often a matter of physical constitution only, in which persons differ by natural temperament. Yet when it is not resisted and overcome in necessary emergencies, we assert that there is a lack of manhood; we laugh, we sneer, we denounce, as the mood may be, or as the gravity of the case demands. We call the unfortunate trembler a woman, a girl, a chicken-hearted fellow, until he feels ashamed to present himself among his comrades.

If cowardice be such a disgrace and crime, it is time some of our young men began to blush, who are daily proving themselves to be a most arrant set of cowards, and not possesed of half the courage exhibited by many a girl. They are not men, but a kind of jelly fish, without backbone or other frame-work. Present a temptation, and they yield quicker than if you had presented a pistol. Great boasters they may be (cowards out of danger usually are), but they turn pale and surrender at the first show of opposition. Try them, and see if we exaggerate the matter. Bring the chicken-hearted youths to the test, and notice how their moral courage oozes out in the presence of companions whom they fear, so that their tongues cannot say No to an evil proposal! They know the danger of intoxicating drinks, and that they ought to abstain from their use, for their own sakes, and as an example to others. They know the wishes and prayers in that respect of their parents and friends. Conscience clearly points out the path of duty. But have they the courage to walk therein? Not a bit of it. The first toast in which they are called to unite, the first lady or gentleman that proposes a glass of wine at dinner or party, the first invitation to take a drink in connection with a game of billiards, or base-ball, or cricket, puts to flight all their good resolutions. Their power of resistance dies out at sight of a curled lip or at sound of a sneer. They will go to places of dissipating amusement, which their moral sense condemns, and associate with companions whose influence they feel to be pernicious, and desecrate the Lord's day in a manner which violates all the good habits in which they were trained, and why? If the truth must be confessed, it is because they are afraid to do right—afraid of shrugs and winks and jokes; afraid of nicknames, and of being thought to be under home influences, or of being suspected of beginning the christian life!

It is proverbial that duels at the present day are usually fought from cowardice and not from courage. Neither wishes to expose his own life, or take that of the other; but both fear the accusing sneers of the world in case they hesitate to commit the customary crime. This mean and unmanly feeling influences men continually against their secret convictions of duty. It leads them to dishonest extravagance to keep up appearances and vie with rivals, rather than retrench so as to live within their means. It induces them to conform to sinful customs in society and in business rather than appear singular. It restrains them from an open choice of the service of God, and a noble-hearted profession of faith in Christ, lest they excite the wonder or the ridicule of their associates. So true is it, that now as of old, it costs something to follow Jesus, and he who would win heaven must fight the good fight of faith. The finally lost will prove to be a miserable company of cowards, who might have gained a crown and kingdom, but for the lack of courage!—The Advance.

THE RESURRECTION DENIED.

Since the publication of our article "The Resurrection a Necessity," we have heard persons proclaim that man will have a future life without a resurrection, and that the righteous go to heaven when they die.

In the words of Paul we are constrained to ask, "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?"

If death is the "gate to heaven," why was the great apostle of the Gentiles inspired to say that "if the dead rise not, . . . then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished"?

If Paul expected to be alive and happy after death, without a literal resurrection from the dust, why does he exclaim, "What advantageth it me if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die"?

If the dead who died in the Lord are in heaven, how came it that David was not in heaven some eight hundred years after he died? See Acts 2 : 34.

Finally: If "all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth," how say some among you that the real and responsible being, who alone can hear God's voice, never goes into the grave?—Now and Then.

REFLECTIONS.

I am weary, oh, so weary,
That I fain would be at rest,
Fain would lay this aching head
Upon the Savior's breast;
And hear his voice so kindly
Whisper in my ear,—
"How long, poor child, I've sought thee,
Many, oh, many a year;

Sought to turn thy wandering footsteps
From the many ways of sin,
Into the path eternal,
That the righteous enter in;
But oh, thou would'st not listen,
And vain it seemed I cried,
To one who seemed so erring,
And my counsel too defied:

Until in a night of darkness
I sought thee, sad and lone;
I came and found thee wandering,
To lead thee safely home."
Now with his arm around me,
And my head upon his breast,
With the raging storm about me,
I feel that I am blest.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTER FROM SR. A. E. SMITH.

BRO. GRANT:—I would like, with your permission, to set some things straight before the public. I know that no one could ever do the mighty work that has been done here in this city, and other places where I have labored, and the Devil let them alone. As far as I am concerned individually, it matters but little what people say; but for the sake of the cause of Christ, I think it best to make a few statements to my friends, and enemies also. In the beginning I would say, if the friends will get one of my Reports, they will there learn how I started in mission work, and all the particulars; but as all have not those reports to read, I feel it my duty to make a statement about matters and things. I know it is supposed by the Advent people in New York, and East, that when I commenced to work as missionary, I was a poor woman, and, like hundreds of others, was working merely for a salary. If I had blowed my trumpet at the corners of the streets, how much I was worth, and how much I gave here and there, and what I did for this and that, and how many preachers I have started on their way rejoicing, why, then, Sister Anna would have been a wonderful woman, and no doubt she will be yet, after Jesus comes. We'll wait and see.

First, then, the report that I bought a house in Philadelphia, costing $7000, out of missionary money. I would say, when I bought that house, it was long before I was a missionary in New York, and I bought it with money that I made in business. I had three cutlery stores, and did like all other business people. What money I did not need in my business, I put in real estate, or in what I pleased. When I closed business in Philadelphia, I owned two farms in New Jersey, and a house in Philadelphia. When I began mission work, I began on my own hook, at my own expense, used my own money, sold one farm and used that, sold the other and used part of that, and so kept on using it for the glory of God and the salvation of souls, till I found I had run up to what belonged to my children, and I had no right to use theirs. If any christian Bro. or Sr. wants to know who Sister Smith is, or where she came from, I can furnish them with all the references and recommendations they wish. I have been before the public twenty-five years, with a reputation unspotted; and is it possible that right here, in the midst of the greatest work that is done by any mission in the highways and hedges, I must stop my work, and come down to settle these matters? If I do, God will charge my time to the babblers and mischief-makers and busybodies in other men's matters, and they must settle it in the judgment.

Next, that the Mission House was furnished splendidly, out of mission money. The one that reported this knows it is as false as the author of falsehood. In the first place, the house is not furnished in style. The furniture that is in it is my own private property, which I brought with me from Philadelphia, with the exception of what Sr. Holden made me a present of, so that we could be comfortable if we were sick. Some of it I have had twenty-one years, some nineteen, some fourteen, some ten, and some seven years; and since I have been in New York, it has been used for the benefit of missionaries, and I have never charged a cent for the use, or breakage, and wearing out; for I expect to be paid when Jesus comes.

It is said I spend the money to fix up the house. I have not bought any furniture for the mission but six wooden chairs, worth $5, and a lounge, $6. Eleven dollars' worth of furniture, to furnish a four-story house! This woman forgot to say that the mission needed many comforts for the laborers; for she was here to see for herself that the table in the kitchen was two boards nailed together with cross-legs. It was of my own manufacture. She also forgot to say that, for want of chairs to sit in, we had to carry our chairs from the sitting-room to the kitchen, and when we were done carry them back or else stand up. This same woman did say many things, and find fault. She said she supposed my collections were larger than hers. Well, I should not wonder if they were; and they ought to be, when we take into consideration the great difference in our expenses, and that she has a husband to support her.

Again, it was reported that I sent five hundred dollars to Bro. Smith, of missionary money, to build that wooden tent at Alton Bay. Now I did not send him a cent; neither will the tent be paid for out of mission money. Even if it was, would it not be all right? for I had it built for the comfort of missionaries. But the Devil overshot the mark that time, for it has brought out my friends. The tent will not be paid for with mission money, nor my own money either. Thank the Lord.

Again. It was said, "What a waste of money to put up that flag, with the 'Star of Hope Mission' on it. It was ridiculous to waste money so; and that flag never cost less than $30." The man that raised that report, according to his age, I should judge ought to know more about the price of flags, to say the least. Now the history of that mission flag is this: I was telling a friend of mine, an unconverted young man, what a nice tent I would have this summer; and said I, All I want now is our name to float over it, that folks may know where to find us. Said he, I will make you a present of a flag, if you will get the kind that I like. Said he, Get bunting, instead of muslin, and have a decent flag; so he gave me $20, and the flag cost $15. So much for the flag.

And so I can take up the thousand and one stories and set every one of them straight; but I feel that God wants me to spend my time at something better. I should like to see the man, or woman, who can show in one single instance where I ever spent a dollar of mission money, except for mission purposes. I have not only spent my own private means in this work, but the money that I have received for my pictures, and that which has been given me for my own personal use. All has gone into the mission fund. A brother gave me $20 last winter. Said he, This is for your own private use; but all I ever got out of it was a box of Seidlitz powders, for 50 cents; the rest went towards paying the rent. A sister gave me $5.00 for personal use, and I got out of it one bottle of wine when I was sick; the rest was spent on the table, to feed some of those who have talked the worst about the mission.

I would like to know where is the man or woman that will take my place, work hard here day and night two or three weeks in a month, and then run off and labor a whole week for the means to pay this rent, and find the table, and send the means home to keep things moving, and then hurry home to attend to the mission here and at Hackensack. Most of the preachers think it is as much as they can do to take care of one place; but here are two mission churches, besides a host of poor people to look after. I know there is scarcely one in a hundred that understand anything about our hardships, sacrifices, and want of the comforts of a home; especially you that have nice warm fires, good beds, good food, and kind friends. It is of no use to multiply words about the matter. You never can know until you are placed under the same trials. It has to be endured to be understood.

Now I want to say a word right here, because I do not want to take much of my time in running after the devil's stories, that these stories hurt my influence, hinder the work, and stop the means from coming in to support it; but I can't help what people say. The Lord and I know all about it, and he is my lawyer. I have every confidence in him that he understands the case, no matter what others may say. All I ask is the heartfelt prayers of God's people. If I have but three friends, will you meet me at twelve o'clock every day in secret prayer, that his grace may be sufficient for me? It is not only this persecution that I need grace for, but here is my work. I must keep on laboring, trying to get the means to pay the rent, and supply the table for the laborers, which, was it not for my appointments, would never have been sustained. My books show that there has never been received in donations but about one-third enough to sustain the mission; and I do not keep the books myself. I have a person to take charge of them for me; and was it not that I labored in other churches last winter, the mission would have stopped. I ate no idle bread in any of the churches, nor brought in any divisions, neither did I beg for what I received, as it has been reported. I preached Jesus, and never spoke about my mission work, unless it was requested; and in some places did not even mention anything about it, and the friends have said to me afterwards, "O, sister Smith, how I was disappointed. I thought you were going to tell us about your work, and have a collection taken up for you." And so the case stands. The Lord has supplied our wants thus far, and I do not feel afraid to trust him to the end. Yours in the highways and hedges, ANNA E. SMITH.

FAMILY PRAYER.

Father, do you pray with your family? Do you every morning and evening collect around you your household as you read them the word of life, and, "lifting up holy hands," offer prayer and suplication to God? If you do not, fearful is the responsibility you assume. It is a lamentable fact that many professing christians entirely neglect this solemn and imperative duty; they never mention the subject of religion to their children; never thank God for the many inestimable blessings they enjoy, never ask for guidance and direction from on high, to aid them in the fulfillment of the great and important responsibilities involved in the parental relation.

Very few are aware of the great influence exerted by family worship, by the prayers, earnest and heartfelt prayers, of father and mother. It associates with religion all the sweet memories of childhood and all the endearments of home. It gives to parental counsel and advice the sanction of religion, and restrains the wayward passions of the soul by the remembrance of a father's care and of a mother's tenderness.

"All things whatsoever ye ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." Blessed, glorious promise! Ask that your family may be an honor and a blessing to society; that they may be loving, faithful and devoted followers of Christ, and believing, it shall be granted. Before you go to the labors of the day, to its cares, temptations and anxieties, ask for God's power to uphold you, his counsel to direct you, his Spirit to sanctify you, and his presence to cheer you; and when the shades of evening gather round, when the toils and cares of the day are over, when you look back and review the past, when you see how many sins cluster around you, how many wrong impressions have been made upon the tender minds of your children, and how little you have done for yourself, for your family and for God, then pour out your soul in earnest prayer, that God may forgive you, and that he may give you strength for the morrow.—Selected.

For the World's Crisis.

SONG.

Come, brethren; don't grow weary,
But let us journey on;
The moments will not tarry,
The night will soon be gone.
The passing scenes all tell us
That Jesus soon will come,
And give the rest he promised,
In our eternal home.
We shall rest when he comes,
We shall rest when he comes,
There'll be sweet rest,
There'll be sweet rest,
For us when he comes.

Loved ones then will join us,
Who now have passed away;
O'er Eden's plains we'll wander,
Through an eternal day.
But now we're in the army,
And dare not leave our post;
We'll fight until we conquer
The foe's most mighty host.

Our Captain's now in heaven,
Preparing us a home,
A glorious, golden city,
With which he soon will come.
The world, the flesh, and Satan
All strive to hedge our way;
But we'll overcome all evil;
We'll hourly watch and pray.

— It is said of Martin Luther that the more he had to do, the more frequently and fervently he prayed. On one occasion he remarked to a friend, "I have so much to do to-day that I shall have to pray three hours."

— A lady once asked a minister whether a person might not be fond of dress and ornaments without being proud: "Madam," said the minister, "when you see a fox's tail peeping out of a hole you may be sure the fox is within."

— Temperance puts wood on the fire, meal in the barrel, flour in the tub, money in the purse, credit in the country, contentment in the house, clothes on the children, vigor in the body, intelligence in the brain, and spirit in the whole constitution.

— Benevolence is not to be estimated by the amount given, but by what it costs to give. An English charity recently received an envelope containing six penny stamps, on the inside of which were written these words: "Fasted a meal to give a meal." That was true benevolence.

— To be insensible to the charms of piety, and the beauty of holiness, is to be entirely wanting in the best sense and taste a man can have. Whatever is excellent and desirable in the universe of God centres in holiness. Holiness is the ultimatum of human hopes and happiness.

— When the good and the lovely die, the memory of their good deeds, like the moonbeams on the stormy sea, lights up our darkened hearts and lends to the surrounding gloom a beauty so sad and so sweet that we would not, if we could, dispel the darkness that environs it.

A PRACTICAL RULE.

It is important that our conduct should be right in all our intercourse with our fellow-men. This is one method by which we must let the light shine. We must not only feel right, but do right. A special rule to tell us what to do in every circumstance of life, would have made the Holy Scriptures as large as a complete law library, which would have required years of study to find out our duty. Jesus has given us a rule so short that the poorest memory can master it; so plain that the weakest intellect can understand it; and so comprehensive, that it embraces every duty growing out of all our varied conditions and relations. It is expressed in language most simple and unambiguous. There is not a single hard word in it. It reads as follows: Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets. Very properly is this called, The Golden Rule.

Are you an employer? Suppose you were in the places of those who work for you; what treatment would you like to receive? Would you want a fair compensation for your labor? Then pay to those who work for you all they fairly earn. Pay them promptly. Let there be no withholding their dues; and do not take advantage of their necessities, and pay them in an article of poorer quality or at a greater price than the market will warrant. A popular, wealthy preacher hired a young man to work for him. At the end of the summer's work, the employer gave him his note for his services. The young man concluded to go west, and wanted the money. The preacher shaved his own note—taking advantage of the other's wants and giving him several dollars less than the face of the note called for. Was this doing as he would be done by? Such a man needs religion. He has not the first element of a true Christian.

Are you in the employment of others? Here the same rule holds. You should be just as industrious, as saving, as careful of their interests as you would have them be of yours, if you were in their place and they were in your position. This is the rule given by inspiration. Any thing short of this is a sin against God. The religion of the Bible is recommended by the faithful conduct of its humblest votaries. Naaman, the Syrian General, was brought to acknowledge the true God through the fidelity of a maid-servant from one of the tribes of Israel. The first individual of any social standing who identified herself with the Methodists in Boston, was a lady who was led to their meetings, and to the cross, by the marked christian conduct of her hired girl—a member of the denomination at that time proscribed and persecuted. The best results follow from observing the requirements of the Bible with those who are in the employment of others, to use all fidelity "in singleness of your heart, as unto Christ; not with eye-service as men-pleasers; but as the servants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart, with good will doing service, as to the Lord and not to men: knowing that whatsoever good thing any man doeth, the same shall he receive of the Lord."

So if you are buying or selling, or doing anything whatever that affects the interests of others, you have here a rule at once binding and easily understood, and which will always, if observed, keep you in the line of duty.—Earnest Christian.

PHYSIOLOGICAL LETTERS.—No. 7.

My last letter was taken up with a consideration of the predisposing causes of sleep. Before dismissing this topic, let me say a word in behalf of those that are afflicted with a very common infirmity. Do not censure too much your neighbor who has the misfortune to sleep just at the time when respect for the proprieties of the place, if no other consideration, ought to keep him awake. Just reflect how many things there are on a Sabbath morning (or afternoon) that predispose to sleep. First, muscular rest, conjoined often with a sense of fatigue; silence, except the preacher's voice, which may be of just the proper pitch and tone to lull to sleep; sameness of the devotional exercises—a want of anything either in them or in the sermon, that has the charm of variety and novelty. Hence it is that a new preacher coming before a congregation will often succeed admirably in engaging their attention and keeping them awake, just by the strangeness of his manner, even though the matter of his sermons be very commonplace. But more powerful than all these causes is the hot, close air of the room. Heat is more than simply a predisposing cause. It calls away blood from the brain to the surface, producing in the nervous centres that minimum of arterialization which is the true sleep point. There are few that without a strong effort of the will can resist all these influences. Hence we see the importance of thorough ventilation and shading of meeting-houses, and the utmost care in the warming of them so that people shall rather suffer a little from cold than be too hot. Again, variety in the church service, where practicable, is of use. Last, and perhaps not least, the persistent endeavor on the part of the clergyman to make the sermon and the preliminary sacred exercises as interesting as possible. (a) These are a few hints which naturally arise from a consideration of our subject; and they may go for what they are worth.

With regard to the proximate cause of ordinary sleep, I would suggest that we may find an explanation of the whole phenomenon in the state of the circulating vessels, particularly of the smaller capillaries that ramify among the cerebral cells. In sound sleep these vessels are contracted, supplying just enough blood to the nerve vesicles that the requisite reparative processes may be performed. In normal or morbid wakefulness they are relaxed, thus furnishing a more abundant supply of blood to the nerve centres, for the very reason that more blood is needed when the brain is in action. (b) Blood is necessary for thought and all the nervous and mental operations; and this is the reason why the brain receives so much, for one-fifth of all the blood in the body goes to the brain.

I shall continue the subject in my next.

(a) We see the necessity, if people would enjoy the Sabbath, and profit by it, [illegible]

(b) Flourens' experiment, to be given shortly, is to the point.

CHANGE OF DIET.

"In a medical work entitled 'Budd on the Liver,' it is stated that persons living on a diet which excludes butter, sugar, and the hydro-carbons generally, are liable to attacks of griping of the bowels, because sufficient bile is not formed to correct the acidity of the food while passing the bowels.

"Is there any truth in this? I may state that for the last few weeks I have adopted a diet of bread, vegetables, and lean meat exclusively, and, although my general health has improved, I have suffered every morning from griping of the bowels. There has been no diarrhea, however."

If a person lives abnormally for any great length of time, either in regard to eating unhealthful articles of food, using tobacco or alcohol, or by abusing himself in any other way, when he quits the paths of transgression and returns to the "straight and narrow way" of physical righteousness, he must expect more or less disturbance to take place in his system, and to experience more or less pain and inconvenience as the result of the change. A change from bad habits to those which are better gives the system a chance to renovate itself and repair the damage produced by the previous course of wrong doing, a chance which the vital powers are usually very prompt to avail themselves of; hence the disturbances —remedial efforts—which usually take place whenever such change is made; hence the griping of the bowels in the above case, which will be of short duration if the better way is perseveringly continued. I would say, in passing, that the diet in the above case also would be very much improved by the addition of a liberal supply of fruit. Budd's explanation of the matter is entirely erroneous, else how can people live healthfully, as millions do, who do not use butter, sugar, or similar articles of food?—Herald of Health.

HULLED CORN.—The old-fashion hulled corn is prepared as follows: To make lye enough for three quarts of corn, take about four quarts of ashes, and boil them an hour in about eight quarts of water. Hard wood ashes are best. After the ashes have settled, turn off the lye, which will be about six quarts. Put the corn into the lye and boil three hours, or until the hulls begin to come off freely. Then take out the corn, put it into cold water and boil again. Keep boiling and changing the water until it is perfectly clear, rubbing the corn with the hands as the water is poured off, to clean off the hulls. The water will need to be changed half a dozen times or more. This will remove all the lye, and make the corn white and soft. It is now ready for use and will keep in cold weather several weeks. It is warmed up and eaten with milk, or like hominy, with syrup. The white dent corn of the south is the best for this purpose. Potash lye is sometimes used, but does not leave the corn so white.

CANNING PEARS.—We take the following from Zion's Herald:—

"Take good well ripened pears of medium size—the better the flavor the more satisfactory the preserve—peel carefully, boil in water till soft, then add one fourth as much refined sugar as fruit by measure, boil a few minutes, then take out the pears singly with fork or spoon, and drop into the glass jar until closely packed; then fill up the jar with the hot liquor, being careful to put it in slowly for fear of breaking the jar. Seal immediately, and set away in cool place. If this rule is properly observed the fruit will be white, the liquid clear, and the whole very nice indeed, equal to the best imported French preserves."

CURE FOR NEURALGIA.—Some time since we published, at the request of a friend, a receipt to cure neuralgia. Half a drachm of sal ammonia, in an ounce of camphor water, to be taken a tea-spoonful at a dose, and the dose to be repeated several times, at intervals of five minutes, if the pain be not relieved at once. Half-a-dozen different persons have since tried the receipt, and in every case an immediate cure was effected. In one, the sufferer, a lady, had been affected for more than a week, and her physician was unable to alleviate her sufferings, when a solution of sal ammonia in camphor water relieved her in a few minutes.—Alta California.

CLEANLINESS.—There is a homely but very forcible expression (most homely expressions are forcible) that "cleanliness is next to Godliness;" meaning thereby that habits of cleanliness tend not only to health of body, but to that state of moral feeling which becomes man as the chief creature of the Almighty. One of the first acts of mental degradation is neglect of the person; filth and rags are always associated with misery, and often with vice and crime; and this remark applies to nations as well as to individuals; for we find that the nations lowest in the scale of civilization are those which are deprived of political freedom, of domestic comfort and of mental culture.

ANECDOTE OF DR. RUSH.—The Medical and Surgical Reporter states that long before the temperance reform, a missionary from the West Indies sought medical advice from Dr. Rush, and when a very unpalatable medicine was prescribed, the patient asked if he could not take a little "good old Jamaica" with it.

"No, sir," the doctor decidedly replied.

"Why, sir, what harm will it do?" demanded the West Indian.

"What harm will it do?" continued Dr. Rush. "I am determined that no man shall rise on the day of judgment and say, 'Dr. Rush made me a drunkard.'" Wise and noble reply.

THE SONG OF A TIRED SERVANT.

"One more day's work for Jesus,"
One less of fruit for me!
But heaven is nearer,
And Christ is dearer
Than yesterday to me.
His love and light
Fill all my soul to-night.

One more day's work for Jesus:
How glorious is my King!
'Tis joy, not duty,
To speak his beauty;
My soul mounts on the wing
At the mere thought
How Christ her life hath bought:

One more day's work for Jesus;
Sweet, sweet the work has been,
To tell the story,
And show the glory
Where Christ's flock enter in.
How it did shine
In this poor heart of mine!

One more day's work for Jesus—
In hope, in faith, in prayer;
His word I've spoken—
His bread I've broken
To souls faint with despair;
And bid them flee
To him who hath saved me.

One more day's work for Jesus—
Yes, a weary day;
But heaven shines clearer,
And rest comes nearer,
At each step of the way:
And Christ in all—
Before his face I fall.

Oh, blessed work for Jesus!
Oh, rest at Jesus' feet!
There toil seems pleasure,
My wants are treasure,
And pain for Him looks sweet.
Lord, if I may,
I'll serve thee more another day.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

All Christendom admit the first coming of Christ to be literal, because they accept the literal interpretation of the prophecies relative to that event. They discover the fatal mistake made by the Jews, in mistaking their meaning; point out the mote which blinded their vision; but fail to perceive the beam in their own eye, relative to his second coming, from the same cause, and tending to the same fatal result.

If a follower of Jesus receives an erroneous idea touching any Bible doctrine, and that idea enlarges, it soon becomes of sufficient capacity to absorb his entire mind. If he meets with difficulties in the inspired record, a few are examined cautiously, carefully pruned to fit the idea, until finally the idea becomes all and in all.

If one plain declaration of inspiration is sacrificed upon the altar of tradition, there is no rule to prevent the destruction of the whole. May we be kept from distorting the word of the Lord upon the rack of earthly wisdom. With the example of the first house of Israel, and a variety of views upon the second advent, we wish to present a few thoughts to our brethren, praying that they may be for the glory of God.

Who among the professed followers of Jesus to-day would have recognized the babe of Bethlehem as the promised "Messiah"? Micah 5: 2. How many would have tarried to view that babe for whom room was not found in the inn, the stall of the ox being his birthplace, and the manger his cradle? How many would have done better than that inn-keeper, and invited the mother of Jesus to share their hospitality? How many of the naughty daughters of Zion, who walk with stretched forth neck and wanton eyes (Isa. 3: 16), would have soiled their garments by holding the babe of "Bethlehem"? Who among the learned Rabbis and doctors of divinity would have cried—"Hosanna to the son of David!" as he rode into Jerusalem upon an ass, and a colt the foal of an ass? Zech. 9: 9. Who among their wealthy church members would have asked him to ride in their splendid coaches? Who among them would have asked the "carpenter's son" to supply their pulpit? Who among the amphibious God-and-mammon politicians of to-day would have gone into that upper chamber with the Son of God and his disciples, rather than to the political harangue? Vast numbers of this character manifest more zeal in winning souls to their political god in one campaign, than for Christ in a lifetime. If the political orators of our day truthfully represent their opponents, neither party is worthy the support of an honest man, if they do not speak the truth, then they are liars, and here are two good reasons for remaining "pilgrims and strangers" to political organizations.

But to return. Does not consistency demand, and the Spirit of the Lord teach us, that we apply the same rule of interpretation to the second, as well as the first advent of Jesus Christ?

The first house of Israel would as surely have stumbled over the second advent as the first, by the same method of interpretation. The second house, who contend for the literal fulfillment of the first in all its features, would have made the same fatal mistake there. The ministers and lawyers, doctors and lay members of the church, authorized the crucifixion of the Son of God. They could say Lord, Lord, make long prayers, pay their weekly subscriptions, attend church regularly, hear the prophets read every Sabbath day (Acts 4: 18, 24 and 13: 27), hoping thereby to atone for deeds of damnable infamy, conceived and executed during the other six days of the week. See Matt. 23. All this was the result of cruel unbelief, and terminated by their passing the verdict, "Crucify him, crucify him." "His blood be upon us and our children." If he was to again appear with the same mission, would he be received more favorably at the hands of his friends?

Isa. 53. The prophet asks, "Who hath believed our report?" well knowing that his description of the humiliating and sorrowful character of the "man of sorrows" would not find a lodgment in the hearts of his people. This chapter draped in mourning covers the first advent. The same prophet (25: 8, 9) sees the veil lifted, and death triumphantly swallowed up in victory at the second advent. He suffered at the first; his glorification will follow at the second (1 Pet. 1: 11).

Different views of Christ's coming exist, two or three only of which we shall notice.

1. That he comes at death.

2. That he comes at the destruction of Jerusalem; and

3. One of recent origin and somewhat novel in its features,—"That Christ is to come personally, yet so secretly that not a single sinner who may be living on the earth when he comes will know that he has come; that none of his people will know it except those found at the precise locality of his coming, and these are to inform all other saints that he has come, as no angels attend him to gather his elect. As to the resurrection of the sleeping saints, a faint ray of light foreshadows its probability at some indefinite point in the future; while by what process the earth is to be delivered from the curse doth not yet appear, but it is intimated that it may be accomplished by the united effort of the saints," as no fire is to be used to purify and remove it. We desire to consider these views candidly in the light of divine truth, and especially the latter view, as it is said to be intended for those who are looking for the coming of Christ, and essential that they should receive it.

With our present light neither of these views appear to be correct. If, however, we are wrong, we sincerely desire to be taught the right way by the Spirit of God. We will prayerfully inquire,

1. If death is the "gate to endless joy," and Christ comes at death to open the gate, why do the friends of the believer who is about to enter summon to their aid skillful physicians, and incur vast expense, to prevent an entrance? From this stand-point, was it not strangely inconsistent for Jesus to call Lazarus from there, after having shuffled off this mortal coil, and again, by a resurrection from the dead, restore to him the ills and sorrows of a mortal life? St. John 11. One objection to this view in this case is, that Jesus was absent when Lazarus died, but when he came where he was, Lazarus lived.

Isa. 38. King Hezekiah was told to set his house in order, for he should die and not live. If this view be correct, here certainly was a pleasing prospect of Christ's coming to him, and of a speedy entrance through the gate. The king, however, was exceedingly sad at the tidings, and wept bitterly and prayed to his God, who heard his prayer and closed the gate against him for fifteen years more, which so rejoiced the king that he praised the Lord for it, the reason for which is found in the ninth and tenth verses, where he says he should "not see the Lord, even the Lord in the land of the living," and should "behold man no more with the inhabitants of the world." Evidently the king did not believe Christ would come to him at death, neither that modern Spiritualism is true; for he adds (18, 19,), "Death cannot celebrate thee, the grave cannot praise thee; but the living, he shall praise thee," because "the dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence."—Ps. 115: 17.

2. Christ coming at the destruction of Jerusalem appears impossible, because the signs of his coming must precede the event, and the beloved John, who listened to those signs as recorded in Matt. 24, was, in A. D. 96, banished to Patmos, where he received a revelation from Jesus Christ containing (6: 12, 17,) the same signs still awaiting fulfillment under the sixth seal. Now as Jerusalem was destroyed about A. D. 70, and the signs of Christ's coming were given to John A. D. 96, Jerusalem was destroyed at least twenty-six years too soon to receive credit for the fulfillment of this prophecy.

3. The secret coming of Christ as previously stated seems to deprive the event of any glory whatever. Says Jesus (Matt. 25: 31), "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations." As this is a prophecy, how will the friends of the secret coming avoid the discrepancy between themselves and the apostle (2 Pet. 1: 20), who declares that "no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation"? Matt. 16: 27:—"For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then shall he reward every man according to his works." Could the sleeping saints be rewarded then, while their resurrection is indefinitely postponed in the future? Matt. 24: 30:—"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." We inquire to know by what process this scripture is reduced to a harmony with the view of our friends? Rev. 1: 7:—"Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him." Even so, amen. By what method will every eye be closed? Rom. 2: 5:—"But after thy hardness and impenitent heart treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God."

Again we request our friends, to whose vision the day of wrath and righteous judgment of God is apparently lost, to aid us in comprehending the import of this passage. Isa. 40: 5:—"And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together; for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." Must we again come in conflict with the apostle and give this prophecy a private interpretation to preserve the theory in question? The apostle (2 Pet. 1: 16–18) refers to the glory of God (Matt. 17: 1–9) as witnessed by him at the transfiguration, when those holy men prostrated themselves, overwhelmed by the splendor and magnificence of the scene.

The meek Moses exceedingly feared and quaked (Heb. 12: 21, Ex. 19, 24: 16, 17) before the glory of God while in the mount, and the vast mountain itself shook exceedingly, as if to divest itself of the curse, and become the receptacle of that "enduring glory" which will ultimately mantle the whole earth.

If these miniature manifestations of the power and glory of God were so terrible, do we wonder that, when the heaven shall roll together as a scroll, and the great day of his wrath shall come, that the ungodly hosts will seek a hiding-place amid rocks and mountains? The glory and majesty of the "King of kings" will in that day require no scriptural proof of its reality; it will enforce its claims with terrible certainty upon the mourning tribes of earth.

The prophet who pointed out the birthplace of that lovely babe (Micah 5: 2), expressed no more truth than the prophet (Isaiah 26: 21) who said:—"For behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth shall also disclose her blood and no more cover her slain." 2 Pet. 3. The apostle presents a vivid and glowing picture of the momentous change which the earth now laden with the curse is to undergo; and when from its fiery ordeal it shall spring forth the new creation of God, the promise (Isa. 15: 17), "Behold I create new heavens and a new earth," finds its fulfillment. With Peter's experience, I apprehend it would be difficult to convince the advocates of the theory under consideration that this chapter was of traditionary origin.

If the saints at the point where Christ first comes are to notify the rest of the scattered flock of his coming, we ask, Suppose a brother from New York should appear to brethren in Massachusetts announcing such a fact, and they reply that Jesus said, "Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not" (Matt. 24: 23, 26), how would the brother making the announcement extricate himself from the unpleasant position of fulfilling this scripture? For, says Jesus (27), "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."

The adverb of time (Matt. 24: 23) then, clearly proves, with the context, that this scripture does not receive its fulfillment until after the great tribulation upon the church of God, and near the end of time. With the testimony of eye witnesses and inspired witnesses, all uniting to exalt to the highest degree the universal manifestation of the glory and power attending the coronation of "Bethlehem's babe," when he shall be crowned Lord of all, we do not feel justified in degrading an event of such infinite magnitude far beneath the level of earthly glory, neither to accuse the divine law of imperfection and imbecility, by denying the revelation of the righteous judgment of God, in the day when he shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to the gospel (Rom. 2: 5, 16; Matt. 16: 27), and "reward every man according to his works."

As the fruits of the Spirit are of a pure and heavenly character, so may we by its holy influence lead upright lives, do the will of God, and then we shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God, or whether men speak of themselves. St. John 7: 17.

Southington, Ct. O. D. Woodruff.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ONLY BAPTISM.

"There is . . . one Lord, one faith, one baptism."—Paul.

That water baptism is the "one baptism," referred to by Paul, is evident from the fact that there was none other that could be legitimately so called. Baptism signifies to plunge, to dip, to immerse, as all well informed persons know; consequently, where the Scriptures speak of being baptized with the Holy Spirit, baptize is used figuratively. For water baptism being a real ordinance of the apostolic church, and reception of the Holy Spirit by its members being real also, if the latter would be legitimately called baptism, then there would have been two instead of "one baptism." But water baptism being a real and valid baptism, the other is only so in a figurative sense, by which the one is compared with the other as to their final results; that is, in the one case, they are immersed by a plunge into water, and in the other case they are immersed by an outpouring of the Spirit upon them. Now, since baptism signifies to "dip," plunge," it is evident that the whole meaning of the word is brought out in the case of water baptism, and only a part of its meaning in the other case referred to. So if water baptism was practised in the apostolic church, that can only be the one baptism spoken of by the apostle.

The first chapter of Mark begins thus:—"The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ the Son of God; as it is written in the prophets, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee. The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins. . . . And preached, saying, there cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose. I indeed have baptized you with water; but he shall baptize you with the Holy Spirit."

Here we find, from the above quotation from Mark, that the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins, as preached by John, was the beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ the Son of God. It was preparing his way before him. And this same baptism was preached by Peter on the day of Pentecost:—"Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins. . . . And preached, saying, there cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down to unloose. I indeed have baptized you with water; but he shall baptize you with the Holy Spirit."

Here we find, from the above quotation from Mark, that the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins, as preached by John, was the beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ the Son of God. It was preparing his way before him. And this same baptism was preached by Peter on the day of Pentecost:—"Then Peter said unto them, repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." Acts 2: 39. And the same was preached to Paul, when Ananias said to him, "And now why tarriest thou? arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." Acts 22: 16. And it was Paul, who, finding certain disciples at Ephesus, said to them, "Have ye received the Holy Spirit since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost. And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, unto John's baptism. Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people that they should believe on him that should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus. And when they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them." Acts 19: 1–6. When Paul afterwards wrote to the Ephesians, and exhorted them to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, and said, "There is one body, and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling, one Lord, one faith, one baptism," he could have had no reference to any other baptism than that which had been administered to those Ephesian disciples, spoken of in Acts 17: 1–5. And whenever we examine Paul in relation to this question, we shall find him always consistent with this record in Acts. When he reproved the Corinthian disciples for saying, "I am of Paul, and I of Apollos, and I of Cephas, and I of Christ," he also said, "Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?" And he then thanked God that he did not baptize many of them, lest they should say that he baptized them in his own name, proving that he referred to water baptism alone. So also in chap. 10: 4, he institutes a comparison between the Mosaic and Christian dispensation, and says, they "were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea;" in this way reminding them of their own baptism unto Christ in water.

Again, to the Romans he wrote, "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into* death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of the resurrection." Rom. 6: 3–5. That water baptism is here meant, is clear from the use of the same phrase—"buried with him in baptism"—in Col. 2: 12, indicates that he refers to water baptism, having referred in the verse preceding to spirit baptism, as the circumcision made without hands. He thus speaks of Christ's sufficiency as our Lord and Savior: "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ; for in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power; in whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ; buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen through the faith of the operation of God who hath raised him from the dead." Col. 2: 8–12.

Water baptism has a saving effect when received by faith in Jesus Christ as the Son of God, but is not essential to the salvation of those who are uncertain in regard to their duty, or have no opportunity to comply therewith. For he that knoweth his Master's will, and doeth it not, shall be beaten with many stripes; but he that knoweth not, nor doeth it, with few stripes. If it was essential to salvation in all cases, as Papists hold in regard to their sprinkling ceremony, which they misname baptism, then no one could have ever received the Holy Spirit till after baptism. Yet there are many christians of our day who have received the Holy Spirit before baptism; so also in the apostolic days, when Peter preached to the Gentiles, the Holy Spirit fell on all them that heard, and Peter "commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ." See Syriac ver., Acts 10: 48. Here the Gentile believers received the Holy Spirit before they received baptism, which could not have been possible if it was absolutely essential to salvation. It has a saving effect, "not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but by the answer of a good conscience toward God, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ." See 1 Pet. 3: 21.

That water baptism is an ordinance of the christian church, is evident from the fact that Peter and Paul both taught it to Jewish and Gentile christians alike. For Paul said to the Galatians, "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." A person might be baptized without being baptized into Christ; but if in the act of baptism they thereby place themselves under the leadership of Jesus Christ, then they would be truly baptized into or unto him; for eis may be rendered either way.

The fact already alluded to, that Peter commanded his Gentile converts to be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, after they had received the Holy Spirit, proves water baptism to have been superseded by Spirit baptism; but rather as conducive thereto. For it was expected that those who were baptized should receive the Holy Spirit, by being obedient unto this ordinance, as promised in Acts 2: 38–39. So, "when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John; who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost; (for as yet he was fallen upon none of them; only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.") Acts 8: 14–16. With all this evidence before us, how can we doubt in regard to the nature of christian baptism? Is not the teaching of Christ's apostles to be received as authorized by him? and if they taught baptism by immersion in water, do not those who set it aside for sprinkling or Spirit baptism, pervert the gospel of the Son of God? Let us not only believe but obey the gospel. Amen. William Hobbs.

WATCHFULNESS.

"Blessed is he that watcheth."—Rev. 16: 15.

Watchfulness comprehends the whole care of a christian life. It is a duty enjoined by our Savior in the following language:—"Watch ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man."—Luke 21: 36. Our Savior requires nothing but what is for our good, the performance of which we should consider our highest privilege. In the common duties and labors of life, nothing can be accomplished with surety or certainty without care and attention; and only by giving heed to the many admonitions to prayer and watchfulness, will any be able to escape the evils and dangers to which they are exposed in this world of sin and temptation, and be made ready to inherit the kingdom of God with all the saints.

Have we chosen the ways of salvation? Then we are brought into contact with Satan, our common enemy, whose intent is evil continually; hence our duty to watch.

First, we should watch against sin, that we may prevent evil. Satan works through the propensities of the natural heart, the motions of the flesh, where Christ condemned sin. Rom. 8: 3. We need, therefore, to watch against corrupt passions and appetites, lest being off our guard they find way into our hearts and affections. "For if ye live according to the flesh, ye shall die; but if by the spirit ye mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live."—Rom. 8: 13.

Again, to prevent evil, we must watch against the smiles and allurements of the world; for through them Satan betrays us into his hands. Let not mirth and gayety, the giddy fashions and fleeting honors of the world, attract us from the path of obedience. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."—1 John 2: 15–17. May our hearts be fixed upon Christ continually, then we shall lose our affection for the world, and experience a growing attachment for the will and pleasure of our heavenly Master; and with a constant watch over eyes, ears, tongue, may we do the will of God with every member of our body.

Evil speaking is another evil we should be careful to avoid. One of the most dangerous evils we have to guard against is an unruly tongue, and many are the snares into which men are brought by this little ungovernable member. The Psalmist prayed that a watch might be set over the door of his lips.—Ps. 141: 3. "He that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile."—1 Pet. 3: 10. May a sense of surrounding danger produce in the heart of every believer a spirit of prayer and watchfulness. The wise man says, "Happy is the man that feareth alway." Prov. 28: 14.

Second, we must watch to do good, by wisely and faithfully improving our talents in the discharge of every duty we owe to God, ourselves, and our fellow men. Our Savior when upon earth went about doing good; his mission was a mission of love and mercy; he labored for the good of mankind, and left us an example that we should follow his steps. It becomes our duty, then, to labor for the good of our fellow men, by administering to their necessities according to the utmost of our ability. "To do good and communicate, forget not; for with such sacrifices God is well pleased." Heb. 13: 16. Not only are we to administer to the temporal wants of the needy, but also to regard their spiritual needs, by laboring for their salvation from sin, and eternal death to which they are exposed. He who is indifferent concerning the spiritual welfare of others, and makes no effort in behalf of the perishing, is well represented by the unprofitable servant, who hid his talent in the earth. Such lack that spirit of vigilance and watchfulness necessary to make them useful instrumentalities in the hand of God for the promotion of good. Our gifts differ according to our ability, and he who has but one talent and improves upon it, is as much a servant of Christ as the one who has five, and needs to have the same care and watchfulness concerning his duties and obligations to his heavenly Master. Then let us all, through faith in prayer, look to God for grace to help in the discharge of every duty devolving upon us as servants of the heavenly King.

Third, watching for the return of the heavenly Bridegroom, is a duty constantly urged upon the church of God. Just before Christ left his chosen people he gave promise to return and fulfill his engagements with them. "Let not your heart be troubled. . . . I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go to prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you to myself, that where I am there ye may be also."—John 4: 1–3. To watch for the coming of the Lord, is to look with expectation, hope, and desire, and a condition of waiting and watching for the coming of the Lord is and has been the true attitude of the people of God through the whole gospel dispensation. Christ never gave his church positive knowledge of the definite time of his return, but commanded them to "watch, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." Matt. 24: 46. "Behold I come as a thief: blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked and they see his shame."—Rev. 16: 15. Vigilance and watchfulness are made necessary by the uncertainty of the time of the event, yet notwithstanding the absence of absolute knowledge, the waiting church are not without precursors of the coming event; prophecy has marked off the pathway of the church through her long period of waiting and watching, and they who search the inspired word with a view to know and do God's gracious will, watching by faith the fulfillment of predicted events, will not be "in darkness that that day should overtake them as a thief." The nearer the earnest, watchful pilgrim approaches the day of glad deliverance, the more definite will light shine upon his pathway. "The path of the just is as a shining light, that shines more and more unto the perfect day."—Prov. 4: 18. Then "let us watch and be sober."—1 Thess. 5: 6. "Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching."—Luke 12: 37.

Finally, in view of the object to be gained at the appearing of Jesus Christ, may the life and energy of every believer be aroused from slumber to active obedience to the heavenly Master, and to constant watchfulness for the fulfillment of his gracious will. "There is laid up a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous judge shall give . . . unto all them that love his appearing." Deliverance from care, sorrow, and death, will be the gladsome reward of the people of God, and eternal life in the paradise of God their glorious inheritance. Dear reader, shall we be there? Have we the evidence of divine acceptance? The Lord give us grace to watch. F. S. Ainsworth.

FIGHTING.

IS IT RIGHT FOR THE FOLLOWERS OF THE MEEK AND LOWLY SAVIOR TO USE CARNAL WEAPONS?

"Lord, shall we smite with the sword?"—Luke 22: 49. Those who followed the Savior, when they saw the multitude was about to take him, having a sword which the Savior had previously commanded them to buy (Luke 22: 36), naturally supposed that the time had come when they ought to use it. In verse 50 we read:—"And one of them smote the servant of the high priest, and cut off his right ear." When he had committed this deed, the Savior reproved him, and said, "Put up again thy sword into his place, for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." The reader will discover that the Savior not only condemned the one who smote off the servant's ear, but all who use the sword; for he says all they who use the sword shall perish with it.

But some persons who take the opposite side may ask, Why did the Savior command his disciples to get a sword? See Luke 22: 36:—"But now, he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip; and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment and buy one." If it were not right for christians to use carnal weapons, why did Jesus command them to buy one sword? Why not command them to buy as many swords as would supply the whole company? Why did he allow only ONE? His disciples said unto him in verse 38, "Behold, here are two swords." Hear the Savior's reply; "And he said unto them, it is enough." Now the reader can see plainly that if the Savior designed them for his defense, or that of his disciples, he naturally would have had them all supplied. For what purpose, then, did the Savior command them to buy one sword? Doubtless he knew beforehand that the Jews would come to take him, in the manner which they did, and that he intended that one of his followers should have a sword, that when they approached him, he would use it; then he would be able to condemn not only him, but all who use it. See Matt. 26: 52:—"Then said Jesus unto him, Put up again thy sword into his place; for all they that take the sword, shall perish with the sword." Jesus thus condemned all who use the sword. This ought to satisfy all Christendom that the followers of the meek and lowly Savior have no right to use carnal weapons in defense of earthly governments, or for any other cause.

The apostle Paul says, in his letter to the Corinthians (2 Cor. 20: 4):—"For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal." Thus you discover that christians are not associated with those who use carnal weapons. Jesus says in John 18: 26:—"My kingdom is not of this world. If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight." Though Christians are in the world, yet they are not of it; but are hated by those who are of the world. Read John 15: 19:—"If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, ... therefore the world hateth you."

But the reader may suppose, as many do, notwithstanding the evidence already presented to show that war is antichristian, that the followers of the Savior have a right to use carnal weapons in defense of the government, because the Jews did. Read Paul's letter to the Romans 6: 14:—"For ye are not under the law, but under grace." It is plain, then, according to Paul's letter that the Jews were permitted to use carnal weapons, because they were under the law; but christians cannot use them, because they are under grace.

The Savior contrasts the difference between the Jewish dispensation and the dispensation of grace in his sermon on the Mount. Matt. 5: 38, 39:—"Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth. But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil." You discover, then, that under the Jewish dispensation they were permitted to resist evil; but now Jesus tells them to resist not evil, and he sets the example himself. Read 1 Pet. 2: 23:—"Who when he was reviled, reviled not again." Christians should follow his steps. Read 1 Pet 2: 21:—"Because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that we should follow his steps." Surely, then, as Christ is the christian's example, and he did not resist evil, neither can the christian resist evil under any circumstance. Those who embraced the christian religion in the apostolic age, even down to the third century, took Jesus as their example; they would neither fight, vote, belong to worldly societies, or accept of any public office. Read Milman's Gibbon's History of Rome, vol. 1, pp. 551–2:

"The christians were not less averse to the business than to the pleasures of this world. The defense of our persons and property they knew not how to reconcile with the patient doctrine which enjoined an unlimited forgiveness of past injuries, and commanded them to invite the repetition of fresh insults. Their simplicity was offended by the use of oaths, by the pomp of magistracy, and by the active contention of public life; nor could their humane ignorance be convinced that it was lawful on any occasion to shed the blood of their fellow creatures, either by the sword of justice, or by that of war; even though their criminal or hostile attempts should threaten the peace and safety of the whole community. It was acknowledged that, under a less perfect law, the powers of the Jewish constitution had been exercised, with the approbation of heaven, by inspired prophets and by anointed kings. The christians felt and confessed that such institutions might be necessary for the present system of the world, and they cheerfully submitted to the authority of their Pagan governors. But while they inculcated maxims of passive obedience, they refused to take any active part in the civil administration or the military defense of the empire. Some indulgence might, perhaps, be granted to those persons who, before their conversion, were already engaged in such violent and sanguinary occupations; but it was impossible that the christians, without renouncing a more sacred duty, could assume the character of soldiers, of magistrates, or of princes. [Gibbons says] This indolent, or even criminal disregard to the public welfare, exposed them to the contempt and reproaches of the Pagans."

Read also Gibbon's Roman History, vol. 3:

"The humble christians were sent into the world as sheep among wolves, and since they were not permitted to employ force, even in the defense of their religion, they should be still more criminal if they were tempted to shed the blood of their fellow creatures in disputing the vain privileges or the sordid possessions of this transitory life. Faithful to the doctrine of the apostle who, in the reign of Nero, had preached the duty of unconditional submission, the christians of the first three centuries preserved their conscience pure and innocent of the guilt of secret conspiracy, or open rebellion; while they experienced the rigor of persecution, they were never provoked to meet their tyrants in the field."—p. 249.

Thus the reader can see plainly, according to Gibbon's testimony of the primitive christians, that they would not use carnal weapons, and that they were not of this world; as Jesus said, "I have chosen you out of the world." Dear reader, are you a christian? Can you endorse this truism? If not, allow me to present to you the fruit of the Spirit:—"But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance."—Gal. 5: 22, 23. I ask, Does the soldier possess those fruits? Followers of the meek and lowly Savior, let me admonish you as the Lord did backsliding Israel:—"Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein."—Jer. 6: 16. Thomas J. Whitecar.

All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. This prophecy came not in old times by the will of man, but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. God, who at sundry times, and in divers manners, spake unto the Fathers by the prophets, hath, in these last days, spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things.—St. Paul.

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Boston, Wednesday, Nov. 4, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if the names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

CHICAGO TENT-MEETING.

We have more good news about the tent-meetings in Chicago. The Lord is doing a great and good work here. Our highest expectations are more than realized. The truth is finding many friends in this great and enterprising city. Notwithstanding we commenced our meetings in a most unfavorable time, when men were very much excited in political matters, yet the Spirit of the Lord has arrested the attention of many who had been living in a careless manner, and pressing their way to destruction. They are now rejoicing in the hope of eternal life when Jesus comes. A hallowed influence is going out from the meetings.

We have prayer-meetings every evening from half-past six to half-past seven, then preaching, which is usually followed by a conference meeting, closing at nine o'clock. Some come from three to five miles to the meeting. The influence of the meetings is being felt in all parts of the city, through the conversation of those who attend. One colporteur is scattering tracts for us in the city, and they are aiding much in the circulation of the truth. The time has come when tracts can be used to great advantage. We think more good can be done with a given amount of money put into tracts than in any other way. Let those who cannot preach themselves, help send the little tract messengers to others. Let no opportunity for doing good be lost. Our time for work is nearly ended. The harvest will soon begin. Will the Master reap anything from our labors?

Monday, Oct. 26th. Our meetings for the last two days have been extra good. The one on Saturday evening will be long remembered by those present. Some said it was the best one they ever enjoyed in Chicago. The saints felt great liberty, and we had a shout in the camp. We had a heavenly shower, that was very refreshing. Yesterday was a most lovely day, and our meetings were like the weather. We felt most sensibly that our heavenly Father was smiling upon us, and that we were basking in the sunshine of his countenance. Such days are rare.

At 9.30 we had a precious love-feast, when the hearts of the saints were made to rejoice. We have new testimonies in every meeting. The members of other churches are becoming deeply interested, and are satisfied that the Spirit of the Lord is with us, and they feel willing to unite in the good work. They seem like half-starved persons, who have long been kept on a short allowance of poor food; but since they came to the tent-meetings they are having a rich feast. It is a source of rejoicing to us to see them taking so much comfort while worshiping with us the Lord of hosts. Intelligent members of other denominations are satisfied that the tent-meeting is a movement in the right direction. They confess before us all that the meetings in the popular churches cannot reach the common people. There is so much pride and fashion among the leading members; so much worldliness and cold formality, that the life and power of godliness are crushed out; and those who would give life to the meetings, could they have their liberty, are hushed into silence, or a conformity to the worldly policy of those who are "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." The living members of the churches are mourning over the sad state of things, but do not know where to go for food, or to find anything better. Those who have ventured to come to the tent, in opposition to the advice of their minister, and many of their friends, are now ready to exclaim, we have at last found just what we have so long desired. They are rejoicing like young converts. Last evening, one who has been considered the most active and devoted sister in one of the city churches, arose before a large audience, and said she had received more light on the Bible during these tent-meetings, than she had before in the whole forty years that she had been hearing popular preaching. She then urged the ministers to preach the entire mortality of man, as a great Bible truth; also the complete destruction of the wicked, the coming of Jesus and his kingdom; remarking her doubts on these points were all gone. She wondered how she could have been kept in darkness so long with her Bible in her hand. Many others were ready to confirm her statements with a hearty amen.

Yesterday, four were baptized, and others are waiting for the next opportunity to be buried with Christ in baptism. Men who hold the first positions among the business of Chicago are deeply interested in our meetings, and all are ready to put their hands deep into their pockets to furnish the means to carry on the good work. They now talk of building a tabernacle that will hold some four thousand people. They are tired of the way the popular churches are managed. They are delighted with the spirit of the meetings in the tent. Last Sabbath, an intelligent man arose and said, "I am a sinner, but I am much interested in these meetings. I have never before attended any that so accorded with my views of true christianity." He said he had used tobacco, but would give it up for ever, and then spit out what he had in his mouth. Others did the same. He asked us to pray for him. The truth cut like a two-edged sword, and a goodly number were slain by its power, and resolved to sin no more. Dear Brn. and Srs., keep praying for Chicago.

DISCUSSIONS.

We have arranged for two discussions in Chicago; one with Orrin and Abbott, and the other with C. Norwood. The former was a Methodist preacher some thirty years, but is now a rank Spiritualist, who denies the divine inspiration of the Bible. The question for discussion with him is as follows:—"Do the spirits of men live, and can they communicate with mortals after the death of the physical body?"

Mr. Norwood was a Universalist, then a Spiritualist, but now claims to have separated from them. He is at the head of the Ortive Church. When asked to explain what he meant by the Ortive Church, he said it meant the Rising Church. The question for discussion with him is as follows:—"Will all men live eternally?" The time is not yet set for these discussions.

Spiritualism has a very strong hold in Chicago. They publish three papers in the city.

PERSONAL.

When in Chicago, Bro. J. H. DENNIS called on us. When we began meetings in Rochester, N. Y., he had been attending the theological institution in that city for about two years, preparing for the ministry. He attended the tent-meetings, became deeply interested, and finally concluded to go out and sound the alarm to a wicked world, and try to persuade sinners to prepare for the coming of Jesus. He has now gone to labor with Bro. P. W. Hough, in Wis. He is a promising young man.

BRO. SCHNEIDER, a German Baptist preacher, renders us assistance in our meetings. He is an earnest man, and an ardent lover of the truth. He baptized four last evening. The church, of which he is pastor, have rejected the popular theology and are now rejoicing with him in the blessed hope of the gospel. He is doing a good work among the Germans in Chicago.

BRO. NEEDHAM, the "Irish Evangelist," thinks of spending the winter in Chicago. His labors, and those of Sr. Needham, are appreciated and blest. The Lord is with them, He knew nothing of our views of the Bible when he came to this country, last spring, but now he is quite well satisfied that we have the truth. Sr. Needham (formerly Sr. Annable) is making herself very useful by her active efforts in the vineyard of the Lord.

In conversation with BRO. MOODY, the distinguished leader in the Young Men's Christian Associations, the noted originator of noon-day prayer-meetings in Europe and America, he remarked, that the nominal churches were so low and cold that they led men into infidelity. He is a very earnest man, and is throwing his whole energies into the work of arousing the professed church from her awful state of slumber. Great interest is being awakened by his labors. He sees the fearful work which is being done by the Spiritualists, and feels the importance of weapons with which to meet them.

THE PLANCHETTE.

The Planchette is becoming quite popular, and consequently making rapid progress in its diabolical mission. In the last "Religio-Philosophical Journal" (Sept. 12th), a Spiritualist paper published in Chicago, edited by the Hon. S. S. Jones, President of the first Spiritualist National Convention, we find the following leading editorial:—

PLANCHETTE—ITS RELATION TO SPIRITUALISM.

This little instrument, so simple and free from complexity, is destined to mark a new era in the progress of spirit manifestations.

Already it is becoming quite a noted article of commerce. All our leading booksellers not only keep it on sale, but put out display bills to induce or decoy customers. Such is even the case we observe at the large book concern of S. C. Griggs & Co., of this city on State street; one of the largest establishments of the kind in Chicago, if not in the west. Appropos to the foregoing is the following dialogue, that lately took place in one of the leading book stores of this city, between the proprietor, who by the way is a prominent member of an orthodox church, and a lady acquaintance of his who is a spiritualist. Observing that he kept Planchette for sale, she ventured to inquire if he had ever tried their efficacy and virtue in his family. To which he answered in the affirmative; observing that they received satisfactory answers and communications.

"Why," said she, manifesting astonishment, "how dare you, with your belief, have any thing to do with spirits?"

"Oh, we have nothing to do with any but good spirits," he complacently replied.

Thus "Planchette" under the guidance of "good spirits," is finding a welcome in thousands of orthodox families, who would admit their unseen friends to audience through no other means or conditions—who would as soon entertain an outlaw as a spirit medium.

In military parlance this might be called a flank movement by our wary agile friends "beyond the river;" and which bids fair to be a complete success. It is almost time that this unassuming and unpretending little instrument received the attention and anathemas of the orthodox press and pulpit. But under the guise of the popular idea of electricity and magnetism it is well received and fostered, even in the "best families."

But the World's Crisis, of Boston, whose Editor's olfactories are so noted for sensing devils, already sounds the alarm. He says:

"What is the Planchette? It is an instrument invented in France some twelve years ago, by means of which the demons make communications to those who consult the familiar spirits, more readily than in the common way by rapping on tables, chairs, etc. The following extract from a paper concerning the Planchette, was furnished us by a correspondent:

"'This mysterious instrument, of French origin, will, under the hands of most persons, answer questions propounded to it, without any voluntary action on the part of the operators. The Paris correspondent of the London Times, states that the Emperor Napoleon implicitly believes in the supernatural power of this wonderful instrument, and consults it on all great questions."'

He then says: "We look upon the Planchette as a cunning device of Satan to induce people to consult his demons. By means of this instrument, he purposes to make the consultation with the spirits a popular amusement for fashionable parlors, and among all classes; and thus familiarize the people with these demoniacal manifestations."

Aside from the demonology, we agree with the Crisis, that it is a grand coup de main for introducing Spiritualism into "fashionable parlors" and all classes. And it is another link in the chain of evidence in support of what we have often heretofore said, that Spiritualism can not be stayed or stopped. For dam its stream in one place and like the waters of a mighty river it will break around and inundate the whole surrounding country.

CHURCH MUSIC.

The style of music now introduced into many fashionable churches is as far from that which should be employed in the worship of our Creator, as that which is heard in the opera house. It is truly alarming to see the great departure from christian simplicity and the spirit of true worship, which has crept in under the cloak of religion. Ungodly men and women are hired to praise the Lord on the Sabbath, and during the rest of the week, they sing at the opera, or perform in the theatre. These are strange times.

The following, from The Watchman, gives us an idea of the manner of conducting church singing in New York city:—

"There is scarcely anything that gives our churches so much trouble and annoyance as public music. Our organists, generally, are not religious men. They are Catholics, Jews, Italians, and some of them are notoriously immoral. It is often the case that leading sopranos are Jewesses, who have no sympathy with the christian religion at all. Many are members of stock companies at theatres, or belong to an opera troupe. They leave the boards of the theatre at midnight, take the accustomed hearty meal, perform the worship of sacred song before the sermon, sleep while the minister preaches and prays, and wake up in season to close the performance. Nearly all our choirs are quartette, and if they do not sleep, they amuse themselves to their own satisfaction while the minister performs his part. The expense of a quartette choir is perfectly enormous, and the manner in which they generally behave is a scandal to religion. Some of our churches are trying to cut this Gordian knot, by taking the children of the Sunday school and bringing them into the church to lead the congregation. So far as this has been tried it works well."

Instead of there being evidence of an improvement, there is positive proof that things are growing worse continually and rapidly. Where will these things end? We do not believe the Lord is any better pleased with such music than that at the Indian dance.

ONE KIND OF LIFE.

Some people seem to have strange views about life. We hear them talk about "Adamic life," "Christ life," "animal life," "spiritual life," "mortal life" and "immortal life," as though there were so many different kinds of life; but we do not so understand the Scriptures. Life is the state of being alive; animated existence. If one lives forty years, then he has life for that period of time; if he lives eternally, then he has eternal life. This point was well made by Bro. S. G. Mathewson, in a sermon at the last Boston conference, April 2nd. He said, as reported:

"Talk about different kinds of life! Why, life is life, is it not? I do not know anything about Adamic and Christ life; about animal life and spiritual life; about temporal and eternal life; about mortal and immortal life, as differing one from the other in kind. There is but one kind of life and that was given to Adam; and if he had been obedient he would have lived right on forever; and that would have been eternal life, would it not? But he was cut off from life on account of his transgression; and so are the wicked. Now this life is given to the righteous only, on account of their faith in Christ; and Paul says, they are raised INCORRUPTIBLE, does he not? The wicked do not get the gift of life! 'For this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they, the dead, might be judged according to men in the flesh.'"

THE CHICAGO ARTESIAN WELLS.

Sometime in the summer of 1863, the spirits informed some of their familiars that Petroleum oil might be obtained beneath a certain tract of land near the city of Chicago, about three and one half miles from the court house. The spot selected is thirty-one feet above the level of lake Michigan. In the month of Oct. 1863, a tract of land containing forty acres was purchased, and the boring for the oil commencing in the following December. In the latter part of Nov. 1864, they struck water instead of oil, at the depth of seven hundred and eleven feet. With a single exception, the boring was in the rock the entire distance. A very excellent soft water comes from this well, at the rate of six hundred thousand gallons in twenty-four hours, with a force to carry it about eighty feet above the surface of the earth. The water continues an unceasing flow, having a uniform temperature of fifty-eight degrees. The orifice at the bottom is four and one-fourth inches. The spirits say this water comes from the Rocky mountains.

In May, 1867, a twenty foot overshot wheel and the proper machinery were prepared to bore for another well. This wheel was turned by the water from the first well, carried by its own force up a three and one half inch tube twenty-five feet, and then running upon the wheel. The boring for the second well continued till Nov. 1st, 1867, when they came again to the water at the distance of six hundred and ninety-four inches. The two wells are said to flow over one million of gallons of water per day.

They first formed a "Rock Oil Company," expecting, as the spirits said, to find a fountain of oil; but as water came instead of oil, they changed the association to "The Chicago Artesian Well Company." The corporation is chartered with a capital stock of one million of dollars, which may be increased by the Board of Directors as deemed necessary. The estimated value of the property at present is $235,000.

The company has erected a very large ice house, with room for forty thousand tons of ice. They have converted twenty-five acres into ponds for the formation of ice made from the water flowing from the wells. All other ice is brought to Chicago on the railroads. Geo. A. Shufeldt Jun., A. F. Croskey and Abraham James are prominent men in this enterprise.

The spirits tell their familiars some great stories so as to keep up their courage. The following is a sample:

"It is said by our friends and brothers in the Summer Land, that on this ground, and by this company, will be erected the finest and most magnificent temple ever built on earth, or by human hands. This temple will be dedicated and devoted to the promulgation of the lights and glories of the New Philosophy. Here in these eternal halls will gather all who believe in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, in the eternal life of the human spirit, and in the progress and education of the human race, and are willing to aid in building up the New Dispensation, can come to these fountains of truth, ever welcomed and ever remembered as links in the great chain which unites mankind in the bands of one common brotherhood.

It is intended that this should be, not a charitable, but a self-supporting and self-sustaining institution. Factories of all kinds will be erected about it; schools and colleges will come in time; and we shall take the little wanderers by the hand, from the filth and the mire of the lower life, and bring them up and train and educate them to be true and useful members of society.

We cannot tell you all that has been pictured out to us, but we do assure you that, in our limited comprehension, it is the grandest and most beautiful project ever conferred by the good angels on mankind."

We were quite interested during our visit to the famous Chicago Artesian Wells; but we saw no proof that departed human spirits had anything to do with them.

OMENS.

It is feared by business men that hard times are approaching. For some time, there has been much money prosperity; but there are tokens of a change. Men have been living very fast. Extravagance has run mad in dress, fine houses and furniture, carriages and horses, and expensive pleasure scenes, until bankruptcy is staring many in the face. They have lived on credit till they can go no further. A special despatch from New York to the Chicago Tribune, Oct. 26th, says:—

"The opinion is now growing more general, that the extraordinary stringency of the money market will continue for some time, which may result in considerable financial disaster."

NAPOLEON III.

Napoleon III. has now been on the throne of France sixteen years: and despite his treacherous ursurpation of the place, his rigorous rule over the people, his relentless prosecution of his opponents, his enormous expenditures, and his occasional failures in foreign policy, the empire has nevertheless been the most splendid success of the day, and the French nation at this moment stands higher in actual material prosperity, and in real influence among her neighbors, than at any former time in her whole history—even when the Great Napoleon was dazzling the world with his brilliant achievements. And this undoubtedly must and does have a very great effect in forming the feelings of the people towards their government. There is really less disaffection in France to-day, with the empire as a whole, than ever before. A few witty republicans and cultured Orleanists keep up little coteries and centres of revolt, but they never extend their inflammatory influence far. Very many intelligent, far-seeing, liberal minded men of thought object to the petty persecutions of the press, the emptiness of elections, this or that policy in this or that direction; but even they are not enkindled with any desire to overthrow the government—merely to force it into greater liberality, and to make it relieve the nation of some of its irksome and galling restraints—while the great mass of the people simply worship the magic name NAPOLEON.—Examiner.

PERILOUS TIMES.

Additional evidence of the perilous times of the last days (2 Tim. 3: 1), was made manifest on the evening of August 2, 1868. And as all will wish to know something concerning the accusation brought against us, or the reason why we were forbidden the use of the house, and knowing the different colorings generally given to things received second-handed, I will give a correct copy of what was handed to us and can be seen at any time by calling on Elder Sam'l L. Cronce, in Mechanicsburg, Sangamon County, Ill.

"You as men that are preaching up the Resurrection, I do forbid you or your denomination of preaching here any more in the Union Chapel Church, but if you collect here to-night, you must make it your last time, or I shall see further into this matter, for I do not think you have any solid grounds to go upon."

Charity withholds the name of the author, but we need not be surprised when the teachers tell us that they are more interested in the presidential election than they are in the coming of our Lord. Thus you see we were forbidden the use of the house for the same reason precisely that the apostle Paul was arraigned before King Agrippa (Acts 26: 8); hence we are willing to continue to "witness both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come to pass." "Therefore we rejoice that we are counted worthy to suffer persecution for Christ's sake, for we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. 1: 16.

OUR TENT.

The New York State Mission Tent is folded up and laid away for the winter. Its white folds were rendered still whiter by about two inches of snow at our last meeting, which was a strong premonition that our cloth meeting-house must be abandoned for a few months. We have held seven meetings in it this season, beginning our campaign June 11th, and closing up Oct. 15th. Of course many hearts are anxious to know the results. We can give you some of them, and the judgment will disclose the remainder.

Thousands have heard the blessed hope of the gospel; hundreds have been converted to the truth as we preach it, who have not practically put on Christ. Scores have confessed their faith, and forty-five have been buried by baptism in the likeness of Christ's death, in connection with our meetings; and many others have since been baptized, as the result of the tent meetings. This, you say, is good; yes, it is glorious; it paves the way for the advance of the truth at a rapid rate; subscribers are obtained for the Crisis; tracts, pamphlets and books are scattered; the truth reaches intelligent minds, that carry it like fire carried by Samson's foxes. Yea, it does just what God designs; that is, to enlighten the world, by giving them an intelligent faith and hope, and thus leave them responsible for the use they make of the blessing.

Our position is bound to revolutionize the theology of the day. Popish rule is losing its influence, and men are becoming more independent in thought. Children are being reared under the influence of truth. The ranks of our army are filling up, and closing up. A warfare is being waged against mysticism and Spiritualism, and those that stand between the fires must soon flee behind the bulwarks of one fort or the other. Our fort is built on the rock Christ Jesus, and faced with flints of truth; and while we are armed with the shield of faith and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, we are safe, and sure of victory. The opposite forces are only protected with the lie of the devil, echoed by heathen philosophy, and re-echoed by modern divines; the proof of which assertion you may find in a work entitled "The Immortality of the Soul," by Mattison, of New Jersey.

The serpent says (Gen. 3: 4), "Ye shall not surely die." Mattison says, "A voice from within speaks those startling words: Man, thou shalt never die." If this is not an echo of the sentiment uttered by the serpent, we do not understand the meaning of good English. O, astounding fact! that tradition's veil should so blind the minds of intelligent men. But, alas! it is so. Thank God, the light of truth is flashing across their pathway, and the frail fortress of error is being riddled from our guns.

Ye men of valor, let the battle roar still louder; and as you are driven from groves and tents by the frosts of approaching winter, let your voices ring in the halls of villages, in school-houses, and in the highways and hedges. I will not say to you go, but come on. I am home to spend four or five days, then away I must go again, to see what that voice from Arcade, Cattaraugus Co., means.

Another result has followed our summer's campaign, which is very common among soldiers and reformers; that is, threadbare garments, reduced strength, and pockets very light; but full hearts, ready minds, and a clear conscience. Thank God for the whole! It is just what we need to qualify us for the final triumph. This thought may cast reflection on God's stewards. Some of God's stewards have done their duty nobly; the Lord knows who they are, and so do we; while others may withhold from the needy, and find a larger account to settle by and by; then they will be able to respond.

The work is before us, and must be done. O for grace and wisdom to do it right! What we do must be done quickly. The tidal wave of oblivion is roaring in the distance, and will soon put a stop to our labors, by burying the unsaved beneath its resistless flow. Brethren, pray for us, "that the word of the Lord may have free course, and be glorified."

FREE PAMPHLET DISTRIBUTION.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to notice in our paper that I have returned home after a four months tour east, and then west, and that I shall be at home till spring, and attend to correspondents, and giving out my works the same as the past year. I had printed fifteen hundred of "Death not Life" in April last, and bought five hundred of "Pauline," and gave out the last two hundred at Springfield campmeeting; had two thousand more printed in August; three hundred of which, and two hundred more of "Pauline" I took to De Kalb campmeeting, and divided them among ministers and brethren. Over forty preachers were there, and so each could have but a dozen instead of fifty each, which was needed for their wide fields of labor; some want, and write for one hundred for their circuits. One minister just writes for five hundred to divide among preachers in Minn., and take with him to Missouri this winter. I have sent fifty to be given out at most of our tent meetings held in New York this year.

Frequent calls are made by poor and isolated brethren for some to be sent by mail, to start an interest in their barren regions; a few pay by my putting them at first cost.

By these few statements, brethren can see the opportunity I have for giving out larger works than tracts to advantage, and the anxiety that exists to obtain them. I have heretofore endeavored to show that the spread of truth demands the spread of such sized works more than of tracts, and that without them the benefit of tracts and occasional preaching is in a great measure lost. One reason is, that a more general outcry against our views has been raised than formerly, and so tracts are too small to do the good they did in years past. They may do well to go with larger works; but no tracts (except a very few of Bro. Grew's) were circulated when the "Six Sermons" did so great a work.

Such has been my experience, and I think I have personally given out as many tracts as any other one, having traveled from two to three thousand miles per year for fifteen years, in eighteen States, and been constantly dealing them out. Scores of letters and personal compensation tell me that pamphlets are seldom sent to new fields and willing readers without producing good effects, but I have known thousands of tracts to produce no apparent good. The cause is, they do not remove enough of the objections against our doctrine, and so the subject is laid aside; so it was with myself till a pamphlet aroused my attention. I have yet to believe that time (if it lasts), will convince brethren that a larger share of donations for the free distribution of our works should be used for giving out pamphlets.

As a work on man, and the intermediate state, I want to see Bro. Grant's four tracts bound together and sent out free. I shall soon buy five hundred more of "Pauline Theology," if means can be obtained; the call for them is urgent. It is not because I publish a pamphlet myself that I feel my proposed plan to be important; that is a mere speck compared with the cause of God and truth, and my prayer is for grace to thus ever feel and act. As to profits, I ran behind two hundred dollars last year.

I have now eleven hundred left of the last two thousand printed, which brethren can send for on the terms named last year,—free, or at first cost, if able to pay. The fifteen hundred printed last April are paid for, but not the last two thousand. Who will yet aid me in this way of spreading truth? I feel thankful to brethren for the help already given.

Last January I gave a statement of donations received, and shall by and by do the same, that all may learn what is done with the money I receive. I will name only two cases out of many, of encouragement to induce further sacrifices in this branch of our labor. In Rochester, three hundred of my work and "Pauline" were dealt out, and two hundred in Eld. Colegrove's field, mostly free; and Eld. C. just writes me that a church of sixty has been raised up there since last June; and brethren tell me that these pamphlets were a great help in both places. What share of the good work they did, God knows.

Again I would remind brethren of the commands of our dear Redeemer,—"Work while the day lasts"; "lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven"; so the soon "burning of the earth, and the works therein" will not burn up your portion. Letters directed to Buffalo, N. Y., will be sure to reach me.

Buffalo, Oct. 27th, 1868. J. BLAIN.

A TRUE CHRISTIAN SPIRIT.

The great work belonging to one who has named upon him the name of the Anointed, is certainly that of the cultivation of a right spirit. There must be a manifest change in his actions, as compared with what they were when he was under no restraint. He is no longer free to exhibit an ungoverned temper, or a spirit of reviling, resentment, or defamation. These are manifestations of that spirit that is not from above, but is from beneath. It is a spirit whose outworkings are from the flesh, and belong to the things which we left behind, when we stretched out to obtain the things which are before. Seeing, then, that it is not a part of the christian order, but is of the world, and consequently leads to death, what inducements can there be for us to cling to it? None whatever.

The apostle Paul, although he had been possessed of a spirit of vengeance toward those who had named upon them the name of Christ, so that he could stand by, with indifference, and witness the cold-blooded murder of our loved brother Stephen; yet, when he had taken upon him the same name, how did he act? "Being reviled," he says, "we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it; being defamed, we entreat." How was it that he did not allow that spirit of vengeance which was in him before to exhibit itself now towards his enemies? Because he appreciated the truth of what he wrote to the Corinthians, saying: "Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price, therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's." Belonging to another, he was no longer free to act out the pleasure of one who was opposed to the will of him who had bought him. Seeing, then, that God could not be glorified by the exhibition of a spirit of reviling, or resentment, he quietly laid it aside and imitated him who said: "I am meek and lowly in heart," who, "when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, threatened not, but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously."

Brethren, we have the same God for our Father. Cannot we trust our cause with him? He will judge righteously for each one of us as he has for his Son Jesus. Cannot we then afford to wait for the day to reveal it? When the Lord comes "he will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and make manifest the counsels of the hearts, and then shall every man have praise of God." Let us patiently await the issue, dearly beloved, and never undertake to prosecute our own case. "Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will repay," says God. Let us "roll our care upon him," and quietly discharge our obligations day by day, giving no heed to the defamations or curses of those opposed to us. It may be a gratification to us to give vent to our natural impulses, but when we consider that our great pattern, Jesus, controlled these impulses of the flesh, keeping them in subjection when it would seem almost impossible for them to be restrained, we are not at a loss to discover where our duty lies as imitators of him.—Herald of the Kingdom.

☞ It is said that the Presbyterian custom of standing while engaged in prayer had its rise in the dislike which the early followers of that sect felt toward "genuflections," or any custom in use among the "Papists," toward whom they felt the strongest aversion.

NOTE OF SYMPATHY.

To whomsoever these presents may come, greeting: Whereas, it hath entered the hearts of some (from what motive we know not; God knoweth) to circulate reports concerning our sister, Anna E. Smith, of the "Star of Hope Mission," greatly to her detriment, inasmuch as it is disqualifying her, to a great extent, for that sphere of usefulness in which she has labored so successfully, and is causing her great suffering; while many of the dear ones scattered abroad are deceived, and led to believe that Sister Smith is living idly and luxuriously at the expense of mission contributions; with a fine piano, and other things accordingly; and, upon the whole, "having a nice time of it"; also, that some in Worcester, and elsewhere, who have been identified with the Mission, and have contributed largely thereto, are regretting what they have done, because of the wrong appropriation of their gifts; therefore,

Resolved, That we, as a church, do hereby heartily extend to Sister Smith our sympathy and co-operation in promoting the interests of this great missionary enterprise, to which she has given her time, talents, affections, health and strength; and that we do not regret one dime we have given, or one effort we have made, but only wish we could have done more.

Resolved, That we esteem it a privilege, as well as a duty, to exert our influence to refute the opinion entertained by some that our sister has acted selfishly, or dishonestly. She has not only spent considerable time with us, here in W., but several of us have assisted her at the Mission, some remaining weeks at a time; and we can say that she is in every way worthy of our confidence as a Christian, and our co-operation as a laborer.

We consider her a branch of the "true vine," and one that has borne fruit unto the glory of God; and if she, in the providence of God, is undergoing the refining process, in order that she may bring forth more fruit, we, as sharers in the trials incident to the Christian life, tender her our sympathies, prayers, and best wishes, that she may come out like gold seven times purified, and more than ever fit for the Master's service.

Affectionately submitted to the prayerful consideration of all the scattered ones, by the little flock at

BRO. GRANT:—Through the blessing of our heavenly Father, I have recovered from a typhoid fever with which I have been prostrated for a few weeks. God has been good to me, for which I thank him. Letters for me hereafter should be directed to North Woodstock, N. H. Yours fraternally, A. W. SIBLEY.

Oct. 27th.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say through the Crisis, for the benefit of those interested, that I left Jacksonville, Sept. 16th. I was sick all the way home, and was not able to get out of the house for two weeks from the time I was taken. I arrived in New York Monday the 20th, and reached home the next day at 11½ o'clock A. M.

I came home from Florida to attend to a suit brought against me by S. K. Sweetman for slander. It came off Friday, the 9th. The counsel for the plaintiff opened the case in a most glowing manner, but on the cross-examination of the first witness, he asked the Court to grant a non-suit, and it was granted. The church in Rochester had been praying for a number of days over the matter, and had the pleasure of seeing their prayers answered in a very marked manner, in the sudden confusion of the first witness, and of the counsel. Bro. C. R. Griggs and Bro. J. A. Trowbridge, of Westboro, Mass., were on hand to testify to facts that had transpired at Westboro, in connection with the plaintiff; and so sure was Bro. Griggs that there was nothing in the case, that he would take the risk for six and a quarter cents in regard to the result of the suit, as to any damages. He and Bro. Trowbridge went home well pleased with their visit to Rochester. Bro. Davis, of Brockport, N. Y., and myself are very grateful for the sympathy and brotherly kindness of Brn. Griggs and Trowbridge, and our dear Bro. J. V. Himes, who so willingly made such great sacrifices to leave their business and homes, and come to our assistance in such trying time of need. We will ever hold them in grateful remembrance. They have shown themselves not only dear and beloved brethren in Christ, but neighbors, according to Christ's representation of a man falling among robbers, and the good Samaritan cared for him while the Levite passed by.

If the Lord will, I expect to return to my field of labor, in Florida, about the first of November. That the friends of missions may know how anxious they are to hear in the place where I raised up a church of fifty members, about seventeen miles north-east of Lake City, I wish you would publish the following letter I received from one of the converts. I trust he will forgive me for making it public, as he did not intend it for that purpose. This brother lives in the place above named, although he dated it at Lake City, because they have to come there for their mail. Yours in the blessed hope, P. A. SMITH.

"Brother Smith:—Feeling a deep solicitude in your returning to Florida soon to preach for us again, and wishing very much to hear from you, I . . . write you, hoping . . . that the time will not be long before we shall have the pleasure of hearing many more of those instructive sermons on the Holy Bible, such as we never heard before you came out, and I fear will never hear again, if you should not be permitted to visit us. I think if you only knew how very anxious we all are for you to return, you would not tarry long.

We continue our prayer meetings, though but few seem willing to participate, or engage in prayer at those meetings. None can possibly feel more embarrassed or unworthy to lead in our meetings than myself; yet, I have no desire to evade duty, and am determined to perform it in all things as best I can; and be assured, dear Bro., you are not forgotten when offering up my feeble devotions. Our members all appear deeply devoted to our cause, and I have no doubt that you can double our number at the first meeting when you return. The only trouble is, that you may perhaps entertain radical political sentiments, which you will endeavor to bring up after awhile, etc. The most of us are tired of politics. We want more piety and less politics, and we do not want to hear politics from the pulpit.

I distributed the books and tracts I bought at Olustee, and they have done good. . . . . With the sincere desire and hope of seeing you soon, . . . very truly your Bro.,

W. A. SHEFFIELD.

Lake City, Fla., Sept. 30th."

From Sr. M. P. Valle.

Dear Brn. and Sisters in Christ:—I left Newark for Memphis Sept. 22nd. I stopped at Philadelphia over one train at Bro. L. Reimer's, and reached Pittsburg the next day, arriving in Cincinnati about ten o'clock at night, after a tedious ride. As it was too late to go further, I put up at the Spencer Hotel. How glad I was to be alone once more in communion with my heavenly Father, thankful for his preserving mercy and watchful care over unworthy me. When the time came for me to pursue my journey, I left for the river, and went on board a packet bound for Louisville, Ky., which left Cincinnati at twelve o'clock. Arrived safely in Louisville near six o'clock the next morning. Staid about two hours, then took a car for Memphis, where I arrived safely Saturday morning, between five and six o'clock. Arrived at our Mission House about nine o'clock, glad enough to end my journey. I met a cordial welcome from two colored sisters, one of whom had taken case of Sr. Northrup during her sickness, and from Bro. Leslie also, who, strange to say, had traveled unbeknown to me in the same train from Pittsburg to Cincinnati; but from there he took another route by rail, and got here on Friday. I blessed and praised the Lord for his goodness to me and for my safe journey hither.

But the Mission House was a solemn place to me. In the Chapel, fronting the pulpit, in a coffin, lay enrobed in the habiliments of death, cold and motionless, one who had labored faithfully in her Master's cause; whose feet had been swift on errands of love and mercy to this people; whose tongue and voice had ever been active in warning and entreating the sinner to come to Christ, and in reclaiming the backslider; whose hands also had ministered to the sick and afflicted, to the poor and needy. All these were actuated by a heart full of love to Christ and his cause. Truly it may be said of her, "She hath done what she could." Having read and admired her letters in the Crisis, I anticipated pleasure in her society when I should get here; expecting to help bear her burdens, and share with her the joys and sorrows of a fellow laborer in the mission cause. But this was denied me. Her labors had ended and were well done.

Her funeral was held in our Mission Chapel on the same morning of my arrival, at ten o'clock. Mr. Barnum assisted Bro. Leslie in the services. How the colored people mourned for her! and well they might, for she had been their true friend. As we passed around the grave to return to our homes, each took a handful of earth to cover the coffin, as is the custom here. We left, comforted in our grief, believing that He who once said, "I am the resurrection and the life," will when he comes raise her to immortality in his own likeness, on a new earth where there will be no more death; where I hope to greet her, if I love Jesus.

Now a few words about our Mission House and work. God has been good in providing for this people a neat, comfortable edifice for his worship; located on an elevation of ground in a healthy part of the city, I should judge, and not thickly settled around it. The main part of the building or chapel will seat comfortably three hundred persons, perhaps more. Around the pulpit is a large altar for mourners. On each side of it is a door, one opening into a room used for prayer meetings, Sabbath School infant class, also for day school, which will begin next week. This room will seat upwards of one hundred. The other door opens into a room used as kitchen, dining-room, etc. Underneath this is a cistern. From this room stairs lead to three sleeping apartments. The middle one is now used for family worship, reception room, and for writing purposes. Thus the Lord has favored this people. He is with them and for them, and to him be all the praise and the glory.

I wish you could see how they enjoy these privileges. Nor is it to be wondered at, for many of them leave poor homes to come and worship in this their Sabbath home. They seem anxious to learn to read and understand God's word, and are rather an intelligent class of colored persons, considering how they have been oppressed, and how few educational advantages they have had. There is at present considerable sickness among them, chills and fever being prevalent. Our dear Bro. Leslie has had, and is still having, arduous labors to perform among them. He is their preacher, counsellor, doctor, and nurse. The extreme poverty and suffering of some are painful to him, so working upon his sympathies and nervous system as often to deprive him of sleep; for it is not in his power to aid them all. When his medicine would do them good and raise them, the want of proper nursing and comfortable homes prevent it. Many of them who have health and work hard are kept in poverty, because their white employers oftentimes oppress them and keep from them part of their hard-earned wages; and there is no law to compel them to pay them. They are consequently not sufficiently fed, and poorly clad. Such call forth our deepest sympathies. There are a few more comfortably situated. It causes us to desire that "for the oppression of the poor and sighing of the needy the Lord would now arise."

They all welcome me here, inviting me to their houses; the best of which are not like your eastern homes. They are principally one story frame buildings, not lathed and plastered, but well ventilated of course. I have visited a few families; they treat me to the best they have. How I love to visit God's humble poor! In all their poverty they are happier than earthly princes. They are princes elect, waiting for the King to come. Their treasures are not on this sin-cursed earth. This is an extensive field of labor. O that the Lord would send us the much needed laborers!

There is great interest manifested in our meetings. Bro. Byam is now here, and will assist Bro. Leslie, I believe faithfully. Bro. Leslie baptized three Sabbath before last. Sinners are coming forward for prayers in deep distress for their sins. One was converted last night. She could say, Jesus is my Savior. The prayers of God's people are being answered. There has been no exciting cause, only the plain presentation of God's truth, the "sword of the Spirit."

Remember this church and people at the mercy seat; also the laborers, and unworthy me, that I may be wholly consecrated to the work of the Lord here. Pray in faith; and if the Lord has blessed you in temporal things, may he incline you to aid his worthy poor here; that Jesus may say, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

MARY P. VALLE.

From Bro. J. M. Snook.

BRO. GRANT:—Thinking perhaps some of the dear brethren would like to hear from me through the Crisis, I take this opportunity to let them know that I am not idle, but trying to do what I can for my Master in these last hours of time. I felt anxious to be at the Springfield meeting, but duty in this field kept me away. Have been laboring in different places alone, and with others, all summer, in several of which we left churches of those who covenanted to walk together as christians, and help each other bear the scoffs and persecutions of the world.

Bro. Chas. E. Barnes, of Dorchester, Mass., who has given himself to the work of the Lord, came with me to this place, Sept. 23d. We have been laboring together since that time, except about a week when Bro. Barnes was quite sick. Here also the Lord has blessed our labors, which have resulted in the baptism of nine and a church organization of twenty persons. Many others are deeply interested. I feel very much encouraged in Bro. Barnes, and think if the Lord tarries he will be an effective laborer. May the blessing of the Lord be with him.

Sr. M. Whitman, by her labor in talking of the blessed hope and spreading tracts, etc., had in a great measure prepared the way for this meeting. So others labor, and we have entered into their labors. Brethren, pray for the church at Lexington, Mich.

Oct. 15th. J. M. SNOOK.

From Bro. L. F. Cole.

BRO. GRANT:—The Lord by his Spirit is still at work, in the midst of these years, calling wanderers into the fold of safety. Bro. H. D. Reed and myself have just closed a meeting of three days, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 22nd, at the Dennett school-house in Bowdoin.

Though there was some disappointment felt by the non-arrival of Bro. Haggett, the Lord was with his children owning and blessing them. Such a settling down of the Spirit into the hearts of men is seldom seen as was manifest throughout the entire meeting, recalling the wandering ones, and breaking down the stony hearts of sinners. Truly each one of the children could feel that it was good to be there, and were well rewarded for coming eight, ten, and twelve miles to this feast of fat things; and many hearts were gladdened by the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus, and reigning in his kingdom. Your Bro. in the bond of love, L. F. COLE.

Obituaries.

MERRILL. Died in Winona, Minn., Oct. 7th, 1868, Jonas F., son of Bro. Jonas and Sister Frances Merrill, aged about twenty-four years.

Jonas was joined in marriage last April, by Bro. J. W. White, and a few days after, leaving his young wife, parents and other relatives behind, started for the west. During his stay there his health seemed to decline, and when within a few weeks of his death he was seized with fever, which finally resulted in his death. His companion and parents were unconscious of his dangerous condition until the day before his death, when a telegram reached Kennebunk expressing doubts of his recovery. His father and wife immediately started for W., thinking perhaps they might see him alive but they were not permitted the privilege, for ere they were half way there, the poor young man had died,—died far from home, without a companion or mother to smooth down his pillow, or wipe the death sweat from his fevered brow. But he peacefully fell asleep in Jesus, hoping to meet his loved ones on the other shore, in the resurrection, where fond connections will no more be severed by the ruthless hand of death.

Jonas was a very moral young man, exemplary in all his habits, but was conscious this was not sufficient to save him, for about two weeks before his death, when there seemed a prospect of his recovery and returning to his friends, he gave his heart to God, and found peace in Jesus Christ. He leaves a wife, parents, one brother, two sisters, and many other relatives and friends, to mourn. God bless the mourning ones, and sanctify the bereavement to their good. W. H. MITCHELL.

CASTLE. Sank quietly to rest, in Sutton, P. Q., Oct. 12th, 1868, of consumption, Rolinda, only daughter of Chauncy M. and Jane Castle, aged sixteen years, four months and twelve days.

Nearly two years before her death she embraced religion under the labors of Elder B. S. Reynolds, was baptized, and has ever since maintained a life of true christian piety. She was buried Wednesday, Oct. 14th. A large number of relatives and friends met to sympathize with the afflicted parents, and pay their last tribute of respect to the departed. Words of comfort were spoken by Rev. Hiram Fowler (Methodist), from Luke 20: 36.

During her sickness she manifested christian patience and resignation. She was the first to announce that the final moment had come. She whispered,—"Pa, I think I am dying; don't you? "Oh! happy hour; if I had lungs, how I would praise my Savior. Tell my associates that I died happy, and to meet me on the other shore."

The hymn beginning—

"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep,"

one of her favorites, was sung at the closing services. BENJ. SWEET.

WOOD. Died in Charleston, S. C., Sept. 22d, on board the brig Newcetas, Capt. William D. Wood, of Surry, Me., aged forty-four years.

He leaves a wife and child, aged parents, brothers and sisters, to mourn his loss.

"Afflicted saint, to Christ draw near,
Thy Savior's gracious promise hear;
His faithful word declares to thee,
That as thy day thy strength shall be.
Let not thy heart despond and say,
'How shall I stand the trying day?'
He has engaged by firm decree,
That as thy day thy strength shall be."

A. P. MOORE.

ROOT. Died in Barkhamsted Hollow, Ct., Oct. 23d, 1868, of consumption, Sr. Caroline D. Root, aged twenty-four years.

She fell asleep in Jesus, expecting immortality when he comes to give reward to his saints. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from John 14: 18. S. M. TATRO.

☞ Velocipedes are not only the amusement of the Boulevards, but now constitute a convenient manner of seeing a country without walking. Four velocipedes recently drove up to the Hotel de France, at Mans, France, their drivers having started together on a tour from Trouville, whence they velocipeded up to Paris. From the capital they started for Bordeaux, Ferte Bernard and Mans, traveling on an average thirty miles a day.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

MADRID, Oct. 27. The Provisional Government has issued a manifesto concerning the administration of the Kingdom. After passing in review the various reforms decreed by the late Central Junta, they proceeded to argue in favor of the decentralization of the administrative power, and conclude by promising to render a faithful account of their doings to the Constituent Cortes. Some Spaniards of advanced liberal ideas advise the sale of Cuba to the United States, as the most direct and speedy method of solving the question of the abolition of slavery.

VIENNA, Oct. 27. The Ministerial bill fixing the basis as to the number and equipment of the army and navy when on a war footing, after much opposition, has been passed by the Reichsrath. It is said that Baron Von Beust gave a number of secret reasons for the passage of the bill, which caused it to be carried through, and this rumor creates some uneasiness.

It is asserted that in his speech in secret session urging the adoption of the measure the Prime Minister alluded to the good relations which existed between Austria and the other great powers, but intimated that in the event of a rupture between Prussia and France, Austria must be ready to guard her own neutrality.

LONDON, Oct. 27. Light shocks of earthquake were felt in various places of Cork county, Ireland, yesterday.

LONDON, Oct. 28. The reports that Great Britain, France and Italy have renewed diplomatic relations with Spain under its revolutionary Government are confirmed. It is authoritatively announced that Prussia and Portugal have also recognized the new Government, and that the Papal Nuncio at Madrid has put himself in communication with the Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs.

PARIS, Oct. 28. The Constitutionnel says the organization of the National Guard is rapidly progressing in the Departments, where the measure is received with great favor by the people.

MADRID, Oct. 28. The Progressista Clubs of this city have formed a union for political purposes. At a recent meeting of the united clubs, Senor Alozaga informed them that Queen Isabella would abdicate in favor of Don Carlos.

The election for members of the Constituent Cortes will take place on the 29th of November.

Senor Ayala, Colonial Minister, has issued a circular announcing that the Colonies will be placed upon the same electoral basis as the rest of Spain.

VIENNA, Oct. 29. The announcement is made by the Ministry, that the interpretation which has been put upon the recent speech of Baron Von Beust, is false, and that the policy of Austria is peace.

The Diet has a bill giving authority to the Government to recruit 40,000 additional soldiers, Baron Von Beust having given a formal assurance that the men to be enlisted will fill up a deficiency in the standing army, and not swell it above the number fixed by law.

Evening. The Ministry have made an explanation to Reichsrath as to the strength of the army. The normal war footing is fixed at 800,000 men, and the preent active force is not to be increased.

LONDON, Oct. 30. Maps, which are said to have been prepared by order of the French Government, have been issued to show that the second Empire has strictly regarded its frontiers as laid down in treaties with the neighboring powers. It is inferred that this explanation is made to cover the Emperor's abandonment of the war policy.

LONDON, 1st. The negotiations for the settlement of the Alabama claims will undoubtedly be completed in a few days. England is willing to pay the American claims.

A Madrid special says that the conservatives favor Ferdinand of Portugal as King of Spain, while the democratic clubs have unanimously selected Gen. Prim for the Chief of the State, on the condition that he will take the title of "The President of the United Provinces of Liberia."

BARCELONA, 1st. All the workshops and manufactories of the city having been closed in consequence of the free trade decrees issued by the Provisional Government, the workmen of the city, deprived of their work, have assembled and are actually threatening to break into the grain stores and bakeries. The military have been called out, and several arrests have been made.

GREAT FLOODS IN ITALY.—Correspondence from Italy reports disastrous floods recently in the northern part of the kingdom. Over the greater part of the north of Italy rain had fallen almost without intermission for thirty days, though not in the Alpine district so as to cause any serious catastrophe; but on the night of Sunday, the 27th of September, a terrific storm broke upon the southern slopes of the Alps, producing in a few hours vast torrents and avalanches, under which roads, houses and villages were swept away, and large tracts of fertile country were sunk in mud and water. The storm of the 27th, however, proved to be only the signal of disasters to come. For a week after, night and day, there was but one continuous storm and cataract of rain, the results of which are not yet known, but which have already covered the whole valley of the Po with a series of inundations. Numerous towns and villages were overflowed and several completely destroyed, involving in some instances large losses of life. The desolation is wide-spread and mournful. The village of Giornico was partially swept away, Bodio wholly so. The whole valley of the Ticino was desolated, and the towns on Lago Maggiore completely engulphed. Many lives were lost, and the inhabitants were obliged to seek safety in boats, the floods sweeping away their houses. No flood like it has been known for one hundred and sixty years.

DOMESTIC.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. The following is a summary of the progress of the progress of the Cuban revolution:

HAVANA, Oct. 23. Bayams, Holiquin, Jabaras, Las Tunas, Yara and Jignani, all in the Eastern Department, are in insurrection against the government. The government has sent four battalions of infantry, squadron of cavalry, and a field battery to these points. The revolutionists have divided themselves into small bands, with the view to carry on a guerrilla war until their forces are strong enough to cope with the Spanish troops with a fair prospect of success. A considerable band is stationed in the neighborhood of Santiago de Cuba and another near Puerto Principe. The revolutionists have burnt several plantations and are taking the negroes with them as auxiliaries. In several skirmishes with the Spanish troops, the creoles, both black and white, have fought bravely, causing a heavy loss to the Spaniards.

The Cubans all over the Islands are enthusiastic, but are in want of arms. Several Cubans have been arrested in Havana on suspicion. They are confined in the Moro Castle. In the parish of Jesus Maria 40 negroes were arrested last night for having arms in their possession.

OCTOBER 24—9 A. M. Trustworthy information just received states that Agialera, chief of the revolutionary band, has with him between 4000 and 6000 negroes. The artillery sent from this city has stuck in the mud. Heavy rains have fallen in the Eeastern department. The revolutionists have full sway in a large section of the country. The Captain-General is hurrying forward fresh troops in all haste. One of the Spanish mail steamers has just been chartered to carry troops to the scene of action. Great enthusiasm and confidence prevail among the Cubans. If the measure should become necessary, there is a fixed determination to declare immediate emancipation and call on the negroes to arm against the Spaniards.

New York, Oct. 31. A Constantinople dispatch of yesterday's date says the Turkish government has issued a circular to foreign diplomatists declaring that the closing of the Straits of Dardanelles was guaranteed by the treaties of London of 1341 and Paris of 1853. It declares that exceptional favors may be occasionally granted, as in the case of Admiral Farragut, according to the law of the Empire, but that no vessels of war will be allowed to pass the Strait except those having on board an European monarch, or the Chief of an independent State.

Foreign residents at Constantinople consider this document as offering an opportunity to the American government to come forward and institute a new code of maritime laws, as it is not bound by the above mentioned treaties. The American Minister has written minutely to Washington, giving all the details of the case, and asking for instructions. At the same time he has sent his protest against Sarfet Pacha's Circular, stating in substance to that minister that the United States would in no manner recognize the principles contained therein, or assent to such a doctrine.

New York, 2d. It is stated that the insurrectionary movement in Cuba will assume a startling magnitude before long, and that the Captain General will find it necessary to withdraw in haste. The object of the insurgents is an independent government of the island, and there are many prominent parties outside of Cuba deeply interested in the success of the movement.

☞ Potatoes supposed to be seventy-seven years old were planted at Lewisburg, Pa., this season, and yielded nice tubers.

THE WONDERS OF MODERN CHEMISTRY.—About 100 tons of guano from Sombrea, in the West Indies, was reshipped at Southampton, last week for Birmingham, to assist in the manufacture of lucifer matches. Mixed with sulphuric acid, this guano is converted into an excellent manure. If, instead of being made into manure, the phosphoric acid is extracted from it, the extract is made to form the igniting property of lucifer matches. Thus the same material that raises the food of man and beast, lights the cigar. It builds up the hay-rick and wheat-stack, and helps to form the instrument with which the incendiary burns them down. Wealthy farmers, and street Arabs, who sell halfpenny boxes of lucifer matches, are often dependent on the excretions of sea-birds who frequent a desert rock in the West Indies.

POLAND.—How systematically the plan of blotting out Poland is pursued may be judged from the curious action taken lately with regard to the Museum of Wilna. Every object which might remind the people of Polish dominion is to be immediately removed from the Museum, and to be transported forthwith to Moscow, there to be incorporated in the Rumjanzow Museum.

A GREAT CATHEDRAL.—The Roman Catholics of London are about to erect a cathedral that will rival any of the cathedrals of the continent. The site selected is Westminster, near Buckingham Palace. The building is professedly a memorial to the late Cardinal Wiseman, who styled himself, as does his successor, Archbishop of Westminster. It is said that it will be eventually the most spacious and attractive cathedral in the world. The ground alone which it is to occupy has cost no less than $200,000. It will be the first recognized Roman Catholic Cathedral in England since the days of Queen Mary.

ANOTHER FAMINE IN BRITISH INDIA IMMINENT.—Northern India is again threatened with a famine that may revive the recent terrible scenes in Orrisa, where two million of people died of starvation. There was scarcely any hot weather in May and June, and the rains, which began a month before the usual time, have done immense damage. The rice crops, including those which have been sown a second time, are ruined. Orissa, and all the district between Calcutta and the sea, have been deluged. Yet, while this superabundance of moisture has fallen on the coast, the central districts are suffering still more from drouth. The price of bread has greatly advanced already.

EARTHQUAKES AT SEA.—The ship Broughton, which arrived at San Francisco from Glasgow on the 2d inst., felt several shocks of earthquake at sea. The first occurred Sept. 11th. Again on the 18th the officers and crew felt a trembling, as if the vessel had grounded, and at ten o'clock the same night a fog arose, being clear overhead, accompanied with a smell of fire. This continued all night. At nine A. M., next day, the fog cleared off, but the smell continued some time after. The weather was clear at the time, with a heavy sea running.

REV. PHINEAS STOWE.—The many acquaintances of the good friend of the seaman, Rev. Phineas Stowe, will regret to learn that temporary insanity has made it necessary that he should be taken to an Insane Asylum.—Traveller.

KUKLUX MURDER.—Huntsville, (Ala.) Nov. 1st.—Three hundred members of the Kuklux Klan were parading about last night while a Republican mass meeting was in progress. Fifty or sixty shots were fired. Judge Horton, a marked man, was mortally wounded. Two negroes were killed, and many wounded. Intense excitement prevails.

Mission Tent for Florida.

Shall the Maine Mission Tent go to Florida on a mission during the coming winter? Bro. Griffin, who is a good and faithful manager, proposes to go with the tent, provided the committee consent and the friends of missions will provide the means. Who that has abundance of means, can do better than to aid such a work? One thousand dollars would sustain such a mission during the winter. We have brethren in the State who could do it single handed, if they would. It remains for them to say what they will do at once.

I. C. WELLCOME.

Maine Annual Conference.

The Maine Annual Conference will hold its next session in Bath, commencing Wednesday evening, at 7 o'clock, Nov. 18th, and continue over the following Sunday. We hope all our preachers will make an effort to attend, and a good delegation of the brethren and sisters, who feel ready to labor for the salvation of sinners. The church and friends in Bath cordially invite us, and will do all they can to entertain those who come. But they have no places for horses. Those who come with teams must provide for them. Several brethren out of the city can take horses. Brethren will call on Brn. N. G. Reed and Samuel Leman, who will direct them to other places. J. K. PARTRIDGE. I. C. WELLCOME.

Notice.

Sr. E. S. ennings will commence a series of meetings in Towsley's Hall, in Waterloo, N. Y., commencing Nov. 15th. Brethren, come and aid us.

G. DILLABAUGH.

Notice.

There are many persons who are too feeble to work hard, others cannot obtain employment that affords much pay. We would say to such that if they would like to canvass for works that are excellent and very saleable, we will put them on the right track if they will write us with a stamp to pay for answer. Men and women both can be supplied. Receiving as we are new subscription books from various publishing houses, we know the merits of the works we are prepared to recommend. M. D. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

General Conference at Buchanan.

There will be a general social conference of believers in the speedy advent of our Lord Jesus Christ, at Buchanan, Mich., commencing Monday, Nov. 23d, and continuing over the following Lord's day. Elder John Couch, of New Hampshire, will be present to preach the word. Also, Elds. J. V. Himes, Wm. Sheldon, Frank Burr, and many others of our western ministers. We invite all our friends, north, south, east, and west, to be in attendance. Those purposing to make visits east or west this fall or winter, will do well to arrange to stop here during the whole or a portion of the conference. Provision will be made for all who attend. Our hearts are large enough, and our homes are open. Come, and bring a blessing from the Lord with you. Many have long wished for an opportunity to visit this place. Embrace this occasion, and it will do, not only us, but your own soul good.

The General Ministerial Conference will hold an adjourned session at the same time, which will add greatly to the interest of the occasion. Come to the feast. In behalf of the church at Buchanan,

D. R. MANSFIELD, Pastor.
WM. L. HIMES, Secretary.

General Ministerial Conference.

The Western General Ministerial Advent Christian Conference will meet at Buchanan, Mich., Thursday, Nov. 26th (in connection with the Social Conference), as decided by a vote of the General Conference at its last session. This meeting is not to be regarded as a special meeting, but as a continuation of our unfinished meeting at De Kalb; hence, all ministers having a good standing in any of the Western Advent Christian Conferences can take part in our deliberations, as specified in the primary call. Let the watchmen rally. We represent a noble cause. Let us honor it in earnest efforts for its promotion.

WM. SHELDON, Secretary.

Notice.

The first quarterly meeting with the church at Woodhull, N. Y., will commence Friday evening, Nov. 27th, and continue over the Sunday following. All are invited to attend. J. W. TAYLOR.

Notice.

To the brethren and sisters scattered abroad, who are interested in the Star of Hope Mission: Sr. Anna E. Smith, Superintendent, can procure the full report of her labors and expenses for the past twelve months, which is got up in pamphlet form. Single copies 15 cents, by the dozen $1.25. The proceeds, after paying the printer's bills, etc., will go to defray the expenses of the mission. They can be had by sending to ANNA E. SMITH, 14 Laurens Street, New York, or to H. L. HASTINGS, Scriptural Tract Repository, Boston.

Notice.

Our meetings in South Boston, for the worship of God, will be held hereafter at "Fraternity Hall," No. 120 Broadway, every Sunday, the Lord willing. Come over and help us.

J. N. BERRY, Secretary.

Notice.

Those at the west wishing books, tracts, or charts, can be supplied at Rochester, N. Y., by addressing Dr. J. Naramore, (Eagle Block) Rochester, N. Y.
